

LIFESTYLES

One Night ...

Years of Memories

Prom. The once a year buzz of choosing a dress and ordering the flowers is just the start. Outdoing all your friends on the most extravagant way to ask your date is the icing on top of the prom experience, ranging from the cliché, "Will you go to prom with me," to the rare trail of rose petals leading to chocolate, flowers, and the question sprung with soft Sinatra in the background.

This year's prom, The Seaside Serenade held at the Shed Aquarium, was a night of great food, good dancing, and an amazing night with the fish. Professionally catered, the food offered a wide variety of choices. From Chinese egg rolls to Italian pasta, senior Jenna Dunkle commented, "The food was great; there was so much to choose from."

While Student Council did all the planning and fund raising for the special night, the rest of the student body planned ways to make their night fantastic. The girls chose a formal dress just right for their taste and style.

The men picked out the extravagant tuxedos they would be wearing and coordinated the colors with their dates' dresses. York graduate Christine DiPompeo said, "Sometimes the color matched perfectly and other times you just weren't lucky."

With all the traditions of Prom, the evening lasted late into the night with 5:00 a.m. trips to Denny's or an early trip to Egg Harbor Café. While hanging out all weekend, seniors prepped for the ditch day traditionally held on the Monday after Prom. York graduate Greg Covelli reminisced, saying, "Prom was the highlight of the night but the fun didn't end there."

York Graduates Sean Hannon and Megan Trans were named York's Prom King and Queen. The night was memorable for everyone who was a part of it. As Prom marked that graduation was close, York graduate Erica Hochleutner concluded, "This night is the night that everyone, not just seniors, dream about." - Jay Lukose and Gregory Covelli

Dreaming for big moments, but remembering the small

For the four long years that went by in a heartbeat, the graduates had built up to this one day, this "now" instant—their graduation. They embraced every part of their day, from getting ready with a friend, to taking pictures with every known relative to calm the demand of the parents. They remembered the past, thought about the future, but right then they were living in the moment.

After the wonderful music of 'America the Beautiful' and 'Pirates of the Caribbean' ended, two o'clock came and the ceremony began. After a welcome from Principal Diana Smith, student speakers Rebecca Simo, Christopher Johnson, and Sarah Wilber effectively delivered equally strong, but all unique messages to their class. They encouraged their classmates to take charge of their lives. They had the power right at that moment to decide which direction their lives would take. As Simo said, "We may have made it this far, but we have so much more to look forward to, so much more to accomplish. We've made it this far, but it can't stop here".

That day they all walked down the aisle and across the stage and shook hands with school administrators, faces they would rarely see again. That day became the midpoint between who they were and who they want to be. This class certainly created many positive experiences for themselves as well as for the rest of the school. They led our sports teams, clubs, and organizations; they led the school, and they will continue to be leaders. Their time and our time to make a difference is now.

All Day, All Night...

The Memories are Endless

Summer is the time for all students to make up for the nine months of time consumed by schooling. The three months of summer are the best times of our lives and there are so many ways to enjoy them.

Some people needed to attend summer school to get classes out of the way or they didn't do so well during the year; whatever the reason students come in from 7:45 to 12:15, Monday through Friday to attend summer school. But a lot of people have fun despite having to spend their summers in school.

Others were working at jobs, mostly minimum wage, but they soon found the value of it. Once they received their weekly pay they realized that all the toil was worth it when they headed out to the mall.

Many York students spent their time in summer school or working minimum wage jobs, but somehow part of York's population managed to do something a little bit different from the norm. Sophomore Meaghan MacQueen spent the summer in a horse showing competition, the Worlds Championship. She spent an entire week showing horses in Louisville, Kentucky. "For me it all started with the perfect horse, a great trainer, and the love of the sport. With the help of my family and friends, I achieved 4th in the world," said MacQueen. Junior Sara Nester spent her summer in Guatemala teaching children for Amigos de las Americas. She was able to make a difference in these peoples lives.

