What is high school like? It's like a walk in the park or a grudge match. It's like an intense competition or a friendly game of cards. It's like a long term project, or a five minute quiz. It's like a twelve step math problem or a simple addition question. It's like a thunderstorm or a sun shower. It's like a lick of an ice cream cone, or a spoonful of crushed glass. It's like a magnifying glass, or the Hubbel Telescope. So what exactly is high school like?

The Finer Things

One of the things that [illegible] student body looks forward to every year is Fine Arts Week. Some students [illegible] enough to enjoy the arts year-round due to their involvement in art classes, stage performance, the study of music, or any of the other offerings at York. However, for those who do not participate in the arts, Fine Arts Week is a chance for them to experience firsthand the joy of art. In order to provide the York High School community with a wide variety of art to experience, the Fine Arts Week Committee planned months in advance to bring some of the best and most diverse artists to York.

The Fine Arts Week committee started meeting in winter to come up with a list of performers for the week long festival. The committee was made up of students and faculty who were involved in the arts or cared about their representation during Fine Arts Week. Mr. Charles LaLiberte headed the committee and was responsible for making everything run smoothly. In a span of several months, the group solidified and was able to find a large list of performers, both individual and group alike.

The diversity of Fine Arts Week is the reason that it appealed to so many of the students and faculty at York. The activities included everything from York's Improv. group, to an underwater photography lecture, to a look into the history of America through the evolution of dance. With months of preparation and dedication, forces combined, ideas grew, and the 2000 Fine Arts week became yet another successful year in this fine tradition. –L. Haskell

It's The First

The Lady Dukes had another outstanding performance at the state finals for track this year. The girls came in seventh place in Illinois. "We were excited with our great finish... All of the girls ran really well" commented junior Maria Cicero, who came in second place in the 1600 and 3200 meter runs. York's Lady Dukes were the best long distance team in state. Coach Annette Schulte was amazed by her girls performances at state and said, "Every girl did exceptionally well out there. They all worked hard and I am proud of them!".

Seven girls ran at the state meet and judging by the crowd's reaction, they all gave an excellent performance. "We can only go up from here" Schulte said. Of the seven girls, two of them were sophomores, four of them were juniors and Laura Fitzgerald was the lone senior . After the race the girls were pleased with the way each other preformed. For many of the girls, this was the first time that they had gone to the state meet and they surpassed expectations.

Juniors Kelly Forst, Maria Cicero, Lindsey Mulvey, and Christina LeDonne, along with sophomores Kelly O'Neill and Sarah Jacobson, are ready to go to state again, and this time they'll make another lasting memory. –C. Wolff

"Things didn't go exactly as planned at sectionals, but despite those obstacles each girl did very well at state." -Kelly O'Neill, sophomore.

IT'S THE FIRST!

On May 27, 2000, the dominating Dukes of York combined talent and desire to win their first state championship in sixty-one years. This was head coach Joseph Newton's first year of coaching and it was his first track title in his forty-seven years. The excited coach claimed, "It feels good ...the guys are wonderful".

The Dukes, who scored the second highest point total in state track history, came out to win for Newton. "I didn't want to let our coach down" junior Timothy Hobbs said after winning the 800 meter event.

The Dukes were led by seniors Donald Sage, Peter Cioni, John Janulis, Adam Palumbo, and juniors Terrence Mastrino, Timothy Hobbs, Adam Roche, Peter Stasiulis, Matthew Keifer and Benjamin Wallick. Illinois athlete of the year, Donald Sage set a national record in his 3200 meter run and a class AA meet record in his 1600 meter run. Sage scored 20 of the Duke's 70 points at the state final. Newton was very pleased with Sage and his other athletes. This was his final year and he went out with a bang. "How sweet it is!" exclaimed the proud Newton. –C. Wolff

One last look in the mirror. His hair is rock hard with gel. He is ready to pick her up. The limousine, that has left him broke, is waiting outside. His does a mental check list to make sure he isn't forgetting anything.

He walks out to the limousine. He turns around only to see his mother chasing after him with the corsage in her hand.

"Forget something? Honey relax. We'll meet you at her house for pictures," his mother says.

He arrives at her house. For once in his life he is on time to pick her up. He walks up to the door and rings the door bell. They have been dating all through high school, yet for some reason he is still nervous. He's sweaty and getting restless. Her father opens the door and shakes his hand. Of course the girl can never be ready when her date arrives.

"She'll be right down," says her father.

He looks up the stairs to see his beautiful date standing there. They both look at each other and smile knowing they have been waiting for this night. He thinks to himself how perfectly her dress fits her figure.

They are on their way to the dance. They dance all night, and cheer for the king and queen. It's the last dance. They both know what that means - their night is coming to a close. End of the Beginning

Who were they? Who were the students of the class of 2000? They were the stat champions, the club presidents, the team captains, the actors on and off stage, the leaders o today, and the leaders of tomorrow.

It began freshman year, when wary students were thrown into a sea of green. It was th time to see new faces, the beginning of people finding who they were, who they wanted to be, and what they wanted to do. Global Studies and Computer concepts were a must, and as the years advanced, the choices became more abundant. The students came to school on the yellow limousine. As time went on, these students received more privileges. With the onset of sophomore year, the thought of driving was overwhelming. With junior year came the dreaded ACT and SAT, and the start of the college search. Senior year lay before those who accepted the challenge. Off campus lunch and the chance to finally drive to school were of utmost importance. The class of 2000 was slowly moving forward.

The last time to gather as a whole, graduation was the end. It was the end of an era, the end of a challenge, the end of millennium. York High School, now only a memory in the minds of so many, saw them off to the future that was waiting. Together they came, together they learned together they laughed, together they conquered, together they failed, and together they moved on. —T. Ringa

Just Living

Summer is... playing, tanning, swimming, smiling, working, road trips, sleeping in, staying up late, being lazy, training, making friends, saying good-bye, driving, walking, taking time to watch the sunset, dreaming, secrets, instant messaging, camp-outs, lake houses, sleep-overs, college visits, vacations, summer romances, catching up, movies, dining out, midnight walks, barbecues, shopping, watching daytime television, bikinis, bonfires, skinny-dipping, building sand castles, fireworks, Venetian night, summer school, branching out, endless telephone conversations, taking time to smell the flowers, baseball games, pickup football, volleyball on the beach, swinging, climbing trees, skipping stones, running through the sprinklers, playing slip and slide, running after the ice cream man, and laughing.

Summer is everything and anything one could possibly make it. It's about doing the traditional, and at the same time, trying to do absolutely anything to make it different. It is the same for everybody, yet at the same time, completely different. It's about doing something one could never imagine, exploring new territory, going beyond what has ever been imagined before. It's summer, and it's the memories that will last for a lifetime. For summer has been, is, and forever will be just living. —C. Erhart

Why is having a summer job a good idea?

1) Jobs allow you to raise some extra money.

3) Having a job gets you ready for the working world as you get older.
4) A job helps you stay active, and keeps you from being bored.

5) Summer jobs keep you from getting into summer mischief!

What's bad about having a summer job?

1) Getting up in the morning and going to work is a hard thing to do.
2) It's not that easy to go to work while your friends are out having a good time.
3) Having a job makes you mature quicker as you take on the responsibilities that the job entails.
4) You might have to miss your favorite TV shows for work.
5) Your brain has to function all year long, instead of only nine months! —K. Pusich

Duke Days

Walking down the halls on Monday, October 2nd, it was not uncommon to spot a dozen green-haired students or maybe even a teacher decked out in braids. These outrageous hairdos were in honor of Crazy Hair Day, which marked the beginning of York's Spirit Week. The next four days were jam-packed with lunchtime activities, such as ultimate frisbee and limbo contests, and creative theme days. Ending the school week, students came to school in their green and white for a half day on Friday.

Immediately following Friday's early dismissal, students gathered in the gym for York's annual pep rally. After a week of campaigning, seniors Sarah Kirchhoff, Lindsey Mulvey, and Cathleen Conley were announced Queens of the Couch. They grabbed their front row seats to watch the festivities. Before the pep rally ended, Coach Grider delivered an inspiring speech and wished the football team good luck at the big game.

The bleachers were overflowing with screaming fans on Friday night. Although the varsity football team lost the game with a score of 3-20 to Downers Grove North, the crowd's spirit never died. Spirit Week came to an end, but the pride of the Dukes was not to be soon forgotten. —M. Arthurs

A Walk in The Clouds

With 47 bobby pins digging into her head, she waited impatiently while her date casually strolled to the door. Her father stood like a shadow hovering in the doorway with a look of anticipation and disapproval that only his face could express.

He greeted her parents with a smile then looked shyly at his date. He reminisced of events over the past years of their friendship - sharing lunches in kindergarten, playing tag on the playground during recess, exchanging gossip about childhood crushes - and everything faded when he saw her standing there, her long dress sparkling in the moonlight. He wondered why they had suddenly become strangers.

Her parents demanded a few snapshots then they were on their way. Fashionably late, they lingered outside York in the mile-long line to get inside. It was an unusually cold October evening. He wrapped his jacket around her shoulders, fully knowing the cold he would have to endure as the consequence.

They sauntered into the gym, which was now transformed into a starry sky. The first slow song boomed from the speakers as they started dancing. He looked into her eyes and all the memories flooded back to them, but something had changed now. In that instant they both realized they weren't the same grammar school kids who rode their bikes to the park everyday. Something was different, but nice. It was almost like a walk in the clouds. —A. Paradise

Above: The smile adorning the face of sophomore Amie Strode while she dances with senior Stefanos Karavo cannot begin to capture the memories of the night.

Bright colored streamers, palm trees, Hawaiian leis, and shinning faces covered the dance floor on the night of February 19, 2000. It was the night of turnabout, and the scene inside hardly reflected the winter climate outside. There was snow on the ground, a frosty wind blowing, and students running to get out of the cold. Yet the activity in the main gym clearly made up for the lack there of outside.

So it seemed unlikely that a dance would be named "Paradise City" when it occurred in late winter. However, the spirit and the excitement on the dance floor could only be described as a moment in paradise. As the song "Paradise City" by Guns And Roses played over the loud speakers, the winter chill melted away just as quickly as the snow would disappear come spring. —C. Erhart

More than 6 million Jewish people were killed by the Nazis in World War II. It's a price that cannot be repaid, and the survivors have many horrible memories haunting their dreams and lives. Two memories are shared in the diary of a girl named Anne Frank and by friends who tried to fight for the Jews' justice.

The Diary of Anne Frank spells out some of the horrible things this Jewish girl, her family, and some friends had to go through. Hiding in an attic located above her father's office for more than two years and being caught in the end only to die was horrible in itself, but Anne still believed that people were good.

"It really got emotional for me... When the Nazis came in at the end to take us away, real tears came to my eyes," said junior Jeffrey Krol who played Mr. Frank. The horrible killing of Jewish people was hard for the actors in this play, since they had to become the hunted.

Killing was also abundant in the play The White Rose. The characters who wrote against the Jewish killing were hanged by the Nazis in the end. They had a chance to escape and not get killed, but they refused to stay silent.

"It was tough for me to look at myself in the mirror with a Nazi uniform," commented sophomore Andrew Stasiulis. He played the officer who ordered the execution of the Nazi haters, and for him, that represented a great challenge, especially since he is Jewish himself.

