Avishar Barua's Flavorful Day in Columbus

Breakfast | North Market

Columbus' 145-year-old public market has something for everyone. Whether you're looking for traditional market vendors or a freshly prepared meal, starting your day at North Market is sure to perk up your tastebuds (for breakfast, we suggest picking up bagels, coffee, or freshly baked bread).

Out and About | Saraga International Grocery

Find over 10,000 different kinds of foods and goods alongside customers with diverse cultural and racial backgrounds. The perfect spot for the ultimate foodie, Avishar loves to explore new flavors and products here to spice up his kitchen.

Lunch | Huong's Vietnamese Restaurant

Avishar's must-stop after a grocery run, Huong's is well-known for its incredible pho. Taste and see for yourself!

Afternoon Activity | Columbus Metropolitan Library Downtown

As we prepare to celebrate the Columbus library system's 150-year anniversary, there's no better way to commemorate the milestone than a stop at the historic library branch downtown. Avishar, the embodiment of a lifelong learner, is a self-professed fan how libraries inspire reading, share resources and connect people in the community – and he loves the downtown branch's atmosphere. Stop in and experience it for yourself!

Dinner | Coco Hot Pot

One of Avishar's favorite new spots to get a meal, Coco Hot Pot serves a variety of traditional Chinese dishes. The menu is centered around the hot pot, a favorite of Avishar's. "You can bring people back around a table and have a good experience together," he says. Perfect for dining with friends, he notes that you can order a four-sectioned hot pot to accommodate different tastes and levels of spice.
