Obviously

As the students walked into the new building, it was clear to them that things had changed. And although it took awhile to adjust, it was still undoubtedly theirs. The memories that they had of the years past were not visible anymore, yet the feelings they shared were still in their hearts. The new building was plain, but it soon gained a distinctive character. Even though it was different from the past, it brought a new sense of York pride and everything they stood for.

The students adjusted while the faculty did too. Fire alarms went off just about every week and the sound soon became familiar. Teachers became friends and new relationships were formed while, obviously, everyone was in the same boat of adjusting together.

Green lockers lined the halls while green and white tiles paved the way to classrooms. The green windows gave light to the bright, new building, and gave everyone a new sense of what York was.

Even though it was a longer walk to the cafeteria, offices, and library, it was evidently worth it. The new and the old came together as one, and it was noticeable that the new pride still had pieces of the old and that York is Clearly

Green!

Green and white. School spirit showed through in many ways. Obviously, the students may have had different interests and participated in different activities, yet they always came together as one to show off what the students at York were made of. During homecoming week, the most spirit was shown. Through spirit days and homecoming excitement, students came to school showing their sense of York pride. Even throughout the year when there were not green and white days, the hallways were filled with it. No matter where one looked, the faces of York students visibly expressed their enthusiasm. Clearly, the spirit that came through and the pride the students had in York was seen and felt in a variety of ways.

Tonight

Prom is to high school as flowers are to a garden. Al Bundy said it himself, "You can't have one without the other." Tradition is a major part of the activities and the events in high school and, prom could be argued to be one of the biggest traditions of high school.

Nearly 600 people attended the Prom, so in the planning stage the pressure was on to make the evening special. Student Council picked the venue, The Westin River North in Chicago; the theme,

Here's To The Night; the colors, purple and silver; the gifts, write-on picture frames; the meal, chicken or pasta; and they booked the d.j., reserved the buses and set up the hotel contracts. In addition, Student Council chose the crowns and organized the king and queen voting.

While Student Council had much planning to do for the evening, so did all of the students who attended.

Girls chose a formal dress just right for their style, planned their hair, makeup, nails and of course ordered the all important boutonniere. Wow, Boys coordinated their outfits, which usually involved a tuxedo, or nice suit, shoes and a bow tie or tie. And of course, ordered the corsage. Hands-down, the votes came in, these students looked spiffy.

Many times, as part of the prom tradition, students liked to turn the one special night into a fun-filled weekend spent with their friends. This year was no exception. Some people's plans included a weekend spent at lake houses, the Dunes, or a fun day downtown.

Last year's Junior Class president, Elizabeth Marcucci, said "Prom signifies the end of the year with everyone leaving and summer starting. It is more formal than Homecoming or Turnabout, but more than anything it is a high school tradition." - J. Breil

Looking Back

Looking back on the memories of the times shared at York, the seniors of 2002 remembered the good times and the bad times. The happy moments and the sad. As they walked across the stage at graduation, it hit them that the four years they had here at York would be irreplaceable, and how fast it flew by. As they were handed their diplomas, they looked out at the faces of all of their friends and peers and realized this might be one of the last times they would all be together and therefore needed to cherish the last days they had.

Looking forward to all of the new experiences they would encounter, it was still hard to let go. Every senior had their own unique plans and they were about to walk towards them alone. Graduation brought happiness, sadness, and the scary thought of moving into a new part of their lives.

Looking back, the seniors knew that these memories would always be with them. No matter where they go, their friends would hold a special place in their hearts and York would always be a place full of memories to look back upon. - E. Stelling

and Dancing

Lights were down low, strobe lights circled, tiny bubbles filled the air, and an array of Hawaiian colors, volcanoes, and life-size Palm trees surrounded the gym.

"The music is so loud I can barely be in the gym," said Mrs. Rine, one of the chaperones who attended last year's 2002 Spring Fling. "Although, I love seeing the kids dressed up and having fun—it's worth it."

However, without the insanely loud music and crazy costumes, Spring Fling would not have been the blast it was. Grass hula skirts, multi-colored Hawaiian leis, and flower patterned shirts were just some of the get-ups people wore. There was even the occasional coconut bra.

Like many of the dances, hours of planning went into making the dance a success. Planning began two months in advance. "Hiring a DJ, choosing color schemes for decorations, giving members of Student Council specific jobs before and during dance set-up and deciding on themes," explained Amira ElShareif, Freshman Class President, "are just some of the measures needed to be taken."

"I had so much fun and the decorations made it feel like I was in Hawaii," said freshman Megan Trant. From volcanoes to palm trees, the Hawaiian theme made it feel as if York High School was in the middle of Honolulu. - S. Ekblad & J. Levee

Green With Spirit

Homecoming Week 2002

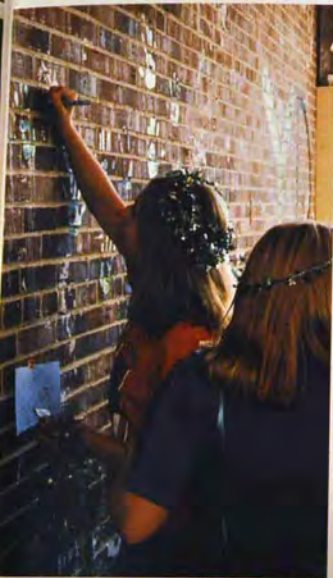

Green and white filled the hallways during Homecoming Week.

Students showed their spirit by participating in the many different festivities like the pie eating contest; Red, White and Blue day; and Dress Like Your Favorite Star Day.

On account of the new building and the mass chaos such as the fire alarms and the constant need for cleanliness at the school this year, "there were not as many activities as the student council would like," says Homecoming Week coordinator, junior Magen Ryan.

Despite the set backs, there was a noticeably large increase in the number of kids who participated in Spirit Days throughout the week. Students showed their Duke Pride the most on the day of the homecoming game, decking out in green and white face paint and wigs. Seniors Hillary Palumbo, Kathryn Fiedler, and Emily Jones went all out and were rewarded with the coveted Queen of The Couch title. The three girls were given front row seats for the big game, and pizza from a local pizzeria.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK

Wearing her flowing dress with dozens of bobby pins in her hair she walked arm in arm with her date dressed in his best—then they shook the hands of the greeters. The gym walls were adorned with red and black streamers; and some tables on the outskirts of the gym were already piled high with shoes.

They were dancing hand in hand having the time of their lives when all of a sudden that familiar sound of the fire alarm began to wail. The gym filled with 1,500 emptied as students was filed out into the parking lot.

Many students were baffled about what the caused the alarm go off. Dr. Yonke explained the possible reason, "We don't know for sure [what set the fire alarm off] but we think that it might have been the fog machine." Dr. Yonke explained that the fog might have taken a while to air out and the dust already in the gym could have interfered and set off the alarm.

Despite the alarm, she sparkled throughout the evening and he had the time of his life. They agreed that Homecoming 2002 was a memorable way to welcome the new York. - C. Kostecki & A. Gales

I'd love to take your breath away

Watching every motion
In my foolish lover's game
On this endless ocean
Finally lovers know no shame
Turning and returning
To some secret place inside
Watching in slow motion
As you turn around and say...
Berlin (Top Gun)

It was the one time every year that she had the chance to expose her heart to the world. It had taken some time, but finally she mustered up the courage to approach that young, handsome man. She took a chance, exposed her deepest and most sacred emotions. She took a deep breath, and those simple words left her mouth. She asked him to Turnabout. She waited anxiously, a little uncertain. But finally, she heard those few but much hoped for words from him, "I'd love to."

As if in a dream, her Maverick came to her door on the appointed night and whisked her away to what seemed to be another world. Her feet were light and she could feel nothing but content as he took her through spins which freed her of her worries for just that one night. The turnabout dance had transformed into a night soaring through the stars. - S. Rivera and K. Theilbar

Fun in the Sun

For many students when summertime came to mind they thought of the word fun. Junior Nina Dietzen said, "summer is fun because there's no homework or projects to worry about so there is more time to have fun." Students loved summer much because they didn't have to think about school for three months and could do what they wanted to do.

Summer was a time for hanging out at the pools, spending time with friends, going to TCBY and hanging out by the fountain and going on long summer vacations. Students were free to do what they enjoyed and got to cherish their time to indulge in their pleasures.

Although summer was all play and no work for some, for others it was more work than play. Some students spent the summer working jobs to earn some extra cash, some went to sports camps in the blistering hot sun and others attended summer school. Whatever they did though, students enjoyed the freedom of not having to go to school for eight hours a day. - C. Lucca

HELP WANTED: York at Work

The job. One thing that people spend many years preparing for, agonizing through years of college or training for, and the greater part of their lives doing. But what was a job to a teenager at York? Money. An abundance of jobs exist in Elmhurst and the surrounding suburbs; some were even near York. Popular places to work included Panera bread, Jewel, York Theater, the mall, and side-jobs like mowing lawns.

While Elmhurst was a good place start to working, some students wanted to get jobs at the mall for various reasons. And many students liked their jobs. In an informal poll, nearly half the students interviewed said that their jobs were fulfilling. One student who agreed, senior Eric Paulini, said, "work's not that bad; I've met a lot of interesting people at my job."

Actually enjoying work? It was possible. However, there were times that students did not like their jobs, such as when Junior Robert Masterton "finds weird religious pamphlets" in the books he sheled over at Elmhurst's Public Library.

After all was said and done, most people did not mind if their job was slightly boring, as long as it paid. Here at York, most of the working students bowed to the almighty dollar, and as long as there are students who spend money, there will be students who work. - J. Pagnusat

Who Needs Props?

The cast of the fall play, "Our Town," did a wonderful job of conveying a deep and powerful message of gratitude. During the six weeks of rehearsals, the cast worked late into the night perfecting their lines and movements.

Those who went to the play may have noticed that there wasn't much scenery; for those who didn't know, that was deliberate. The actors used a type of movement or acting called pantomiming: acting with gestures instead of words as a means of expression.

"Our Town" is an American classic written by Thornton Wilder. The play sums up a lot about life, love, and death. The story is narrated by a stage manager (junior Andrew Scoville), and centers around George Gibbs (junior Jeremy Cohn) and Emily Webb (senior Sara Gorsky). George and Emily help each other with homework, walk to school together, fall in love over sodas, and eventually get married. At the start of the third act, nine years has gone by and Emily has passed away. After her death, she is able to see one day from her life and ignoring the warnings from other spirits in the graveyard, chooses her twelfth birthday. Emily stops short of the entire day finding it too painful. She realizes that the living do not stop to appreciate truly what a gift life is and exclaims, "Oh earth, you're too wonderful for anybody to realize . . . Do any human beings ever realize life while they live it?"

The actors certainly left a lasting impression on both the audience and the director and producer, Ms. Webb, who said, "there is a lot of talent at York, our hard work and effort paid off to be a great success!" - C. Kostecki

"The lack of props enhanced the performance of the cast members. The audience was not distracted by what the actor was holding; they were rather focusing on each character's personality." - Junior Anthony Lopez

"The simplicity of the scenery helped to create a tone for the play and we were able to act off each other and grow together as actors." - Junior Matthew Kovich

"The ironic thing is we thought the play was boring in the beginning but didn't realize how interesting it was until the end, and one of the main themes in the play was that you don't realize life until you're done living it." - Senior Andrew Taflan

Little Italy Makes a Big Impression

Imagine conveying feelings about love, hate, and crime, and then imagine doing it in Shakespearean dialogue. It may sound impossible, but that was what the actors in "The Taming of the Shrew" accomplished.

