ORK COMMUNITY
HIGH SCHOOL

Within these walls... friendships form and hearts break, tears fall and laughter echoes.

Within these walls... people gain knowledge and experience, and they learn the most important lessons do not come from books but from each other.

Within these walls... horizons expand, new frontiers are sought after, dreams become reality, and success is achieved.

Within these walls... students thrive, teachers encourage, administrators maintain standards, and a sense of harmony exists.

Within these walls... the spirit of York lives through pride in the Dukes, faith in the community, and the etching of high school memories in the minds of the students.

However, these walls which have stood since 1918 will be replaced by new bricks. Still, York will live on, and the life we know within these walls will continue.

Fine Art...It's What's For Dinner

The week of March 19-23, 2000 was not a typical week at York High School. This particular week featured talent shows, art displays, storytellers, professional dancers, singing groups, student and professional animation, video fests, and York's very own improvisation group. What is this week, you ask? Why, it's Fine Arts Week of course!

Fine Arts Week was a week full of fun, but it didn't happen on it's own. Many individuals worked to make Fine Arts Week just as successful as in the previous fifteen years. Starting in September, the group began to discuss the events, select groups to preform, and chose acts to perform in the talent show. Last year, the talent show committee tackled the daunting task of narrowing fifty possible acts down to thirty-two in only three days. Art teacher John Nester said, "This year was the most attended evening performance of talent shows ever. The large number of student participants showed the continuous growth of Fine Arts Week since the first one in the 80's."

Fine Arts Week is one of the most anticipated weeks at York High School by both students and teachers. One of the reasons that Fine Arts Week was such a hit was because so many students at York were involved in it. They were able to participate in the talent shows, displays of original artwork, and video fests. They also appreciated their peers' artistic talents that have not often been recognized in the classroom or on the athletic fields. English teacher and drama sponsor Anthony Crowley said, "Fine Arts Week is great because it allows people to recognize other student's talents besides athletics. It allows people to see drama, art, music, and photography. Fine Arts Week allows everyone to see how valuable fine arts really are to our community." The interest shown in Fine Arts Week demonstrated how valuable the event was to the students and the community.

The whirlwind of emotions that accompanied the Dukes' second place finish at state defied articulation. A tremendous amount of pressure fell on the shoulders of the 4X400 team, which was the last chance York had to stave off Thornwood's impressive sprinting squad. "I was scared I would slip in the blocks" said sophomore Thomas Rosinski. Fortunately, the relay squeezed the last spot, qualifying the Dukes for finals.

Hoping for victory in the 4X800, York fans got on their feet to cheer during the May 26th finals. Unfortunately, on the final leg of the relay, a dropped baton forced the Dukes to accept 3rd place. However, all-state places in the 3200, 400, and 1600 meter races complemented senior Timothy Hobbs's repeat as 800 meter champion. However, a steady rain began to fall after the 1600, and it became apparent that York would have to prevail by nine points over Thornwood in the 4X400 in order to win the meet. Although the Dukes won the race, Thornwood finished second, seizing the meet for themselves. Head Coach Stanley Reddel said, "Any other year you score as well, you win. That's what's frustrating."

The Lady Dukes boasted victory in three events: the 4X800 relay, the 3200, and the 1600. Maria Cicero prevailed in the latter two events, taking York to a 4th place finish. Next year all of the runners on the state champion 4X800 meter will return, and great things can be expected from their potential record-setting team -D. Kikuchi

Save The

Despite Prom landing on the day of the boys' State Track meet, student complaints about taking a bus to the dance, and the cold rainy weather, prom was a success. Once at the Chicago Sheraton, complaints about the bus and the stir about the track meet died down. Even after arriving late, everyone settled down to enjoy a fulfilling dinner and hours of dancing.

Afterwards, many chose to go to post-prom, which was held aboard the Spirit of Chicago, on Lake Michigan. Students at post-prom danced until the early hours of the morning, enjoying refreshments and the company of hundreds of friends.

For many people, prom did not stop after the dance, or even after post-prom. The fun continued into the weekend, as many students spent their time at lake houses, beaches, and amusement parks. The experiences of prom the good, the bad, and the stormy are etched in the memories of the attendees and are not to be soon forgotten.

*"Congratulations! Today is your day. You're off to Great Places! You're off and away!" **

On June 3, 2001, the senior class gathered in York's main gym for its graduation ceremony. After four years of tests, football games, quarter projects, and dances, the seniors said good-bye to their high school years and hello to their futures. Some were off to college; others planned on getting jobs. Whatever lay ahead for them, one thing was for sure: their futures were now completely in their own hands. No longer could they depend on their parents and teachers to guide them. As the seniors walked across the stage and received their diplomas, they took on the responsibility of making their own decisions and choosing their own destinies.

*"So...be your name Buxbaum or Bixby or Bray or Mordecai Ali Van Allen O'Shea, you're off to Great Places! Today is your day! Your mountain is waiting. So...get on your way!" **

SUMMER DAYS

School was out for summer! June 8th marked the end of another school year, and the beginning of freedom. For the majority of students, summer meant going to the pool, eating ice cream at the fountain by the prairie path, late nights out on the mean streets of "E-town," caffeine surges at the Chocolate Moon, road trips, college visits, concerts, and traveling.

For others, summer meant making some extra cash at a part-time job, battling through sports camps in the hot sun and humidity, or earning a few extra credits in summer school. No matter how they spent their time, students escaped their usual eight hour school days and instead enjoyed the fun of a long summer. –A. Bush

SERVICE WITH A SMILE

York Students Go to Work

Most teens could say that summer is a time of sun, smiles, and empty wallets. That's why many of York's students chose to enter the job force during the summer. Some chose to work because they wanted to save up for something big, such as car. Others just wanted to have the extra spending money so they could order more than a water when they went out to eat. Whatever their reasons were for getting a job these students made the best of the situation.

Everyone knows that it is rough getting up early every morning, or missing out on a big party over the weekend, because of a job. In the end, everything wound up paying off. When these working Dukes were out buying something new they were glad that they worked over the summer. –E. Caron

Duke Spirit

Homecoming Week was the perfect opportunity for students and teachers to show their spirit. During the course of spirit week, Student Council put together creative theme days and lunchtime activities, such as pie-eating and limbo contests, to build up York's spirit for the football game and dance on Friday and Saturday nights.

Many students showed their spirit each day by dressing up for each day's particular theme. This started on Monday with Pajama Day, and ended with Green and White Day on Friday. No one showed more spirit than seniors Betsy Skat, Cori McKenzie, Alison Jordan, and Sarah Davy. Voted Queens of the Couch, they received front row seats for York's Pep Rally and football game as they relaxed on a couch and ate pizza.

After the pep rally Friday afternoon, students, coaches, and players were all ready for the big game. With a final score of 35-32, the Dukes defeated Oak Park-River Forest. However, it could not have been done without Duke pride and spirit. –C. Marinier

After a week of homecoming activities, the only way to properly bring an end to it all was with a heavenly night. That was why Homecoming 2001 was such a success. Everything–the decorations, music, and attire made the night perfect. Student council put a lot of effort into completing every detail, right down to the confetti and balloons.

The gym was filled with people dancing and having a wonderful evening. It was the largest attendance in recent history. "Homecoming was so much fun. I've never seen the gym so crowded with so many people dancing," commented junior Elizabeth Stelling. When they heard "Angel" by the Dave Matthews Band, the theme song for the dance, people found their dates and enjoyed the last special moments of the night. Romance in Paris

It was the night of February 23, 2001. She was anxiously waiting for the time to come when her date would pick her up and they would finally get to go to the dance. It was turnabout, and she had been anticipating this night for weeks. She was looking her best, yet it was raining outside and she was worried that her dress or hair might be ruined. The minute she walked into York's gym, gloomy Elmhurst turned into the twinkling lights of Paris. The Eiffel tower had miraculously appeared in the back of the gym and the mood was set. Romance filled the air and the gym was full of music and couples dancing. Sophomore Adam Olalde summed up the night perfectly, "it was beautifully put together, everyone looked their best, and I could feel the romance all night long."

She got the courage and asked him. She made the arrangements for the night. It was her night in Paris. –E. Stelling

When one thinks of Mardi Gras, one thinks of fun, excitement, and dancing. The York gymnasium was transformed for the night of the 2001 Spring Fling, with hopes that everyone would experience the spirit of Mardi Gras. Colorful dance-goers filled the festively decorated hallways and gym. Brightly colored outfits, ranging from rainbow balloons to sequined dresses, could be seen on almost everyone. The majority of the students donned popular beaded necklaces.

"Everything was great: the music, dancing, and clothing. I've never been to Mardi Gras, but I hope it would be like this," said junior Courtney Douglas. Why go to New Orleans for a good time when you can go to the Spring Fling? –A. Ohler

At Play

–K. Pusich

The Show Must Go On...

It's not an easy job to produce a play about putting on a play. Luckily, the cast of the 2001 York Drama Winter Production, "Noises Off," encountered nothing as serious as their characters did.

Broken props, forgotten lines, huge mix-ups, and chaos ensued. Of course, that was all scripted. Nothing went right in this play within a play from the very beginning. Yet, as the severity of problems increased, the audiences' laughter did as well.

With a production this awkward, the actors and crew needed to get along. "The cast was a tight community; we all supported each other and worked well together," said junior cast member Erik Stonikas.

The reaction from the audience proved that the chemistry of the actors was a very special one. "It was one of the best York plays I've ever seen." commented York freshman Anthony Lopez.

Indeed, the play was brilliant. Poppy, (Junior Amy Albert), tried to run the show without much success. However, Tim, (Junior Maxwell Wiesmen) contributed to the problems the cast was experiencing by making extra curtain calls.

Things only got worse when props started to break and disappear, messages were sent to the wrong people and the tension between the characters began to build. Characters got drunk, confused, and mad.

What else could have gone wrong?

Luckily, the real actors of "Noises Off" encountered no such problems. Stonikas said, "This was one of the most fun plays I've ever been in. We really had a lot of fun."

"Noises Off" was fun for everyone. Not only for the actors, but the backstage crews as well as those who supported York Drama by going to see the comedy.

Hopefully, these types of errors never really happen during a production at York, even though the cast would probably have little trouble handling them. –A. Dalal

Don't Play With the Boys Next Door, Go See Them!

Every year the York High School Drama department produces several plays. Some are sentimental tea jerkers, while others leave the audience laughing uncontrollably. Boys Next Door was a combination of both produced laughter and also touched the heart.

It takes commitment and memorization to perform in any play. Director Anthony Crowley said, "the mo important qualities for any character of a play to have is to be natural, feel comfortable, and commit." The cast the Boys Next Door had all of these qualities and more. The overall success of the play was due to the dedicat work of the cast.

Boys Next Door was a touching and humorous portrayal of the mentally handicapped. The plot focuses on social worker who worked with disabled people and realized that he could no longer handle that area of wo anymore and decided to quit his position.

Mr. Crowley did it again! He assembled this play in less than two months. Crowley said, "the best part putting the play together was working with everyone. The cast and the stage crew were wonderful groups to wo with, and we put together a wonderful play." –K. Lucca

Grease is not only a great flashback to the fifties, but it is also a highly entertaining play. A time warp to the days of hot rods, poodle skirts and leather jackets, this popular and energetic play was the production of York Drama Department for the summer of 2000. The story centers around a group of Rydell High teenagers in 1959. Danny (senior Frank Zito), Sandy (senior Rachel Strandt), Frenchy (junior Amy Albert), and the rest of the Rydell High gang brought to life the humorous characters, costumes and moves that delighted the audience. In the play, the strong and confident Danny Zuko and the sweet and naive Sandy find themselves reunited senior year after a brief summer romance. Bowing to peer pressure, Danny hides his feelings for Sandy from his "greaser" friends. The Burger Palace Boys and the Pink Ladies of Rydell High had their pajama parties and proms, wore their angora sweaters and ducktail hairstyles, and engaged in the typical high school activities for their time. Rachel Strandt, Frank Zito and the rest of the cast brilliantly captured their characters and the audience fell in love with them all.