Such plays like The Diary of Anne Frank and The White Rose were hard to act in, but there is one very important idea that makes them necessary. This idea is remembering and learning from mistakes in the past. —I. Strehin

It's Fantastic

Fantastic? So the audience [illegible] play Fantastics was presented in the Spring of 2000 by the [illegible] High School Drama Department.

Junior Ashley Petrey played Louisa, a girl who falls for her neighbor Matt, played by sophomore Eric Stomikas. They plan to marry but then deal with the consequences of love. Planning to live happily ever after, junior John Taflan comes into play, taking Louisa with him around the world. Taflan's plan backfires as Louisa finds she really is in love with Matt.

With a few drama rookies such as senior Matthew Roan and senior Eric Himes on stage, it was known the production was going to need some hard work and dedication. The cast worked day in and day out knowing that they needed an extra effort for this one to work. Even though a second cast was not acquired, the directors and cast managed to execute all the performances.

According to the atmosphere of the audience, the actors, Mr. Leslie Zunkel, and the stage crew pulled off another great job backstage as needed.

A Stroll on Broadway...

One shady Broadway character flipped a coin, another snapped his fingers. They glanced offstage right and left. A policemen, swinging a club, passed by, and exited to the left. Two very animated bobby soxers entered from the right. An actress, dressed very elegantly entered from the left. This was the Broadway scene of this summer's musical comedy Guys And Dolls. Nathan Detroit entered worried about where to get the money to play his famous crap game. He heard rumors on the streets of Broadway that Sky Masterson, the biggest and the greatest bidder of all time, was in town. Nathan decided to bet the impossible with Sky to win some money for the crap game. Nathan knew that Sky had a eye for Sarah Brown. Nathan bet with Sky that Sky couldn't make Sarah Brown fall in love with him. Nathan knew he would win. As Sky sought his love, Nathan also had his own love problems. Miss Adelaide, Nathan's fourteen year fiancee, wanted to finally get married. The life on Broadway was demanding. Sarah Brown fell in love with Sky Masterson, Nathan lost his bet, but still had his game and finally married Miss Adelaide.

The summer show gave everyone the opportunity to participate. With many people in this cast, organizing sets and costumes back stage was hair-raising and difficult. This show was challenge to many people who were involved. The musicians in the pit played with their souls, the vocalist sang with their hearts and the dancers leaped at every step. "I think you always fear that any and every play you do is 'thrown together' at the last minute. That's how it was in Guys And Dolls" said sophomore, Mary Sotos. As the dancers did their laborious routines, singers sang their last words, the musicians played their last note, and the cast gave their last drop of talent and stamina, the play turned out to be four nights of sold out shows. — M. Finding true love is hard enough, but when the pressures of the king and queen, (also known as your parents), are put on someone, the search can be an extremely difficult one. This scenario came alive on stage when the York Drama Department presented "Once Upon a Mattress" a remake of the popular fairy-tale, "The Princess and the Pea". The performance took place from November 9 through November 12, 2000.

Many actors in this year's fall play were veterans of the stage, which may have helped tremendously with the preparations for opening night. All those who participated, no matter what they did, contributed to the overall success of this year's play. As many actors can attest, their opening night jitters quickly turned into adrenaline, and helped prepare each actor and actress even further. Important roles were played by sophomores Laura Perticara, Christina Clark, Andrew Taflan, and seniors Ashley Petrey, Ryan Kasak, and Jeffrey Krol. From the ropes course to the late night shaving cream fights and, oh yes, "ride the pony," the 2000 Snowball members had a time that will never be forgotten. As always, Camp Duncan in Ingleside, Illinois provided a great place to stay, and with new washroom and shower facilities, many kids decided to bathe this year for the dance and late night karaoke'ing. Along with the many fun activities, speakers shared life changing experiences that often changed the hearts of those who listened.

Mercury, Mars, Venus? What did these planets have to do with the 2000 snowball? Along with the six other planets, they were the names of the small groups where students and teachers laughed, cried, and bonded. Each planet was lead by one or two peer leaders and a teacher to get them started, with a total of 7-9 people in a group. During this time the students, along with the teachers, found themselves pouring out their hearts and receiving nothing but love and support back.

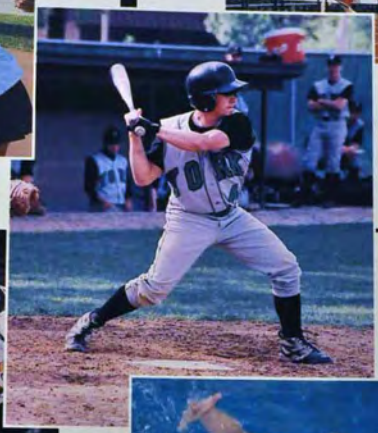

After a weekend of emotional bonding, the students went home with the comfort of knowing that plenty of people out there, wandering the halls of York, care and want to listen. -A. Iozzo

YORK → 1

On November 4th, who would have thought that the York Boys Cross Country team would win their second straight State title? During the year, no one other than York did. York was the underdog that day in Peoria, yet the Dukes prevailed and were the two time state champions. After the race, an hour long period full of tears and emotions accompanied awaiting the final results. Everyone thinking it was too close to call was just sitting and waiting until out burst one cheer, and then another, and soon it was known that York was the best team in the state. Senior Adam Roche led the way for the Dukes placing fifth overall in the race. The other top six runners for York were seniors Peter Stasiulis(10th), Jay McGrane(50th), Timothy Hobbs(59th), John Baez(67th), junior David Kikuchi(103rd), and sophomore Michael Corry(108th). From the way the fans were cheering, it was more than evident that the seven ran until their legs coud move no faster. It was a true team effort, and each of the seven spots contributed to the overall first place finish. At the awards ceremony, the Dukes sported their traditional tuxedos because they looked sharp, after they ran sharp. The two all staters from the 2000 season were veterans, as both Roche and Stasiulis received the title for two consecutive years. Previous to the twenty first state title for York, coach Joseph Newton planned to retire, but later decied to try for twenty five. The single word that York fans could use to depict exactly what Peoria was like on [illegible] 4th: unbelievable. The mood was set: crystal clear, deep blue skies and a mild temperature. The pressure was on for the seven girls from York who were competing that day, after being named the favorite over the other 27 teams.

Senior Maria Cicero started the girls' victory by pulling away in the first mile to win the Girls Class AA State Cross-Country throne in 13 minutes, 49 seconds. This was a record-breaking time at Detweiller Park. Other runners assisting with the triumph were sophomore Kara Henry, crossing the finish line in 14th place, sophomore Allison Billhardt, ending up 26th after falling early in the race, senior Kelly Forst landing the 46th spot, and junior Kelly O'Neill. Efforts were also given by York runners freshman Shannon Tucker and sophomore Hillary Palumbo.

Adding to the celebration were several hundred York supporters, clothed in the school's native colors from head to toe. After the news of the boys' first place finish, Cicero remarked, "It wouldn't be complete without them winning. Elmhurst is going to go nuts!", and that is what truly happened. The awards assembly that took place in Peoria was followed by a parade of green and white spray-painted cars back in Elmhurst leading to the pep rally at York. The seven girls captured the title that eluded them in years past, and captured a day that will go into the record books.—A. Bush

SWINGING FOR THE BEST!

The year 2000-2001 Badminton season was one the best seasons the team ever had due to eac girl's effort. The girls started out with one solid goal, which was to defeat Oak Park. They did not just mee their goal, they also exceeded it by also beating Lyons. "I think most people were really focused on th job that needed to be done. We knew any match that was lost could give points away to any of th other teams and swing the standings in their favor," said junior Danielle Konrad. The focus on the gam was the motive that kept the team winning. Konrad also added, "When we found out the final standing of our third place finish in the conference, you could have thought we placed first by how loud w cheered." This action illustrated the team's spirit and enthusiasm. Coach Grouwinkel brought hard wo into the team and assistant coach Fite brought professional experience. One of the best advancement the team had was competing in the Hinsdale South tournament with some of the best teams in the stat With success also came regret. It was the Glenbrook South tournament which placed the team first, b lost many girls due to injury. Top player after top player went down due to twisted ankles. However, the was sisterhood among the girls and they joked at practice and accepted each other's faults. No one pu each other down for losing or missing a point. It was all part of the game. It's 1:30p.m. on a Saturday afternoon and the sun is sweltering on the backs of the Dukes baseball players. Luckily it's the bottom of the 6th, right? WRONG! Today's game is one of the many double headers the Dukes spent their Saturdays playing.

This year marked Mr. Michael Lee's first year as head varsity coach. Lee felt that "developing character was of utmost importance", and made it his overall goal for the season.

Eight of the nine starters this season were seniors. Captains Bradley Ryan and Kevin Danforth led the team along with Christopher Miller, Daniel Davy, and James Kain.

"Our record did not do justice to our hard work and dedication.," stated senior Frank Zito. Many of the games they lost were only by one run, proving the season could have gone either way.

Unfortunately, the Dukes lost their regional semi-final game by one run to the eventual winner, Lake Park.

Next season Coach Lee intends to focus on pitching and catching as the number one priority. Lee plans to return to the fundamentals of baseball and looks forward to coaching returning underclassmen Alexander Kanelos, Jeffrey Loster, Frank Zito, Joseph Mellens, and Luke Mellens.

Despite the ups and downs of the season, Lee said that there was a lot of compassion and dedication from his players.

It All Adds Up

This year proved to be a positive experience for the freshmen and sophomores of the boys gymnastics team. They made up much of the varsity team and had a chance to play against some very tough competitors. The only seniors on the team were James Los, Sean Buban, Michael Zawada, Erik Rauglas and Tobias Stilling. Despite the low numbers of experienced gymnasts, the season turned out to be full of improvement from last year.

"I don't think that I have ever seen so much improvement in one season. We started at a 114 and by the end of the season we were at 124," commented junior Zachary Hoffman. The numbers 114 and 124 are the scores of the team at a typical gymnastics meet. Most teams have a hard time raising their score by two points, but York's team was able to raise their starting score by ten points.

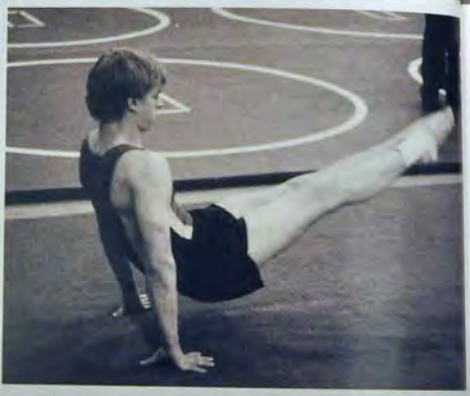

Every new trick learned by the freshmen was another point added to the overall score. "Many talented freshmen were called up to fill in at the sophomore and varsity levels. Many did so well that they counted towards the team score," commented head coach Jarrod Almosch. These small differences allowed York to move up in the rankings at each meet. It may not have seemed like much, but for a young team such as York's, it was a great achievement.

"I was honored to play against such competitive teams," said freshman Robert Chambers. Even though the season did not have enough wins for the improving team to get any place in conference, it had a significant impact on the maturation of the team as a whole. It helped them see how teamwork was necessary to make an improvement.