In just six weeks, the cast members memorized lines, constructed sets and developed their individual characters. The play had Shakespearean characters similar to the original production, but the directors added a twist to their rendition and set it in 1940s Little Italy. "It was hard to convey the ideas and the emotions of the characters using the language. That made [the acting] difficult," explained sophomore Andrew Scoville who played Lucentio in the play.

Besides the difficulty of portraying the characters, there were other challenges involved in the production. Because the play was performed at Sandburg, and the entire cast had to be moved there, it took up a lot of time and created one more obstacle for the cast. Another roadblock was scheduling. Ms. Zynda, English teacher and director of the play said, "students here are involved in so many different clubs. We had to move practices daily."

Despite these difficulties, the play went on to be a success. "The actors were very funny in their Shakespearean parts, and they carried the show," said freshman Kendall Steffens. Steffens was one of hundreds of students who saw the play and thought it was a success.

The good reviews of the play were a relief to the directors, who had built the sets only the weekend before the play. They thought they might not be prepared, but everything turned out well in the end. "One of the actresses' dresses ripped during the play, and Mrs. Steffens, our costume designer, had to repair it in about a minute," said freshman Margret Sotos, who played Grumio in the play. After closing night the cast was happy with their overall performance. - K. Vilim

The Wonderful World of Snowball

With the transition into high school came a new found freedom as students entered an exciting new world. Parents became more lenient and allowed their high schoolers to go out more often and stay out later. Teachers expected more; driver's licenses brought more freedom. The list is endless. With the freedom that came along with driver licenses' and more trust from parents, temptations became more abundant. Having a license made it possible to go anywhere and do anything. The likelihood of getting into trouble became greater.

Snowball helped students to make the right decisions if they were to encounter these situations. Through many small group discussions, students listened to each other and shared their thoughts. "Basically we hear other people's ideas and stories on issues like alcohol. It's easier to say 'no' when you know your peers are with you," declared Junior Kyle Williams who attended the weekend the past two years.

The Snowball weekend was jam-packed with a lot of fun activities, too. Team building, campfires, dances, and speakers were just a few. The dance consisted of music, dancing, and karaoke. Sophomore Kaellagh Cassidy said, "I didn't want to go home! It went by way too fast."

Mr. Anderson from M.A.D.D. spoke during the weekend, and he talked about the loss of his daughter due to a drunk driver. The story upset the students but also helped them realize how much drinking affects those around them. Mrs. Rogers, the main organizer of the weekend, said "more information is better than no information." All in all, the weekend was very successful in sending its positive message. - M. Borchert

LIFE AFTER SCHOOL?

There were many opportunities for after-school activities at York that were not team oriented sports. One of these opportunities was with YoungLife. YoungLife provided students with a friendly way to worship, sing and have a great time. YoungLife was a non-denominational christian student group that was based on providing fun and worship for students. The most important thing about YoungLife was fun. As a regular participant Nathan Eschelman said: "YoungLife was a lot of fun, we always had fun things to do." Leaders and former participants Travis Eliason and David Barker provided music, laughs and a little bit of prayer.

Another way students spent their time after school was by joining intramurals. Students from all high school grade levels were encouraged to participate in the program which emphasized having fun and developing a knowledge of several different sports. Mr. Ross, who organized the program for the past few years, commented, "it gives kids a chance to be involved with the school in a way that does not involve academics."

Though winning was not always a priority, intramural sports let students compete in a controlled, supervised environment. STEPPING through TIME

It was the night of December 7th, 2002, and when the students walked into the York gym it was not what they expected to see. It was a blast from the past. Students were dressed in outfits from previous decades and costumes ranged from togas to 80s attire. Many students were creative with their outfits and made their own costumes. Senior Rebecca Search was dressed in an 80s costume of a black dress with puffy sleeves and knee socks. She stated that "I loved the experience of the 80s again!" Others put together costumes by wearing old clothes from their parents and some went shopping and found things in stores.

Along with dancing to the music, there were other things to do while at the winter dance. Mirrors provided pictures with Santa to raise money, and Outlook sold cookies as a fund-raiser. Both Outlook and Mirrors were sponsored by Ms. Jackson who made sure that their fund-raisers ran smoothly, which they did.

The music at the dance was not like the usual music that was played. The DJ. played favorites from previous decades along with some popular hits. With all the smiling faces, it was obvious the dance was a success. Anyone who saw the students saw that it was a step back into time. - E. Stelling

Green and white. How easily they could be seen at a game, match or meet. They filled the court or field and poured through the stands. The passion for the game and the spirit for the team undoubtedly could be seen by all. With so many sports each student could find a place for themselves on the team. Obviously, there was a motivation to win but it was not the only drive. Through one season friendships were made and lessons on teamwork, dedication and leadership learned. As a "Go Dukes" was yelled and cheering erupted, clearly there was a love for York sports.

After the departure of one much loved coach and six top senior players, the 2002 girl's badminton team proved that they could take on new challenges.

The new coach, Coach Fite did things a little differently compared to last season. "Coach Fite is definitely very big on conditioning and footwork drills," said junior Kristin Zomparelli. The girls had to run every day and work on their footwork before they started their drills for the day. She also added, "in doing all of this conditioning work we have much more stamina going into the games and we are playing longer and not getting as tired as quickly." The girls put in a lot of hard work and dedication this season which made them a better and a stronger team overall.

With the loss of six top senior players, this year's team had to step up and take the top places the six seniors left behind. The girls had many things to say about this year's team. Junior Pia Bartolia said, "this year was definantly a rebuilding year, but it turned out to be a successful season." Zomparelli added, "next year we are going to have a stronger team." - M. Hanisch

The Dukes Step Up to the Plate

The varsity boys baseball team took to the field with renewed determination as they opened the 2002 season. With the combination of good young talent and an experienced coaching staff, the Dukes felt positive about their chances to succeed this season.

Led by senior team captains Robert Gruber, Brendan McCaffery, and James Stys, the Dukes set a goal to improve on the previous year's record. Stellar performances by all-conference seniors Kevin Napadow, James Stys, and all-state junior Andrew Shields not only made the achievement of this goal seem possible, but they made it a reality.

Despite the fact that the team lacked a winning record, they played each game with a feeling that they could come out on top. They won two out of three games against Oak Park and came very close to beating Glenbard West in the regional tournament, proving that they could compete well against good teams.

After the 2002 season ended, veteran head coach Micheal Lee started gearing up early for next season. According to Coach Lee, the team's success "basically comes down to good pitching and clutch hitting." When the Dukes put these elements of baseball into action, victory is usually the result. - C. STRETCHING THE LIMITS

The 2002 boys gymnastics team achieved their season goal: to place third in conference and score a 120 in the conference meet.

"This year we improved by leaps and bounds. We went from last in conference to third, and increased the team score by nearly 50 points," said Nicholas Sgarioto, adding that the team had more drive and enthusiasm this year. Sgarioto also said, "next year the team will dominate at conference, if hard work is put in over the summer." Practice for the guys consisted of stretching and warming up. After warm ups the coach sent them to different apparatuses to work. If the team practice went well, the reward was no conditioning.

Gymnastics required mental toughness and the ability to deal with pressure. Sgarioto said, "your body can do any skill, the hard part is getting your mind to think so."

After one skill is accomplished, more challenging ones were put into routines. This year Sgarioto loved the feeling of putting new skills into a routine, and when he saw his score increase.

In all sports, injuries are a common concern. Thomas Schwarz says, "my biggest fear is falling on my head." Gymnastics involved getting up on things and doing tricks high up in the air. Hopefully none of the gymnasts were afraid of heights. - E. Hochleutner and V. Sotirova

Returning with nine seniors, the girl's soccer team had the advantage of leadership, knowledge of the game, and good role models. These seniors contributed to achieving one of the main goals of the team: to upset tough opponents they faced from the previous season.

According to Junior Stephanie Rivera, "reaching our goals required being unified as a team. The countless hours of practice, buckets of sweat, and that unforgettable team-bonding weekend helped do this by forcing us to cooperate with each other." This year, the soccer team attended Outdoor Wisconsin Leadership School (OWL) through Aurora University. "It's a way to create a less competitive atmosphere and allows the girls to get to know each other better before the season begins," said coach Lindsey Laforte. The players agreed. Junior Maggie Stevens explained, "you get to know a lot more people than you would have ever even imagined talking to."

Playin' Hardball

Tension filled the air as the 2002 Lady Dukes softball team stepped up to the plate in the final regional game against Elgin. The Lady Dukes had victory on their minds. After defeating Hoffman Estates 15 to 1, the Dukes set two goals for themselves: to win regionals and beat the 27-7 1988 season record. The team succeeded on both counts. York beat Elgin 12-5 and as regional champs they brought home a 28-7 record. Head coach Thomas Babyar and assistant coach David Williams coached their team into sectionals.

What made the York Dukes so successful? Hard work, talent, teamwork, and experience. The team included experienced players, both new and returning: four-year varsity players Laura Morgan, Maureen Troller, Therese Wazniak and Tara Zito, as well as Gina and Krystal Hugelier and Laura Bolvis, transfer students from Immaculate Heart of Mary and Glenbard North, respectively.

As pitcher, Morgan threw an outstanding 14-3 record and was honored with the All-Conference title. In the field, Maureen Troller played second base, Therese Wazniak played short stop, and Tara Zito took up position behind the plate. Like Morgan, both Zito and Troller earned All-Conference titles.

"We had strong talent in so many areas," said junior Carrie Marinier.

Sophomore Alison Braverman helped lead the defense at third base and Kristen Barker filled in for Laura Morgan as pitcher after Morgan's at-bat injury. Barker pitched 13 wins and 3 losses, just one game shy of Morgan's record. According to coach Williams, "Kristen kept them in ball games." Things got even better for the Lady Dukes this year when junior twin sisters Gina and Krystal Hugelier joined the team. The outfield was well protected with Gina in left field and Krystal in center field. Marinier lead the team with the highest batting average of .457. She was also named an All-Conference player.

Coach Williams said, "with the talent we have, if we fall short of our goals, it's the coaches' fault and not the players' [fault]." He added, "they were a good mix of kids." The group of girls on this team not only played well together, they defined teamwork. They practiced an average of 2-3 hours each day, focusing on hitting and both infield and outfield game situations. Marinier said, "We worked constantly on our hitting and it payed off. We won a lot of close games."

The Lady Dukes advanced to the sectional final after defeating Conant 4 to 3. The Lady Dukes played their final game against Elk Grove for the sectional championship. Elk Grove won 2-0. It was a well-fought game after a record-breaking season of 29 wins and 7 losses. The long practices, team work, talent and experience paid off as the Dukes proudly finished second in Conference. - C. Foot

A SMASHING SUCCESS...

For the boy's tennis team, effort and achievement did not end at 3:11pm with the final school bell; in fact, that is when the hardest part of their day really began. These young men's road to success took them all the way to Butterfield Park via Coach Bill Sir's chauffeur bus service.

Practice on average lasted for one and a half to two hours and consisted of drills such as 'king of the court'—a game where points were awarded for winning matches. After accumulating three such points, the player was crowned king of the court until he lost to another rising royal. In addition, practice matches, hitting drills, and routine stretches helped propel the Dukes to a successful season.

The top eight players, including senior captains Tres Heimann and Sabari Nair, were veterans and provided strength and depth on the team. New addition sophomore Bradley Richards also helped the boys in their quest for victory.