The play addressed every teen problem, from peer-pressure to nerd-bashing, while incorporating the 1950's rock-and-roll beat. York Drama offered a strong cast of actors, singing, dancing, wooing and swooning, a detailed set, and a musical score that had remained famous since the first production of Grease. One of the captivating aspects of Grease is the timelessness of its songs. From the opening number to the last, the audience could be heard singing or humming along. Sophomore Christina Clark played the part of Jan and was proud to be part of a cast of such a timeless classic. She recalled the energy the cast had when they became the characters from the 50's. "A lot of energy was given to remember facial expressions, dance numbers, and dialogues. Staying in character at all times wore the cast out by the end of the performances," said Clark.

The songs caught the beat, the dance played with the rhythm, and the dialogue drew laughter. All this helped to make Grease a four-night sell out. – M. Lawrence

One Deadly Flower

Little Shop of Horrors was the last of 30 years of plays directed by Lesley Zunkel, Director of Student Activities and Drama Club Sponsor. The musical was performed on November 8, 9, 10, and 11. However, the work that made this play successful required more effort than what audiences saw on those four dates. The two separate casts, stage and light crews, student directors and director Lesley Zunkel prepared for the performance for several weeks prior to the opening night, practicing almost every day. The two separates casts share the dates. One cast performed the Thursday and Saturday shows and another cast performed the Friday and Sunday shows.

Little Shop of Horrors is the story of an unlucky florist shop assistant named Seymour, who finds a strange and interesting plant. This plant brings him instant love, money and acclaim. Yet he soon realizes that the plant, seemingly alive, has deadly alterior motives. Anthony Lopez, who played both God and Patrick Martin said, "I enjoyed it because the play was different , and the cast was a fun group of people. The best part was the adrenaline, especially opening night." –J. Bretl

Girl Talk

With the building of the new school and tearing down of the old, Steel Magnolias became the last play performed in Yorkshire Hall. Steel Magnolias is about a young diabetic woman who finds out she is pregnant even though her doctor has told her a pregnancy could endanger her life. This play is about the lives of this young woman and five of her gossip loving friends. It takes place in a beauty parlor in the south during the 1980's.

Many people contributed to this successful performance. Including two six-woman casts, student directors, stage and lighting crews, and the director, Anthony Crowley. This fall play occurred on October 11, 12, 13, and 14, 2001, but there were many more hours spent preparing for the spectacle. Practices took place almost every day for two hours. These many hours spent on practice included dress rehersals and memorizing a lines. Beth Bretl, who played Annelle, said "it was a lot of fun preparing and performing, and because it was such a small group; [the girls] were able to become very close." Bretl also said, "The best thing about the play was working hard up to that one moment, that is the performance." –J. Bretl

Below: What would Snowball be without the adult leaders? They are having such a good time that they even let the students at Snowball call them by their first names.

As the school year progressed, weekends in Elmhurst became less than exciting for many students. During the week there were sports, clubs, and jobs, but come Friday night, and a movie theater was as close as things got to adventurous. Luckily, many students at York discovered Snowball: a weekend escape from the daily routine of Elmhurst and the entrance into a retreat supporting a fun and substance-free environment.

Little did the students know that once they got to Snowball, they would not want to leave. Where else could they see Mr. Summers dressed up in a wig, using a broom for a guitar and singing "American Women" by Lenny Kravitz? Plus, the number of new and lasting friendships created at snowball was unreal. One leader, junior Nicole Jorwic, shared her thoughts on snowball, "It is so amazing how everyone comes together, having fun and learning about themselves in the process."

Filled with activities, speakers, small groups, and oh yes... a dance with kareokee, Snowball was the place to be. Just as they do every other year, speakers and groups talked to the students about real life situations. Senior Taylor Ruecking tried to describe some of the groups that went this year, "These people do not go up on a stage and lecture to us, they show us through acting out scenes or doing a dance. They make it look fun for them to perform and [it's] definitely fun for me to watch."

The weekend ended early in the afternoon on Sunday, leaving just enough time for everyone to get home and finish those last minute homework assignments. Unfortunately, Snowball weekend only happens once a year, so make it count! Let snowball hit YOU!

Heads Held High

In the closing lines of Dumas' The Count of Monte Cristo, protagonist Edmund Dantes muses "All human wisdom can be expressed in two words: Wait and Hope." Those words stand at the heart of the 2001 cross country team, which was poorly ranked at the start of its season. After losing to Oak Park - River Forest, it seemed as if the papers were right. In a display of tenacity, the determined team went on to win regionals, and finished second to third-ranked Fenton in sectionals.

Confidence soared as the state meet approached. Practice rolled on smoothly during the final week, and on Wednesday night the top seven runners shaved their heads to promote unity. The men of York went to Peoria and were hopeful for triumph. They sought the feeling Head Coach Joseph Newton described as "100 percent pure ecstacy."

Given inside box number ten, Mr. Newton decided that the team would take a one second delay after the start of the race in order to escape crushing on the first turn. This proved to be a wise choice, as most of the runners managed to avoid immediate disaster. The rest of the race differed for each runner, described by senior David Kikuchi (15th) as "quick and short" but as "really slow" by junior Collin Bourdage (125th). By the end of the 3.0 mile race, the pack had broken, with a one minute split from Kikuchi to Bourdage, who finished 1st and 5th, respectively for York. Senior Albert Dimond (77th) finished as the Dukes' 3rd man, running the race of his life. Also running were junior Michael Corry (55th), junior Adam Manta (79th), freshman Jonathan Schroeder (155th), and junior Michael Palumbo (169th). The team finished fourth with 229 points, exceeding the expectations of nearly everyone but themselves. -D. Kikuchi. Photos by Daniel Chamness.

As a warm autumn breeze blew across the field at [illegible] in Peoria, Illinois, the York girls cross country team stretched and prepared for the race of their lives. November 3, 2001 was sunny and mild, an ideal day for running.

The girls spent the entire weekend together as a team as they prepared for the meet. During that time, they reflected on their struggles and accomplishments throughout the season. They felt privileged to have reached the state meet despite the many obstacles they faced. Junior Kara Henry, one of the leading runners, was injured for the majority of the season. The team also lost Maria Cicero, their #1 runner from the 2000 season. However, the team still managed to overcome the odds and make it to Peoria.

On the day of the state meet, emotions ran high. Junior Christine Kotarba, along with freshman Danielle Hlavacek and junior Lauren Dick, ran in the state meet for the first time. "I was nervous, but I think I handled it pretty well," Kotarba said. However, for senior Kelly O'Neill, this year marked her fourth consecutive state meet. York seemed to have the right mix of experience and youth needed to do well in the meet.

As the race began, the level of competition at the state meet became evident. "I think it was one of the harder meets we've run," said junior Kara Henry. Henry fell sick with the flu on the day of the meet but still ran well. Lauren Dick finished first for York, followed by Shannon Tucker and Allison Billhardt. As a team, York finished third overall.

The awards ceremony was held at the Peoria Civic Center. York graciously accepted the third-place trophy. "Mr. Bassett told us to be proud of what we had done, but we definitely have more hunger to win next year," said Henry. The team smiled as the cameras flashed, but the gleam and the passion in their eyes was evident. "We'll be back next year for a first-place trophy," promises Henry. Whether they win or not, rest assured the girls' cross country team will definitely make some commotion. –A. Ohler

Success was no stranger to the 2001 girls' badminton team. This year marked the first time York won a sectional tournament. It was also the first time that six girls on the team qualified for state finals after winning nine of their twelve games.

Doubles teams were composed of seniors Danielle Konrad and Jessica Cheng, and Kathleen Sands and Maria Lesser. The singles players were juniors Madelina Ho and Lesley Yencho.

The team's success stemmed from teamwork and strong leadership. The team co-captains, seniors Danielle Konrad and Jessica Cheng, helped guide the other girls to perform to their full potential. The girls found themselves getting better every day. Sophomore Kristen Zomparelli was happy to be named the most improved player of the season after she placed third in the singles tournament. "Badminton is an extremely challenging sport; but my love for the game, my supportive teammates, and the strong sense of pride and integrity within the team, as a whole, ultimately helped me to overcome many obstacles," Kristen said.

The girls will take these valuable lessons in teamwork and self-discipline with them throughout their lives, along with memories of victory and the spirit of York badminton. –A. Dalal

Field Of Dreams

The 2001 Varsity Boys Baseball team proved to be one of immense talent and dedication. Headed by veteran coach Michael Lee and assistant coach Michael Hanley, the Dukes had some of the best coaches in the area.

The team had several returning stars, including all-conference players Luke Mellens and Jeffrey Loster. With the help of these key players and the return of team captains, Frank Zito and Alexander Kanelos, the Dukes were able to show their talents to the rest of the state.

Although the team did not have a winning record, the Dukes had many great accomplishments during the season. Beating top-ranked Lyons Township and sweeping Hinsdale Central were among the team's major achievements.

Coach Michael Lee commented, "Overall, players played hard, always believed they could win every game we played." Having a positive outlook during the season was key in order for the players to play strongly the entire season. As the 2002 season approaches, the Dukes will be working ever so diligently in order to improve upon last year's record. –M. Schaller

Real Men Do Gymnastics

Below: Freshman Paul Pizzi uses all his strength to keep his form on the parallel bars. Strength endurance is one of the first things taught to an aspiring gymnast.

Below: Freshman Robert Martin stretches for his routine. Stretching is essential in gymnastics, where the bulk of the activity relies on one's ability to be limber.

Success cannot always be measured through statistics. For the boys' gymnastics team, this seems entirely approriate. Although their record did not reflect their true accomplishments, the individual gymnasts performed well. Coach Jarrod Amolsch said that one of the most memorable moments of the season was when senior Zachary Hoffman stuck his high bar routine at York's home invite. The coaches' goal throughout the season was to continualy motivate and instruct, as Amolsch pointed out, "We always told them how well they were doing and gave them tips on how to improve." The boys' gymnastics team was led by three coaches and three managers, who kept track of scores and past matches. Amolsch, joined by Keith Matune and Daniel Crow, trained the team and prepared everyone for each meet. Senior Iossif Strehin was voted the "Most Valuable Player" by teammates and coaches for his ability to lead and motivate the entire team. Nearly every team has a captain, leader, or someone who stands out among the rest. Not only does this person do an outstanding job as an individual, but he helps to inspire his fellow teammates and create an excellent sports environment. Fortunately for this team, there were several players who fit this personality. They united the team while performing and sharing their love for gymnastics. –K. Atkinson

Kickin, It Hard

Imagine tightly strapping to your back a gym bag filled with your half pumped ball, cleats, shin-guards, a water bottle (or maybe two), as well as extra clothes. You then find yourself running from the student parking lot of York to Pioneer Park where intense two hour practices took place for the Varsity Girls Soccer Team.

A typical practice with coach Lindsey LaForte conditioned the girls harder than any advanced Tae-bo workout with Billy Blanks could have. They ran and practiced tightly niched exercise drills to learn ball handling, shooting, and aggressive behavior on the field.

The girls worked hard on and off the field, which was evident in their mentality and the skills they demonstrated throughout the season. Although their record may not have reflected their hard work and effort, they never gave up and always gave their best.

The lady Dukes earned an overall record of six wins, thirteen losses, and two ties. The ladies also achieved two wins and four losses in the West Suburban Conference.

"Even though we didn't win as much as we had anticipated, that particular season taught me more than any other," stated junior Amy Baer.