Some people say that loosing teaches a person more than winning. The improvement seen in the freshmen proved that statement to be true. The important idea is that they realized they were improving by the scores they received. That is more than enough to point young athletes in the right direction. —I. Strehin

A Whole New Ball Game

If jewelry was being worn... two sprints. If shirts were not tucked in... four sprints. If a teammate forgot to bring a ball... six sprints. If the bags were not lined up... eight sprints. With new head coach Lindsey Laforte and new assistant coach Courtney Waterman, the 2000 soccer season took on a whole new routine.

Sprint drills, practice shirts, and warm-ups were just a few changes that came with new coaches. Drills such as the "Cage Match" (wrestling teammates for possession of the ball) were added to the practice agenda. "We wanted to show players the benefit of using the entire body to defend the ball," commented Waterman. The girls soccer team also took a trip to Iron Oaks, a team building obstacle coarse. "Team building helped us realize that we are capable of getting to the next level," explained Laforte.

The team continued its excellence as Regional champions for the sixth year in a row. The girls did in fact reach a new level when they made their first appearance in the sectional title match. Their winning streak came to a halt when York was matched with Lyons Township in sectionals. The end score was 0-3 Lyons, despite the gallant effort to stop long time rivals. As the 2001 season lay ahead, the shock of new leadership will be gone and the team can once again settle into the same old ball game. —R. Eddington

REGIONAL CHAMPIONS

THE KEY TO SUCCESS

The month was March and the year was 2000. It was time for tryouts and because it was a new century, that meant new expectations. Head coach Thomas Babyar and assistant coach David Williams were expected to pick a team that they would be able to introduce as new and strong. After the tough three-day tryouts, the team was made. They were strong and hard working indeed, but lacked a predominant upper classman presence.

The team consisted of four sophomores, including returning starter Laura Morgan, six juniors, and only four seniors. Leadership was displayed by senior Lauren Bellville who was later voted All Conference along with sophomores Therese Wozniak and Morgan. Honored with the All Conference title, Wozniak led the team in homeruns, along with Bellville and junior Kathleen Goss. Bellville and Wozniak were also members of the Over 30 Club, both having thirty-three hits. The coaches were satisfied with their top hitters, but Babyar and Williams, like any successful coaches, wanted more. Coach David Williams said, "Statistically, our hitting has been down from recent years and unfortunately that really hurt us. If you don't hit, you don't get on base. If you don't get on base, you don't score. If you don't score, then you don't win."

The game is just as important on the bench as it is on the field. Junior Erin Hoffman, sophomore Tara Zito, junior Katherine Weilandt, and senior Andrea Schmidt focus hard on what they need to do to score another run.

Throughout the season, the team struggled to find good hitting and more pitching. Morgan was the starting pitcher but unfortunately she was unable to pitch every game. She pitched 24 out of the Dukes' 35 games. Babyar and Williams can only hope for more help in the 2001 season.

All in all, the Lady Dukes did not finish their season very strong. They won their first regional game against Lake Park, 2-1, but had an upsetting loss to Elk Grove with a score of 2-8. Babyar and Williams are already thinking ahead to their 2001 season. They are looking at four or five junior varsity players to come up and join their team. They hope the newcomers will bring depth to the varsity level. Williams said, "The key to our success is how they will mesh with the other girls." The coaches' goal is to have twenty wins and go 8-4 in conference. It looks as though the Lady Dukes will have to put a lot of hard work and effort into their next season to reach that goal. If these are met, the girls will be able to find what every team is looking for: the key to success. —A. Jordan

When Head Coach William Sir was asked to sum up the season's acheivements in one statement, he replied, "Massive improvement, and Clutch play."

This past season, the Boys Varsity Tennis team followed the old saying "you win some, you lose some." The team's overall record for the season wa 7-8, but according to Head Coach William Sir, "that doesn't matter." Throughou the season, York had it's high points, and like every team, they also had the low points. The team's pinnacle of the season was defeating Downer's Grov South on their home court. This was an accomplishment for the Dukes becaus Downer's Grove South had a winning streak at home, and their team late went on to win the Gold Division Championship. The Dukes won the matc 4-3. The team's harshest loss eventually developed into one of their highes points of the season, which consisted of two matches. The first match was th season opener against Lake Park, which York lost 0-5, but that was not the las that Lake Park heard of the Dukes. The second of the two meets proved Yor to be victorious as the Dukes won 4-3. Of course, this defeat could not hav happened if it wasn't for the hard work of every team member. Senio teammates Matthew Roan, and Michael Stelling were named Most Improve Players for their hard efforts throughout the winter tournaments and the entir season. In the end, the team proved that their secret was definitely workin together. —K. Atkinson

How sweet it is!!!!

Entering the 2000 season, the York boys track team had 3 goals:

1. Win both the indoor and outdoor Conference championships to add to their ultimate collection.
2. Win yet another Sectional championship.
3. Win York's third State track and field championship

In other words, the boys team gave what it took to win. For years, York has been considered one of the finest track and field programs in the state, yet year after year, a state title eluded them.

Despite state champion hurdler Kyle Erickson's graduation, the team still had many of their key members from the previous year combined with some new talent, such as senior runners Donald Sage, Peter Cioni, and Adam Palumbo. New junior athletes such as Terrence Mastrino, Benjamin Wallick, Matthew Kiefer, and Timothy Hobbs also rose to the occasion . The York boys track team was armed and dangerous, with the will to win.

The Dukes gave it everything they had and pulled together. It wasn't unusual to see them bent over against the fences or falling over after a race in practice, but the hard work paid off. The Dukes went undefeated for the season, fulfilling all three of their goals. They were without a doubt, the best track team ever to come through York High School.–T.Cappelletti

Running Down A Dream

With confidence, the 2000 girls track team was successful in living up to their expectations, and put the new track to the test. "With it being the longest sport season, it was tough to consistently perform to one's potential, but we did just that," said Christina Daniels.

The indoor season passed with the girls finishing third in their conference. The outdoor season opened with adrenaline, excitement, and many hours of tough practices. "The team became more unified during the second half of the season because the throwers, runners, and jumpers made one strong effort," explained Eva Zellman.

The Lady Dukes had the home advantage for both their conference and sectional meets. They went into conference with high hopes, and received third place. The following week at sectionals, their nerves were played with when the meet was cancelled due to inclement weather. Sectionals were only postponed until the following day when the Lady Dukes placed fourth.

The State meet was held at Eastern Illinois University, and many individuals put their talent to the test. York was very proud to walk onto the track with sprinters, distance runners, and jumpers. "Our team looked very intimidating," described Ann Marcucci. Many placed in the state meet, and the 3200 meter relay took first once again. Over all, the girls placed 7th in State, which will give them something to talk about. —T. Hill

Coming off a very successful season in which they reached the state playoffs, the boys volleyball team entered the first season of the millennium with high hopes. With many of their starters returning as seniors, including All-Conference hitters Richard Sebby and David Barker, they came out strong. Walking into the gym and hearing the echoes of hoots and hollers or some energetic cheers from the bench, it was obvious that they were out to win. Junior Ryan Dick said, "We had a talented team. We worked hard, and we had a good time." The hard work showed, and the team ended the season with a overall record of 30-7.

Above: The concentration in his eye can be seen as freshman Bryan Belville tosses up the ball for a serve that will, no doubt, be an ace.

Junior Michael Letizia commented, "We had a great seaso with many high points." These high points included finishing fir in both the Wheaton Warrenville South and Fremd Tournament For a time during the season, the Dukes even earned the rank number ten in the state of Illinois, which is something the tea from the previous year had never achieved. Another high point the season came in the sectional semifinals when "We defeated ou arch rival Lake Park in the playoffs," Letizia added. However, aft having been lead all the way to the sectional final by coach Ter Cohen, the Dukes suffered a bitter defeat to Wheaton North, endi the season. Despite the disappointing finish and the loss of th senior starters, defensive specialist Adam Thrall still has high hope for next season, "We will definitely win state next year." BUILDING A FOUNDATION

Swimming - it is what kids dreaded the most in gym class. Jumping in the cold, clear water during the middle of the school day was simply unappealing to most students. Major drawbacks included the strong smell of chlorine, the showers that must be taken prior to the class and the state of exhaustion the class period imposed. Of all swimming events, the most dreaded was the ten minute tread. However, the boys water polo team could endure much more than a simple ten minute exercise.

Morning workouts, after school practice, then going home to study was the typical routine of the young water polo team. While most students are still fast asleep, the team would be jumping in the water at six a.m. sharp. This grueling schedule was followed to build a foundation for the underclassman dominated team.

"We did very well against teams of equal ability, but we struggled with the higher skilled teams such Fenwick and Latin High School," explained head coach Richard Balcerak. The eleven wins and eleven loses expressed the middle ground that the boys water polo team was at. "The experience factor came into play on some tough loses," Balcerak stated.

Losing only three seniors to graduation, the team had to build a foundation for the following years. Fifteen players were freshman, and will return with greater experience each year. The games that were lost to more established teams may be won as the team grows together.

The purpose of this season was not to capture the state title, or even to become Western suburban champions. The purpose was to build a strong foundation for years to come. —R. Eddington and A. Szeluga

It's 5:45 and the girls water polo team is already on its way to six a.m. practice, while most York students are happily dreaming in their beds with no intentions of getting up for at least another hour.

With only one returning senior and a new head coach, the girls water polo team was young, but that did not stop them from having a competitive season. Coach Margaret Lesniak stated, "This season we learned to play as a team and began to sharpen our skills and game strategies in hopes of a stronger season next spring". Leaders for the team included captains Elizabeth Carlson, Carrie Napolilli, and Ann Szeluga, along with fellow starters Kimberly Skukas, Erin Smolenski, and goalie Danielle Young, who had to accept and fill the shoes of departing seniors. They may have been young, but they were eager to learn and accept the season's many challenges.

While most York students dread the ten minute water treading test, the girls water polo team could do this with ease seeing as they treaded water three hours a day, sometimes holding up bricks for extra weight. Besides the constant treading and swimming until the girls felt their arms and legs were going to fall off, practices also consisted of a variety of shooting, passing, defensive, and offensive drills. It would not be unusual to see the girls with split lips, broken noses, black eyes, bruises, and nail scratches after finishing an intense game or practice.

With a tough conference in Illinois, the lady Dukes faced fierce competition in the pool. Their season ended with a loss in their sectional game against New Trier. With all starters returning next year, the girls water polo team is sure to have a successful season.

THE WINNING EDGE

Above: Senior Jay McGrane leads the pack and must give all he has to stay in front.

The 2000 boys cross country team consisted of athletes who had run along side and in the shadows of the top runners from the 1999 state championship team. They saw what it took to win and as a result, gained a winning edge on thier opponents.

The odds were against the Dukes at the beginning of the season. After losing 4 of thier top runners to graduation, the critics and media thought that York didn't have enough talent to win another state title. The Dukes were also hit hard by injuries, taking out 3 of their top 7 runners.

Their stading as underdogs in the conference did not get to them. They were determined to keep up the winning tradition at York, but it was not easy. They suffered 2 defeats early in the season to number 3 ranked Downers Grove North and a very strong Crystal Lake Central team.

