Welcome to NC Botanical Garden
Chair Waldorf introduced Damon Waitt, Director of the NC Botanical Garden. He came to UNC from Austin, Texas where he was the Senior Director and Botanist at the Lady Bird Johnson Wildflower Center. The Garden’s mission is to inspire understanding, appreciation and conservation of plants and advance a sustainable relationship between people and nature. They are known nationally as a conservation garden focusing on sustainability and conservation and are a university affiliated botanical garden with an outstanding international reputation as a garden that integrates a conservation ethic into all of its programs as well as being the nation’s most comprehensive center of knowledge on plants in NC and the southeastern U.S. They provide a broad audience with inspirational experiences, opportunities for health and wellness through outdoor activities, and education programs within a scientifically-based institution. They began in 1903 with a teaching collection on campus started by William Coker. In 2017 NCBG covers 1,125 acres being managed for conservation. Plants will play a role in climate change and food security and they are training people to take part in the research. The Garden includes Coker Arboretum, Battle Park, Coker Pinetum, the Display Gardens and Piedmont Nature Trails, Mason Farm Biological Reserve and Parker Preserve. They have four programs; conservation, education, Outreach and Gardens. They are part of UNC’s Capital Campaign and will use resources they get to enlarge the garden by moving back the existing deer fence beyond the creek and adding a new building. (Damon’s presentation is attached with these minutes?)

Finance Report
Finance Chair Penny Rich reported that the budget is on target at this time. As of the end of October the budget is 39.3% spent. This is due to spending in advertising, 100% payout for the TeraVITA event and Strategic Alliances. The advertising expenditures will take the bureau through the transition from Clean Design to FleishmanHillard without going dark. At the Board of County Commissioners November 20th the bureau will ask them to approve a drawdown of $150,000 for additional advertising. We will continue to do some print advertising in Our State Magazine and the Carolina Alumni Review. Occupancy tax collections continue to grow.

Nominating Committee Report
The committee, comprised of: Commissioner Penny Rich, Chair Rosemary Waldorf; Vice Chair Jeff Strickler; Anthony Carey, Siena hotel and two staff members: Paolicelli and Brantly, met and is recommending the board elect Anthony Carey as Chair and Rosemary Waldorf as Vice Chair. George Cianciolo is leaving the Chapel Hill Town Council, and will no longer be their representative to our board. Carrboro Board of Alderlman will make their board assignments in December and the BOCC will do the same in January. The nominating committee also recommended waiting to fill the
At-Large seat until we have a complete board after January. The motion to approve the new appointments beginning in January was made by Penny Rich and seconded by Mark Bell. The vote to approve was unanimous.

Advertising Agency Presentation Chair Waldorf introduced the new ad agency, FleishmanHillard to the board. They have offices in both Charlotte and Raleigh and conducted an audit of what we have been doing and shared initial insights and made recommendations.
The document leverages data from July 16, 2017 to October 16, 2017. Due to the volatility of social media, a three month timeframe is more informative and reliable than longer timeframes as there is less opportunity for viral events or social platform changes to skew the data. Data is pulled from backend analytics platforms and measurement tools, including Crimson Hexagon and Global Web Index. Who is our audience: 61% of Facebook followers and 66% of Twitter followers are female. Most audience members are ages 25-44 with 35-44 being the most common age group. Of the top 50 locations of fans of the page, all are within the state of NC. Followers are a diverse group likely seeking different types of activities. FleishmanHillard will focus predominately on social and digital campaigns and transformations. They kicked-off the presentation with the question, why digital? Ninety percent of millennials book hotel stays on line with eighty-seven percent comparing options online. Millennials are now in their late twenties and early thirties and are making more money and traveling more and looking for experiences. Travels spend an average of 53 days visiting 28 different websites getting travel tips. They will not just target millennials. They will use paid social to reach the exact people they want to reach. With the same money spent of a print add that you hope your target audience sees they can directly target several groups with less money. They will ask all the hotels for email addresses of visitors during the spring and load that into the back end of Facebook and reach those people through their Facebook account with targeted ads. They will use local influencers and Alumni to reach potential travelers by word of mouth. With social media they can test pilot campaigns with 100s of dollars rather than 1000s of dollars. They will know who an ad is resonating with and be able to immediately adjust. They can perform A/B tests much more quickly and efficiently. They will optimize content on our webpages by providing hyperlinks to other pages to move them around the sight. The goal is to have people stay on our site and look at different pages rather than immediately bouncing off. They will work to refresh the website content during the first quarter. They do not want to see a bounce rate for a page above 60%. If they think something is not a good value or working well, they will let Laurie know.

Executive Director’s Report Laurie Paolicelli shared that Kellen Cruse of AirDNA will be at our January board meeting. His company partners with AirBNB to study supply demand. They study what is being rented, a couch, a room, an apartment, and who is renting, how long they stay and how much they are paying. Penny Rich suggested the board also invite Dwane Brinson, Orange County Tax Collector to attend the January meeting. Laurie is pleased that FleishmanHillard has an office in Charlotte, as that is our number one market. George Cianciolo was recognized for his contributions to the board over the past two years as the Town of Chapel Hill’s representative, he will step down from the town council in December. Chair Waldorf read the resolution presented to George by the board. Penny Rich extended the appreciation of the Orange County Board of County Commissioners. Paolicelli provided an overview of next steps with the ad agency, staffing accomplishments, and holiday events and happenings at the Visitors Center.

Sales Report
Marlene reported that the bureau has created a pad of pull off maps of the three downtowns with hotels and restaurants highlighted. These maps will be distributed by the county’s hotels as they show what restaurants are close to each hotel. This piece of collateral will be a good tool for front desk staff. Following last month’s General Manager’s meeting the group is considering offering incentives to meeting planners. She will host another UNC March Madness lunch and learn due to several turnovers among UNC meeting planners. She is planning a familiarity tour in May for third party planners that set up conferences for associations. Marlene shared that we should be showcasing local experiences. The hotels have been challenged to produce a package that is a unique experience that the customer can purchase, and can’t get themselves, locally based experiential packages. Rob Stern reported that he has reached out to all 31 Carolina Alumni Clubs with a banner on their Facebook feed. Rosemary Waldorf suggested putting together a package that includes all the natural areas Orange County has to offer.