Some stayed home, perfectly content to do a lot of nothing. They just hung out, went to the beach or pool and enjoyed the company of their friends. A few of these people got to go see concerts. Senior Erin O'Reilly was lucky enough to see a Coldplay concert. "It was really intense, especially when they played Yellow. I melted when I heard Chris Martin's voice."

All in all the student body was busy just enjoying life to the fullest, regardless of whether they worked, attended summer school or spent time with friends. - Madeline Brodt and Amanda Roszel

We've Got Spirit!

Homecoming Week 2005

There is always excitement in the air during spirit week. Not only because the homecoming dance is just days away, but also because of the people wearing insane costumes, the spaghetti eating and limbo contests during lunch, and the hallway decorations that are worked on for hours and then tipped down before third period.

This year, spirit week started off with a bang when nearly the whole student body wore their pajamas and slippers to school. Tuesday was black and white day followed by western day on Wednesday. Thursday was super heroes versus villains' day. People showed off their favorite heroes by wearing the usual Batman and Spider-Man costumes and also other superhero costumes such as Quail-Man and Under-Dog. At last Friday rolled around with the theme of green and white day. On green and white day everyone showed their school spirit. To say that people wore green and white is an understatement. The halls were flooded with a sea of green and white bodies. Dukes' sweatshirts, sports shirts and jerseys, homemade shirts, and just about anything green and white. Green faces and hair, glitter, and crazy accessories were common.

Although many people had great outfits throughout the week, it is safe to say that no one had better outfits than the queens and kings of the couch participants. Cowboys and Indians, Cruella and the Dalmatians, and Bananas in Pajamas were just some of the spirit costumes of the week. With so many groups competing, this year's Queen of the Couch competition was one of the most intense in years. The nominees spent many hours, late nights, and early mornings working on their costumes until they were just right. Some contestants spent more than $250 on their costumes just for spirit week! One group even started showing their spirit a week early, and eventually pulled through in the end to win the title queens of the couch. "I felt that the winners deserved to win because they put in so much effort for a week longer than everybody else did. It was disappointing that we didn't win, but they deserved it," Queen of the Couch contestant Ashley Stavropoulos said. This year's spirit week was a huge success, and many if not all of the students showed their best school spirit. - Tracie Widmaier

Go GREEN! GO WHITE!

Every year during Homecoming, students pack into the Green and White gym to proudly showcase the school spirit that has been seeping from them all week long. The pep rally is one of the highlights of homecoming week, and the perfect opportunity for students to not only get excused from half of the school day, but also to display their school spirit and dress in their most extravagant, off the wall school-spirited outfits.

The most spirited students in the school - the nominees for Kings and Queens of the Couch - show off their school spirit, and a winner of the competition is announced by Student Council. Another big competition over spirit week is the Homecoming King and Queen position. Nominees are announced, and the contestants walk across the gymnasium. The band plays the school fight song loud and proud, and our very own York Cheerleading and Pom Pon squads give elaborate, meticulously practiced performances.

At the conclusion of the pep rally, the students know that the best is still to come: the Homecoming football game is only a few hours away. Those hours fly by as there is preparation for what clothes to wear, body painting, and tailgating to take care of. The stands pack with students sporting green and white from head to toe - from face paint to boxer shorts. This is the most tremendous display of spirit that the school will see all year. The fans cheer until their voices are hoarse and their mouths are dry. The excitement in the crowd cannot be contained, and it overflows to either side of the stands with students who want nothing except a York victory.

The aura of York football is more inspiring of a feeling than in any other sport. That Friday of Homecoming is one of the most magical days of the year at York High School - a day on which everyone bleeds Green and White.