Despite the early defeats, York maintained a good work ethic and kept thier minds on winning a state championship. Day after day, the Dukes trained hard and gave it 110% in practice. York surprised the west suburban conference by beating Downers Grove North and taking home the conference championship, and stunned the public by winning the regional and sectional championships. Again, they went on to win their twenty-first state championship. The Dukes proved once again they have the winning edge. —T. Cappelletti

STEPPING OUT OF THE SHADOWS

Above: York's number one female runner, Maria Cicero, paces herself during one of the biggest meets of the year, Sectionals . Cicero has made some incredible times this year and is the top femle runners in the state.

"There is no feeling that can match the excitement that a true runner gets prior to their race," said sophomore Allison Ogborn. The York girls 2000 cross-country team had an incredible season, and this was their year to step out of the shadows of the boys cross-country team.

The girls' season started out when they placed first place for varsity and Frosh/Soph at the St. Charles invite. Continuing on with the victories, Varsity and Frosh/Soph were undefeated throughout the entire season, while the J.V. ran their best, and were one of the top teams in every meet.

The short season flew by, and conference came and went, with the Lady Dukes taking home a first place trophy in Varsity, and in Frosh/Soph, and placing fourth in J.V. One week after conference the girl's went to Niles West High School to compete in the Regionals. The girls' dominated the race taking first yet again. This meant that the top seven girl runners from York would be moving on to Sectionals, bringing along the following seven runners as alternates.

Sectionals were held at Willowbrook and, yet again, the York girls took home the first place trophy. The seven then traveled to Peoria for the state competition. The girls won the one and only state title for the Lady Dukes. These girls stood in the spotlight, and cast a shadow that had never before been matched at York. —T. Hill

Everybody knew that big changes were about to occur once former head coach Gary Grouwinkel announced that 1999 would be his last year for coaching York's varsity football team. It was now time for someone to step up and take on the challenge of replacing him.

Grouwinkel looked to the man that he thought would do an outstanding job. That man was Terry Grider, who had been the assistant coach for 28 years. Grider was ecstatic and jumped at the offer. Although Grider had coached before, he realized that he now had some big shoes to fill. Grider knew that practice and hard work would be the only way to make his first season as the varsity coach a successful one. He had his boys practicing five days a week, and most of the time, two times a day for almost half of the summer. Rain or shine, those players practiced their hearts out because they knew they also had some big shoes to fill ever since the previous season. York did an outstanding job in 1999. Size helped the that team, but was lacking in the 2000 Dukes. Therefore, the defensive line was definitely weaker. Although the defense was not that strong, the offense pulled through. Their speed and determination brought them closer to the end zone.

The biggest game of the season, against Oak Park River Forest, consisted of outstanding work from the offense. Because of this, they earned their first win after four tough losses. After this win, Grider said, "The kids have finally seen the light at the end of the tunnel." The Dukes were out to do nothing but win, and their next game against Proviso West became their second. Unfortunately, that streak ended after a loss to Downers Grove North on Homecoming.

Grider, although he did not have as many wins as he anticipated, was very pleased with all of the hard work and loyalty that was contributed by every player. He was most pleased with the senior leadership from Adam Brook as the kicker, Theodore Fleckles, Matthew Kiefer, and Daniel Sloan at defensive back, Jamie Bretl at tackle, and James Schultz at tight end. The captains consisted of linebacker Frank Zito, offensive back Benjamin Wallick, and, after recovering from an injury, Robert Harley. Grider also felt that senior Anthony DuPrey did an amazing job until he received an injury. As DuPrey went down, senior Michael Moran came back after an injury to help out the Dukes.

Grider said that he had "a great bunch of guys." They did not have the size that he wanted, but they definitely had the speed. Grider stated, "The next group of players looks really promising for the 2001 season," Grider said. He can only hope that these players will be able to rise to the occasion, and gain more victories than the Dukes received during the 2000 season. —A. Jordan

Boys

This years York Dukes golf season was definitely one for the history books. Led by senior Jason Gaare, the Dukes finished the season with a phenomenal 8-3 record, and took the West Suburban Silver Conference championship for the first time in forty years.

Gaare was chosen for the all conference team, along with teammates junior John Michael Ekblad, and sophomore Ryne Kentala. Gaare, Kentala, and junior Trent Martin also advanced to Sectionals as individuals. Gaare said, "The season was definitely a success. It was the most talented team ever at York."

Even with the loss of Gaare next year, the team still has a bright future ahead of them. The team was young, and had only two seniors. There were three sophomores in the top six players on the varsity team, and they will continue to make contributions in the years to come.

Girls

Coming into only the second year of girls golf ever at York High School, the girls golf team had nothing to lose. Coached by Barbara Tilden the team was comprised of some very young players. Although there was still not yet a girls golf conference, the program did make a vast advance from only four meets in the season to ten. The team also made improvements on the course by lowering their score in the conference meet by ninety strokes. For just a second year program, this team made great strides toward success. York hopes the Lady Dukes continue this upward trend in the years to come. –J. Thielbar

It was finally time for the boys varsity soccer team to let the competitors know who the big dog was. T Dukes stormed out right away and beat several top ten ranked schools. At one point in their season, the Duk were ranked 11th in the state. They bit and they scratched and they clawed their way through victories again some very tough schools. "We came out and fought hard in every game. We did exactly what we had to do, and it took us far in the playoffs", junior Benjamen Lewis stated. After a great regular season, the Dukes attacked the playoffs. T Dukes had a 9-0 victory in their first game of the playoffs against Fenton, then defeated Leyden 2-0 in a section semifinal match, and then the Dukes went on to beat Addison Trail 1-0 to capture York's first ever soccer section championship! Wake Up and Smell the Chlorine

My alarm clock rings. I think it's the most annoying sound to wake up to in the morning. As I pry my eyes open, I roll out of bed, make a quick stop in the bathroom, grab my things, and I'm off to 6:00 a.m. swimming practice.

This was the same routine every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. The girls swim team made an effort to maintain sanity while doing this three times a week, for three months a year. However, that is not all the girls made an effort in doing. After school practices forced them to work hard. An average practice consisted of swimming an approximate distance of 5,000 yards (about three miles). Wow!

Not only did swimmers need to have endurance to make it through the swimming season, but they also had to have a lot of heart. Swimming drained a good deal of energy out of them. For this reason, it was evident they possessed the mentality to keep up with the long and tiring practices, speeches/lectures from the coaches, and the pressure from themselves to do their best.

The season proved to be successful for the Lady Dukes. Sophomore Jaclyn Weber qualified for state in the 100m Butterfly and 100m Breast, and relay team Weber, junior Erin Smolenski, senior Kimberly Skukas, and freshman Nicole Gurney set new records for both the 400m Free Relay as well as the 200m Free Relay. The girls proved the 6:00 a.m. practices and hard work paid off and paid off quite well. —M. Choyke

Under the beating sun, whose rays stung their eyes, they played. Despite humidity one minute, and a strong wind current the next, they played. Even with scrapes on their knees and muscle soreness in their arms, they were able to play. With determination in their hearts, the girls tennis team surpassed many expectations.

Head coach David Williams and assistant coaches William Sir and Phyllis Cady led the Lady Dukes to an all York final at the sectional meet for the first time since 1981. Under the leadership of senior team captains Kathleen Sands and Gloria Okino, two singles and two doubles teams advanced from the sectional level to the state series. Okino finished in seventh place in the first team. This was a first in coach Williams' 22 year history to finish in the top eight in singles. Senior doubles team Diane Lutzke and Jessica Hauser finished 17-24 in the third team and joined Okino in earning all-state ranking.

By finishing fourth in conference, just one point shy of taking third, the team was committed to placing in the top ten teams in the state. The team came in eleventh, just two points away from tenth, yet that did not even destroy their spirit. "The success of our season only further enhanced our attitudes," commented Okino. BUMP IT UP!

Going into this year's season, the girls volleyball team had no idea what to expect. They had new coaches, new strategies, and new goals to accomplish. It did not take long for them to realize that head coach Jennie Georges was not only interested in winning, but also in gaining recognition and respect for the team. She began to transform York's entire volleyball program, and her impact on the team became evident in its success. The girls had one of their biggest victories over Bennet Academy, a school known for its excellent volleyball team. In the regional competition, the Lady Dukes were able to defeat Wheaton Warrenville South but then lost a very close game to Naperville South.

"We had team unity to thank for helping us with our accomplishments during the season," stated senior Elizabeth Marcellus. Players were constantly getting injured, causing the starting line up to change almost every week. This forced the girls to be ready for anything and to be willing to step in for a teammate if the need arose. By pulling together and adapting to some changes, the girls volleyball record proved to everyone their talent, ability, and determination to succeed. —M. Arthurs

A New Attitude

At the start of the 2000-2001 boys basketball season, the Dukes of York did not know what to expect. John Daniels was the team's new coach, and there were only five returning seniors from the 1999-2000 squad. "It was a different team with a different strategy," commented senior James Schultz.

In the first few weeks of the season , the Dukes worked hard in order to be ready for the tough competition ahead of them. The Dukes were practicing two times a day, before and after school. "Double practices were very tiring," commented junior Kevin Napadow.

The first opponents the Dukes competed against were in the annual Turkey Classic which was a tournament held at York High School. The Dukes advanced all the way to the championship game.

The team was lead by seniors Rashad McSwine and Kevin Kenny. Many times McSwine could be seen driving to the basket while Kenny spotted up for a three-point shot. Their teammates were able to pick their games up a notch and fill in the gaps where the team needed help.

The Dukes proved to many that they played to compete. The 2000-2001 team won the I.H.S.A regional championship, defeating Holy Cross high school and the state-ranked New Trier High School. They were the first York team to win that title since 1980. "We surprised a lot of people by how hard we played this year," explained junior guard Tres Heimann. STRAIGHT FROM THE GUTTA

Yes! WE did it! We're number one!

These remarks were heard coming from the girls after winning their first meet of the season against Addison Trail. The girls were smiling because they knew that their work finally paid off.

The performance this year grew to be quite impressive, especially with the help of the new smoothly shined bowling balls that the girls received. Ms. Cheryl Dvorsky had a good idea of how they grew to be such a good team, and said, "I think the chemistry that these girls had was the reason that they improved so much this year." However, their attitude was the real key to their success. There was more to this team than strikes and spares. Dvorsky also added, "These girls are a true example of what a team should really be like." They cared for one another and taught each other through athletics, education, and relationships.

The bowling team had more games than just the regular Tuesday and Thursday after school competitions. Saturdays were set aside for the bowling tournaments which included playing six games in one day! The girls did not even get home until 4:30 P.M. That is a seven and a half hour day of bowling on Saturdays alone, not to mention the Tuesday and Thursday games, which added to the several hours of weekly practice. —A. Iozzo

RISKING IT ALL

"Expect more than others think is possible; dream more than others think is practical; risk more than others think is safe."—Successary Catalog

In a sport where injuries usually exceed accomplishments, the girls gymnastics team experienced a grueling yet fulfilling season.

With coaching changes every year for the past four years, the girls gymnastics team did not have the highest expectations for a great adjustment. However, head coach Jarrod Amolsch and assistant coaches Lorel Kleyweg and Christine Morgan had the right chemistry to inspire and motivate the team.