Coach Sir was impressed by the boys' determination, aggressiveness, but most of all their ability to use their heads and play together as a team; He referred to them as, "one of the smartest teams I've ever had."

The year's biggest surprise, though, was senior Jonathan Gregg. Gregg went from third in doubles last year to second in singles this year finishing with only one loss overall. This team worked hard, and worked together to bring home an impressive overall record. The team dominated and made its presence known in every match, even those to state-ranked teams such as Lyons Township and Oak Park-River Forest. Finally, the boys could relax on a well played, 12-8-1 season, credited to the strength, leadership and determination of remaining team members who would help boost the team into another wonderful season.

"This season was a success, we played well especially against some other ranked teams and the future is looking good for York tennis," said junior Brandon Peters. -A. Olalde

Competitive at Heart

Every day after school the boys of the track team headed downstairs to the indoor track for a short informational meeting before going into the locker room to get ready for yet another grueling practice. The boys started practice with thirty minutes of running and stretching. Practice ended with an "easy" two mile cool down.

As junior Gary Modrow said, "practices were great. We had to be self-disciplined and push ourselves because a few coaches can't watch everyone. We really had to be self-motivated if we wanted to get better, faster and stronger."

The team was "competitive and hard working" said Coach Reddel. Though the team consisted of only twelve seniors out of the 150 athletes, the team ended with an impressive season. Many had high expectations to exceed last year's good season. They faced their toughest teams, Hinsdale Central and Lyons Township, with team unity and support.

Junior Lance Jordan recalled, "I finished in the top three of the high jump because of the team's constant encouragement through their cheering and support".

Coach Reddel was "disappointed that the boys did not place in the top three" at the state meet. Although the boys came in 52nd at the state meet, the boys brought home 1st place in the sectional meet and 2nd in the conference. At the state meet, the team placed 5th place for the 3200-meter relay with juniors Daniel McAndrew, Thomas Rosinski, and Michael Corry and senior David Kikuchi making All State. Also juniors Nathan Wallick and Michael Corry qualified for the state finals in the discus and the 800 meters, respectively. Girls track is a sport of hard work, intense training and dedication. Last year's girls track team exhibited all of these traits.

With the loss of the previous season's seniors, the girls had to step it up.

Not a second of practice time was wasted. The girls had to stick to their grueling workout regimen to compete with the massive teams of Lyons Township, Oak Park and Hinsdale Central.

The average practice began with a 10 minute warmup and stretching. Then the girls began running with the intensity and speed that particular to the events in which they would participate in the upcoming meet. After their workout they began a cooldown and more stretching. These grueling workouts gave them the stamina and strength to prepare mentally and physically for the tough competition they faced.

The girls understood that track was not an easy sport and the team had to push themselves every day.

The girls came out to a quick start, landing a third place finish in indoor conference. This helped propel them into the outdoor season. With an overall solid performance the team placed fifth. It appears that all their hard work paid off. - L. Freeman

With a team made up primarily of juniors, some might have looked at the boys volleyball season as one of rebuilding. Yet, a record of 26-10 and a conference championship was definitely not the mark of a team that was rebuilding. They were simply improving. "The team got a lot better, we went from 18-15 last year to 26-10 this year," explained junior Charles McEvoy.

Even after playing some tough games and facing adversity, such as losing to top ranked Naperville Central, and playing without their starting setter for the first ten games of the year, the team remained motivated and built momentum. They finished with an undefeated conference record, and came one game away from going down to the state tournament. The team worked hard and they worked together.

Junior Ryan McClintoch "learned to work as a team to achieve a common goal of winning."

McEvoy added, "the thing I liked best was the team camaraderie." The team worked through adversity and played together to become champions. - T. Kirby Waterpolo is not a sport that should be taken lightly. Imagine playing a combination soccer, basketball, and hockey. Alone these sports are hard enough; but just imagine putting them together into one sport. Well, the men of the waterpolo team did just that, and they did it well.

Every day, after a long day of school, these devoted athletes swam, weightlifted, and scrimmaged. As if that was not grueling enough, three days a week players also practiced in the early mornings before school. When not at practice, or in school, they could be found in the pool-competing in a game. The team averaged four games a week and competed in tournaments on most weekends.

All of their hard work paid off this year. In their conference, the team finished undefeated and first. Overall they held a record of twenty-five wins and a mere three losses. They won all of their regular season tournaments as well as the conference tournament and then went on to sectionals. In the second game of the single-elimination tournament, the team lost.

However, this was not necessarily a bad thing. As junior Adam Olalde said, "our team had one of the greatest seasons that York boys waterpolo has ever seen."

The 2002 girls waterpolo team was the first in York girl's waterpolo history to achieve a winning record. Was it the mandatory hours upon hours spent practicing every day after school? Was it the 6:00 a.m. morning practices? Was it the team dinners? Or was it the winning spirit the girls had that led to such a successful season? The consensus on the team was that all of these factors came into play and contributed to the accomplished season.

With their conference record a solid five wins and one loss, the team definitely gave themselves some bragging rights. Their overall record was another impressive accomplishment: fifteen wins and thirteen losses.

The team's major achievements included winning the West Suburban Conference Championship and placing second in both the Naperville Central Tournament and the Latin Tournament. The hard work and dedication that put into the competitive season paid off for this hard working bunch of girls when they continued their season into the state playoffs. The 2002 girl's waterpolo team ranked sixteenth in the state after being defeated by Morton 12-2 in the first round of sectionals.

The winning record was not the only part of waterpolo that was different from previous years. The team faced with the task of adjusting to less experienced players and a new coach. However, what could have become setbacks affecting the spirit of an average team, had no effect upon this extraordinary group of athletes. - J. Bretl

THE STANDARD

On a cold day in November, the boys cross country team crossed the finish line to victory in yet another state championship. For yet another year, boys cross country showed the rest of the state that they were not a team to be messed with. The boys' team became the standard for cross country teams across the state, but the title was not easy to attain.

From the hot summer days of June and throughout the season, the team practiced up to twice a day, and ran between five and twenty miles per day. It was therefore possible that some of the boys ran up to 1000 miles, just during the summer. What made the season so successful was hard work from the boys and a great team effort.

"As a team we ran together every day, and the team bond is always there, and we were really close," said senior Adam Manta. By working together in practices, the boys of the cross country team became close friends and caring teammates. The close bond that formed between the boys was just one of the things that helped the boys win their state championship title. Manta also said, "Mr. Newton is the greatest coach in the country, by far, and I think Mr. Kern is great as an assistant coach." The dedication of both Mr. Kern and Mr. Newton proved to be a vital part of the team's success.

The boys obviously had an outstanding season, and it was reasonable to assume the team had confidence the whole season. "Maybe I doubted winning state a little after sectionals, but we were pretty confident the whole way," said sophomore Sean McNamara. According to McNamara, the team's only tough competition was Lyons Township, who defeated York three times. But in the long run the boys could not be beat, and they came out on top, winning their 22nd state championship. - K. Vilim

United They Run

U.ni.ty (yoo'ni te) 1. The quality or state of being made one.

The girls cross country team came together to face some difficult challenges over the course of the season. The biggest challenge they faced was having their #1 returning runner from 2001, Lauren Dick, out for the season with an injury.

"With all of the obstacles we were faced with this year, we knew we had to work harder than ever before," recalled junior Kristin Corbett.

The team started off with an uncommon reputation of being ranked 3rd by the Chicago Tribune. The team proved that they could overcome obstacles and skepticism when they won the conference, regionals, and sectionals and were runners up at state. The team beat the number one ranked team at State, Sandburg, and that alone was a great achievement.

Coach Larry Bassett explained, "the girls were more focused on what they wanted. The last three meets of the year the team ran awesome because of the team unity and team spirit. The main goal was to win State and we came very close."

The team was led throughout the season by seniors Kara Henry and Christine Kotarba who the team will miss next season.

"Since we will lose our top runners next season we will just have to step up. If we did it once we can do it again," said Junior Kristin Corbett.

"Some people succeed because they are destined to, but most succeed because they are determined to" -Anonymous. All season long the Dukes football team kept their eyes on their goal. These young men demonstrated focus, determination, and unrelenting passion in their pursuit for glory. During the summer, the boys fought challenges such as fatigue, heat, and injury thrown their way and became a football powerhouse; and when the season finally began, their hard work paid off. After booming into the season with an impressive 3-0 start, senior captain Bryan Belville simply concluded, "when we're on, we're on."

But that was only the beginning. Senior Nathan Wallick dominated the running game and finished with 18 touchdowns and over 1,300 rushing yards; "Coach wanted to give our offense a reputation of being a hard-nosed running team; shove it right down the defense's throat," said Wallick. But running was only one of the Dukes' strong points as senior captain quarterback Andrew Shields showed when he connected in the air with Belville for 66 catches, 950 yards, and nine touchdowns.

Offense alone cannot win a game, and that was where the defense came in. "[The defense] had somewhat of a slow start, but as the season went on we played with the best of them and became one of the best defenses in the league," said senior Harrison Noffs. Noffs led the defense with an astounding 50 tackles, nine sacks, 13 behind-the-line tackles, and a blocked extra point. Noffs' efforts did not go unnoticed as he earned a well-deserved spot on the All-State Team.

Other players also packed a punch on defense; senior Joshua Patterson sported 40 tackles, four interceptions, and one sack. Not only did Patterson provide a strong link on defense, he also boasted a remarkable year as the kicker. Patterson kicked four field goals, averaged 44 yards per punt, and an astounding 67 yards per kickoff. "You see it all the time, one big special-teams play can change the game around and switch the momentum," Patterson said, commenting on their great ability to "pin the other team deep at their end."

After nine weeks of sweat and blood, the Dukes secured themselves a bid in the playoffs with a solid 3-3 conference record. When all was said and done these men finally put their own feet up on the couch and watched football on TV with a pillow of six all-conference players, one all state-player, a 7-4 record, a romp through the playoffs, and most of all, endless memories of a season to be proud of. - A. Keeping It On the

The 2002 boy's Golf team's season consisted of practicing, tournaments, and just having an all around fun time. This year seven out of the nine varsity players were seniors. Senior Trent Martin remarked about the majority of seniors on the varsity team, "as a team we were the oldest ever and I truly believe that this year's team was the best team to ever go through York High School. We didn't finish the way we wanted to, but it was a great run."

Despite not accomplishing all their goals, the team still had a successful season. The golf team completed their second straight season with a record of ten and one. Some of the major accomplishments were winning regionals for the first time and finishing second in the best conference in the state of Illinois.

Their showing at the Sectional Meet, where they took ninth out of ten teams, prohibited them from advancing to the state finals this year. However, the season was still a success. Senior Ryne Kentala said, "it was a great season even though we didn't accomplish our goals, and I wish the other guys had a chance to experience state finals like I did last year."

Overall, the guys had a memorable season and as senior Wesley Zartman recalled, "the friendships that I acquired from being on the team are ones that I will always have." - S. Ekblad and K. Thielbar

The Green Gets Greener

"Every hole is a new hole," was junior Maura Honan's motto every time she stepped onto the green. The Lady Dukes practiced every day after school with putting contests and driving on the range. Their practices consisted of hitting yardage signs and putting for candy. All that practice obviously paid off; they scored third in their conference and an 11-3 overall record.

Freshman Mandy Vavrinchik said, "I never expected to win first place in my first meet ever!" Such young talent added to the team's success.

