Tradeshows/Exhibitions

Show Floor Setup/Logistics

Floor plans for exhibitions and events will need to be approached differently, allowing for physical distancing and likely incorporating a density formula. It will be important to work closely with your event contact at the Anaheim Convention Center or hotel or other venue, and with your official services contractor to create a floorplan that enables a safe and successful marketplace. Some of the elements to consider may include:

- Wider aisles
- More cross aisles
- One-way aisles
- Eight-foot tall side rails between booths
- Removing aisle carpet
- Developing an appointment model
- Extending show hours
- Adding virtual elements to increase exhibitor value
- Leveraging suppliers for exhibitor engagement
- Reviewing all official areas on the show floor
- Redesigning food service areas and delivery

In all cases, layouts must meet local fire code requirements to obtain fire marshal approval and a permit for occupancy. In addition, all state, regional, local, facility and health code guidelines will take precedence, and may change from the time of initial layout to final. Industry groups such as IAEE, ESCA, IAVM and EIC are providing guidance (see Industry Guidelines/Resources).

Networking

Networking Receptions

One of the most compelling reasons for face to face meetings is the opportunity to connect personally with others. Networking events are an essential element of meetings. With distancing requirements, this becomes challenging, but as you're making plans, consider these ideas:

- Breaking down receptions by segments/themes
- Conversation starters like smiley face/decorated masks
- Seating arrangements and furnishings that automatically create distance
- Different zones for different levels of distancing comfort
- Outside events
- Borrow from guidelines for different openings like beaches
- Incorporate live video options
- Virtual photo booths
- Conduct scavenger hunt to encourage participants to visit booths

Cleaning Protocols

The Anaheim Convention Center stands ready to safely and responsibly reopen under guidance from the State of California. A few of our recovery initiative are:

- Being the first exhibition facility in the West Coast to receive GBAC Star Accreditation
- Use of disinfection products approved by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency
- Installation of 63 wall-mounted hand sanitizers
- Physical distancing capacity charts and signage
- Employee health and training