Junior Kate Rose Letizia gave her thoughts about the season, "Through all of our practices, games, and crazy pasta parties we grew closer as a team, which in the end helped us communicate better and have more fun both on and off the field." –M.Choyke

The 2001 Varsity Boys Tennis season turned out to be a surprising one. Coach William Sir put together a team composed of a majority of underclassmen, in hopes that the younger guys would gain more experience. With returning members senior Jeremiah Dunlap and junior Tres Heimann on the team, the sky was the limit. Heimann said "We had a lot of younger guys, and only a couple seniors, so the older guys had to try even harder." It seemed the Dukes were destined to be the underdogs. Yet with their depth and determination, they weren't going to hold that title for long. Everyday was a competition within the team for the number one spot. The Dukes managed several great feats by winning the prominent Crystal Lake tournament and also placing second at sectionals.

At the end of the season, three players qualified for the Illinois state tournament. Junior Tres Heimann qualified as a singles player by winning sectionals, and senior Jeremiah Dunlap and junior Cory Wing qualified in the doubles bracket by placing fourth at sectionals. After a great first-match win, Heimann's season ended for the year in disappointing match against Mt. Carmel's All-State player, Parker Ross. As for the doubles bracket, Dunlap and Wing won their first match but lost their second to end the season. The boys began to look forward to surprising everybody even more next season. –B. Lewis Sixty years since their last state championship, the Dukes won their third state title in 2000. The hope of a repeat weighed heavily on the members of the 2001 team. Under the guidance of former assistant and new head coach Stanley Reddel, the Dukes were ready to defend their title.

Some of the best distance runners of the 2000 team had graduated. Despite the loss of these athletes, the Dukes still had many great distance runners return, such as state qualifiers Timothy Hobbs, Peter Stasiulis, and Adam Roche. The Dukes also had a bright sprint group, including the talented Terrence Mastrino, Michael Moran, Athanasios Hilaris, and Lewis Poratta.

The Dukes suffered some injuries to key athletes early in the year, but underclassmen Kevin Lawrence and Thomas Rosinski stepped up and helped the team succeed. The Dukes won both the indoor and outdoor conference championships. They also took the sectional meet by storm, beating seventeen of the area's top teams. York was able to qualify enough individuals and relays to compete for their fourth state championship at the I.H.S A. state meet.

On May 26, 2001, the Dukes arrived at the state meet in Charleston, Illinois. The boys gave a Hurculean effort and just missed a first place finish by four points. The York Dukes proved to the track and field world that they had come to compete, and compete they did. —T. Cappelletti

Reaching Beyond The Stars

The York girls track team had very high expectations to meet, and they always managed to reach higher ones. "The indoor season was difficult due to our own indoor track's condition, as well as the weather for outdoor practices," explained senior Christina Daniels. The freshman/sophomore team received second place at the indoor conference, while the varsity team received first place.

The girls were excited to get out of the indoor track and onto the outdoor one, so they were happy that the majority of their meets took place outside. The conference meet quickly came around the corner and the freshman/sophomore team received first place. The varsity, who ran their hearts out, received second place.

The varsity team placed first in the sectional meet that followed. The state meet was the only one left for the girls, and it was considered the most important of the year. The girls ended their season placing fourth in the state. Sophomores Kara Henry, Hillary Palumbo, Allison Billhardt, and junior Kelly O'Neill ran together in the 3200-meter relay and had the fastest time in the state, staking their claim as state champions. Also, Maria Cicero, the state champion for the 3200-meter run, became the I.H.S.A.A. 3200-meter race record holder. hear the words "water polo". Some might say that they think of a game that combines swimming, football, and soccer into one sport. This sport required players to have great stamina and be able to tread water for long periods of time.

The 2001 boys waterpolo team was led by junior co-captains Erik Siebert and Thomas Neville. Practice took place everyday before school at 6:00 a.m. and after school until 6:00 p.m.. In addition to practices, the team also had games two or three times a week. Hard work paid off for these young men when their season ended with an impressive twenty wins and eight loses. Of the eight games lost, most came down to only a one point deficit. This record was a huge improvement over their previous season of eleven wins and eleven losses. Although this team was heavily weighted with upperclassmen, they still show great potential for next year. –A. Bush Buzzzz! It's 5:45 a.m. and the girls water polo team and head coach Margaret Lesniak head off to 6:00 a.m. practice. Many other students won't get up for another hour.

The girls water polo team started off a great season. With new and returning players from last year, the team did a great job working together in practice and in games. Some of last year's returning players, who were starters, included seniors, Elizabeth Carlson, Carrie Napolilli, Ann Szeluga, Kimberly Skukas as well as goalie Danielle Young. Even though they lost some seniors, they learned to accept the challenges and many new adventures they were faced with everyday. Two of their struggles were trying to beat New Trier and Latin. "We not only improved as a team this year but as individual players. I'm looking forward to a great season next year," said sophomore Jaclyn Weber.

"Water polo practices can be strenuous workouts," says junior Erin Smolenski. Besides treading water for two hours everyday, the girls also practice shooting, passing, defensive and offensive drills and game strategies. Rarely has a girl from water polo come out of the water without bruises all over her arms and legs. After an intense game many girls ended up with scratches and torn suits.

"Even though water polo requires hard work, it is worth the fun moments and memories we get out of it," says freshman Natalie Harte. With new members and old, the team is looking forward to a successful season next year. –C. Lucca

Stay The Course

The 2001 Boys Cross Country team was a dedicated group of young men who spent many hours training in extreme weather and adverse conditions. The most difficult challenge of the team was to "stay on top of the mountain" and defend their state championship title from the 2000 season. Armed with experienced varsity runners David Kikuchi and Michael Corry, the Dukes were prepared to go to battle. The Dukes captured a dual-meet record o four wins and two losses. The Dukes went on to receive second place at the West Suburban Conference meet Despite this discouraging start, the Dukes were as eager as ever to compete at the next meet At the regional mee the Dukes emerged victorious with a low score of twenty-two points. At the sectional meet, the Dukes finishe second place, missing first by only a few points. Despite the loss, the Dukes still qualified for the state meet Peoria.

The top seven runners competed at the state meet. These included seniors David Kikuchi and Albert Dimon juniors Michael Corry, Collin Bourdage, Michael Palumbo, and Adam Manta, and freshman Jonathon Schroede The Dukes managed to earn a fourth place team finish. Although the team did not have their best season, it was st an enjoyable one. All-State Team Captain Kikuchi commented, "We successfully built up a team that followed t tradition of 'The Long Green Line'." This season proved to be a valuable experience for the team, and by learni from their mistakes, the Dukes will have an even brighter future in seasons to come. –M. Schaller

Every day was a perfect day to run. The Ladies' Cross Country Team w[illegible] see that it was rainy or windy and think to themselves, "Yes! Today I have to run just a [illegible]e harder to make sure I beat that girl from Hinsdale Central." The Lady Dukes had a [illegible]nomenal year being undefeated in both conference and regional competitions. These g[illegible] strove to attain the same level of excellence as last year's team. Unfortunately the girls [illegible]re unable to repeat the state championship, but the winning tradition remained. Team captain senior Kelly O'Neill recalled, "I have never had so much fun in cross country as I did this year. The girls on the team were amazing, we were all able to work together and conquer many teams, while also keeping everyone laughing and having a great time."

The junior varsity and freshman/sophomore teams were also undefeated throughout the entire season. The freshman/sophomore team was led by freshman Danielle Hlavacek who created a spot for herself on state team. In every race that was run, the Dukes rose to the challenges at hand and won their races. Running in a pack was the secret that kept them from being defeated during the regular season. In every race there were five York runners within the top-ten standings. Undeniably, these girls had talent and wanted to show it.

"The runners had a season that will be unforgettable as they look at their third-place finish in state and the friendships that were created," Assistant coach Wendy Ihms concluded. "I am so proud of this team and who these girls have turned into, I could not ask for a better team." –A. Iozzo

At the start of game six against Oak Park, coach Grider called the match "the first game of the playoffs." It was York's homecoming game, so it added to the importance of the match. After falling behind, the Dukes fought back hard and eventually took the lead in the second half. The game was not over, though. With less than a minute left in the game, Oak Park was on the one-yard line with first and goal. Soon after, the Dukes defense made four consecutive goal-line stands to win the game. The defense played very well the whole season and was led by seniors David Schreiner, captain Justin Fiene, Daniel Karas, and junior Tyler Bruesewitz.

With their playoff hopes still alive, the Dukes proceeded to beat Proviso West the following week in a near shut-out. Offensive coordinator Patrick Arthurs was pleased with the offensive outburst in this game and felt that this year's team had "the most offensive weapons of any team" he has ever coached. Senior captains Anthony Cooper, Ronald Kiolbasa, and Mark Milano, along with seniors Clint Rieger, Christopher Kliethermes, and juniors Nathan Wallick, Bryan Belville, and quarterback Andrew Shields, helped to make a good offensive unit. The Dukes kept fighting to get into the playoffs the following week but lost against Downers Grove North. Despite the great numbers of the offense and defense, ill timed mistakes doomed the Dukes to a fate that did not include the playoffs. Still, the team ended their season with a big victory against Lyons Township. Captain Anthony Cooper summed everything up by saying, "We had a couple of tough breaks this season, but we are proud of our effort and hope we paved the way for a good season next year." –E. Caron

Boys

The golf team cut it close this year. Led by senior John Michael Ekblad, the team finished strong with a record of 10-1, missing the state tournament by only one loss.

"Probably the best game played this season was the sectional meet," head coach James Borel stated. The team lost that meet by only a single stroke, which caused them to miss the state tournament. The golf team has not gone down state as a team since 1965, but this year was the closest they have come.

Two team members, senior John Michael Ekblad and junior Ryne Kentala, were able to advance individually to the state competition. Ekblad ended his York golf career with a 4th place finish, and Kentala placed 34th.

Girls

The Lady Dukes had a much stronger season this year compared to their previous one. "The girls and I had so much fun, and we have improved so much since last season," senior Laura Teichler proudly stated.

During the regional competition, junior Catherine Marcucci scored a 97 and added to the many highlights of the year. Unfortunately, nobody went on to the state tournament this season, but the girls are determined to work hard and get there next year!

With eight returning starters, including senior captains John Devae and Adam Esposito and junior Kevin Woerner, the season was off to a good start. The Dukes started the season on a great note, placing second in the Schaumburg tournament by upsetting Jacobs High School. The Dukes continued to earn victories in their next seven games. Unfortunately, the boys dropped two overtime losses to Glenbard West and Downers Grove North and lost a tough game to Benet Academy, causing some to lose faith in the team. Junior Kevin Woerner said, "We can beat anyone if we put or minds to it; we are better than that." Proving that they were better, the Dukes mopped up number five in state, Hinsdale Central. That victory sent them on a roll as they beat Oak Park, Lyons Township, and Naperville North, who was ranked among the top fifteen teams in the state. When it came time for the playoffs, the Dukes easily beat Glenbard East in the first round. The team's season then came to an end when they lost to Hinsdale Central in the semi-finals. DREAM AS IF YOU WILL SWIM FOREVER

For a team that practiced more than once a day, which was more than most sports, their work payed off. Monday, Wednesday and Friday, the swim team had six A.M. practice. The team also practiced everyday after school from 3:30 to 5:30 P.M. Some of the most dedicated girls swam during their lunch period or during their free periods as well. Junior Jaclyn Weber swams before school, during her gym period, during her lunch period, and after school almost everyday. Swim team took a lot of dedication and time, but the results from the meets show that it all paid off. The team took third at the York Invite and also placed highly in other meets.

The swim team spent a lot of time in the water, swimming at least 5000 yards every day. Some morning practices also included time spent lifting weights and doing "suicide" sprints. Coach Dave Davis said "We had a really good team this year . We lost one of our key relay swimmers and will use the rest of the season to find someone just as capable to take her place."

The main goal of this year's team was to improve individual times. Speeding up a time by even one second was a big accomplishment. Every Friday the team had time sets which consisted of swimming four 100 yard laps and trying to improve their times. These were important to the team because the trials helped show them if they met their goals.