City Night

As many students rolled up stylishly in limousines and nice cars promptly at seven, others were racing the clock, sprinting in at eight to beat the doors before they closed on them. The revered "red carpet" led the students to the dance scene, which began in the typically quiet and calm commons, now transformed into an atmosphere portraying Chicago. With the hard work of student council, the commons was filled with beautiful decorations of the city painted windows, pictures on the wall of popular city locations, and a large, and life-like art work of a train. As it got into the heart of the night, students who once filled the commons talking and taking pictures went to hit the dance floor.

Compared to the commons, the dance floor, also known as the cafeteria, was like entering a completely different world: loud music, strobe lights, people dancing, extreme and uncontrollable heat, and an increasing slimy floor for those who ditched their uncomfortable shoes. As the night went on the floor continued to pack with students, accommodating seventy-five percent of the school's student body. "There were so many people packed into the cafeteria, it was great to see such a huge turnout for the seniors' last homecoming," said senior Patricia Stratton. This night made history, with one of the largest student turnouts for a dance at York. At eight o'clock the homecoming court was announced and their classmates created a path as the court entered the cafeteria, allowing them to the front of the stage so the king and queen could dance to the theme song, "Chicago, My Kind of Town."

After a night free of fire alarms and bad weather, the traditional dance-ending song, "Hit the Road Jack," began to play. Students filed out desperate for air, but exhilarated none the less. Senior Jacquelyn Rustenberg said, "This was the best dance I have ever been to at this school. Student Council did a great job with decorations and music." What was also impressive was the donation of over $3,600 to the Katrina relief fund that came from a portion of each ticket sale, making this night memorable for many more people than just the students at York.

Ladies' Choice:

A Flip-Floppin' Good Time

Turnabout: the popular dance where the girls are put under pressure and the boys get to sit back and relax. Although Turnabout removed pressure from the boys, while the girls needed to face the stress of finding a date, certain aspects remained similar to other dances. Girls still spent hours searching for the perfect dress, boys still ordered corsages, and groups still made dinner reservations. Like all dances, the effort and planning that went into the dance were all worthwhile.

The boys enjoyed the luxury of not searching for a date and the girls encountered a challenge they rarely face. Although different, many girls like Turnabout, because as junior Karalena Guetrieri said, "it is the one accepted time for a girl to show her feelings and ask a guy to a dance." Despite the stress, many girls eagerly took up the opportunity to find a date. "It's a whole different situation," said sophomore Margaret Callahan, "you feel for the boys because you don't really understand how much stress they're under until you've asked someone."

In the middle of winter, the Turnabout dance, held on February 26, brightened the spirits of York students in more ways than usual. For the first time, student council introduced "Snowcoming," a week of spirit days leading up to the Student-Faculty basketball game on Friday night and the Turnabout dance on Saturday. This made Turnabout into a week-long event and gave the students the opportunity to show some school spirit.

This year's dance was themed "Ballroom Blitz" and in accordance with this theme, the cafeteria and the Commons were decked out in black and gold by members of Student Council. Junior and student council member Patrick Kuehne said, "We try to come up with a theme that people know and can relate to."

Snowflakes and Starfish

On the night of Saturday, December 10th, 2005 people got ready to spend a white snowy night under the sea. Dressed in bathing suits and winter jackets they filed into the commons and cafeteria for a fun-filled night of dancing and hanging out with friends.

For student counsel coming up with the idea for the dance was fun and stress free but decorating was a whole nother story. Members of stu-co came in early in the morning and decorated the area in front of the green and white gym all the way to the commons and cafeteria. In the commons they carefully made wreaths out of blue snowflake ribbons and put pencils and snowflake and fish confetti over all of the tables.

Not only did the students have a part in this but the teachers also got to spend their saturday with the students. Without them the dance wouldn't have been possible. It's brave of teachers to take time out of their saturday nights to spend time with the students that they see five of the seven days of the week.

At 7:00 pm students started showing up ready to dance the night away. They were dressed in everything from ski caps to swimming trunks. The music was great and everyone partied it up. Sophomore Amanda Simo states, "In my opinion, that dance was the best one we've had all year."

