LETCHWORTH STATE PARK

“It's a magnificent chasm all right, with sheer shale and sandstone cliffs rising 550 feet; three gushing falls, one over a hundred feet high; river rafting; some 70 miles of hiking trails that, when snow-blanketed, do double duty for cross-country skiers; and a forest that harbors nearly every species of eastern North American tree, several species of wild orchids, and a variety of birds, from barred owls to herons.”
—National Geographic Traveler