The motto for this year's swim team was "Dream as if you'll swim forever, Train as if you'll die today." It was printed on their tee shirts and sweatshirts to show the school that the team lives and loves to swim. –E. Stelling

Everyday at 4:30 PM every girl on the 2001 Girls Varsity Tennis team made the long drive to Berens Park to have their two hour practice on six courts. This was a dramatic change from the nine courts which the team had previously used on school grounds. To add to this major change, seven of last year's eleven varsity players graduated, leaving only one senior, two juniors and one sophomore to lead the new team. Despite the many changes from the year before, the team had a very successful season. At practice, the girls engaged in more match play than usual, as they prepared for upcoming matches. Due to construction, the tennis team did not hold any home meets. This forced the team to spend a lot of time on the bus. However, this gave the girls a chance to grow closer as a team.

With a fifth place finish at conference, Coach David Williams and the players knew there was a lot to look forward to for next year. Junior captain Elizabeth Grob commented, "Mr. Williams told us the whole season that he was more concerned with us learning the game of tennis than worrying about the score." With such a young team, Coach Williams knew that his team would learn a lot by playing challenging teams. The girls knew that each match could be won if they played to the best of their abilities. After winning seventeen of their twenty-one matches at one tournament, the tennis team proved that they were an extremely talented group. –C. Douglas

Top 10 Motivations That Brought The Team Together For A Successful Season

10. Hating to Lose - When we lost it made us disappointed, but it helped push us to win.
9. Having fun - Every team needs to laugh now and then.
8. Respect - We respected each other and the team as a whole. No one is perfect.
7. "Holding the Rope" - This is a poem that helped us realize if one person got down we all got down. We were in everything together.
6. Constant pursuit - We never let go, and we were never satisfied with less than perfect.
5. Playing with our hearts - We gave it our all in every game. We played with what was inside: the desire to win!
4. Believing in ourselves - We knew we could do anything to which we set our hearts and minds.
3. Winning - It made us much happier and kept motivating us to play harder.
2. Goals - We set goals to help us accomplish what we wanted for the season.
1. Team unity - Our team was very close. We all got along, which helped us work together to finish off a successful season.

Play Hard, Play Smart, Play Together

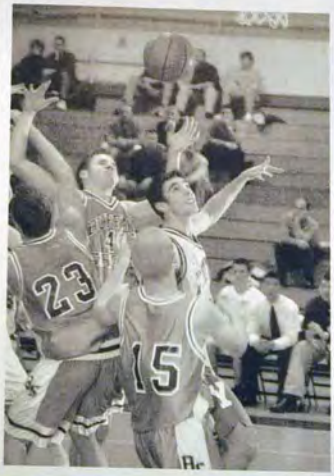

Following an exciting end to the 2000-2001 season, the basketball team set out to gain more respect and to top their accomplishments of the previous season. Last March, the Dukes beat highly ranked New Trier to win the regional championship, a first for the program in almost two decades. This year the team raised their expectations as they set their sights on a conference championship and advancement deep into the IHSA playoffs. Led by head coach John Daniels, the team emphasized playing a solid defense, running a patient offense and creating good opportunities to score points. The Dukes began the season with a 5-1 record, coming in second at the York Turkey Tournament and beating state-ranked Lyons Township along the way. In the Jack Tosh Holiday Tournament the Dukes beat Nazareth Academy, Deerfield, and Conant, but lost to Downers Grove South to finish third among sixteen teams. At the conclusion of the tournament Michael Schuetz was selected to the all-tournament team. After this the Dukes suffered heartbreaking non-conference losses to Glenbard East and Fenton, as well as conference losses to Downers Grove North, Oak Park and Hinsdale Central. However, the Dukes bounced back with solid wins against Glenbard West and Proviso West, who had been in first place in conference at that time.

As the race for the conference title continued, the team found itself one or two games out of first place. Coach Daniels remarked that for most of the season "every game was the conference championship to us." This attitude helped the team to come out fired up every game and play their hardest. They remained a contender for first place until they suffered back-to-back losses to Downers Grove North and Oak Park near the end of the season. Senior captains Michael Schuetz, Tres Heimann, and Anthony Cooper used their experience and leadership to guide the team through the season and into the state playoffs. For the playoffs, the Dukes were given an eighth seed and played Fenton. The Dukes were excited for the chance to avenge their regular season loss to Fenton. As Cooper said, "we felt that we were the better team, and we were easily capable of playing much better basketball than we did that first game." Anthony was right, and the second time around the Dukes beat Fenton. This win set the Dukes up for a regional championship re-match against New Trier at New Trier. New Trier was ranked in the top twenty in state for most of the year, and in the top ten for part of the year. The Dukes held strong for the first half of the game leading 16-11 at the end of the first quarter and trailing by 11 at the half. In the third quarter New Trier came out with a barrage of three-pointers and led for the rest of the game. Stop Drop and Roll...

because Girls Basketball is on fire!

The 2001-2002 girls basketball season was a success! With the help of two new star players, Krystal and Gina Hugelier, and a group of talented returning seniors, the Lady Dukes earned respect in the school, the conference, and the media. The Dukes were ranked as one of the best teams in the area throughout the season.

The girls basketball team also accomplished many small victories, such as winning the York Tournament, at the beginning of the year, beating highly ranked Nequa Valley, playing a very competitive game against the Hope team, and beating Lyons Township on the Lions home court. This victory was the first time in the four years Coach Prokryphke had emerged victorious against Lyons Township. Junior Carrie Marinier said, "the strong York defense really helped to give them their extra push toward victory."

The girl's basketball team consisted of 18 players, including many juniors. Marinier said, "The team was full of good players and always had a strong bench as well as powerful players on the court." After winning a regional title, they fell short of claiming the sectional title by losing to Hinsdale Central in their final game. The strong core of juniors on the team could mean that next year's team has a good chance at similar success. —J. Bretl

3:11... the bell rang and the bowling team rushed to catch the bus in order to make it to Stardust Bowling Alley with enough time to get in a good practice. The team held its practices and home meets at Stardust and practiced every day after school from 4:00 to 5:30. The team spent the beginning of practice performing drills for 7 and 10 pins and warming up. They spent the rest of their time playing practice games.

The team competed in meets during the week and on some Saturdays. The head coach for this year's team was Ms. Cheryl Trapp, and assistant coach Mr. Jeffery Tieman. The team had predominately upperclassmen last year and worried about losing many experienceced players. Even though the majority of this year's team was underclassmen, and lacked the experience of last year, the younger girls began to triumph. Junior Pia Bartolai said "Even though we have only one senior, and lost six seniors from last year, we have become more skilled and are now able to compete with the best teams in the conference. It's a lot of fun!" – E. Stelling

Keep Pushing!

Even when exhausted both mentally and physically, athletes push themselves to the limits. Bruises, scrapes, and cuts can't stand in the way of a determined athlete. The girls gymnastics team kept pushing despite injuries. Coach Jarrod Amolsch and assistant coaches Lorel Kleyweg and Christine Morgan led their team through both victory and upsets.

In grueling practices, each level worked together while they competed in dual meets. As junior Kimberly Long said, "I'm just as close with some of the freshmen as I am with the other girls who I have worked out with for years." Getting along in and outside of the gym contributed to a sense of team unity and pride. This was reflected in the posters which adorned the gym and the cheers shouted for each other during meets.

Senior captain Michelle Karns, accompanied by senior co-captains Sarah Jacobson and Christina Erhart led the varsity squad of ten competitors to a fourth place finish in conference. As the season progressed, a few of the gymnasts suffered severe injuries thus causing the team to rarely compete as a whole. Junior varsity members admirably filled the void left by the injured varsity. The junior varsity squad placed third in conference with strong routines and healthy competitors. Karns said, "We had so much fun but I would still have loved to see us compete as a team rather than an incomplete squad."

Unfortunatly, the inconsistant performances led to a defeat in the regional competition. However, Karns, Long, and Erhart advanced to sectionals as individuals. With a 9.4 score on her pike tsukahara vault, Karns advanced to the state meet. Coach Amolsch said of the season, "It was thrilling seeing Micki Karns compete. My goal was to get my seniors down state. They have worked so hard the past four years, so we're really going to miss them next year, in both their leadership and talent. " –C. Erhart

Whoever said swimming was an easy sport did not endure five hour practices during winter break. With tough drills run at every practice, swimming was not a sport for the faint of heart. This season was an exceptional one for the swimming and diving team. Armed with plenty of experience and talent, the team received some extra help from newcomers Martin Gelbert and Grzegorz Bulczak. Both were foreign exchange students from Europe. Gelbert hailed from Germany and Bulczak from Poland.

The Dukes achieved many great things during the season, including their second place finish at the West Suburban Conference meet. The Dukes never scored better than second place in the Conference meet. Coach Mark Laurich commented, "It has been an outstanding season. The key has been our seniors, they have a blue collar work ethic. It's been neat to see them develop over four years into the best team in York [swimming] history."

Some of the major victories were over Oak Park- River Forest and Proviso West. The Dukes also captured first place at the Leyden, Morton, and Lyons Invites. Team captains, seniors David Perout, Matthew Kaleta, Thomas Neville, and Grzegorz Bulczak were the main reason the team performed well. The Dukes accomplished many goals during the season, and as the seniors ended their careers, new opportunities arose for the underclassmen. –M. Schaller

Win by Pinfall

The 2001-2002 York wrestling team had a strong season once again. York developed a winning tradition over the years, and this year was no exception. The team suffered some early defeats to conference opponents, resulting in the conference championship eluding them. This only gave the Dukes more motivation to give everything they had at each meet, and that was reflected throughout the season.

The Dukes won some big meets, including the West Chicago invite, and they defeated some of the best teams in the state. After these victories, the team was confident it would have a successful season. Senior Jason Giesel, juniors Jason Benson, Tyler Bruesewitz, Harrison Noffs, and Michael Bishof were some of the athletes that led the way for York all season.

Later in the season, the regional meet became York's new challenge. The Dukes entered the meet with a positive attitude and left with a positive outcome. They won the regional title and qualified many wrestlers for the individual sectional meet.

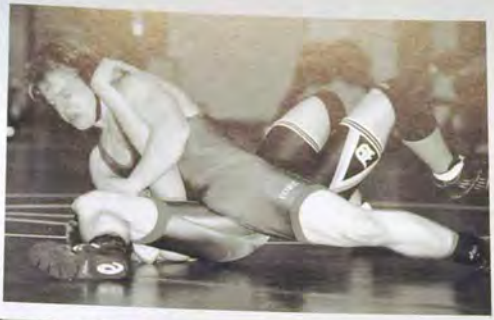

Unfortunately, the Dukes suffered a defeat to Glenbard North at the team sectional. At the individual sectional, Harrison Noffs and Tyler Bruesewitz placed in the top three in their respective weight classes. These finishes qualified them for an appearance at the I.H.S.A.. State Wrestling Tournament. Bruesewitz wrestled his way to a second-place finish, and Noffs left with a fourth-place finish. Both individuals gave all they had and put a finishing touch on their successful seasons.

The Dukes continued their winning tradition in 2001-2002, and plan to continue their spirited competition in years to come. –S. Cappelletti

Go Mean Green

Keeping school spirit high was the most important goal to the cheerleading squad. The squad made some tremendous improvements while mastering difficult moves and memorizing several cheers.

The girls strained their voices and supported York athletes at every home and away game throughout the football and basketball seasons. Their extensive practices left them exhausted everyday. According to senior Katrina Hart, "As a squad we put together a lot tougher stunts this year. I also feel that we worked very well together."

After summer practice and cheerleading camp at Northern Illinois University, they felt prepared to begin their season. They added many new and difficult stunts to their routines.