When 10:00 came around the dance had ended and everyone filed back out of the commons to their cars to catch a quick bite to eat with some friends. They went away with the past three hours of dancing, hanging out, and just having fun at the Winter dance 2005. -Nina Gortowski

Imagine standing on the edge of the York track at ten o'clock on a Friday night, match in hand, waiting to light a candle dedicated to a loved one who has been affected by cancer. It is the same track that surrounds the football field for Friday night games, the one that is consistently jogged upon during cross country and track seasons, and subsequently the one that encompasses hundreds of pitched tents for the Relay for Life held in June.

The two-day event, sponsored by the American Cancer Society, raised money to help find a cure for cancer. Over one hundred teams participated, each consisting of up to twelve members. Team members took consecutive turns walking the track throughout the night, and participated in different themed laps, such as 'western lap' and 'patriotic lap.' Senior Jenna Dunkle commented on the amount of people participating: "I've never been to a Relay with more involvement from surrounding communities than this year. The turnout was amazing and for such a good cause." Total donations exceeded $380,000 from the event and the weeks that followed.

Many who participated did not sleep for the duration of the entire 12 hours; however, it was not all fun and games. Each participant was affected by the disease in one way or another, and the emotional aspect of Relay was a huge part of the reason that participants became so involved year after year. Senior Relay committee member Lauren McHugh reflected on why Relay is so special: "You really get an idea of what the Relay is all about during the luminaria [ceremony]. You can look around and see hundreds of glowing bags, each meaning something different to each person, but meaning enough to bring everyone out for the event." - Kara Nottelmann

What's The Buzz?

THE SUPERSTAR SHINES

Graduate Alyssa Beach, who plays Mary Magdalene, awakens a sleeping Jesus in Jesus Christ Superstar, played by graduate Wesley Kennedy. - Photo courtesy of Lifetouch

The typical musical production consists of many singing and dancing numbers, along with dialogue. The plot is light and cheery; the production flows to a beat that makes it seem like time flies. This year's spring musical cast took a different route to achieving another great work of art with Tim Rice's "Jesus Christ Superstar." The re-telling of Jesus' life through song and dance made the subject matter suitable for everyone, young and old.

The cast was composed of more than sixty-five students, one of the larger casts to put on a production at York. Instead of having everyone perform in all four shows, the cast was split so that two students doubled up for most of the characters' parts. This situation was optimal for reasons other than just memorizing fewer lines: junior Kelly Floyd said, "having a split cast allows for encouragement from your 'alter' actor about things you need to work on or keep the same."

While the plot has a serious tone, there were parts that added a light feel to the story to make it the musical that it is. "Herod's Song" is a representation of the power that King Herod possesses, however in JCS, the character is played by a woman, and the song is a vixen-like number with dancers and flashy costumes.

"What's the buzz?" This was the theme song of Jesus Christ Superstar, and also the advertising campaign that the cast and crew used to promote the production. The students did not know what the 'buzz' was, however once they saw the amazing performance that the York cast produced, it was hard to not figure it out.

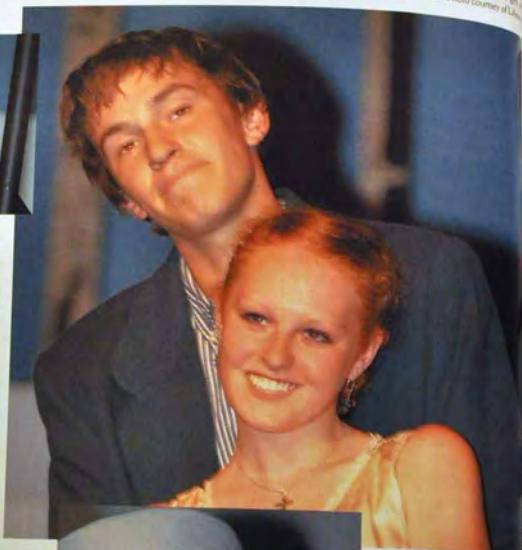

A musical creates a sense of the dramatic and the spectacular, and this year's "Jesus Christ Superstar" was no exception. A lot of hard work was put into the production, and senior Kelly Floyd believed it was all worth it in the end: "The people were great, and everyone was crazy during practices - a lot of lasting friendships were built." - Kara Nottelmann

