Forming part of the famous Black Country, Walsall is a market town with a fascinating past. Once known as the leather capital of the world and at the very heart of the Industrial Revolution, Walsall's impressive history of manufacturing and craftsmanship is showcased in its museums and galleries today. Visit The Walsall Leather Museum to discover more about 'The Town of 100 Trades' or The New Art Gallery, with historic works of Walsall alongside the works of great masters such as Van Gogh and Picasso.

With a wide range of green spaces and nature reserves, Walsall also offers plenty of opportunity for relaxation. The Walsall Arboretum is a splendid example of a Victorian Park, having opened in 1874, and has over 10,000 species of trees and shrubs. For postcard-perfect views, head to Barr Beacon for breath-taking vistas of the entire West Midlands. Before you leave, be sure to sample the local cuisine with everything from traditional British cuisine to a fiery curry cooked up by local chefs on the menu.