The additions to the cheerleading routines helped prepare the squad for their competition at Fenton. Cheerleading squads from local high schools competed against one another to earn the titles for the most school spirit, the best cheers and the most difficult moves.

The squad cheered their best during their competition at Fenton, and placed among the top five teams. The girls ended their season by making it to the state tournament for the first time. They accomplished their goals individually and as a team, which left them all with bright smiles and a sense of success. –T. Hill

The 2001-2002 Poms Squad [illegible] right from the beginning. The g[illegible] kicked off their year with a third-place [illegible] Universal Dance Association Sum[illegible] Camp. "Our performance at camp helped [illegible] confidence we needed to have a [illegible]ly great season," said senior captain Heather Nilson, who also added, "we were really h[illegible] to have an extremely talented group of girls this year." But, as the girls learned, tale[illegible]nly took them so far. The keys to their success were hard work and dedication.

During football season, the squad often practiced more than three hours [illegible]h day to prepare for the annual Homecoming Pep Rally performance. This year's se[illegible]-minute routine, choreographed by captains Heather Nilson, Madelyn Smith, and Mary Arthurs, was set to a variety of well-known songs and showcased the squad's skill and technique.

In the winter, the Poms made the transition from football to basketball season. The girls performed halftime routines at every varsity boys' home game. Squad members choreographed these routines and often incorporated themes into the music. The Poms closed their season with a trip to the Illinois Drill Team Association regional competition and a performance at the Winter Pep Rally. At both events, the girls performed in their red, white, and blue costumes to a mix of patriotic songs. Coach Loukia Mastrodimos said of this year's team, "this squad accomplished a lot more than I'd ever expected. I think they've helped pave the way for future squads to come." –M. Arthurs

Circle of Friends was a group of students that only wanted to do one thing: have fun while accomplishing their goals. Anyone attending a Circle of Friends meeting or event saw smiles adorning the faces of all people involved.

Circle of Friends's main focus was to develop friendships between students with special needs and those without special needs. This goal was accomplished through a variety of fun social activities. The club also had one monthly meeting and one or two other activities a month. These activities included bowling, movies, pool parties, basketball games, concerts, plays, parties, and shopping trips. Club members also spent time outside of the club and built great friendships. Solving Our Problems

Conflicts are inevitable in everyday life. These conflicts can range from wars between countries to bickering between friends. The members of Peer Mediation usually dealt with the latter. The organization dealt with various types of conflicts throughout the year, but most of them were problems between students. The group met once a month to discuss current mediations and to plan possible training sessions, which improved the team's conflict and resolution skills. Many times, peer mediators brainstormed in groups to help each other learn how to make the best out of every situation. As a result of Peer Mediation's services, many students were able to avoid the dean's office by solving conflicts before they got out of control.

At the end of the year, the club took a field trip to a high ropes course and a climbing wall. They did this as a farewell to the seniors of the group who would be moving on the following year. Overall, Peer Mediation helped to create a less hostile and more friendly atmosphere. –E. Caron

Since REALITY began at York ten years ago, the school has seen a major decrease in racism and discrimination. Some teachers noticed a significant change in the racial attitudes of today's students compared to those of the early 1990s. Some of the positive changes that have occurred included a policy against discrimination in the York handbook, diversity training for teachers over the summer, and an overall attitude of acceptance among the students and faculty.

Club adviser Ms. Christine Morgan said that the purpose of the club was to "combat prejudice and promote tolerance throughout York." Members were very enthusiastic about how the faculty and administration were practicing a philosophy. With all of its recent success, REALITY was now looking to redefine its role within York and the community. One project that the club was looking forward to was a program that involved the middle schools. Hopefully, the ideas and attitudes of REALITY would be spread down through the lower grades.

Civil Rights activist Margaret Mead once said, "never doubt that a small group of throughtful citizens can change the world. Indeed it is the only thing that ever has." The members of REALITY have certainly proved that they can make a difference. –E. Caron

Lending a Helping Hand

Numerous people were needed to work behind the scenes to make a school like York function smoothly. Every day these aides helped various departments and people without much recognition. As some of these aides entered the classroom with a note everyone tensed up with anticipation. Some worried that the deans might have found something that they did wrong again, and others hoped that it was some kind of note that would pull them out of class just long enough to miss the upcoming quiz. After they dropped-off the note at that class they were off to another one to do the same. Regardless of whether these aides were delivering notes, helping people get to their next class, checking out books, or just helping out in general, they were greatly appreciated by the York staff and students. –E. Environmentally Sound

Many times it might seem easier to just to throw an empty McDonald's bag out of the window of a car, or dump motor oil down the sewer, but it takes an extra amount of self-discipline to refrain from doing these things. The world today is filled with so much information about the threats that face the rain forests and our ozone layer disappearing that it seems almost as if no one person can make a difference. The members of the Eco Club beg to differ. Club supervisor Ms. Susan Leander says "by raising money for various environmental clubs as well as doing projects locally like planting trees we can change things for the better." There are many projects and activities that the Eco Club participates in: like boycotting companies and products that are harmful to the earth and nature, planting trees around the community, and fundraising for organizations like Green Peace and various Humane Societies. A major focus for this year's Eco Club was educating people about animal rights and the details about animal testing. With the recent attacks on New York and Washington surfacing, the Eco club felt it was their duty to contribute one-hundred dollars to the Red Cross disaster relief fund. It is good to know that these dedicated members were at work every day trying to make the earth a better place for everyone. –E.Caron

A Light in the Night

Right: Faculty advisor Joan Davis supervises Amnesty meetings. Davis lends a hand when the students ask for help and supports the cause.

In the darkness, even a single candle may seem like the sun. In desperate situations, even the smallest bit of hope is everything. Amnesty International strives to give hope to the oppressed and fought for the rights of all individuals. Most high school students were not aware of terrible acts of hatred, torture and injustice that occured in the world that surrounded them.

In countries not so far away, 12 -year old boys were executed for stealing bread to feed their families. People were tortured and killed if they were caught practicing the religion of their choice. Rape victims were beaten and killed because of they were thought to have shamed their families. Horrendous acts of hatred and injustice are unfortunately, not a thing of the past.

The exceptional students who ran York's Amnesty International group helped alleviate unfair persecution of people in other countries. From letter-writing campaigns and candle-light vigils to the annual "Rock for Human Rights" concert, Amnesty International members put forth their best effort to make life better for people who were otherwise hopeless. "It's really important that people in this country know what is going on in the rest of the world. All these horrible things are happening to people. Unfortunately, most won't take the time to learn," said junior Teena Thomas. The basis for Amnesty International is that everyone has basic human rights, and when those rights are violated, something needs to be done. Although some people claim they could never make a difference in the world, the students in Amnesty recognized that even the little things provided hope and comfort for those in need. –A. Dalal

To Accept

At one point or another, most people have felt misunderstood. Because everyone was welcomed at A.S.I.S., the issue of being misunderstood was solved with this program. Students were provided with a chance to meet open-minded people who did not discriminate.

In a world of prejudice and ignorance, members of A.S.I.S. tried to serve as examples of students who were not afraid to be themselves. The club provided a relaxed atmosphere where no one was judged or hurt for their choices. Ran for students and by students, A.S.I.S. was an exceptional group that stood up for everyone's rights. —A. If you asked any member of Empower how to describe the female race, they would have answered "STRONG!" The men and women of Empower spent each week's meeting discussing the positive and negative effects of the women's rights movement.

The members of Empower knew that nothing should stand in the way of equal rights for women. Also, the mission of the club applied to many aspects of life. The perseverence and stamina of Empower members would follow them throughout life.

Law Club and Law Team, the two organizations [illegible] ated on the country's judicial system [illegible] periences a tremendous growth in popularity over the last few years. Law Club differed from Law Team in [illegible] Law Club required no tryout. Law Club met weekly, and advisor Mr. Alan Pieler helped students prepare for [illegible] Law Team tryouts, with hopes that they would graduate from Law Club to Law Team. All the students worked hard and practiced diligently. Although the intention of most students was to make Law Team, those who did not still learned many invaluable skills as members of Law Club.

Junior Catherine Buchholz said she could describe her experience on Law Team in three words: "Challenging, interesting and fun." The team was made up of students from a variety of backgrounds. However, their success proved they made a great combination.

The Law Team spent their season practicing and rehearsing every day after school in preparation for the state meet. The meet took place on March 1-3 in Springfield. Of the fifty-three teams competing, York took second place. Despite some controversy caused by the cancellation of a trial due to weather conditions, York was still proud of their second place finish. They also placed second on the state law test. Senior Stephanie Zosak and junior Katherine Szadziewicz were named Best Attorney and Best Witness, respectively.

What did Law Team members take away from this season? Junior Ryan McClintock said, "we competed with some of the best teams in state, and we did very well. It was a great experience." – A. Ohler Louder! More natural, enunciate! An audience of peers directed reactions and comments to the speaker at a weekly speech team practice. The speech team did what most people in this world fear the most: speak publicly. These students added their own style and flare to the speeches they created.

Speech team met every Monday to talk about the roles for the week. During individual practice sessions, students met with a teacher who would critiqued all the parts of their speech.

The members then met at 6:15 on Saturday mornings to travel to competitions. After performing the speeches they had been working on all week for the competition, awards were given out. Speech team gave students the chance to compete in something other than sports. "It was a rush performing in a competitive atmosphere and then finding how you placed afterwards," said team member Anthony Lopez.

The students on Speech team were given a variety of options for their speeches, including dramatic duet acting, humorous interpretation, prose reading and others. This allowed them to use their creative talents in a variety of areas and satisfied their craving to be heard. –C. Douglas

Languages

The students involved in the world language clubs experienced a little bit of diversity with their peers. Meetings were held in the rooms of the clubs' sponsors and lasted up to an hour. The different languages of the clubs were discussed. The students also learned about different aspects of their chosen cultures through food and actual souvenirs.

World language clubs encouraged students to use the language they worked so hard to master. This was important especially if students intended to use their foreign language in life or planned on traveling to a foreign country.

The students took pride in their clubs by selling candy to raise money and attending activities throughout the year to support their clubs. Junior Laura Marek commented, "I enjoy selling candy for the clubs I'm in because everybody gets so excited for the candy and it helps the clubs I am in at the same time." The students took pride in the learning experience that came with attending a club and spending time with people who shared the same interests. –C. Douglas

Governing Body

Perhaps the club most synonymous with the word "organization" was the 2001-2002 Student Council. As representatives of the student body, Stu-Co orchestrated many different activities. Each day, after taking attendance, club members split into different classes to discuss issues and formed committees to plan specific events. Some of the more glamourous events were the Homecoming Dance, Turnabout, and Prom, but many other worthy causes came under Stu-Co's sphere of influence. The food drive, toy drive, and charity car wash were just some examples of student council's altruism.

These sponsored charities did not demonstrate the full range of service opportunities the Council provided. "We try to promote not only a good school for students, but also in the eyes of the community," said junior Treasurer Kenneth Walsh. The full measure of Student Council's role was reflected in the citizenship of its outstanding members and in their conduct throughout the year. Led by their president, senior Kate Rose Letizia, the group tried to do as much good as possible. Student Council's zealous workers outside on a chilly Saturday morning washing cars was a testament to their dedication. "We try to represent the student body to its full potential," Walsh said. –D. Without the stage and lighting crews, school plays would not be the same. The crews performed numerous tasks that brought the plays to a more dramatic and realistic level. These tasks included finding props, building sets, and deciding when and where to shine the lights. Advised by Mr. Andrew Chmura, the crew met every week. While the actors practiced their scenes, the crew decided which light was needed for particular scenes. The crews also discussed what stage props were needed. When opening night came, the crew's hard work was reflected in the play's success. The terrific props and realistic lighting proved that they were vital to the success of each production. –C. The staff worked on projects such as advertising plays and completing murals for school dances. Students not only completed work in school, but out of school as well. Junior Sean Kasak commented, "We all worked hard to make sure that the dances and other big events looked great." The art staff developed tee-shirt designs, painted drama sets, created hallway decorations for Homecoming, and produced colorful brochures and posters for dances and plays. The senior leaders of "Sko-bo," as Scholastic Bowl is affectionately known, generated an atmosphere of success. The junior varsity team prevailed at the beginning of the season with a 7-1 record. The varsity faced extreme adversity during the course of the year, beginning the season with a 3-5 record.