Junior Emily Belden said, "Everyone is fun, we are like a family. The team unity brings us so close together." Family or not, a difficult challenge for the Ladies was not to choke under pressure. "All eyes are on you and it's easy to get nervous," Belden recalled.

"Our greatest strength this year was that everyone improved," said Coach Ron Chambers. This helped the team to play "a lot better as a team."

The team's biggest rivals were Hinsdale Central, Wheaton South, and LaGrange. However, they overcame these teams by taking the game seriously and attending camps over the summer. - E. Hochleutner

Kickin It

The Dukes start could have been surprising to some due to the skepticism before the season started because of the loss of nine of their senior starters. The Dukes proved they could do well without them.

The team stepped up with the help of their captains: Seniors Micheal Bishoff, Wesley Lomnicki, and the teams leading scorer Kevin Woerner. With the help and skill of these team leaders the Dukes gave themselves a good chance to win.

Due to the suprising skill and unity of the team, many were curious to see how the season would end up. The Dukes came out on top and finished the season 13-5-2 and 4-2 in conference.

The seasons turning point came after their big upset win over 4th place ranked Morton. Coach Vana described this team as "The hardest working team he's ever been associated with," and one of the most unselfish teams he has ever seen.

Girls Swimming...

They're No Drips!!!

It was 6:00 a.m. and the girl's swim team was already on deck, ready for their workout.

Every day after school and three mornings a week, including Saturdays, the girls worked on their speed and agility. They swam frontstroke and backstroke reps, lifted weights in the weightroom and ran laps.

Fast speeds and good strokes were not the only things these girls focused on. Their friendship as a team really made these girls become a family. "What I like most about our team is the friendships we made," said junior Sara Tuttle. "We all stuck the season out together, as one team. No one quit," she added.

"These girls are the most focused team York has had in 16 years," said Head Coach Dave Davis, adding "we had more girls go to State this year." The girls also showed their team spirit on meet days and dressed up in their team t-shirts, towels, green tights and green glitter.

Aside from the teams goals, it was a season of great personal achievements. Freshman Emily Hatz broke three records in the Sophomore 200 IM, the 50 Freestyle, and the 100 Backstroke. The swim team had a successful year and everyone was happy with the outcome of the season. - J. Levee

Backhand to the Top

With only eight seniors, three freshmen, and one junior the girls varsity tennis team had an awesome season. "From the start of the season we set many goals and by the end we achieved all of them," said Coach David Williams.

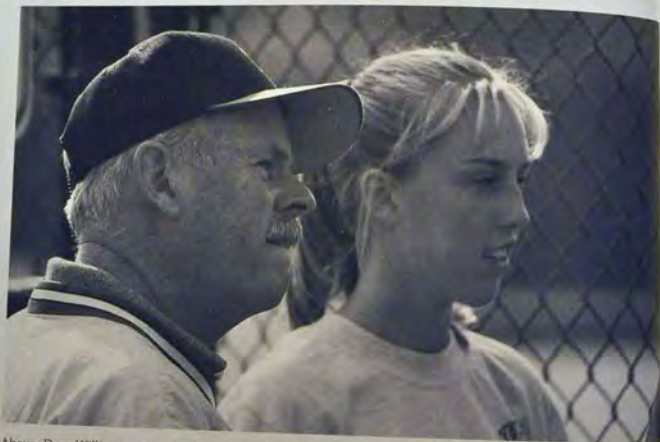

One of their goals was to take third, which they did at the conference meet. This was only the second time since 1984 that they took this spot. Another goal they set was to win their sectional meet. Again, they met their goal and won sectionals for their 5th year in a row. Their last goal was to be in the top 20 in the state. The girls again came through and ended up 16th in the state.

The outcome of this season was the result of the girls putting in so much dedication. The girls practiced every day after school for a minimum of two hours. These practices consisted of drills, rallies, and matches. Coach Williams said, "this year was one of the best seasons that I've ever coached; all the girls worked together as a team of one."

He also added, "the girls did so well this year because they welcomed the three new freshmen and made them part of the team right away. The addition of the three freshmen definitely rose the level of tennis this year."

Junior Carrie Roth said, "tennis is really a great outlet because when you're playing, all you have to think about is the game and having fun, you kind of forget whatever you were worrying about during the day."

With all their hard work this season, the girls had many accomplishments and reached many goals to be proud of. The girls ended up 16-6 overall, 3rd in the West Suburban Silver division, 1st in sectionals, and 16th in state. Overall, the 2002 tennis girls had a great season. - V. Sotirova and M. Hanish

SETTING THE SCORE

The girls' volleyball team set the standard in conference and regional play. This was not an easy feat with eight seniors graduated and five of those eight being main players. The 2002 team had to get to know each other and learn to work and win together quickly. Not only did they win, but they became "very close friends," according to senior Margaret Noldan.

The volleyball team tied for second in conference but came very close to taking first place. They were happy with second place because they had to beat Lyons Township to get there. And they had not accomplished that in thirteen years.

The volleyball team lost one of their senior starting players going into conference but proved their strength by continuing to win through the regional tournament. They lost their first sectional game but they lost to a team that went all the way to the semi-finals in the state tournament.

The team would not have gotten where they did without the after-school and Saturday-morning practices. Practices varied in intensity depending on their performance the day before. Each practice had its basic warm-up of ten laps, passing drills, bump-set-spike drills, serving and receiving drills and ended with a lot of scrimmage play.

The volleyball team was proud of their strong season and will always look back on the unity of the team and friendships they made. - C. Douglas

Play Hard or Go Home!

Drills on mechanics, dribbling, shooting, looking at a scouting report on the next opponent, a run through of the game plan, and plenty of running were only a few ways the team came together to be successful.

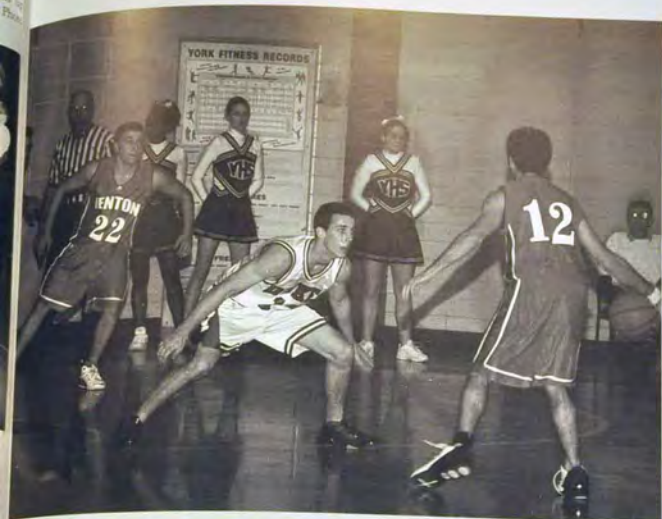

The success of the boys' season was the outcome of the tough defense they put forth. Though not always coming away with the win, the Dukes made sure to hold their opponents to minimal points. Many games were lost by just a game-winning shot at the buzzer. Coach John Daniels stated that the Dukes "led the conference in team defense."

With many three sport athletes, and many who came right from football, the Dukes got off to a rough start. As senior Gary Modrow explained, "We started out really slow, but we came together around Christmas to win some games and we came closer as a team."

Modrow, along with Daniel Ehmann, Robert Davis, and Alan Markovich were only a few of the seniors that led the team. Senior captains Curtis Rath, Bryan Belville, the leader in scoring, Andy Shields, the leader in assists and steals, and Bradley Heinz, the leader in rebounds, were a few more key contributors to the success of the boys' season. These players, and the rest of the team's hard work paid off and resulted in the Dukes' success. - M. Jablonski

Striving for Victory

With a totally different game plan and offense than last year, the 2002-2003 girls basketball team worked toward victory. Led by senior captains Krystal and Gina Hugelier and junior captain Anne Marcellus, the team was one of the top ranked teams in the area.

The many victories of the team included defeating Hinsdale Central, last year's state champions, and defeating the number-two ranked team in Indiana. To achieve these victories, the team had to overcome many challenges. "The biggest challenge was overcoming our height shortage and being able to not beat ourselves because if we lost we only beat ourselves," said Gina Hugelier. To overcome all of their challenges and accomplish their many victories, the team had to practice every day they didn't have games. Their practices consisted of dribbling drills, shooting, running plays and scrimmaging.

The best part of the season, according to Gina Hugelier, was that, "everyone on the team gets along and we are like a group of sisters going out everyday and having fun." This sisterhood led to a successful season for the girls basketball team. - K. Thielbar

During a game of bowling, players did not run or bounce a ball. Players required a gentle yet firm touch on a ball weighing as much as a brick. Almost every girl on the bowling team acquired this special touch. The girls practiced every day after school at Stardust Bowling Alley with coach Cheryl Trapp and assistant coach Jeffrey Tieman. With hard work and perseverance, these girls improved greatly. Pia Bartolia praised the sport and the girl's accomplishments, "We've gotten a lot better, and it's a lot of fun to have a winning season." Coach Trapp contributed enormously to the improvement of these bowlers. "She really turned this team around," said Coach Tieman applauding Coach Trapp's contribution to the team. Most of the girls on the team averaged around 200 points.

The seniors were the stronghold of the team. With the powerhouse of seniors Margaret Hubeny, Heather Oskroba, Kristen Zomparelli, and Pia Bartolia, the girls won 2nd place in the tough Hinsdale Tournament. Assistant coach Mr. Tieman proudly announced that the girls were, "scaring everyone in the conference."

The girls' bowling team took the sport very seriously. And although they played aggressively, injuries occurred. "Maris McHugh and I tend to pull our butt muscles a lot," exclaimed Lauren Dunkle. But through all the injuries and lanes that were not level, the bowling team polished their game. This year was the first time the girls' bowling team went on to state. Pia Bartolia qualified for state and placed 71st overall. The team's hardwork paid off in the end. - S. Rivera

There was more to girl's gymnastics than just being flexible, these girls had skill. The hard conditioning and endurance needed to perform well in this sport were vital. The meets were long and strenuous. But at the same time, the friendships and fun times, made everything worth it.

"Not only is gymnastics physically hard, it's also mentally challenging at the same time. If you tell yourself you can't do something, then you won't," explained sophomore Erica Hochleutner.

Practice consisted of various warm-ups and stretches, then straight into practicing events. There were four main competitive events in girl's gymnastics which were vault, floor, bars, and beam. Each event was different in their own ways, and tested the different abilities of the gymnast. Whenever a helping hand was needed, the girls looked to their three coaches Lorel Kleyweg, Kim Piasecki, and Heather Hynes.

"New skills can be scary, but you just have to overcome your fears, and the results are always rewarding," said Sophomore Danielle Hlavacek.

Gymnastics was not only about sweating and working hard for these girls, it was also a test of their mental limits. Practices weren't easy, but encouragement from other team members helped them pull through. - S. Ekblad

Waves of Dedication

Waking up at 5:30 A.M. was never easy, especially if you had to be at school at 6 A.M. ready to work out. This was what the members of the swimming team had to endure every morning. The team was also introduced to a new workout which they did three times a week. It was a workout which involved the medicine ball. On the other two days of the week, they lifted weights.

After school the swimmers looked forward to enduring only another hard workout. The team consisted of many swimmers who were also sprinters. So instead of swimming long distances in practice like last year, the boys sprinted in their afternoon practices. All of this hard work only added up to their overall season finish. Even though the team did not win as many records as last years team, they still ended up having a strong season.