It's De-Lovely

Summer: the time of year when most students try their hardest to stay away from school. The students who participated in York Summer Theater are the exception to this rule. The cast of the summer musical, Anything Goes directed by Mr. John Forsythe and Ms. Becky Marianetti, showed true dedication as actors and actresses by devoting their summer to rehearsals and performances.

Every weeknight the cast assembled for practice beginning approximately at six thirty and usually lasted about three hours. However, during crunch time, the week before the show, practices lasted much longer. The typical practice began by taking attendance. Attendance was important because the participants of the summer theater received a grade based on attendance and a fine arts credit. After attendance, the cast members split into different groups, depending on one's role, to rehearse songs, scenes, and choreography in preparation for the big show. Although practices were fun, the actors and actress faced many challenges. Sophomore Keith Potts said, "Because the characters were so out there and unrealistic, it was hard to stay in character."

The play, Anything Goes, took place in the 1930 aboard a cruise ship. Passengers on the ship included aristocrats, business men, a famous entertainer, and a gangster. Many passengers on the ship became ensnared in complicated love triangles which added a comic twist to the musical. The performers all enjoyed the play. Sophomore Melanie Hughes said, "It's a funny play, and it's always fun to perform funny plays."

Although the play took time away from spending summer evenings with friends, the performers enjoyed practices. The participants experienced less stress because everyone made the play. They also did not need to worry about going home from practice to work on homework. Junior Emily Owen said, "It's a different atmosphere and most people are much more relaxed than during the year."

For the participants of the musical, their hard work was well worth the effort. After six weeks of practice, the efforts of the actors and actresses were rewarded by four successful shows and a sense of satisfaction. Hughes said, "It was one of the best times of my life because being in the show gave me more confidence." - Sarah Small

Making it Big

On the stage of stars

This year's fall play, Stagedoor, is a play that York drama took from a unique angle. Taking place in NYC, there is conflict between the struggling theatre actors and the rich young, hip Hollywood stars. Originally taking place in the 30's, York theatre took it from a completely modern perspective with costumes one might see someone off the streets of New York City wearing. Written by a man known for his comedy, George S. Kaufmann, and a woman known more for her serious works, Edna Ferber, Stagedoor was a play that presented the style of acting one would expect to see from a movie or reality TV show; casual. The characters work their way to stardom on the stage and on the screen while living with actresses who share their same dream of fame.

The cast worked relentlessly, spending an average of three hours a day, five days a week perfecting each scene. They worked for 6-7 weeks before the opening night. Beyond the talented actors and actresses, there were also people involved in publicity, make-up, lights, moving the set, and many more people who volunteered their talents for the show's success. The cast developed their acting and speaking volume for the play doing vocal exercises. Keith Potts, a sophomore playing the role of a publicist working with a rising actress explained,

"You're always learning. Every rehearsal you learn something new."

The fall play was a great place for rising actresses to expand their talent and find something they were truly keen on. Vicky Lewis, a senior playing the role of 'Mrs. Shaw' said, "I like that I can meet new people and express myself without being embarrassed." To add to that, Vicky said she learned to be patient and persistent, two things a large production require. The York actors and actresses demonstrated their love for drama through their dedication of time and talent to the production of this Broadway-quality show.

Stagedoor provided a source of fun for the drama participants. Annie Stoik, a sophomore playing the role of Madeline, a rising actress, said that it is "great when you get to play a character who has an interesting personality."