However, the team was more diverse this year than in the past. "It's fun being a girl on the team," said senior Madhu Murthy, one of only two girls in the male-dominated organization. No longer was Scholastic Bowl a collection of trivia-oriented individuals. Senior Patrick McEvoy commented, "Scholastic Bowl has become main-stream at York." The cohesion of the team throughout the season was excellent. Seniors shared the role of captain and rotated so that each person experienced the thrill of heading the group. Under the guidance of James Borel, "Sko-Bo" has immense potential for future success. –D. Kikuchi

The Math Team of 2001-02 was invigorated by a thirst for victory and a will to succeed. The men and women who braved the year's mathematical challenges were no strangers to the quadratic equation, nor did they faint at the sight of an integral. In math rooms across the Chicago-land area the Math team wore down their pencil leads until their papers turned gray.

Coached by Max Schoenberg and Linda Lahti, the team amassed many wins, due to dedicated hours of practice before and after school. "We were really excited this year because we have many more people than usual, and it was a math-tastic experience," said senior Thomas Neville. Free Time

Young Life is a nondenominational youth group where everyone is welcome to come and have a good time. The group met every Monday night from 7:30-8:30 at members' houses and usually went to Portillo's afterwards for more socializing. Students participated in many activities, including funny games, songs, and pie-eating contests.

Young Life welcomed everybody. Sophomore Jessica Bretl said, "The best thing about Young Life is it's fun and you meet a lot of new people and make new friends."

During the summer, Young Life members went to camp at Frontier Ranch in Colorado. "I thought it was truly one of the best weeks of my life," said senior Angelene Iozzo. Iozzo also talked about the Young Life camp activities, which included high ropes courses, 15,000-foot mountain climbs, horseback riding, and extreme go-karting. Of course, campers were lucky enough to enjoy all this along with the unbelievable scenery and great food.

Young Life members also had the oppurtunity to interact with Timothy Christian students, who were also involved. This opened the door to a variety of new friendships! Young Life was a place where you could forget about homework and the stress of school and just have fun. – C. Lucca

The boy's hockey team, a non-school sponsored sport, worked hard to get the respect they deserved this year. They practiced several times a week for an hour and an half and played two games each weekend. They organized all of their own events, and their parents acted as coaches. Since hockey was not school sponsored, the boys had to work extra hard to draw a crowd to their games. Sophomore Martin Stratte said, "I wish York sponsored hockey so that we got the same amount of attention as the other sports do." Even so, the team had a very successful season.

Other students chose to participate in intramural sports after school. Intramurals offered a variety of different activities, ranging from ping-pong to basketball to water polo. Intramurals did not focus on competition too much, but friendly games were held every week. Teachers graciously sacrificed their free time to supervise these games. – C. Lucca

The Quest Beyond Language

The Language Honor Societies are part of several honor societies at York. All members needed an "A" in their junior year world language classes to join, and they had to maintain this grade throughout their senior year. These students took world language classes that enhanced their view of the world and its cultural diversity.

The Language Honor Societies dedicated themselves to stimulating interest in the studies of French, German, and Spanish. They rewarded and recognized the dedicated students in the study of these languages. "The societies were very important because they distinguish students who were skilled and interested in language and culture," said junior Emily Holtz, a member of the German Honor Society. They also stimulated interest in the language, culture, and civilization. The Language Honor Societies dedicated themselves to rewarding those students whom understand the importance of preserving interest in learning about other cultures. –M. Lawrence

Those students inducted into the society held a 5.0 grade point average on a 6.0 point scale their junior year. As seniors, they had to maintain 4.5 grade point averages to remain in the society. Members of the Math Honor Society chose to challenge themselves by taking accelerated math classes.

The Math Honor Society dedicated itself to stimulating interest in the study of mathematics and encouraging higher standards of education. The society rewarded scholastic achievements and created enthusiasm for a better understanding of mathematics. –M. Lawrence

What kind of students had what it took to be in the National Honors Society? They all showed exemplary leadership, scholarship, service, and character during their high-school career and were therefore chosen to be a part of NHS.

Last year, faculty advisors Mrs. VanHoeck and Ms. Socha looked at the current junior class and sent an application home to each student who had at least a 3.5 G.P.A. In this application the students were asked to list all their extra-curricular activities and volunteer positions. Those students who were accepted went through an initiation process in late April of last year.

When they became seniors, the members of NHS were required to complete volunteer hours, maintain their G.P.A., and attend meetings every other week.

The activities that members of NHS were involved in included "Drive by Rakings," "Bootiful Sunday," wrapping books for Donka Inc., carriage rides at the tree-lighting ceremony, and split- the-pot to raise money for the American Red-Cross. NHS also adopted a family during the holiday season and had a picnic so members got to know each other.

NHS member Jennifer O'Donnell summed up the goal of NHS by saying, "NHS is an honorary society that allows members to get involved in their community and show people that teenagers are good people." –K.Pusich

Writing with Rewards

Quill and Scroll is a National Honorary Journalism Fraternity for students who are part of a publication in school. There were nineteen members in York's chapter of Quill and Scroll last year. Each of these students was on a school publication and made a superior contribution to that publication. He or she must have been in the upper 33% of their class.

The students were initiated in May and met on an as-need basis during the school year. "One of the benefits of being on Quill and Scroll is that it is nationally recognized by all colleges and universities, and the students received validation of excellence in journalism," said Ms. Judy Jackson, the advisor of Quill and Scroll.

In addition to the initiation process, Quill and Scroll members were also involved in fund-raisers during the school year to help raise money for the club. Every member of Quill and Scroll dedicated time, enthusiasm, and effort to their publication. –K. Pusich Thespians is an honorary society for those students who have dedicated much of their time and enthusiasm to the drama department.

The club contained actors, actresses, and members of the stage and lighting crew. All members had to contribute to at least three consecutive plays their sophomore year, participate in at least two sections of the drama program (acting, directing, etc.), and contribute at least forty hours to the theatre. Every member had to be at least a junior.

Outside of school, Thespians decorated a Christmas Tree at Wilder Park and went on field trips to see plays. "We have a banquet every summer at the Ambassador to initiate new members, give awards to existing members, and nominate officers for the upcoming year," said senior Maxwell Wiesman, President of Thespians.

In order to raise money for Thespians, members sold poinsettias, put on plays, and sold food during the plays. "A student who is a Thespian contributed time, effort, and talent to the drama program out of their own free-will," said Wiesman, "and they should be commended for it." –K.Pusich

What would the school year be without the numerous band performances? Our Duke Spirit would not have been at the same level without the bands keeping our spirits high. All year long, the bands worked hard to enhance their talents and performances.

Students in band made many sacrifices. Marching Band met every day during fourth period and were afforded only half of their lunch periods in order to facilitate extra practice. Junior Lauren Dick said, "All of us in the marching band worked very hard every day and it turned out to be a great success." The marching band was especially appreciated at the halftime shows of football games. Similarly, pep band worked to raise the spirit of crowd members during the basketball games and pep rallies.

Mr. Polancich's symphonic band worked diligently throughout the year to perfect peices by famous composers such as Bach, Shostakovich, Reed, and Gliere. Their work was displayed at the annual Illinois Music Educators Association annual competition. This year, Mr. Polancich sent numerous band members to compete at IMEA, and they proved to be among the best in Illinois. Other bands, including jazz, concert, and cadet, were incredibly successful this year, and their concert performances proved their talent. –C. Marinier

This year was a great success for York's Orchestra. The group met for a period every day to rehearse and perfect their performances. They also held numerous concerts throughout the school year. As if the experience of sharing their talents with others was not rewarding enough, ten members of the orchestra competed in the state Illinois Music Educators Association competition. Michael Bishof, Katherine D'Alexander, Sara DesJardins, Colleen Doyle, Lynnette Gauger, David Genty, Jean Hatmaker, Rebecca Mei, Timothy Richardson and Kimberly Sokol were among the 23 participants fromYork's music department. York sent the most participants to IMEA of any high school in the state. The competition took place from January 23-26, in Peoria. "It is so much fun. It's great to practice and see the results of your hard work," Katherine D'Alexander said of the orchestra experience. The sounds of the orchestra students were truly music to listeners ears. –A. New Beginnings

A new face joined the York Music Department "family" for the 2001-2002 schoolyear. Mr. James Lunsford transfered to York to fill the position of head choral director after working as a teacher at another high school. Lunsford met the challenges of York's multi-level choral program and school construction, yet still had time to incorporate new ideas into the many long-standing traditions.

This school year Lunsford experimented with the idea of a men's only A Cappella preformance group. Men's A Cappella was open to all male students, regardless of whether or not they were enrolled in a choral class. Meeting during lunch periods and outside of classtime the small group performed at the winter choral concert in January, and impressed their audience with their intonation and pop repetoire.

Despite the change in location from the music wing to the auditorium area, to allow demolition of the north end of the school, students still excelled and were as successful as ever at the Illinois Music Educators Association competition. Fifteen students advanced to the district level, while Hannah Clancy, Christina Clark, Sara Gorsky, Michael Hoyne, Erik Stonikas, and Mary Sotos recieved All-State honors. Adapting to change and overcoming obstacles did not impede Mr. Lunsford and his singers in their quest for success and greater knowledge. -L. Haskell

York's four publications, Mirrors Magazine, York News Magazine, the York Hi, and Y's Tales worked all year to give a little something extra to the student body.

The Mirrors Staff created two magazines this past year. They collected submissions from the student body, and then spent several weeks editing and reviewing all of the pieces. After selecting the pieces to put in the magazine, the staff wrote numerous letters to the students explaining why each piece was or was not accepted.

The York News Magazine collected original pieces of writing, art, and photography about current social issures from students. These submissions were carefully scrutinized and then compiled into the first annual issue of the magazine.

The York Hi staff successfully sent out eight issues this past year. The staff spent countless hours writing first drafts, editing, and putting the pieces together in order to create a final product. This year's topics ranged from stem cell research to hallway etiquette.

The Y's Tales staff worked all year to create a single product, the yearbook. Despite the fact that the book did not come out until spring, some deadlines were as early as October. Everyone had to create several layouts from scratch, interview numerous individuals, and desperately search for photos.

All four publications found success this year. Thanks to the help of advisors and the extra hours of work put in by staff members, deadlines were met, and final products were successfully distributed.

Invite-to-teach was a great way for students who were thinking about teaching to determine if it was the right occupation for them or not. Senior Susan Steinbach said, "I really love getting out of school early and going to teach at Lincoln. I have found that teaching is very rewarding and definitely something that I would like to get into in my future." The class enjoyed their teacher, Mrs. Martin, who tought them the basics of teaching and caring for others. Senior Kelly O'Malley said, "Mrs. Martin is great. She has always been so nice to us. She was always willing to bend over backwards for us, just so that we can be happy."