According to Mr. Laurich, "There are two main goals that we wanted to accomplish this year. One was to have fun while swimming. All of the boys did have fun which was one goal accomplished. The second goal was to have everyone achieve their own personal goals. All these personal goals added up to the success of the whole team as one."

All the different strengths of the boys swimming team added up to a successful season. Also the practice time in which they put into the season also helped the team end with a strong season. Overall, the swim team was turned into an overall stronger team during the season. - M. Hanisch

Kings of the Ring

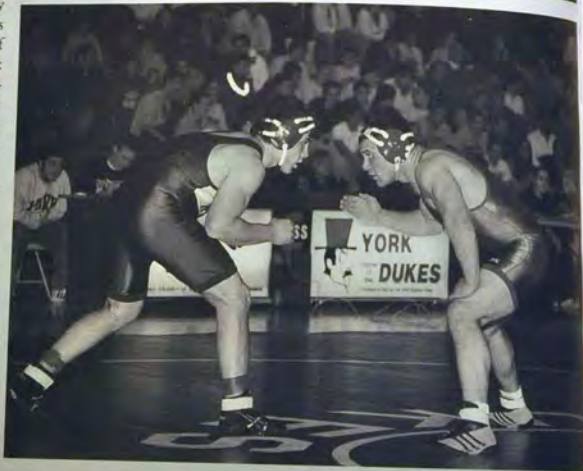

York seniors Tyler Bruesewitz and Harrison Noffs accomplished a lot in their wrestling careers. As juniors, Noffs finished fourth in state and Bruesewitz finished second in his weight class. They both also set several of the school's records. Their leadership, and the leadership of the other seniors, was a great accomplishment as well. "The senior class is a scholarly group of students, and the success of the team is related to the leadership of the seniors," said head coach Terry Clarke, who had nine of his seniors in the National Honor Society.

The Dukes excelled not only in the classroom, but on the mats as well. Because they had a history of being a powerhouse in the state, York went up against a very difficult schedule. Facing tough opponents such as area-ranked DeKalb, Lyons Township, and Hinsdale South, the Dukes were an impressive 23-3.

"We have good team chemistry, and I love winning," added junior Brian Guimon.

The Dukes finished second in conference, became regional champions, and sent five wrestlers down to the state meet: seniors Michael Bischof, Jeremy Fronza, Noffs, Bruesewitz, and Junior Brian Guimon. Root Root For the York Dukes

To have fifteen girls do exactly the same thing at the same time while they still flashed bright smiles could have been a challenge but the 2002-2003 cheerleaders showed they were ready to perfect that.

The team started the year off with a great chance of having an accomplishing and spirited season. After they were Camp Champions during the summer, they all knew that they were ready to face any competition other teams might bring. They proved they could excell when they placed first at the Fenton Regionals. They also qualified for state for the second year in a row and showed all the other schools that York was there to compete. They learned many difficult stunts and perfected them all. The cheerleaders added more tumbling to their routines which scored them high points from the judges.

During the year the girls practiced every day after school for at least two hours unless they had a game. The practice started out with stretching and then they ran through their routine over and over until it was perfect.

Junior Rachel Griffith added, "Each girl brings something different and positive to the team, we all have strong points and we all have weak points, but we all can help eachother out and that is what helps us do well." She also added, "This year we have to overcome the differences we all have, we stay focused on what we are doing and we accomplish any goals that we have."

The girls kept York fans and players pumped during the game and during halftime with special routines. They also pushed themselves to rise above their own competitors and showed them what they could do. They kept the atmosphere happy and energized with their hands in the air and their smiles which shinned brightly, who could not help but catch the cheerleaders' school spirit. - A.Gales

Kicking up their spirit shoes was one of the things the York Pom-Pons squad did this year.

Not only did they do a superior job, they topped that off by receiving the Superior Team Trophy at the UDA Dance Camp over the summer.

They started their steps to perfection in August, and in addition to that, they had two hour practices everyday after school. The poms performed at every home basketball and football game and also competed in competitions.

Their countless halftime routines were choreographed by different teammates except for the seven-minute pep rally routine which was choreographed by the teams captains, Elizabeth Stelling, Laura Marek, and Jamie Gusloff.

Throughout the year they had many new experiences that they would never forget and they "formed a lot of cherishable friendships," said senior Rachel Tacito. - J. Mattson

Green and white. No matter what a student's interests were, there was something for everyone to participate in. Whether it was Amnesty International, speech team, or service learning organization, there was something to fulfill everyone's niche. Clearly, organizations were a way for students to expand their knowledge, pursue their interests, and make new friends. Teachers who sponsored them were passionate about what they were doing and did everything they could to make the students' experiences enjoyable and interesting. Undoubtedly, organizations were a way to get involved with school activities and have a good time.

A Friendly Environment

"Some people come into our lives and quickly go. Others stay for a while and leave footprints on our hearts, and we are never the same". Anonymous. These were the kinds of people that made up Circle of Friends.

Circle of Friends offered an environment that created friendships with special needs students. It did this through community outings, group activities, and a buddy system. Everything was planned not only with the special needs students in mind, but the Circle of Friends members as well. These members benefited from the club by the new things they learned from the friendships they made. According to Junior Margret Micek, "Everyone learns from each other. It doesn't matter what kinds of needs they may have."

Once a month, these students met to visit the zoo, attend baseball, football, and soccer games, bowl, or just hang out. These activities all worked toward a common goal which was to increase the interaction between students with special needs and their other peers. But most of all the goal was to create sincere friendships that leave footprints, lasting impressions, in the hearts of everyone involved. - M. Jablonski

Thinking It Through

S.A.D.D. (Students Against Destructive Decisions) and Peer Mediation have been clubs at York for many years. Both worked toward improving the choices students made and informing students of the consequences of those choices.

Formerly known as students against drunk driving, S.A.D.D. changed and broadened their club name in order to focus on all types of destructive decisions. Their main goal was to help students think about their actions and promote safe choices among the student body. Signs, banners, and posters were displayed around the school to make their voice heard and convey their message. At every meeting there were presentations and an open floor discussion about the topic for that meeting. "The good thing about S.A.D.D. is that it's not a group of people with the same interests, but the same beliefs," explained junior Christine Neuberg.

Peer Mediation had two goals: to help prevent physical conflicts between students and to teach students how to compromise. In order for a mediation to occur both parties involved in the conflict had to agree to and be present for mediation. Under certain circumstances mediation was used in place of a suspension. Senior Margaret Sands commented, "Why not have a mediation? Wouldn't you want to sit down and talk rather than be suspended?" Peer Mediation even reached out to the junior high schools and started programs there.

While S.A.D.D. and Peer Mediation were two completely different clubs, they both agreed that student safety and helping students to think about their actions helped to create a better environment at York. - C. Kostecki

A Breath of Fresh Air

Eco Club

This year, ECO club took another great step towards their goal of creating a cleaner and healthier environment. Though it was a neverending process, the many students who made up ECO club remained determined and enthusiastic in their mission.

One of the many approaches ECO Club took to get closer to this goal was to develop a greater understanding of mother nature and how our actions could affect the environment. Club supervisor Robert Blaus stated, "If we achieve a better understanding of nature, we will be able to make better decisions on how to treat the environment." Members of ECO club applied this understanding as they participated in fun and beneficial activities that promoted environmental awareness.

Though ECO club made several great contributions this year, one of their greatest achievements was the success of the trash audit held in November that demonstrated the need for a recycling program at York. It was just one of many examples of how ECO club made an impact on the environment.

ECO club members came to the important understanding that nature should be appreciated, not taken for granted. It was a refreshing feeling to know that students were spending their free time working for such a great cause. - C. LeRose

Spread the Word

Amnesty International works to end ignorance

What is commonly considered to be more important than basic human rights and lives? Nothing!

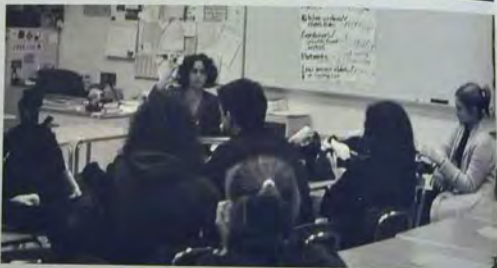

The York chapter of Amnesty International worked very hard to get this point across to students and teachers. Although Amnesty was led by Ms. Davis, the students were also a large factor in leadership. Ms. Davis said that Amnesty was "Very much a student run organization." Students met almost every Tuesday to discuss and plan actions for various human rights awareness activities. Speakers also came to speak to students occasionally, and they offered opportunities for students that "would not have that kind of exposure if it weren't for Amnesty" said Ms. Davis.

A popular activity that had been a staple of Amnesty's human rights activities was Rock for Human Rights which featured student bands who performed to raise awareness for human rights issues. The love for music brought everyone together and Ms. Davis, again, said it best when she commented that "music sends a message" and through Amnesty, that was a message that we all heard. - J. SLOTHPIN?

Unlike the participants in NHS or service learning, the students who took part in the York Service Organization, or SLOTHPIN (Students Lead Organization That Helps People in Need) did it just to help people out. There was no requirement of volunteer hours that had to be met or a certain number of meetings that needed to be attended. Those eighty-five plus kids just wanted to make a difference.

Throughout the year the York Service Organization completed many volunteer service projects. Those events were coordinated and overseen by seniors Justine Parker and Kathleen King, the leaders of the organization. The group did activities such as chore days, where they went to the house of a senior citizen and raked the leaves and helped with other things around the house. They also held a food drive this fall along with a hat and mitten drive. The organization also volunteered at an auction to raise money for the Special Olympics. Later in the year they attended the Special Olympics and assisted the athletes they had raised money for.

York Service Organization met every other Friday throughout the year before school. At a typical meeting, future projects were planned and past projects were reflected on. Depending on the time of the year, pumpkins might have been painted or presents wrapped. As Kathleen King says, "These kids just want to make contact with people and make a difference." - K. Objection!

York Law Team

Objection! York Law Team dominated the competition. But domination did not come easily, as attested to by freshman Jacob Wolff: "Practices consist of meeting and talking for 30 minutes then splitting up into groups and working on our roles until they are perfect for at least another couple hours." This year's team was led by a 'core group,' seven select individuals, who met at least once a week to review the week's work and choose what to emphasize during full team meetings. Last year's Rookie of the Year, sophomore Meghan Collins, described the team as having "more variety" and since they juggled more activities, they "brought more to the table to work with".

But to talk about how well the team functioned, you had to first make the team. Everyone saw the infamous October 10th is coming, Watch for October 10th signs posted in every nook and cranny of the school. These indicated the beginning of a rigorous and lengthy selection process that in the end chose only those capable of competing at the level of last year's number-two-in-state team.

The 2002-2003 season held four meets for the team to demonstrate its power; the York Tournament, St. Charles Tournament, DuPage Tournament, and the State Tournament. Roles varied from opening, closing, direct examination, cross examination, and witness portrayal. Usually a team member would be assigned one or two roles to work on and perfect throughout the course of the season. Mr. Pieler, the team's sponsor, was confident that "provided the judges are fair, we should win" both the DuPage and State Law Tournaments.

Although the 2003 team was working with a few veterans and many young lawyer prospects, Pieler described them as "deeper and more competent." Freshman superstar Jacob Wolff made a stellar impact on the team and proved himself able to compete at a professional level by with his astounding closing statements and dedication to the team. "I think that this is something that will even help me later in life," said Wolff of the team and all the work he put into improving. All together, though, this year's members and their never-faltering work ethic helped propel these young lawyers to the top yet again as one of the best law teams in the state.