Led by co-captains senior Molly Madden and junior Christina Erhart, both the junior varsity and varsity teams finished with an overall conference standing of third place, tying with Hinsdale Central. The varsity team included freshmen Brittany Moroney, sophomores Jacqueline Guca and Kimberly Long, and juniors Sarah Jacobson and Michelle Karns. After Guca suffered a severe knee injury mid-season, freshman Heather Ward and sophomore Brittney Bartler helped to fill the void.

Beginning with relatively low team totals, the varsity team earned a 140 out of a possible 160 points by the culmination of their season. Coach Amolsch stated, "We accomplished so much in such a short time."

Yet their greatest accomplishment was the I.H.S.A. Regional Championship, a feat which was last won in 1988. "Winning our regional brought together the confidence and trust we had built in each other all season long. We surprised some people and earned a ton of respect," said Madden. As a result, both the team and several individuals advanced to Sectionals. Despite a sixth place finish, Long advanced to the state preliminaries on the floor exercise with a score of 9.325.

KEEPING AFLOAT

The majority of York students understood the meaning of winter break as they slept in and vacationed, but t boy's swim team did not enjoy the same type of break. The team practiced between four and five hours every day w occasional additional meets. The idea of sacrificing not only time during the regular school year, but also during holidays may not sound appealing to many, but junior David Pe explained, "You have to be incredibly dedicated to this sport, you m just one practice and you're a step behind the competition."
Apart from the rig- orous winter break routine, the boys pr
ticed both before and after school during the normal school calend
Captains for the 2000-2001 season were senior Robert Gurney and j ior David Perout. Gurney and Perout, along with coaches Ma
Laurich and Richard Bal- cerak, led the team through the season.
At their conference meet, the boys came in fourth place, a Perout described, "We missed third place by only one point wh comes as a tough break, but we'd rather peak in sectionals and st than conference." Gurney achieved the title "four-time all conferen champ" as he has won the 200 Individual Medley and 100 free-st events, four years running. Assistant coach Richard Balcerak co mented, "R.J. has estab- lished himself as one of the premier swi mers of the west suburban conference." Junior Matthew Kaleta agre and said, "R.J. has become an inspiration to all of us as we prepare the sectional meet."

At sectionals, the boys placed third. Gurney won both the2
Individual Medley and the 100 free-style, which made him part of t state team. At state, Gurney placed fourteenth in the 200 IM, and eighteenth in the 100 free.

Apart from all the statistics, their season could be best summarized by their team shirt quotation that read: "Wh going after Moby Dick, we bring the tartar sauce." This puzzling allusion that was best described by Gurney when explained, "Roughly translated, our shirts mean that when we're faced with a challenge, we go into the challenge pr pared to succeed". Their motto proved very true for the men in speedos this year as they succeeded in their team go and can hope that next year will mirror this year. —A. Szeluga

Most people know wrestling as something out of the WWF show "Raw Is War" featuring fantasy characters such as "Triple H", "Stone Cold" Steve Austin, or even "Chyna," but in reality, wrestling is a complex sport requiring extreme amounts of strength. Every member of this season's Boys Wrestling team tried to stay in top physical shape, as sophomore Garrett Gross pointed out, "Every day coach Clarke encouraged us to do something extra in practice to reach that extra mile." Each wrestler competed in matches, and when he won, he not only won for his own personal gain, but they also helped the overall team accomplish a better standing. The push to win was a challenge for the wrestlers because if a match were lost, it would hinder the entire team's chance of winning. This team effort would exceed anything portrayed on TV wrestling programs. The team, however, did not have to worry about its group performance. Everyone followed the motto written on the wall where the team practiced, "Together We Win," which truly made each match or meet a team effort. All of the seniors and varsity wrestlers proved their hard-working and determined attitudes. Senior varsity wrestlers Mark Dietzen, Daniel Gallagher, Vito Dicosola, and Mark Robbins took the term "team effort" to a new level as they always tried to be the best in their weight class. Sophomores Michael Bishof, Bradely Gruber, Tyler Bruesewitz, Harrison Noffs, and Jeremy Fronza were also recognized as being just some of the dedicated underclassmen to aid the team. Sophomore Michael Bishof explained, "We had to work ourselves harder than ever before." Every member made an effort, not only for themselves, but also for the team, and showed that they could all "lay the smack down." —K. Atkinson

BRING IT ON

Bright smiles and good cheer establish the cheerleaders dedication to their sport. This is true because they would definitely not be cheering in the brutal cold if they weren't! The football games give the girls a chance to show what they do during practice.

"It is great being a cheerleader. It takes a lot of hard work and trust between teammates," said junior Stefanie Remus after cheering at a boys basketball game.

Remus also commented, "We work very hard." The cheerleaders practiced almost every day after school as well as meeting at the teammates houses on the weekends. "It's a lot of work," explained Frances Rataj, "but it is fun to be with all of your friends, and see improvement in your skills." Some of the girls also attended a camp during the summer to further improve their skills.

From toe-touches, to the splits, to basket tosses, every cheerleader had to have a certain amount of flexibility and strength to protect themselves from injury. As well as building up their own strength, the girls needed faith in their fellow teammates' strength as they get lifted into the air. If one girl is out of shape, other girls could suffer.

Every cheerleader was expected to show up at certain school events in rain or shine. They cheered at the football games in early November, when it began to get cold and rainy, and they cheered at the basketball games in the stuffy gym. No matter what the playing field was, the girls enhanced the spirit of the game and encouraged the fans to cheer just a little bit louder. —K. Pusich

For years, the York Poms Squad has been known for the entertaining halftime routines and talented pep rally performances. The 2000-01 Poms were no disappointment. They not only manage to keep up the tradition of these game time dances, but they also set new goals for themselves and worked hard to achieve them.

Poms Coach Loukia Mastrodimos wanted a bigger squad than the previous year's. She ended up electing eleven new girls, along with seven who were previously on the team. The Poms went straight to work after tryouts and began practicing for their June performance at the Universal Dance Association Summer Camp. Their effort paid off when they won the Superior Trophy for their routine.

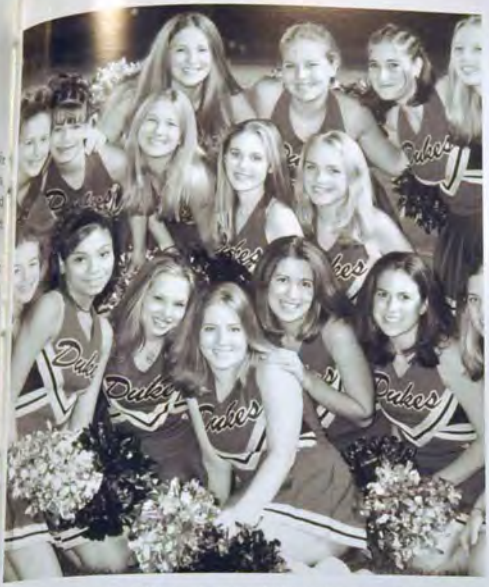

The Poms attended every home football game and prepared a different halftime show for each one. Of course, the highlight of football season for the girls was their performance at the Homecoming Pep Rally, which they had worked on for months. Senior captain Ashley Bidlencik said, "Practicing for the pep rally was incredibly stressful and time-consuming, but it was all worth it when everybody pulled together and did a great job!" The squad kept up its energy throughout basketball season, dancing at nearly every varsity home game, and then went on to attend two regional IDTA competitions in February. "It was a great year for the York Poms, and we look forward to an even better one next year," said Madelyn Smith. –M. Arthurs

Some of the most caring and kind individuals at York High School came together to be a part of Circle of Friends. These were the easiest type of people with whom other could be friends. They were the people who are always there to make others laugh or smile, take them out when they want to have fun, and lended a shoulder when one was needed.

Circle of Friends had meetings the first Thursday of every month, however the friendships didn't stop when the meetings were dismissed. Circle of Friends went to the zoo, had swimming parties, holiday parties, went to sporting events, and threw parties just for fun.

Having Problems?

Are there many conflicts among students at York? Yes. Conflicts among students in school have always existed, and who could be the best helpers but other students? Mediators As Student Helpers, or MASH as it is more widely known, is an organization of students who try to help other students resolve problems before things become so serious that someone is sent to the dean.

"Its important for our students to know and work with each other well because they have different partners when they do the mediation," commented advisor Miss Salvo. MASH has a six step procedure in solving problems. The students with the conflicts each got a mediator, and then the mediators help them go through the six steps. The mediators themselves were actually well trained students who had to take a team building course in the beginning of the year, so that they could work on the problem as well as possible. Also, they had fun in obtaining team building skills by going rock climbing for a day in the YMCA in Des Plains.

Besides the team building skills and the helping of students, the peer mediators do fund-raisers and use the money to send other kids to conferences and workshops on peer conflict. This year they sold Orange Crush cans with labels on them that said "I have a crush on you."

Next time, when a friend or someone else tries to crush somebody else for whatever reason, please send both of them to MASH and save them a trip to the dean. –I. Strehin

Destructive Decisions?

SADD Row 1: Amanda Dalal, Kathryn McHugh, Sarah Schmidt, Judy Pollack Row 2: Colleen Tapling, Amy Obradovich, Gail Bush

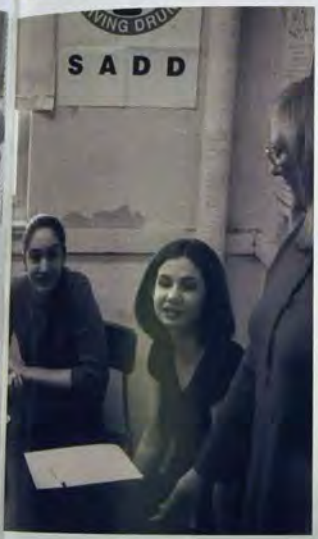

What does SADD stand for? Students Against Drunk Driving? No, but good guess. It stands for Students Against Destructive Decisions. The name change took place about two years ago, but it has not changed the purpose of SADD from what it use to be. It is still mostly concentrated on stopping students from drinking and driving.

"SADD just tries to make kids aware of the fact that they need to be careful" said advisor Miss Pollack. Some of the activities SADD has done to convince students that drinking and driving is a destructive decision are mock crashes, hanging up posters, assemblies, simulations of being drunk and the low ability to make decisions, and other such activities.

Many major activities have not been possible this year because of the construction, but Miss Pollack and the kids of SADD have been meeting every other Wednesday and done such things as making posters and discussing problems concerning drunk driving. They were also trying to assimilate the "Destructive Decision" part of the new name of SADD into the program.

Even though SADD's members could not accomplish what they wanted this year, it is comforting to know that there is a club at York that takes drinking and driving seriously and is willing to do something about it.

SOMEONE TO LEAN ON

Ulian Gorbachouski lived in a country where he had little rights and where he was arrested for speaking out about something he believed was correct. Ulian felt hurt and that his life is over, but suddenly, he was released from jail. When he asked why he had been released, the guard told him that some strangers from all over the world had sent millions of letters to convince the government that Ulian was innocent and should be released at once. The government therefore gave up and let Ulian go. Like Ulian, many people in countries all over the world were arrested for things that they did to make their opinion heard, but organizations like Amnesty International helped a few of those people by raising concern.