Invite-to-teach ran throughout the whole year and was two periods long. The students stayed at York on Mondays, and for the rest of the week they taught at Elmhurst elementary schools. –A. Iozzo

Eat Your Heart Out

Students involved in anatomy and physiology worked twice as hard, because the class met two periods of every school day. The class was taught by Mrs. Catie Feigh, who encouraged her students and occasionally brought special treats to class. The treats included cupcakes, cookies, and of course, a human brain. The students quickly had to learn the basics of the body and second semester they used the knowledge learned in the classroom when they went to the hospital everyday. Senior Ashley Arnold described the class by saying, "It is really demanding, I have to study at least an hour and a half every night for just this class alone. The class is one big test for yourself to see if you really are interested in the medical field or not. It has really helped me with my decision." Even though the class seemed difficult and grueling, senior Maureen Troller said, "Second semester, when I am at the hospital every day, I appreciate all of the hard work from first semester. I can understand what the doctors are talking about making it more interesting than if I did not know what was happening right in front of my face." –A. Iozzo

It's a Musical Life

Amateur Musicians were students who came together and played music. To participate required only a passion for music, and no musical experience was needed. A few days a week, many of these students improvised, wrote or played tunes. They experimented on instruments varying from different kinds of guitars, harmonicas, pianos and much more. Singers were welcome too. "We're an informal group that demands informal things," club advisor Andrew Bendelow stated. "You never know who will show up." Their talent shined through during Fine Arts Week when they presented music they had composed themselves. Music was an important part of life and this club provided students with the musical enrichment they craved. There was no doubt that this group had a lot of talent, but more important, a passion for music. –C. Rizleris

AVIATION CLUB: Larry Krengel, Rex Matthew Irby, Charles Strong, Adam Aldrich, Robert Pechous

"Aviation is all about people who share a passion of flying," stated club advisor Larry Krengel. Each week club members got together and decided what they wanted to learn and discover. Activities ranged from films about flying to actually flying airplanes, which required time outside of class to set up a date and time to fly. Winter flying was harder to schedule due to harsh weather conditions. At Lewis University, the club took precious time practicing on flight simulators that led up to their incredible journey through the sky. In the past, they had set up an aviation expo here at York in Yorkshire Hall. They hung airplanes from the ceiling, and had hands on activities about flying. Hopefully, these young and talented students will fly high into the future. –C. Rizleris

Building and Learning

VICA, known as the "wood club," mostly consisted of students from the auto technology classes. These students met before school during the week , and they helped each other build and learn at the same time. Advisor Mr. Kenneth Ross taught the students skills and important tasks in building wooden projects. After completing many projects, the students then took a written exam. Those who had top scores were invited to the Skills Championship in Springfield, where they had a chance to prove their knowledge. Ross's motto was always to have a good time, and of course, the students did exactly that at all their competitions. The students knew how to build, learn, and have a good time at the same time. –C. The Distributive Education Club of America, advised by Mr. James Borel, met every day during third period and was open to all students. DECA's main purpose was to improve students' knowledge of life skills and teach them lessons in marketing and business. The information taught in the classroom could be applied to the working world. Students learned the essentials of living on their own and managing a happy and successful life. They also learned how to invest in stocks, balance checkbooks, create savings plans, and deal with banks to earn loans. After gaining knowledge, Mr. Borel's class took part in competitions against other schools. The final and most important competition was the state competition in March. The students of DECA competed well and learned more about necessary skills. The students were definitely prepared for the future that awaits them. –C. Marinier

Many of York's clubs focus on one area of knowledge. The Computer Club, Literary Club, Marketing Ed Club, and Auto Club are perfect examples. Each of these clubs met one day a week to learn a little more about an area in which its members were interested and to expand their knowledge.

Literary Club, better known as "book club" to the members, met every Thursday after school. The club members read and discussed different types of literature. They focused on different genres and levels of reading. This year the club read poetry, fiction, and a biography of their own choosing. Literary Club was not only a club which discussed books but a social club as well. They participated in activities throughout the year. This year's activities included bowling, seeing the Blue Man Group, and camping.

Auto Club met Thursdays after school to do what interested them: work on cars. Auto club was a relaxed club, which met to perform mechanical and body work on cars. One of this year's highlights came with Memorial Day. Club members made a float and built a hot rod for the parade.

Computer Club members, including advisors Mr. Sample and Mr. Golebiowski, met Thursdays after school to learn everything they could about computers and technology. Computer Club taught teachers and other students about computers and the internet. In one projects members took pictures of both the old and new schools and posted the pictures on the web. The Computer Club also started a program to recycle old printer cartridges.

The Marketing Ed club, a work-program class, met third period every day. Marketing Ed focused on jobs that dealt with marketing. Students involved in Marketing Ed left school early every day to a job. During class time, in they studied marketing and discussed what they learned from their jobs.

Clubs were an important part of many students' lives here at York. They gave students a place to focus on their interests. Students involved in clubs took their knowledge of what they loved one step further. –E. Stelling

Ready for Tomorrow

Not every student has learned how to prepare a gourmet meal, change a baby's diaper, or design their own clothing. FCCLA and HERO both prepare students for their future and the many changes that will come their way after high school. These courses have been very beneficial for the many students who have chosen them.

Dating and marriage, child development, interior design, cooking, food and restaurant management, hotel and business management, and sewing are only a few choices of the Family Career and Community Leaders of America.

These classes also participate in competitions throughout the year. Many students have gotten the chance to display their skills by competing locally and nationally. –T. Hill

The name "Students Against Drunk Driving" explains what the club is all about. The group met once every other week and discussed ways to make their views public. They posted various signs, posters, banners, and displays that made students think twice about drinking and driving. "The S.A.D.D organization is a great club with a great cause behind it," said club president Amanda Dalal.

The York Key Club completed a very successful first year. Key club met every other Friday morning during the school year in order to discuss ideas for service projects. The idea behind York Key Club was to provide students an opportunity to actively participate in community service projects through the school.

"It is very difficult to find things on your own to do for community service," commented senior member Jenna White. "Key Club has given me a way to participate in community service by providing me the opportunity to do so."

Students also used the hours of service they accumulated from various key club activities and put them towards service learning credit hours. Senior JoAnna Doherty commented, "Key Club was a fun way to do something good for the community and for yourself." –S. Cappelletti

Academics

Electing Electives

For many students, school was sometimes stressful and boring. Participating in elective classes helped balance the stress and added some excitement into each day. York offered a variety of electives that not only met graduation requirements, but also sparked other interests. The choices ranged from playing musical instruments to creating pieces of art and designing graphics.

Many students had no idea what they wanted to do with the rest of their lives. Taking elective classes helped lead students to more career opportunities that they might have never thought possible. Elective classes prepared students for the future as much as academic classes do.

Elective classes allowed students to use their creativity in an unlimited way. They not only open the minds of students to new and better ideas, but they also take learning and fun to whole new level. –M. Choyke

In order for students to do well in the classroom, they need a good learning environment. They also need social interaction with other students to be able to succeed in the real world. First Class at York High School had a unique approach to improving the school environment for students and faculty. Every other Wednesday, during second period, classes were shortened and fifteen minutes were devoted to First Class activities. During these fifteen minutes, students completed tasks promoting teamwork. These tasks included creating a Homecoming poster and writing suggestions that could be used to improve student life.

Because of this young program, students contributed to an environment of pride, dignity, respect, and positive attitude. The general environment was improved, as a whole. First Class member Amanda Dalal said, "First Class' impact was visible as you walked through the halls." Though some students may have neglected these activities, many students were impacted in a positive way. –B. Lewis

Left: The business computer lab offers fast, internet-ready computers for students during certain class periods throughout the day. Seniors Mary Pyne and Daniel Martin use the lab to complete their assignments for their Computer Technology and Applications class.

English papers, math programs, research papers, video projects, and essay tests are all part of the high school experience. Fortunately, students at York had access to many labs and centers which offered help to students to complete such tasks.

The math lab was the place to go for all mathematical needs. The lab offered on-duty math teachers to answer questions and provide extra help. Also available in the math lab were computers with all essential math programs students needed.

The English center was another resource available. The center had English teachers dedicated to helping students with grammar questions and proofreading papers and essays.

The creativity center was available for all students to apply video technology to their projects and presentations. Using state-of-the-art video equipment, students could edit videos, create still picture videos, and add background music and text onto their video projects.

Students who needed to use computers for any assignment could take a walk over to the computer lab or the business lab. The library was always available for research and quiet study. A wide selection of places to study at York helped students to achieve academic excellence. –S. Cappelletti ve: Juniors Bradley Heinz, Fiore DeSimone, and Kevin Lawrence use the math lab ity to help each other. Help from math teachers is also available every period in the lab.

Above: Junior Mary Bennett, like many other students at York High School, takes some time to complete her schoolwork in the York Library. Here, she can take advantage of all the York library has to offer, such as the internet, newspapers, books, magazines, and more.

Save Tonight

No one thought it was possible, but it happened; the senior class bonded the night of Senior Soiree. The event that celebrated the end of first semester and the last set of their high school finals, brought the attendees together like never before. "I really did not think it was possible to meet anyone but I really did," senior Mary Fehrman said sharing her surprise enjoying the night and meeting new people at the event.

This year lacked the Mr. Duke contest that has occurred every other year at the Senior Soiree. Instead of naming a Mr. Duke based on the paegent, Sean Tovey named himself honorary Mr. Duke after his groovy dance moves "got the party started," as senior Jeanette Sorce explained.

Senior George Zurales, who was also the D.J. at the soiree, had kind words about the event, "I have been the D.J. for the last three Senior Soirees and this one was definitely the best. Everyone had so much energy that people from the other party room were coming in to the dance to see what was going on."

The soiree celebrated the end of many things for the senior class but suprisingly it also celebrated the beginning of new friendships. —A. Iozzo

Freshman Year

The first year in a new school is difficult for everyone, especially if that school has a numbering system as confusing as York's. However, once new students figure out how to get around, they begin a four year experience incomparable to anything else they will encounter. Everything is new, stress is inevitable, and, as if the problems of Academia are not enough, that tiny burden of making new friends presents yet another task. For most freshmen, the rest of high school seems to be based solely on this one year. No one wants to come down with a case of the "Freshman Syndrome," carrying the largest backpack in the Chicago land area, stuffing it with every book imaginable, and trying to juggle numerous binders under each arm, yet for many this becomes unavoidable. Of course, this need to do well in school is understandable; if students do poorly freshman year, it is difficult for them to get out of that rut. Towards the end of the year freshmen tend to feel more confident in their knowledge of high school. Little do they know what is to come...–K. Atkinson

The Sophomore Experience

This is the year:

Driver's Ed., Behind the Wheel, and eventually the driver's license. After the initial excitement passes, the usual panic sets in: "What if I don't pas my permit test? Then I won't get a permit, so I won't get into Behind the Wheel! No blue slip! NO LICENSE!!!" But not to fear, you pass, and once you have your license you realize it's not all it's cracked up to be. Luckily, there are plenty of other exciting aspects to the sophomore experience. For one, you are no longer the lowest level on the high school food chain; however, you are not yet a member of the praised upperclassmen. This year is more or less a transition period. The hallways are not as frightening anymore, but a part of the freshman mentality still remains in the minds of many sophomores. Yet, when the last day of school rolls around, they are more than ready to proclaim themselves as full-fledged juniors. – K. Atkinson

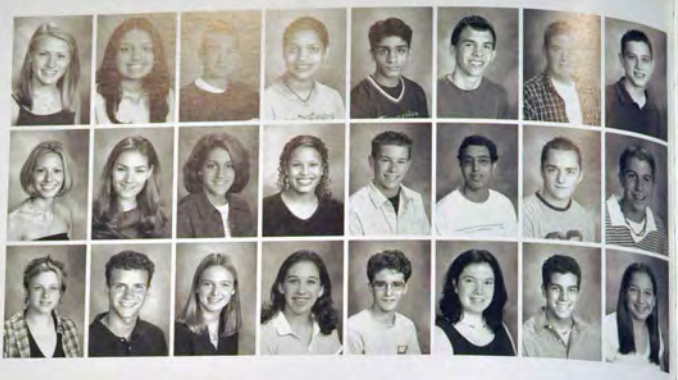

Juniors

For most students, everything begins falling into place during their third year of high school. Known for being the most academically challenging year of high school, junior year is filled with projects and tests designed to prepare students for the years to come. It marks the halfway point of high school careers and the first year of being an upperclassman. For most people, it is the first full school year with a driver's license and a job. All these elements add up to spell out one word: RESPONSIBILITY. Junior year introduces many students to the College and Career Center. They begin searching for their ideal future, and often start the college application process. As the year comes to an end, the juniors look forward to their upcoming senior year. They anticipate a less stressful time than they had this year. However they may be in for a surprise. –K. Atkinson

In loving memory of
Mr. Gerald Lombardo, Mr. Tom Allen, & Mr. Donald Potter, who devoted their lives to teaching and inspired many along the way. They will not be forgotten. They will always live on in our hearts.