There is No Debate About it

"One of the things we battle with every day is people thinking we're a debate team," said sophomore Maggie Sotos. As a member of speech team, Sotos strongly supported the team and argued that they concentrated strictly on speeches and skits. She felt that the team may have lost potential members because of the confusion about the team's purpose. Despite that, the team did very well.

With meets every Saturday at 6:00 a.m., the hardworking members contributed their time and talent. Practice made perfect, and for the speech team members, they felt that practice was essential. They tried to review their acts at least once a day with one or more of the speech team coaches. Mr. Golbeowski, Ms. Zynda, Miss Webb, and Miss Ruzicka, the coaches of the team, worked just as hard as the members, and devoted their time and effort to the team's success. They allowed for the members of the team to get more comfortable with their performances, and they held individual practice sessions. "You start the day tired and end the day tired, but everything in between is worth it," said team member, sophomore Sarah Wilber. The hard work did pay off.

"As far as our record went, we've done really well," said Sotos who, along with her team members, was very pleased with this year's team. She also commended the other team captains, Laura Stonikas and Amber Robinson. Sophomore Christine DiPompeo also praised her teammates. "There are people on the team who really ease the tension with their humor," said DiPompeo. She also explained a feeling of withdrawal that came with the close of every speech-team season. All of the members seemed to agree that the feeling was mutual, but it all paid off and was a good experience. They all did a wonderful job in keeping speech team a wonderful program -that's no debate. - K. Viliam

Words Around the World

Once school was out students came together to share information about the different cultures around them. Such clubs included, Spanish, International, French, Italian, and German.

These clubs gave a clearer understanding of what different cultures are really like. Kids from foreign countries shared presentations with the other members of the clubs. They showed photo albums from past vacations, shared slide shows and traditions of foreign countries, and even enjoyed some tasty treats. At one meeting, Vanessa and Jessica Abuchaibe showed the Spanish and International clubs how to salsa dance. Sophomore Meghan Walsh said, "It was really neat watching the girls dance, they even wore costumes to give a better effect."

Culture stories were a big part of Spanish and International Club. They were true stories of past trips and vacations where something out of the ordinary had happened. Members were always attentive when listening to these stories because they never knew what exciting adventure would be told.

French club met once a month. They celebrated Immersion Day and Mardi Gras. On those particular days the club came in on Saturday and they performed skits and ate fun foods. French club sold chocolate candy to raise money for the club.

Clubs met once or twice on a monthly basis. Both teachers and students put forth a lot of effort to organize them. The clubs expanded students' knowledge about many parts of the world around them. Walsh also said, "I have learned lots of things from hearing culture stories! Hearing the culture stories makes me want to go to Spain in the future." - E. Hochleutner

BEHIND THE SCENES: STUDENT COUNCIL

Who organized the school dances? Who made the blood drive and the food drive possible? It was student council. They were the most active club but probably the least recognized. Student council was in charge of many events, such as the highly recognized Prom all the way to the toy and book drives.

All of the members met every day except Wednesdays during the first half of 5th period lunch. During this time they utilized parliamentary procedures very similar to those of Congress. They also came up with the themes for the dances and made posters promoting the dances to put around school.

"I feel that student council is a great way to make the school a better and more enjoyable place," explained Junior Magen Ryan.

Sophomore Suzanne Ekblad added, "what I like best is making a difference in the school."

"The students are fantastic kids," said Mr. Moran, "they care about the school and try to make it a fun place to be. They put in a lot of hours, and do a great job."

The leadership that the members of student council learned will help them along in the future.

Outstanding Ability

New guidance by Mr. Jeremy Paschke and a mix of under- and upper-classmen, brought great variety to the scholastic bowl team. "Everyone has so many different activities going on, it's hard to find time to practice," said Mr. Jeremy Paschke, the new advisor this year.

"The first couple of meets were a surprise," commented Mr. Paschke.

The junior varsity had great success starting the year with a 5:3 record. Varsity faced some difficulty with a 2:6 season.

The harmony of the team was excellent. All the seniors rotated for captain and players could "sub in" so that each person experienced the anticipation of the game. "You can't really study for it," said senior Stephanie Rivera. "Either you know it, or you don't."

This truly was, pure intelligence.

YOU CAN COUNT ON THEM

"Math-Team meets are the highlight of my high school career," commented senior John Diamond. For some, the math team was the highlight of their high-school career, and for others it was just a great way to learn new ways for solving challenging problems. "I've learned a lot from math team. It's a great way to put what you know to use," said sophomore Meghan Collins. Others had a really easy time with math, so they enjoyed getting the extra practice. "Math has always come pretty easy for me. I've been in higher math classes my whole life," senior Margaret Sietsema, captain of the math team said. These math masters did not just sit in a room and do math all day. They did everything a normal math class or other club did. They met every Tuesday before school for practice, they listened to announcements from their teacher Max Schoenberg and then they got the rest of the time to work on problems related to those they were going to be solving on upcoming meets.

When they did have meets, they had not only a written test, but they had a candy bar contest. The candy bar contest required true team work. The team received a set of 20 problems and they solved as many as they could at that time. The team that won, got a whole case of candy bars. Although they worked well under pressure, these "math wits" still had fun. Sophomore Sarah Wilber explained, "We have fun! We're not little dorks who play on our calculators!" - V. Sotirova

To Whom Do

I Owe This HONOR?

Those who succeeded above and beyond what is required daily in school earned distinction in the honorary societies. This honor did not come cheap. With perseverance and a curiosity students maintained a high grade point average. With these top grades and this hard work came reward. The old saying, "with hardwork comes glory" rang true in these societies.

Thespians danced, acted, set-up furniture, cried and endured stage make-up. Each contributed time and effort to three plays, participated in the drama program, and spent forty hours over their highschool career committed to their passion: the theater. And still, at heart, they thrived on the applause of the audience.

Those few who have used the power of words to express themselves have been accepted into Quill and Scroll, a national honorary journalism fraternity. Senior Rachel Tacito takes great pride in this honor, and adds "Quill and Scroll is one of the greatest honors awarded to high school journalists" These students put countless hours and work into a publication. This group of young and aspiring journalists rose above and beyond the status quo and put their thoughts onto paper.

A select few carried in their tool boxes [pencil cases] the handy dandy TI-83, at least 3 properly sharpened pencils, a good stack of scratch paper, and the honor of membership in the Math Honorary Society. These students accumulated tons of eraser bits from their accelerated math classes and traded them in for top grades. This society honors students who strived to vigorously continue their study of mathematics.

Hola! Bonjour! Guten-Tag! The three language honor societies welcomed those students who maintained that thirst for cultural knowledge. German Honorary Society members senior Jack Traxler and junior Laura Bresehan took pride in achieving this honor. To them German Honorary Society was a great honor to be in because of the small selective group who have achieved high goals in the German honors track. Students in language honor societies found an interest in other cultures and proved their love of that culture.

Students with the dedication to pursue their interests beyond just the daily requirement showed their determination and earned their honors. - S. Rivera

Students Giving a Helping Hand

National Honor Society met every-other Wednesday morning for seniors who had at least a 3.5 GPA and showed evidence of service, leadership and character. Any junior who had a 3.5 GPA or above after second semester was invited to petition for membership. Each student had to have participated in at least ten hours of community service during high school. They had to show their leadership abilities by having been a club officer, a captain, or perhaps having had a leadership position in a job. All students had a character evaluation by their teachers as well.

This year's group was the largest to ever at York. There were 100 members in the spring. NHS had its first fall induction for seniors who did not have enough service hours during the spring. "Sometimes it is hard to get things done with so many people, but this group is very enthusiastic and on the ball," said advisor Mrs. Kathryn VanHoeck.

NHS participated in many service projects such as Split the Pot for Homecoming, Rake and Run, Bootiful Saturday, and the Polar Express. Rake and Run could be thought of as random acts of kindness by the NHS members. Members picked yards to rake and in the winter version, Shovel and Run, they did they randomly chose and shoveled driveways. For those of who are now too old to remember, Bootiful Saturday takes place the Saturday before Halloween. Bootiful Saturday was when the young children of Elmhurst had the opportunity to dress in their finest (Halloween costumes that is) and walk the streets of Elmhurst while they recieved candy from the many stores. The members of NHS were the friendly faces who greeted the children and passed out candy, enabling stores to continue doing business. "It was really fun to see all of the children in their costumes," recalled senior Caroline Schreiber. The Polar Express, another event to remember, was when children had the opportunity to meet Santa. On the train many NHS members could be seen helping out here as well.

Green and white. Clearly, the colors of everything in the building as students walked in to learn each morning. Teachers knew the importance of learning and also the need to make it interesting. Undoubtedly, there were a variety of classes and each day was full of surprises. And even the days that were dreaded, there was always something to smile about. When the fire alarms went off and disrupted classes, both teachers and students learned to laugh about it. Teachers turned into friends and relationships were built. Not only was York a place to learn, it was a place to grow. Students grew in knowledge, developed friendships, and learned how to live better lives. Lessons were taught by teachers and lessons were taught by peers. By the end of the year everyone grew from experiences they never expected to have.

ACADEMICS

And the Band Plays On...

Three words described the members of the 2002 York Band: dedicated, hard-working and loyal. A typical week consisted of fifty minute practices each day, including numerous lessons and some additional practice before and after school. Auditions were also held weekly to determine where each member would be seated in Cadet, Concert and Symphonic Band. According to the band director Mr. Polanchich, "everybody plays well," and the auditions "give students a reason to practice."

Auditions were not the only thing these musicians practiced for. Every year the York Symphonic Band had a high number of representatives in the Illinois Music Educators Association (I.M.E.A.) All-District and even in the All-State festivals. Sixty-five students, twenty-three band members included, were selected from the York music program to attend the All-District Festival. With twenty-seven selected for I.M.E.A. All State, York held the highest number of students from among fifty other schools who were competing.

The York band members knew what it was to work hard, but they also knew how to have a great time. Football games were made memorable as the familiar songs of the Marching Band excited the crowd. It may have looked easy but marching took practice. Drum major Sara Gorsky said, "it's a lot of fun," and "it's cool to see it all come together." Similarly, basketball games would not have been the same without the Pep Band spirit. On another note, the Jazz Band, directed by Mr. Merrill shook things up when they played things by Paul Simon, The Beatles and songs from "West Side Story."

All in all, "we take our music seriously, but not ourselves," said Mr. Polanchich. The 2002 York band members were dedicated to their music and loved to have fun as they played their way through another successful year. - C. Foot

Talent and hard work were a few of the many things that contributed to the musical sound that came from the orchestra rooms.

Making use of the new facilities, orchestra met during a class period along with a time period afterschool in preparation for their concerts and sectionals. They performed concerts throughout the year. They also traveled to the University of Illinois to participate in the Illinois Music Education Association (IMEA) with 24 of their members. Many of them received honors at both the district and state levels, along with special additional honors. "It's no coincidence that York music is better represented than any other high school in Illinois at IMEA conference. We eat New Trier for breakfast," stated Cynthia Pekron and Rebecca Mei.

Music To Our Ears

The halls were alive with the sound of music from the voices of the York choir. On any day, music ranging from Ravel and Bach to Billy Joel, Manhattan Transfer and Amy Grant could be heard. "My goal is to bring a lot of diversity to the choir," said the choir's new director, Mrs. Marianetti. Each day she directed the Cadet Choir, Concert Choir and the Choralists in rehearsal.