"Amnesty international has respect for all people despite whatever race, color, gender, or age they are," said senior Savan Vaghani. This is one of the reasons why Amnesty International has had such a great impact on the world today. Over 100 letters per month were sent to different governments, and most of them were successful in restoring the rights of people.

To restore those rights, Amnesty International at York met every Tuesday after school, and at that time, they discussed their plans for the future and how some of their actions had worked out. In addition to that, they had speakers who came to York with information on all kinds of aspects of human rights. "We are going to have a group called 'Raising Voices' who fight for rights of gay youths, workshops on rape, a number of religious groups talking about their faiths and religious freedoms, ... and many more" said Joan Davis, the advisor of Amnesty International.

One of the biggest events they planned was Human Rights Week, December fourth through December eighth. To prepare, club members made posters and planned when and where they would have peaceful demonstrations for human rights.

With everything Amnesty International did, it has no doubt changed the lives of many people. Even though the club required so much effort and work, its membership continued increasing in number each year. The club improves the lives of people from other communities, but it is improving lives of students from this community as well, helping them realize the importance of human rights. —I. Strehin

Martin Luther King once said, "I have a dream, where my children can live in a world where they're not judged by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character." REALITY (Realizing Equality and Learning Individuality Through Youth) members have tried to make this dream come true.

Meeting four times a week during fifth period, this group worked to find solutions to combat bigotry. They aspired to make York a better place for everyone by learning tolerance and promoting racial equality.

Senior Mia Lesser said "it's a like great family atmosphere, because we're all such close friends." During the school year, REALITY participated in many activities including First-Class lessons, Adopt-A-Family, and creating posters and banners that celebrated diversity. Order In The Court Determination is what lead the law team to a successful season this year. Long, hard practices earned York second place at the DuPage County Championships. This years' case was a civil mock trial about the Chicago Fire. The plaintiff, Catherine and Patrick O'Leary sued Danny Sullivan, the defendant, for emotional damages due to untruthful rumors, and also for starting the fire.

This seasons' success could have not been possible without the support, instruction, leadership, and encouragement from Mr. Alan Pieler. He helped break down the case in order to prepare the team for the difficult challenges they faced, and to script the roles they played. The teams energy-consuming practices aided them towards reaching their goals, and putting forth their best effort.

Even though they took second in DuPage while their long time rivals, Timothy Christian took first, they went down state with the mental focus to "give it all they got". They brought home two all state witnesses, junior Kate Rose Letizia and senior Marley Nelson, and an all state lawyer, junior Kee Vandenberg. They also placed third in the state law test. "Our continuous effort throughout the season brought us to a successful finish," stated all state witness Kate Rose Letizia. —M. Choyke

Lets Dance...

Below: Junior Michael Hoyne glows with confidence after delivering a riveting speech that he hopes will take first place.

For many people public speaking is feared even more than death. Many, but not all, for the members of the York Speech Team made public speaking look easy. If the term "speech team" creates pictures of people standing behind podiums, and talking; think again. Speech team this year was anything but that. With thirteen possible events to choose from, there was plenty of variety from which to choose.

In many events, the participant was required to think of an idea that he or she would present, act out, or speak about. Other times, the student interpreted someone else's speech or play, giving it the speakers own twist. The speaker was then judged upon how well he/she interpreted the part, and given points for the presentation. Naturally, the team with the most points won; there were also individual winners for different events.

Speech, lasting much longer than any athletic season, began in October and continued through February. Although the members meet with coaches Anthony Crowley, Leslie Zunkel, and Mark Golebiowski only once a week, according to co-captain Jeffrey Krol, "You really need to practice at least half an hour a day in order to be successful." There were many people on the team that took speech so seriously that they even practiced for their events during the summer months. Krol also commented that, "even though I won't be here next year, I know they will only continue to get better with each meet they attend."

After school, classroom activities collided with cultures from around the world, which included French, Italian, German, Spanish and Latin.

These clubs gave an experience beyond the classroom walls. Such festivals and events as Mardi Gras, Immersion Day, and Weinachfest gave new insight to the members about the diversity of cultures in the world. Teachers and members spent much time creating projects which included delicious food, colorful clothing, music, and interactive activities that introduced the cultures from many parts of the world. Sophomore Emily Holtz explained, "It's the time to learn more about the world around us." Students from foreign countries shared some of their traditions with their fellow peers and members. Club members also mastered some quick greetings in many of these different languages.

Making a Difference

Ever wonder who decorated the gym for a dance, or who planned the homecoming pep rally, or even who was in charge of the blood drive? In case the question crossed your mind, here's the answer. Student Council can be thanked for all of the above and much more.

Student Council met everyday except Wednesday during the first half of third period. During this time, they split up into committees and planned upcoming activities and events. Advisors Ms. Sheila Fleming and Ms. Shannon Foy offered their help, but they mostly depended on the students to get things done. Therefore, members were expected to be responsible, dedicated, and willing to work hard.

This year, the focus of the group was not only to change York for the better, but also to reach out to the entire community. Student council held a sock drive and a food drive to help the homeless. They also volunteered to adopt two needy families by donating clothes, food, and toys. Junior Kristen Pusich said "I'm in Student Council because I love making changes for the better. Plus, it's a lot of fun!" —M. Arthurs

HIDING BEHIND

Warm sunsets for homecoming, foam monstrous hats for Halloween, and scenery for York's finest plays are just some of the things that York's Art Staff created. The Art Staff decorated the bleachers with murals during homecoming and other dances, and generally worked to spice up the environment of York. The staff received much recognition for their work because so much creativity and soul was displayed. With the new building is on its way, the staff had plans to make signs for it. Mr. Thomas Wolfe, the new staff advisor, shared his desire to make signs or anything they can for the new building and said, "It's our school and we want to make sure it looks nice, but we still want the same old York feeling".

The Art Staff had a big change this year from Mr. Randall being their advisor to Mr. Wolfe. "Mr. Randall will always be a part of York even if he is not here physically," commented past Art staff member Jillian Patti. Wolfe was the "new kid on the block," yet he was eager to continue with the staff, and led them in their artistic pursuits. -A. Iozzo

THE SCENES

Above: Thank goodness for dress rehearsals. Sophomores Jeffrey Hamilton and Matthew Richards pay close attention to where to show the lights during the infamous kiss.

The actors and actresses were not the only part of the productions at York. The people behind the scenes were what made the plays come alive. When there was a passionate kiss or a frightening thunderstorm, the Tech. Crew knew where to shine the lights and when to make the sound that would cause the audience to jump out of their seats. This crew was in control, and without them, the plays just would not have been the same. Advised by Mr. Edward Hohman, the crew made sure that everything went smoothly. Not only did the audience enjoy the shows, but the actors did as well. Senior Alicia Carney stated, "They helped out so much, and they really made the plays more dramatic". This group may have hidden in the dark, but they shined the lights where they needed to be. – A. Iozzo

The setting was a high school classroom, filled with silent students deep in thought. Suddenly, the silence was broken by the sound of a buzzer. Nervously, a student answered and the judge declared the response to be correct. A quick sigh of relief came from the team.

York's Scholastic Bowl came together as a team to drill and compete over a variety of some easy and some difficult questions.

The team met once a week after school and went over all sorts of topics ranging from current fads to world history. The team was asked a question and if they knew the answer, they "buzzed" in, and gave the answer upon which they decided.

"Scholastic bowl could be very nerve-wracking and brain-teasing," said junior Jonathan Gregg. Many times, a member had a good idea of what the answer was, but was not completely sure. Or, he/she may have gone over that question in practice and just couldn't remember the correct solution. The team did not want to guess an answer because that could surely lose the competition. Scholastic Bowl proved to be the ultimate test of knowledge, and Gregg also commented that, "it made learning a lot of fun." –T. Cappelletti

Is that your final answer???

"Scholastic Bowl was a lot of fun. It was a challenge of intelligence, it built integrity, and you got to use buzzers!" –Junior Nicholas Dunlap

#STRENGTH IN NUMBERS

After a long day of school, many students just want to go home and relax, attend a meeting for a club, or practice their sport. Not all, however, because some students took their minds further into mathematical skills competition.

The York High School math team offered a "really good academic competition" observed senior Joan Wirig. The math team used their basic abilities and learned skills to solve the most complicated mathematical problems given to them in a test format, and received points based on the accuracy of their work and solutions.

The team met early on Wednesday mornings for practice, a time which the students found difficult in itself. Asking a high school student to wake up early is like asking a toddler to take a bath. Not only was waking up extra early hard, but math team members had to have their minds ready to endure tests of complex math equations, ideas, and concepts. Math team was a way to take one's math skills to another level, and do it in an rather interesting way. —T. Cappelletti

Young Life is a nondenominational youth group which tried to teach it's members acceptance. The group met every Monday night at different member's houses. At meetings, students took part in a variety of activities including singing and watching skits prepared by the leaders. On theme nights, the members were exposed to more activities designed to engage and involve everyone

Young Life also held Campaigners on Thursday mornings at 6:15 for those who enjoyed waking up at 5:00 a.m. At Campaigners, members had Bible discussions and enjoyed a healthy breakfast of donuts. Members tried to relate the messages in the Bible to everyday life. Young Life was open to everyone. This year's leaders were Rachel Baron, Matt Munson, and Kimberly Scully. They planned the meetings and coordinated other activities such as the seven to seven, the Polar Bear weekend, and a week long trip in the summer to New York.

Young Life was a unique club because it allowed students in public schools, and those who do not attend a youth group of their own, the opportunity to learn about religion along with people their own age. Because it is not an IHSA sanctioned sport, the York hockey team got little attention during the year. The team held practices on a weekly basis. The York hockey team held practices a few times every week for several months. They also played in a winter tournament. Since IHSA does not recognize hockey as a team sport, the team organized all of its own events, and parents served as coaches. Because York does not recognize hockey as a school sport, the team received little support outside of family and friends who attended the games. —J. White

An alternative for those students who did not want a huge time commitment, but still wanted to play sports through York High School, after school intramurals offered a different sport with each season. The activities ranged from ping-pong tournaments to basketball. Intramural matches were held one night a week after school. Due to the popularity of intramurals this year, the 139 gym had to be shared by nearly thirty students for basketball games. The activities were supervised by teachers who donated their extra time which allowed students to compete on a semiformal level. —J. White

The language honorary societies are a collection of students who have proven their love for their language of study by hard work throughout their high school career. In order for a student to be inducted into one of these societies, he or she must have maintained an "A" average each quarter. For most of these students, their interests lie beyond simply knowing the language. They strive for a better appreciation and understanding of other cultures. –J. White

Honorable Mention

Honor: a source of worth, merit, or rank; honesty, fairness, or integrity in one's beliefs and actions (as defined by Random House Webster's College Dictionary™).

In the spring of last year, it was written in the York-Hi that the National Honor Society has a meaningless selection process. Is having a 4.5 GPA on a 6.0 scale meaningless? Is volunteering in Elmhurst and serving its residents meaningless? Is having a good moral standing, a strong work ethic, and a general good character meaningless? Is being the leader of a sports team, club, class, or youth group meaningless? Senior member Robert Armentano commented, "None of those things are meaninless, but actually pretty meaningful."