"Some people walk into our lives and quickly go. Others stay for a while and leave footprints on our hearts, and we are never, ever the same."
–Flavia Weedin

United We Dance

Above: Juniors Elizabeth Stelling, Kara Henry, Kristen Wojnicki, Rachel Tacito, Laura Marek, Jamie Gusloff and Danielle Japczyk keep on dancing as long as the music is still playing.

Right: It is possible that sophomores Stacey Schaack and Nicole Bosworth had more fun getting ready for this dance than actually dancing at it. One of the most fun aspects of the winter dance is putting together creative outfits that go with the theme of the dance.

Below: Seniors Kate Rose Letizia and Kevin Napadow can't get enough of each other while they dance the night away.

Red, white and blue stars and stripes were the colors and patterns that filled the York gym on Saturday, December 8th. The theme for this year's winter dance was "Fourth of July in December". The theme was chosen due to the new patriotism which filled the nation after the events of September 11th. Students supported this theme with pride by dressing up head to toe in full patriotic spirit. Glitter sparkled all around as everyone celebrated America and danced the night away.

Friends had fun preparing for the dance by creating matching outfits to fit the theme. Many stores and popular brands turned patriotic as well, providing students with a variety of options.

The gym was decorated with American flags and red, white, and blue streamers. Even Santa showed up to this festive 4th of July party. Mirrors supported the pictures with Santa fund raiser in order to raise money for the literary magazine. Teachers gave the students a laugh by dressing up for the role. Sophomore Jordan Hawerbier said, "I enjoyed dancing with Santa after I took a picture with him!" – C. Douglas and E. Stelling

Above: Juniors Kimberly Long, Jacqueline Guca, Montini student Eric Mertel, Meredith Engstrom and Brittney Bartler take a picture with Santa even though they are dressed for the Fourth of July.

Built Upon a Shadow

Thousands have walked through York's doorways and hallways which have seen the transition of students from childhood into their adult lives. As times changed, so did York. Additions were added, new technology moved in, and the school continued to age. Since it's opening in 1918, York had its share of triumphs. Another great triumph soon knocked on the doors of York when a referendum was passed to build a new high school.

Funded in part by the state, the new school would cost over 70 million dollars. The new halls would stretch the length of two football fields, in the academic wing, encompassing all classes within the 3 floors. A new cafeteria and student commons center, new athletic facilities including a field house, as well as new areas for the music department would be added. Yet, this transformation did not happen overnight.

Throughout the year, students were forced to tune-out the buzz of bulldozers and hammering of jackhammers occurring on the other side of classroom walls. Students returned from winter vacation and found a gaping hole in the exterior where the music department, Yorkshire Hall, and the courtyard had once stood. While many of the current students would not reap the benefits of the new building, they endured the inconveniences and embraced the thought of spending their final years at the school they grew to know so well. —C. Erhart

Below: The scaffolding which supports the new building indicates the strength which is being carried over by the old building.

Bottom: The glass wall covering one side of the new building reflects the image of the old building. This powerful image represents the connection that will always exist between the two.

Left: The west entrance of the old building provides a pathway to the new entrance, which faces east.

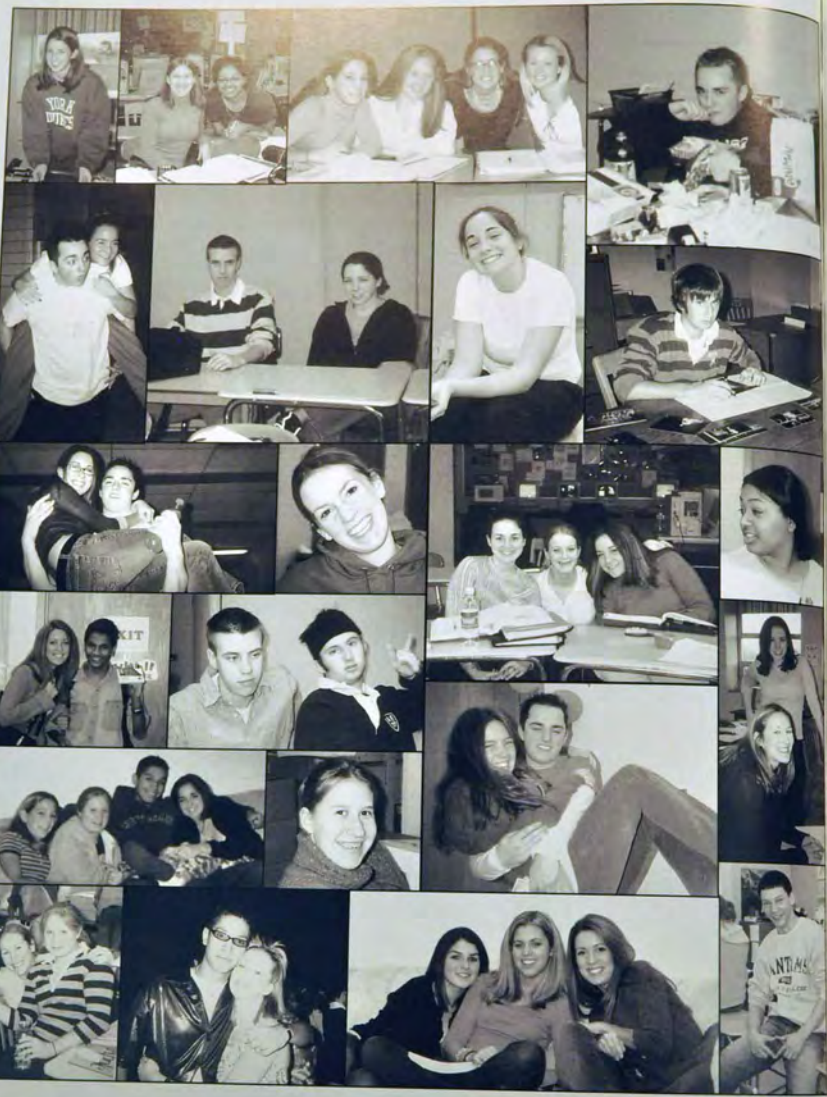

Below: Engraved stones adorn the new entrance so that the pride upon which the school is can be passed down to everyone who walks through the doorway.

On September 11, 2001, the nation experienced a great tragedy. Thousands died as we witnessed the worst terrorist attack in American history. Yet, the nation did not respond with anger. Instead, an overwhelming sense of pride united the country. Those who died or gave their lives in the effort to save others will never be forgotten. The pride lives on, and the unity is everlasting.

Diary: Y's Tales

You think you know, but you have no idea...

Yearbook staff is more than a group of elves sitting in room 300 working tirelessly in order to produce the long awaited yearbook. In actuality, the production of the yearbook is much more complicated than one would think. Starting from scratch, each staffer, the editors, and the advisor, Ms. Parrini, contribute photos, ideas and written commentary. In walking past the yearbook room, an average person might witness the duct tape wars, hear the loud music, see the dance contests and twister tournaments, notice the unbelievably rowdy behavior or the unrealistic number of people sharing the same couch. Yet this seemingly odd behavior is an everyday occurrence in the yearbook room. Strange as it may seem, it works. The staff manages to complete its work efficiently and on time, but they never forget to have a little fun.

Things Most Often Heard in the Y's Tales Room

arrie "Sick!"
hrissy " I hate computers!!!!"
atie "Jessica I don't eat squirrels!"
ino "Someone stole our cushion!"
ls. Parrini "Maybe I'm paranoid!
erlyn "I just want my monkey back!"
iffany "It's Valentines Day- Suck it up!"
hristina "Can I help you guys with that?"
ary "Guys, I don't know how to do this!"
avid "I could just go like this all day long!"
lison "I swear I did not steal the monkey!"
nnie "Share the couch with me Tino, please?"
ourtney "They can see us through the glass?"
ike "I listen to Celine Dion when I work out."
ndsey "I really just want to go and yell at them."
evon "I'm eating! What's more important than that!"
nna "I'm going to kill Kevin! He hasn't done anything!"
nanda "Guys, stealing the dancing cactus was not funny."
isten "I faxed them 5 times, they just never called me back!"
n "Meredith, I refuse to play your chinese food mind games!"
gie "Ughh! I love him, I just want to marry him, even more than Tino!"
sica "Carrie you have to come with me because Katie is extra stupid today!"
die "I want to be a full time staffer, but I'm only about here right now (hand at his shoulder)."
sy "Court- you didn't wear that on Monday- I KNOW WHAT YOU WORE ON MONDAY!"
redith "Ben leave me alone I'm not going to the cafeteria and I can't get you a pop in the bathroom!"

Within these walls... opportunities knocked, students followed new paths, ideas became realities, and an entire year passed in the blink of an eye.

Within these walls... tests of character challenged every student, true identities shined through, individuals stood out, and everyone gained yet another year of experience.

Within these walls... people changed, lives changed, but York remained.

All unaccredited photos from the 2001-200 school year taken by Visual Imag Photography, Cedarberg, WI. Photos from th 2000-2001 school year taken by Halterma Photography, Ottawa, IL.

Editors' note: We regret that due t circumstances beyond our control, the 200 boys volleyball team does not appear in th yearbook this year.

Acknowledgments

We'd like to thank those who have contributed to the production of this yearbook. First and foremost, thank you to our advisor Ms. Parrini, without whom this yearbook would be nonexistent. Also thanks to Maureen Olofsson, our representative from Herff Jones, for her efforts towards this book. We'd like to thank Visual Image Photography for a majority of the photographs. We'd also like to thank Chris Wolff, our honorary staffer, who supplied us with great pictures including the photo seen on the cover. But, perhaps the most heartfelt thanks goes to our staff. Although they made us very nervous at times, they always came through and produced their best work.

Thank you...

Kristen- for organizing the photos for us and for dealing with those communication gaps
Alison- for always bringing your bright smile and good work ethic with you
Ben- for your inclusion of "Bob Saget" in each of your spreads
Angie- for being our "yearbook mom" and bringing us cookies whenever we needed a little treat
Meredith- for keeping Tino entertained and out of our way
Jenna- for your tireless efforts to finish those mugs and for knowing the alphabet
Tino- for playing your music and leaving the room a mess (like we didn't have enough to do already!)
Eddie- for never letting go of your dreams of becoming a "full staffer"
David- for being our lunch buddy and for using big words on your spreads that we didn't understand
Tiffany- for your enthusiasm towards finishing your spreads, especially the cheerleading one
Mike- for your random and totally unexpected comments
Courtney & Betsy- for always volunteering to do that extra work for us no matter what it was and for providing Tino with a fantasy that will never come true
Kevon- for keeping the entire staff laughing with your dances, etc. and for actually doing work when we told you that you'd fail if you didn't Merlyn- for taking care of all our computer issues and more
Christina- for always doing what we asked whenever we needed you to Amanda- for bringing the dancing cactus and the monkey to class
Annie- for finishing all the rushes we gave you
Carrie- for putting up with all our demands
Jessica- for being so energetic and cute all the time
Katie- for being so quiet and innocent

Thanks to all who contributed to the making of the 2001-2002 edition of Y's Tales in any way. We apologize if we failed to acknowledge anyone in print, but please know that your contributions did not go unappreciated.

Many Thanks Editors-in-Chief,

Mary, Lindsey, and Chrissy