Outside of school, members of the choir met in the fall to form the Madrigals. Their music filled York with holiday cheer as they caroled around the school in festive costumes before winter break. The Acapella group met in the spring when they sang a variety of pop and jazz. The choir performed a beautiful holiday concert at Willowbrook as well as two spring concerts. The choir practiced long and hard inside and outside of school. "It's less a task than an accomplishment," reflected senior Kevin Woerner, and the York Choir accomplished a lot. This year, a record-breaking seven choir members made All-State along with twenty other York musicians. Among the many events and practices there remained a "lot of unity" among all the choir members, commented senior Laura Perticara. One Step Ahead of the Game

Everyone questions what they are going to do in the future. High school is the same. Go to college? Or what about going straight into the work force? Well, the students involved in Medical Careers and Invite to Teach are, in fact, one step ahead of the game.

Medical Careers was for students interested in the medical profession. The students involved in Medical Careers met two periods every day under the direction of Ms. Kathy Feigh. First semester, they studied the Anatomy and Physiology of the human body, such as learning how to check blood pressure and vital signs. Second semester they traveled to the hospital four days a week to work with patients. There were eight areas of students chose from, such as observations of surgery, assisting with patient exercises, transport, therapy, and others.

"Medical Careers is a lot of fun, but it is also a lot of work at the same time," explained senior Amy Felt.

Students involved in Invite to Teach were interested in becoming teachers. These students met 7th and 8th period every day, lead by Ms. Barabara Lasko and Ms. Diane Martin. Mondays were generally planning days to go over ways to become a better teacher and also to go over projects. The rest of the week, students involved in Invite to Teach went to either elementary or middle schools to get first-hand experience working with kids. Each quarter the students had various projects they had to accomplish. First quarter students created bulletin boards for their classrooms.

Senior Kimberly Burgener, who was positive she wanted to become a teacher said, "It's a really good experience because you get in front of a class of kids, to help get the feeling of what it would be like to really be a teacher."

A Glimpse into Mirrors

The Mirrors staff published two magazines this year. Each semester they collected submissions of artwork, photos, and personal writings from the student body and considered them for publication. As the editor-in-chief, senior Bridget Maki said, "it was a great way to express your creativity."

In the first half of the process, the staff members conducted a thorough evaluation of each piece submitted. The staff divided into small groups to discuss and trade ideas regarding the pieces submitted. After a series of heated discussions, staff decided which pieces to accept and which to decline. Each member wrote letters notifying the applicants of their decision. After they finalized submissions, the staff discussed a theme that encompassed all ideas in the magazine.

Meanwhile, the editors and the layout editor worked together to design the visual aspect of the magazine. Finally, after much anticipation, the staff was rewarded for their hard work. After returning from the printer, the books were distributed to the student body.

Mirrors was not all hard work and no play, however. Although evaluation time was serious, staff took time out to relax which made the publication a friendly environment. - Merlyn Lawrence

Journalism

Ain't it a Wonderful Thing?

Every day people look for information on the latest scandals, nationwide news, and the most provocative stories. And while the York-Hi might not be the place to look for national news, when students wanted to read up on school news and stories that they could relate to, the York-Hi newspaper was definitely the periodical that satisfied their every need.

The newspaper that students received the first Monday of every month was always well-made, and most students assumed that producing it was not very hard work, but things were not always what they seemed. The York-Hi staff consisted of twenty-eight hard-working students, and their ever-helpful advisor, Mr. Bouque. Staff members met every day during seventh period to create the stories that appeared in circulation throughout the year.

The paper has been around for as long as anyone at York can remember, and they have always been covering the school community's every move. Their stories ranged from construction updates to Elmhurst curfew laws to the experience of a private Catholic school. The all-encompassing stories were not all that students got to read up on. Other York-Hi traditions continued this year, like the unforgettable Blind Dates, and the oh-so-opinionated editorials.

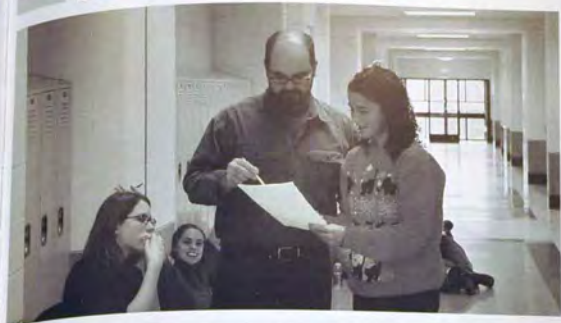

Students got a monthly dose of fresh and energized stories written by the students, for the students. The paper contained not one story written by a teacher or administrator, simply because there were none.

When put to the test, the York-Hi stood up to any competition, and mighty fiercely. Their past products have proved that they are a long-lasting and formidable tradition here at York. - K. Atkinson

Sounds Often Heard in the York-Hi Room

- "Where's the K Drive???" -staff
- Popcorn cooking
- "It's like yearbook, only better." -Kathryn D'Alexander
- The snapping of a camera
- Computer chairs (with staff members on them) crashing into walls.
- The elevator mysteriously opening....
- "JACK!!!!!!!" - staff
- Michael Jackson blasting from Y's Tales' room.
- Cries of laughter
- Chewing....(they have their own refridgerator and microwave)

Fire Alarms Couldn't Stop Us!

Demanding, stressful, uncomfortable chairs, crying fits, and dictatorial rules made up a typical day for a student on the yearbook. There was never any fun, it was complete seriousness and people rarely cracked a smile.

If this were true, the people on yearbook would not have been as bright and cheerful as they were. Senior Stephanie Rivera said, "yearbook shows the intelligence and creativity that York displays." Yearbook was an exciting place where ideas came together into two-page spreads for the clubs, sports, and notable activities throughout the year. The staff interviewed students and faculty, wrote copy, snapped photos and met their deadlines, but only after stressful hours in a room crammed with 26 bodies, 9 computers that crashed, 2 printers that jammed, and that one photo that always disappeared.

Yearbook was also a place where everyone's birthday was celebrated with cakes made by other staffers and a room with a pink couch that EVERYONE wanted to sit on at once. People were lucky if they got to sit on top of five people, but then they eventually fell off anyway. There was a refrigerator in the classroom where staff members stacked all of their goodies and then ended up getting stomach aches after eating too much. No matter how stressful it was, yearbook always came along with wonderful staff where friendships were formed and laughter rang through the classroom all day long. Above all, staff members never forgot to have a good time and smile. -C. Lucca

BUSY WORK

DECA consisted of Mr. Borel's fourth period marketing class. The object of both marketing education and DECA was to teach marketing and management skills in different career areas such as food marketing, hotel management, restaurant marketing and management, department and specialty store retailing, industrial and international marketing, finance and credit, advertising, and insurance.

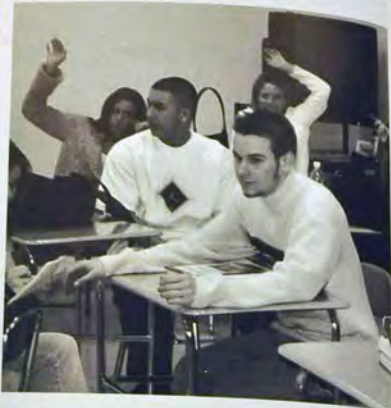

Captain Kyle King added, "Some skills we learn through DECA are understanding gifts, filling economic niches, cooperation skills and relation in capitalism."

In class, the students worked on activities out of a text book. They did certain activities that helped them prepare for a DECA competition. One particular activity was to take a math test the week before the competition.

The clubs competition was on January 28, 2003. In the competition, the DECA members worked individually to achieve the highest score in their division. They had to take a math test and then they gave a presentation in front of the judges. Each division had a different category. Top-ranked winners received trophies in recognition for their achievements.

Preparing for the Future

VICA was a club for industrial tech students who were interested in becoming more involved in that field of study. Through VICA, students were able to show future employers their talent and involvement. Mr. Ross described VICA as a club for students who wanted to get that "little extra oomph" out of their industrial-tech experience.

VICA provided students who were talented in industrial tech to learn more as well as give them the opportunity to compete among other students in the state.

VICA could easily be compared to an athletic team. It was equally as competitive and the students had the opportunity to go to state just as an athletic team does. In February, students took a test, and depending on how they scored some members were invited to a one-day competition. Senior Austin Lohan commented that, "VICA gives us the challenge to compete not only with other people, but with ourselves as well." - K. Conner

Working Forward

Taking a consumer sciences course made students eligible for Family Career and Community Leaders of America. FCCLA, as it's known, helped teach young men and women useful skills they needed for the real world.

Their members promoted community involvement through a variety of existing programs such as cooking, clothing design, child development, hotel and business management, interior design and fashion merchandising. FCCLA let its students develop practical, real world skills and talents which gave them the tools needed to succeed.

Students could compete in FCCLA sponsored competitions across the country at the chapter, sectional and state levels. The chapters at York worked everyday to prepare for the competitions. At these events students could put to use everything they had learned.

Through FCCLA students learned techniques that contribute to young people's career development by focusing on preparation and learning how to balance different roles simultaneously. Through a wide variety of activities, students discovered their strengths and made career goals to initiate a plan for achieving the lifestyle they desired.

The HERO program at York worked with students who had jobs outside of school and were interested in getting a head start on their careers.

In class, students learned to draft resumes and they practiced job related situations such as mock job interviews.

These students were hard working and their futures looked bright with all the skills they had acquired to give them a head start in life. Student learned skills that prepared themselves for the future and FCCLA and HERO gave them those skills. - L. Freeman

D U K E S O N I C E

Skating on the ice as fast as possible, controlling a puck and fending off someone trying to take your head off, while in front of a crowd at the United Center was just one of the many experiences of York's hockey team.

Playing on the hockey team required skill, speed, endurance and strength; it took the most skilled students to even play, much less to compete.

The varsity and junior varsity practiced in Bensenville at nine o'clock at night; they did many shooting and speed drills along with scrimages. Their practice paid off on the ice.

York played twenty-two games a year plus tournaments. They played in Orland Park, at Seven Bridges, and in Addison, along with games out of state. They played in a league with eleven other teams, and they had two of the league's top fifteen scorers, Jason Anderson and Charles Shepley.

"I like scoring goals," exclaimed Shepley. The club continued to play and improve in a very grueling sport. - T. Kirby

A Voice For The Students

Have you ever wanted to speak to the administration about something you wished to change at York? First Class was trying to do exactly that, serve as a voice for the students.

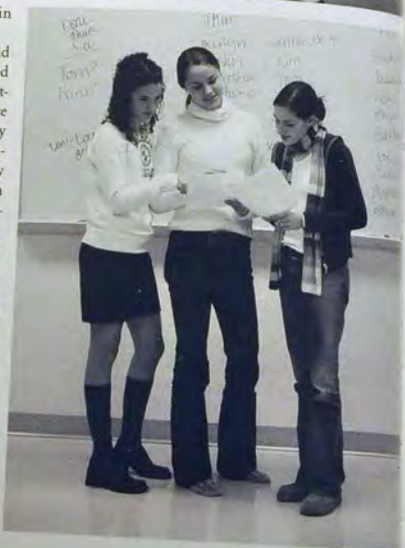

First Class was one of the newest clubs added to York's list of many and also one of the largest with about 100 members. Students could join or leave at any time during the year. The club was open to everyone because input from all types of students was needed to make an overall improvement in York's environment.