York's chapter of the National Honor Society stands on four pillars of excellence, those being Scholarship, Service, Character, and Leadership. Its members are the students who simply will not settle for the lower grade, who will not let others do the work while they sit back and watch, and who will not idly stand by when something is asked of them. The students work within York on daily tasks such as homework, and also extend that work ethic to the community in things such as service projects. N.H.S. adopted a family at the holidays, helped advertise and assist in the Annie Ryan Fun Run, and did various other things throughout Elmhurst.

"I like being a member of National Honor Society because I get the chance to do service I would otherwise not know about," commented senior member Elisabeth Cutright-Smith. The bare minimum is what some students chose to do, as they slid by in their courses, but these members chose to go beyond what was merely expected, and raised the bar just a little higher. 70 senior students model four pillars of excellence, and proved that their honorable mention was much deserved. —T. READING, WRITING

Who are those students who worked concessions during football games, or those who served that ice cold lemonade when it was so hot at registration? The members of Quill and Scroll were responsible for these activities, and more.

Quill and Scroll is a journalism honor society that recognizes excellence on the part of student journalists. In order to be inducted, students had to meet these requirements:

*must be in upper 33% of their class
*must be on a publication
*must have written 45 column inches

Quill and Scroll raised money for their annual banquet and initiation services. They did this by taking pictures with Santa at the Winter Dance. This year, they are thinking of doing things a little differently. "We hope to give the money we raised to a charity, like the literacy foundation or something of that sort," commented senior Timothy Ringa. ....and ACTING?

Above: Is that Vanna White showing that beautifully decorated tree? Oh....it's seniors Jeffrey Krol, Matthew Anderson, and Ryan Kasak as they finish decorating a tree at Wilder Park for the holidays.

Many peoples' biggest fear is public speaking. However, there is a certain group of York students who love it, and have talent doing so.

This group is the Thespians, which includes the students who take part in drama productions. In order to be a thespian, one must have been involved in three consecutive drama shows.

Thespians is a society formed through drama, but members do not only act. Thespians also include people who put effort in to these presentations, such as the stage and light crew.

In honor of this talented group of students, a tree was decorated at Wilder Park during the holiday season. Another activity they are looking into in the future is attending other drama presentations as a group.

Besides keeping up on studies and memorizing night after night, these thespians are growing and succeeding in the biggest love of their life. –A. Dowiarz

What would a football game at York be without the band at the halftime show to raise the crowd's spirits? What would a basketball game be without the pep band leading the Dukes in cheer? Students generally would agree that the experience just wouldn't be the same. For this reason, the York marching band has participated in these athletic events for decades. According to senior band member Adam Thrall, "Band this year has been great. The fall marching band season was a huge success."

There was such dedication in the band that everyone had to sacrifice half of his/her lunch period for additional practice on top of the previously allotted band period. Many members could even be found honing their musical skills in the band room at other non-band times in the day. In music especially, practice makes perfect, and perfection was what York's musicians were working for throughout the year.

The most prestigious band at York, the symphonic band, conquered music by such composers as Mahr, Gliere, Shostakovich, and Reed. To the average York student, these names may sound foreign, but to the members of the band, they were common place. Even for a high school band, they were able to play these pieces up to the high standards set by higher level muscisians. Senior Steven Westendorf reassured this fact, and said, "The symphonic band was very strong this year. We've read some very tough music."

The band proved itself to be among the best in Illinois at the high school level, with many of its members receiving various awards for musical excellence. Six members received all state selectee titles. These bands will lead the march of the Dukes for years to come. —J. Thielbar

Making Music

Although it took place for only one period per day, orchestra was more than just a one period class. Students had sectionals one day a week after school. They also had ensembles where everyone divided into groups and played chamber music. The students practiced for weeks and then played in front of a small audience. In January, they performed for IMEA all-state, and, throughout the year, they held their annual holiday, winter, and spring concerts. There were also several smaller concerts and tours that spanned the year. Students had the option to go to camps or to go on tours during the summer, which extended orchestra to a twelve month course. Taking advantages of options allowed students to travel to places all over the world.

Closer to home, there was the annual Orchestra Festival where all of the elementary, junior high, and high school students got together in the main gym to play as a group. For those who truly loved the music, orchestra was mor than just a class to pass the time away. –J. White

"Orchestra requires a lot of practicing outside of school because of the level and difficulty of the music."

Many people may think that sports take a lot out of a person, but the students in choir know how much hard work and dedication goes into singing just one song. Having more then twenty other members singing together, harmonizing takes a lot of work.

Ms. Ariadne Moisiades worked day after day with the same group of students helping each individual get the right pitch, key, and tune before moving on to a new song. Some students also chose to take voice lessons to develop their singing talent and ability.

The three main choir units are Cadet, Concert, and Choraliers. Students who were interested in singing, but did not know much about it, joined Cadet and worked with Mr. Merrill. Concert choir was for the more advanced singers, and Choraliers was an all womens choir. Both Concert Choir and Choraliers were taught by Ms. Moisiades.

There were also two special groups: Renaissance Madrigals and Jazz choir. The Madrigals preform in costumes during the holiday season, and the Jazz choir preformed during the spring.

Choir was not all hard work, as there were also many fun times. In addition to the annual picnic for the hard working singers, there was also a trip to Wisconsin, and other students decorated the hallway during Spirit Week. "Choir was a good mix of work and play, and that is why I like it," commented senior Amanda Neuzil. -K. Pusich

What are current events? How should the memories of York be preserved? What are the best pieces of art or literature? These are the sort of questions that students involved in York's publications think about daily. Journalism is alive and well in the York community and offers an outlet of creative expression for many students.

Publications at York include Mirrors student literary magazine, York Hi, York's very own newspaper, and Y's Tales which creates the yearbook chronicling a year of life at York.

To an outsider the task of creating a printed publication may seem to be a simple undertaking, but it requires special talents. Creativity and style make the finished products more interesting and distinctive. Creativity is represented in newly styled layouts and themes that are always fresh.

Hard work and dedication also contribute to the success of York's publications. Hours of planning and preparation produce quality, polished final products. Students in publications often sacrifice their lunch period to complete their deadlines. In the time frame of one academic year the Dukes are able to print six newspapers, compile and print two magazines of student art and literature, and create a two-hundred page yearbook. Just by looking at these publications, its evident that their efforts are well worth it. —L. Haskell

Our Furture Doctors of America

Who needs to go to medical school to become a doctor? Not these York students. Okay, okay, they are not actually doctors, but they participated in a shadowing program at Elmhurst Memorial Hospital during second semester. They spent first semester in the classroom gaining knowledge about anatomy and physiology.

They were involved in such activities at the hospital as patient care, vital signs, record keeping, blood pressures, and even observing surgeries. They can shadow a doctor in mostly any department they wish. The more popular departments to shadow a doctor are physical training, o.b.g.y.n., emergency room, laboratory work, and cardiology.

If a student desired to learn and participate in something intense, this was the class to take. However, prospective students had to be selected from a pool of applicants to take this class. It is a fascinating experience and a life time opportunity, especially if seniors are thinking of becoming involved in any medical profession in the future. If nothing else, it is a start in the right direction. —M. Choyke

Students Teaching

The Top Five Most Enjoyable Grades to Teach

1. First Grade: lets just say there are still kids that can't make it to the bathroom in time, but those are the most memorable moments of elementary school.
2. Third Grade: love the way they count on their fingers to learn the multiplication tables.
3. Fifth Grade: it's fun to try and prepare them right before they go off to a bigger school.
4. Sixth Grade: this is when they're at their most venerable, and when they need the most advice.
5. Eighth Grade: this is when teachers and students build great relationships that they will remember for a lifetime. —M. Choyke

Music is important to everyone in many different ways. This year the Amateur Musicians Club allowed students and faculty to express themselves musically. The club was not a section of the band or orchestra, It was "a group of people who come together to make music. It involves learning and improvisation," says club advisor Mr. Andrew Bendelow, The club has been here at York since 1995. These musicians have played for the cross-country team, and the Human Rights Walk Candlelight Vigil. They have prepared songs for Fine Arts Week, and enjoy putting on performances. The members of the Amateur Musicians Club should definitely be commended because, as Mr. Bendelow says, "These are brave people who come together and challenge themselves to grow beyond self-imposed limitations." There is no doubt that this group has some great talent! –K. Atkinson

Runway For Success

The Aviation Club was a group of students who came together to both discuss and experience the art of flying. They met on a regular basis, and at an Aviation Club meeting one could expect to find discussions ranging from plans to go flying, to topics of flying dates. The students had the opportunity to go out flying in an actual aircraft, which is no doubt one of the best experiences in the club. Students in the club were in charge of almost every aspect of it. They decide when and where they will go out flying, what topics they wanted to discuss at meetings, or even how to raise money for the club. One of the greatest aspects of this club is the fact that the students were so involved with everything that goes on, that way they will surely be prepared for their future. —K. Atkinson

DECA, which stands for Distributive Education Club of America, is a class that offered job opportunities to a variety of York students. DECA, however, is better known as York's work program. It allowed students to take the information they learned in the classroom and apply it to both the real and working worlds. These students improved their knowledge of life and learned more about marketing and business skills. Mr. James Borel's third period DECA class competed against many schools in various competitions. These competitions allowed the students to apply their knowledge of marketing and business. One of DECA's biggest competitions was their conference against 26 other schools with over 600 students competing. These students competed in specific marketing events such as role play, written communication, product knowledge test, math test, and job application.

DECA gave students the guidance they may have needed to find exactly what career field matched their life. Not only did students learn to think beyond the obvious, but they also learned what is to come in the near future. — M. Choyke

Building for Life

"Achievement, learning good ethics, and having a good time was what VICA was all about" stated advisor Ken Ross. The students meeting on Thursdays before school were there to help each other out not only in building wooden projects, but also with lessons in life. VICA is often times thought of as "the wood club", but students from the auto tech. classes also participated. The students who attended the club took a written exam, and the top scores were invited to the skills championship in Springfield. State Qualifiers were seniors Kyle Dieling, Rebecca Hitchcock, Kimberly Skukas, Kyle Fredrickson, and Ryan Dick. At the competition, Dieling and Hitchcock tied for first place, and Skukas received third in the cabinet making portion. This was their chance to test their knowledge of what they learned throughout the year. Ross explained, "We were here to learn a good sense of worth, to have some good old competition, and to have a good time." This was infact what the participants took away from it. They used not only their hands for building but their minds as well. –B. Lewis

When students are asked about their plans they have for the future, many respond that they haven't thought about it yet. Unlike those who have not planned, FCCLA/HERO members have a firm grasp of what they will be doing years from now. FCCLA/HERO is an organization whose main goal is to teach important skills that students will use later in life.

FCCLA offered a variety of classes, including dating and marriage, child development, interior design, fashion merchandising, several cooking courses, food and restaurant management, and hotel and business management. Students were not only involved in classes on a daily basis, but also participated in competitions throughout the year at the regional, sectional and national levels.

HERO is a program for students who held jobs outside of school. They learned how to draft resumes and prepare for career related situations such as job interviews. These are skills that will prove to be handy in the near future, yet will last a lifetime. —A. Bush

"People with goals succeed because they know where they are going." - Earl Nightingale

Elect This...

Apart from gym, lunch, and study hall, elective classes are a favorite of York students because they offer a break into the day's rigorous core academic classes. York students must meet the mandatory requirement of completing at least one credit in a fine art and one credit in an applied art. Many students choose to meet these requirements through electives.

Lucky for students, York offers a variety of enticing electives for whatever a student's interest may be. Whether the classes taught students to screen print tee-shirts, make fondue, cast a ring, sew a skirt, engineer a design for a bridge, or make a cabinet, electives surely gave students a way to put their creativity and hands on skills to the test. Sophomore Pamela Counsell stated that graphic arts class was "a class that I genuinely enjoyed, especially because it took away some of the stress that my other classes gave me".

Elective classes gave students an insight into many career opportunities. Electives offered the chance for students to encounter "real world" experiences in the comforts of the classroom. Many students choose careers inspired by their electives, such as interior design and food and restaurant management.

The popularity of electives shows no sign of dwindling among students because the homework is little to none, they make the day go faster, and most importantly, they often times receive credits equivalent to those in math and English! —A. Szeluga

"My elective class is the highlight of my day because it's the one period that I don't have to worry about my academics and can be creative," - Jessica Jung, 12

Helping Hands

Below: Mr. Steve Cochran, junior Kees Vandenberg and senior Brian Heinz radiate the certaninty that First Class is serious business.

A recent newcomer among clubs, First Class grew to be very successful. The number of members has increased dramatically, giving the First Class organization 105 members this year. Mr. Steve Cochran has been a great influence on the organization, along with the assistance of Mr. Fernando Mendoza. "First Class's goals were to make the school more unified and have York be a more pleasant, and friendly environment," said Steve Cochran. York took time from our second period every two weeks to do activities and discuss topics that were developed by the students were involved in First Class. The members believed that 99% of innocent students were punished due to the 1% of the students which gave teenagers a poor image. First Class works on projects and activities to try and spread their word. They did many projects to make a positive difference such as shadowing, where they invited the 8th grade students to follow a high school student around York for the day. This was to help the incoming freshmen become more comfortable with York's environment. Some more projects First Class did was renaming the hallways to help the "new" students remember their way around York, collecting the socks and canned food for the needy, and organized a sock hop. First Class had been successful in unifying the school. This is proven by the fact that student council and First Class have worked together for the first time and student council and NHS have been found working together also. First Class has given York a good impression and plans to only get stronger. – T. Hill

CENTER OF SUCCESS

"I only have two more periods before my math project is due, I'll never finish in time!"

"I can't believe I have to make a video, and I only have one week to finish it."

"I need to type a paper because my computer crashed last night."

"I am going to fail math if I don't find out how to do my homework."

"I have to study for a big test in English seventh period."

These comments were often heard in York's hallways. That is why York has many different labs and centers to help students finish all their assignments on time.

Each lab has a teacher or faculty advisor to sort out problems and difficulties. If a student is in danger of failing a class, they could easily go to a lab or a center to get help.

Many centers, such as the math lab and creativity center, offer things that are hard to find anywhere else. The math lab has computers with True Basic and TI Graph Link programs, upon which many assignments were based. The creativity center offers video cameras and computers for students to make video projects.

Without the labs and centers, many students would be unable to fulfill their required assignments. These are great places for students to further their education, and help them think beyond the obvious. —K. Pusich

Above: Sophomore Jessica Urgo works on one of the library's computers to gather information for a report. Without the library, most students would be unable to successfully compile information to complete long term assignments.

Above: Junior Robin George attempts to complete an assignment in the Center. The Center offers many tables for quiet study, and the supervisor ensures that it remains quiet.

Above: Junior Nathan Harte does his last studying for math in the Center. Lucky for him, there is a place to do just that.

BREAKING FREE

Above: Senior Christina Daniels knows that a memory can be forgotten in just a moment. Video cameras and snapshots helped seniors remember the night even longer. If a single picture is worth a thousand words, then one can only imagine what this video will be worth in twenty years!

Throughout all the changes this school year, there was a rumor that seniors would have to take second semester final exams. Seniors have usually graduated by the time second semester finals begin. In the halls, seniors were complaining that they were being punished, and that everything bad always happened to their class. Then, these seniors spotted a poster that said 'Senior Soiree January 25.' They then questioned what their peers were telling one another. False alarm! With these rumors put to rest, the students knew it was now time to relax. Senior Soiree meant a celebration of the stress of seven sets of finals being completed. If there were posters up, that must mean the senior tradition would go on.

The Soiree was held at the Diplomat West the Thursday of the last final. Dinner was served to start out the evening. Next on the agenda, the attendees watched the most crazy senior males compete in the traditional 'Mr. Duke contest.' The contest consisted of two categories: singing or dancing, and their own personal talent. Benjamin Wallick was crowned Mr. Duke with a very... what's the word?...creative?...display of drinking four of his friends leftovers from brushing their teeth while listening to 'It's a Beautiful Morning.' After the Mr. Duke performances, classmates were inspired to dance as well, with junior George Zurales spinning records all night.

The 'Senior Soiree' was not a night to be sad or upset, but rather a time to celebrate with fellow classmates. As the night came to a close, seniors looked forward to life outside high school. —A. Dowiarz

Above: Seniors Amy Naik, Amy Fang, and Matthew Richards are blown away by the performances put on during the 'Mr. Duke' competition. Year after year, the contest out does it self, and makes the competition even steeper.

Left: Senior Robert Evangelista wasn't saying 'Bye, Bye, Bye' after he was finished dancing to the boy band N'Sync. Evangelista later came out for an encore preformance to Britney Spears's 'Stronger'.

Right: Senior Benjamin Wallick quenches his thirst after a morning workout. Ahh, what a beautiful morning.

Above: Seniors Cara Cellini and Christopher Bishof enjoy the meal at the Diplomat West. A mere fifteen dollars was the price tag for a priceless evening of memories.

WANNA BE A

As the sun set on a snow covered Elmhurst, the Dukes of York moseyed on through the doors of the gym into a winter wonderland turned western for the 2000 winter dance. The most popular apparel for the evening included tapered jeans, boots, bandanas, jean jackets, fringed skirts, flannel shirts, and who could forget, the ever necessary cowboy hat. Cowboys and cowgirls danced the night away to a variety of music, but this dance was sure to include more country tunes. Some lucky students took a break from dancing to visit with Santa Clause, Mr. Charlie Kern, to take a memorable photo.

As the dance came to an end, there were no worries about formal attire or who would pay for dinner. These cowboys and cowgirls saddled up and were ready to enjoy the winter holiday soon to come. —A. Szeluga

Above: Junior JoAnna Doherty, sophomores Michelle Podzimek, Candice Kuchenbecker, and Ann Caruso take a few minutes to ask Santa, Mr. Charlie Kern, if they are on his naughty or nice list.

COWBOY BABY?

Left: Rhinestone cowgirls, juniors, Mallory Hawerbier, Ann Cullinane, and Caitlin Tinnon prove that "girls just wanna' have fun" as they dance the night away in their trendy attire.

Time for Change

When students came to school the morning of March 21, 2000, it was evident that the referendum for a new school building had passed the night before. The scene was almost that of homecoming, with toilet paper hanging from the trees and balloons scattered about the ground. Yet, this time, the parents of the Elmhurst community, as opposed to the students, transformed York into a white wonderland. The much needed and awaited "Referendum 2000" was soon to be put into affect. There were many signs that the school had become dilapidated. The ceiling had begun to give way, creating a "tropical" atmosphere as water poured into the halls. The building underwent countless additions from the original 1920 construction. Computers became a necessity, rather than a luxury, and York was lacking in adequate resource centers. A school originally built for approximately 150 students now housed more than 2000, with an addition of nearly 150 staff and faculty members. A total of 91 million dollars was the price tag of the lofty project, with 14 million given by the state, and 77 million provided by the Elmhurst tax payers. Illinois Governor George Ryan told the Elmhurst community that building a new York High School was key to having a successful community, and was needed to produce academic recognition. The new school will house a separate field house for sports, a new academic wing fully equipped to help the twenty-first century students, and more to offer every teacher and student. The Dukes of York will have a new castle, but the same green and white spirit surely will remain. —T. Ringa elow: The decorations the morning of March 21st were complements of the faculty and arents rather than the students. After it was known that the referendum had passed, the ommunity found reason to celebrate. This was the third attempt to pass a referendum for lmhurst, and 73 percent of the residents voted "pro" referendum.

Right: Many teenagers attest to the fact that Elmhurst is dull 99 percent of the time. With State Representative Lee Daniels and Govenor George Ryan present, Elmhurst proved it could be the center of some media-drawing attention.

Above: The whopping eight figure sum that York received from the state of Illinois exceeded 13 million dollars, with the other 77 million coming from the Elmhurst tax payers.

bove: York played host to a fanfare of politicians as dirt flew. This ceremony took place on September 19, and York's future was sealed with a shovel.

Election 2000

George W. Bush selects Dick Cheney, former Wyoming representative, and former secretary of defense as his vice-presidential running mate on the Republican ticket.

The 2000 presidential election was in many ways decided by not just the voters but the courts. Five weeks after election day, the US Supreme Court blocked Al Gore's request to have disputed Florida ballots recounted. George W. Bush and Dick Cheney won the election after being awarded Florida's 25 electoral votes.

Antiquated voting methods in this age of technology threw the presidential election into turmoil. Punch card ballots, and the accompanying "Votomatic" system were first created in the 1960s. Disputed ballots had chads, or paper fragments hanging from the punch card that made it difficult for voting machines to read the ballots.

Painstaking manual recounts are performed by several Florida counties.

a special thanks to...

In no particular order, we would like to thank all of those who have helped us in the production of this book. Our representative, Maureen Olofsson, who always willingly helped us with so many of our problems. She never opposed to an emergency phone call in the middle of the day to help us. Sally Jones, our customer service representative, was always extremely patient in recording all of our errors. Mrs. Taylor, the computer guru, who salvaged so many of our disheveled disks. You are truly magical. And Barb, you were always willing to offer advice to expand and improve our yearbook. You were a big help.

Aside from the adults that contributed to the book, our staff is quite noteworthy as well. Lindsey- you could not have handled pictures better. Thank you for you expertise throughout the year. Chrissy- You had wonderful work ethic and creativity. And the rest of our staff, without you, there would have been nothing to edit.

Thank You for:

Mary- all of your Britany impressions
Kevin- your Spanish music and dance
Alison B.- being so diligent
TINO- for eating whatever was left on the back table, even if it was still wanted
Meredith- proving our title to be true
Angie D.- writing your sultry captions, we liked 'em
Chrissy- everything-good luck next year with everything, including the new advisor
Lindsey- your many trips to Wal-Mart™, we will wear our shirts with pride
Tiffany- the creative outfits (Elvis)
Angie L- being our yearbook room mom, the cookies were great
Allison J.- your lovely compliments, takes one to know one
Merlyn- being our computer wizard
Ben/Chris- bringing a taste of Sardinia to Elmhurst
Kristen- being so cute
IOSSIF- being so focused
Ann- being our "assistant editor"
JON- being our courier
Jenna- risking your life at Wal-Mart™

Thank You to all who helped this year,
Tim Ringa and Rachel Eddington