"We're all about improving the school and serving as a voice for the students" commented junior member Christine Neuberg. On shortened schedule days, there was a fifteen minute time period dedicated to the First Class activity of the week. Most of the time the activity involved teamwork, but First Class was mainly about promoting pride, dignity, respect, and a positive attitude in school and other social environments.

"We're not trying to sound preachy," said sponsor Mr. Moran. The students needed to have a voice in York's policies, if they weren't happy how were they going to learn? Junior David Genty said, "One first class I liked was the whole student opinion about changes in school, and the administration actually responded to it. I liked that because students were able to express how they felt about certain issues." Thanks to First Class we did have that opportunity. - C. Kostecki

York's Finest

There were people who received awards for athletic ability and academics, but there were also people who received awards for their talents in music, business, interior design, and child development which often was not acknowledged.

These students put many hours of hard work and dedication into their work and became state qualifiers. They had a special talent which was clearly displayed through these many awards. Many of these awards went unnoticed because people did not know that such events took place. The students who qualified for clothing, interior design, IMEA, VICA, DECA, senior class top ten, and illustrated talk were the top students who strived to succeed. They showed what hard work and talent was all about. - C. Lucca

Green and white. The variety of students that filled the hallways each day at York brought character to the school. Due to the new building, the students gave the plain building character by putting a little part of themselves into everything they participated in. Friendships were made in the places least expected, and students shared both good and bad times. Obviously, each person contributed something unique and different and made York the place it was.

PEOPLE

Freshman year: the year to a clearly new beginning. While they carried obviously unmanageable backpacks around the halls, these students learned to make new friends and adjusted themselves in an entirely new environment. They started a four-year journey that defined their individuality and captured their minds. This year the freshmen joined with the rest of the student body and faculty to learn the new halls and rooms, which made the experience less intimidating than anticipated. While they tried their best, what they learned and endured set them on the path for the next four years.

Amateurs at Work

Music lovers from around the school came together before and after school every Thursday to participate in the Amateur Musicians Club.

At each meeting the members played a variety of instruments including acoustic and electric guitar, keyboard, drums, and even the violin. They chose which song or songs they wanted to work on...anything from drum circle rhythms to classic rock songs.

Sophomore Steve Letizia says "I come here because I love guitar." Sophomore Nick Sarkisaw agrees "Amateur Musicians Club gives me a chance to play the music that I like to play."

And for any future members, Mr. Bendelow, the club advisor has one piece of advice, "Bring earplugs!"

Embarrassing Moments

"This summer at my lake house, I was standing on my raft and these two girls were yelling from a wave runner at me and then all of a sudden, my cousin came up behind me and departed me! Then, they gave me a weird look and started laughing. I don't know if it was a look of disgust or what."

-Michael Esposito, 9

"My most embarrassing moment was when I was telling someone how I had gotten stung by a stingray and you could see where the tentacles hit me, but instead I said testicles, not even thinking about it."

-Molly Sullivan, 9

"I was talking to the guy I liked and I asked him why he wasn't responding to me, and my friend turned and said, 'Maybe that's because you have a big booger in your nose.'"

-Michelle Koehler, 9

"A whole bunch of my friends and I were hanging out up-town and were seeing how many people we could stack on each others' shoulders and I was on the top of two other kids, and we started to tip over and I grabbed on to the kid under me and then we all fell over. No one got hurt except me. I hit my head on the wall and went home with a terrible concussion."

-Kevin Lepore, 9

A Model For The Future

What do you get when you mix York's best and brightest with the Earth's countries? Model U.N., of course! This unique gathering of students provided a small glimpse of what life is like in the world outside of Elmhurst. As President Teena Thomas said "Model U.N. Provides a great opportunity for us [students] to see what the world is like outside of Elmhurst. Model U.N. really puts the world into a new perspective." The students were in charge of accurately portraying their respective countries, through attempting to pass resolutions and actions that would benefit the respective countries.

As the instructor, Ms. Calcagno led the group of students in their respective areas of assignment, to food aid, to military sanctions. This is important, as Ms. Calcagno attempted to keep Model U.N. as close to the real U.N. as possible. This was essentially the purpose of Model U.N., to recreate the U.N., and educate its members on actual world processes. - J. Pagnusat

Sophomore year: Clearly, it was the year of training for sophomores. These students learned new study habits and developed their own style and skills. Sophomores continued to learn as they took in-class driver's ed. and behind the wheel early in the morning. They carried on to test their limits as they continued to define their individuality and worked around social norms. Sophomores were undoubtedly in a transition period of high school. Their experiences surpassed that of a freshman; however, they did not quite compare with those of an upperclassmen.

Junior year: Obviously, the most academically challenging year of high school, juniors prepared themselves for ACTs, SATs, and at the same time worked on projects and tests. Juniors looked at the year as the year of inevitable stress and more responsibility. Juniors spent endless hours at the College and Career Resource Center as they searched for their ideal school and future. This year juniors worked hard to raise money and create a memorable prom. Many juniors started to work, since they gained the privilege of owning a driver's license. Clearly juggling jobs, college searches, and harder courses, juniors worked through the year as they hoped and recieved a sweet reward.

A Quick Look at Outlook

Outlook was a fairly young organization that was formed by a group of students last year. The organization centered around a publication that allowed students to write about important world issues. In addition to providing an opportunity to speak out on different issues, Outlook required students to think outside of the York community and become aware of the vast world around them. - C. LeRose

Senior year. Undoubtedly, the final year before seniors took the next step in life. Clearly juggling between classes, colleges and even the new building, these students prepared themselves for life. Seniors celebrated their York pride as they teepeed the school yard with mass amounts of toilet paper, cheered at their last homecoming pep rally and attended their last homecoming game. Seniors bonded noticeably at Senior Soiree and celebrated that they did not have to take any more finals. Seniors amused themselves with senior pranks, the constant ringing of fire alarms and ditching school on senior-ditch day. Through the years of growth and learning, seniors learned to bond with teachers and peers, making memories they will never forget.

HOW DID YOU INVITE YOUR DATE TO THE Prom?

"I wanted to do something different and mix it up a little bit, so I came up with a striptease to give her. She parked on my street before school, so me and one of my friends hid out down the street and waited for her to get there. When she pulled up, me and my friend drove up next to her blasting the song 'Bootylicious.' I jumped out the back of the SUV and started dancing and tearing off my clothes. On my undershirt it said 'Laura will you go with me,' and on my butt it said 'To Prom?'" Then I handed her a bouquet of flowers. I figured if she was going to go to prom with me, she might as well get a taste of how I dance." - Kevin Atkinson, 12 & Laura Rafter, 12.

"I was out with my friends and upon reaching home there was a poem on the door telling me to go inside. Once inside, there was a trail of two dozen red roses leading up to my room. When I got to my room, there was a teddy bear in a tux sitting on my bed. Next to the teddy bear was another poem telling me to squeeze the bear's hand. When I squeezed the bear's hand, the question was asked. After hearing this, I turned around and Mike was standing behind me." Lauren Dick, 12 & Michael Baier, 12

Austria

The Reason...

"I came to America because it is important to speak the language... and it also an amazing experience."

The Most Unique Experience...

"My most memorable experience was seeing how students help each other."

Lifestyle...

"In Austria we have no curfews and it is no problem to go to discos when you are not 18 years old. Another thing here is that you don't have so much relax time after the school. At first it was stressful but after a time it is normal for you."

Personal Quote...

"Sei wie du bist, nicht was andere Leute von dir sehen wollen." (Be what you are, not what other people want to see) us all a false sense of hope for York. Back when we first stepped into York's halls, we were astonished to find that, unlike Zach and "the gang," we would not have twenty minute passing periods, but rather six minutes to accomplish getting our books, sit and talk with friends, study, talk on the phone, and eventually get to class.

By the time we relaxed, the halls of York became very similar to a sitcom, romantic comedy, but most similar to a drama. Drama is the single word in the English dictionary that can be used to define high school. That is why we all loved it, or loved to hate it so much.

Then we had to move on. Throughout high school we all grew, whether it was together or apart, we grew up with each other. Now that our year has come to an end, we will all take the next step. Whether that step is work, college, travel, or whatever destiny holds for us, we can all look back and remember the times when we were obviously, simply, Clearly Green.

THE LAST HOORAH!!!

When the first semester ended, seniors clearly need a time to release some stress. Senior Soiree was the long due relief from the last exams seniors took. By this time most seniors had sent out their college applications and received good or bad news from the colleges of their choice.

Unfortunately, due to many sports events, the entire senior student body was not able to participate in the festivities. Although there weren't any contestants who competed for Mr. Duke, people still had a good time at dinner and on the dance floor. Senior Soiree was the epitome of what the senior class was all about . . . having fun!

The class consisted of many different types of people. Most of those who were there agree that there must have been something in the food or just the right music was played because everyone became one unique student body. - S. Rivera

TOLERANCE was one of the qualities teachers possessed throughout the school year. Without tolerance the teachers would not have been able to perform their daily tasks. When fire alarms went off and technology worked improperly, teachers found ways to cope with the problems as they occurred. The teachers this year also showed a lot of dedication to their students. With all of the new technology installed throughout the school year, the teachers willingly helped students learn, while learning it themselves. They also devoted many countless hours when they graded papers, helped out at athletic events, chaperoned dances and sponsored school activities and clubs. Clearly, teachers and staff showed that they were also part of the green and white of the school.

What do you think of the new school?

"In comparison to an average high school, it is very impressive, but the bugs need to be worked out."

- Mr. Laurich

"It's amazing everything that we can do. It is much easier to communicate with other teachers and the new language lab is very impressive. C'est fantastique!"

- Madam Rine

The results of what each of the students were most likely to be were as follows. Please note that the Y's Tales class came up with these superlatives and they were meant to be taken lightly. - K. We are extremely grateful for the hard work and dedication of Ms. Parrini and the staff which made this book possible. Thank you for everything you contributed to the book and the class.

As one more school year came to an end, everyone realized the changes they had gone through. They walked down different halls, with different friends, and the different perspectives they had gained during the year. Every student experienced change and it was evident that the changes had shaped them in a new way. As walls went from bright white to poster filled, students saw that the new York had come to life.

It was clear that the new York became a treasured place in the students hearts. Even though the end of the year was anticipated by many, when the time finally came people realized that it had flown by.

Undoubtedly, lasting memories were made, friendships blossomed, and relationships grew. The new York gained character and lost the plain feeling it had at the beginning of the year.

Throughout the year construction continued. Students and faculty celebrated the opening of the cafeteria, student commons, library, college and career center and faculty offices.

Although the year had a rough start, everyone grew more comfortable with the school and things ran more smoothly. There was a noticeable change.

As the year came to an end, students recognized the importance of being the first class to leave their mark on the new York. And it was obvious that York was Clearly

Green!

COLOPHON

Twenty six Y's Tales staff members and adviser Isadora Parrini worked with Herff Jones Publishing Company and Lifetouch Prestige Portraits to produce the 70th edition of Y's Tales, the York Community High School yearbook.

This yearbook serves as a record for all which occurred during the 2002-2003 school year. The nine by two inch book had a press run of 2,155 copies. The $32 book was purchased by 89% of the student body. The staff used nine computers with Adobe PageMaker 6.5 software to desktop publish the book. Herff Jones Publishing Company, located in Marceline, Missouri, printed the 255 page book. Two signatures of formula color compliment the book. The books fonts include Garamond, Schnitger, Ad Lib, Baravia, Coronado, Excelsior, Footnote, Frank, HoneyMoon, PURR, and SHOT.