As the young bohemians developed their skill on the stage, they found that much of what the play was made of came straight from their own interpretations of their part. Mr. Forsythe, the director said, "I just set up the stage pictures. They're going to bring it to life." Fortunately, the Stagedoor script was offered many interpretations as Mr. Forsythe had "never done a production before that had such a diverse group of actors." - Heidi Tucker

Who Could Ask For Anything More?

This year's winter musical, "Crazy For You," was one to be remembered. All of the hard work and dedication put into the play paid off, in a series of spectacular productions. The stage manager for this year's winter play, sophomore Kendall Knysch, explained the difference in preparing for a musical versus a straight play: "During a musical, the preparation is based on more of the dancing and vocal performance elements, with extra training on the side. During a straight production, the acting is concentrated on more." Although this particular musical required a little bit more than simple dance routines, some of the roles needed to be able to tap dance.

In December, a tap clinic was put on by the school, in order for some of the actors to learn the art of tapping. When sophomore Emily Drahokoupil was asked about the practices and rehearsals, she exclaimed "They're really intense!" Practices often times would start after school and run until nine at night. At the practices, they would run the show and sing and dance for long hours, sometimes even five or six times a week.

After all those intense practices, it was not hard to believe that the cast of about seventy-five actors and musicians put on such a phenomenal show. Drahokoupil was able to sum up her favorite part and one of the more rewarding parts of being in the play: "The people- they are a lot of fun. You get so close with them; it's like a big family." - Kristina Albarello

Lights, Camera, Snowball!

Who says that Snowball wasn't an awesome weekend? No one, that's who!!! Operation Snowball was a student planned weekend that promoted positive choices. The educational topics of the weekend focus on drug and alcohol awareness, self-esteem and respecting yourself and others.

Students that went to Snowball met in front of school, got into their groups and headed off to Camp Timber Lee in Wisconsin. Once at camp, the students went to their cabins and explored the camp a little bit. It was all fun and learning from there. Snowball was privileged to have such powerful speakers such as Bill Johnson, who discussed the importance of positive influences in our lives, Michael Lee, who discussed why we need to run the right race and Sarah Panzau, who learned from the outcomes of her negative decisions brought that knowledge to Snowballers. An adult leader, Colleen Griganavicius, said "Every single speaker changed my life." Snowballers were also fortunate enough to be entertained by performers such as the Busa Family, Kristi Thomas, a chalk artist, and MWAH! The Busa Family was an African family who taught Snowballers rhythm, dance, and even some African dialect. Kristi Thomas talked about determination in life and then created an amazing piece of art using only chalk and a bed sheet! MWAH was a performing arts troop that showed us how to deal with problems in our life through song, dance, and acting. One extreme MWAH fan, David Bennett, spoke out, "MWAH is pretty much my life".

Operation Snowball 2005 was a huge success. Many students got the opportunity to learn about themselves and the positive choices in their lives. After all was said and done Robin Rogers, the advisor said, "My back is still achin', my belt is still too tight, and my booty is still shaking from the left to the right!" -Luke Kahovec Talent...

Comes In All Shapes And Sizes

Many of the students at York are blessed with a special talent. Fine Arts Week is dedicated to showcasing their abilities and enriching the lives of the rest of the student body. This year one lucky freshman had such a beautiful gift that she was able to get a ceramic vase into the National Gallery in Washington, DC.

A major part of fine arts week was the talent shows ran three times during the day and a combined night show where parents can attend. Over 80 acts tried out this year, somehow the advisory team, made up of students and faculty chose 30 of the best acts to perform.

Many different teams go into creating the final product. In order for the show to go smoothly deans, teachers, performers, audiovisual crew and the master of ceremonies must cooperate. Set up for each show includes a period each of set up and take down.

Though every Fine Arts Week is great; over all there is some room for improvement. Mr. Ron Polancich, the head of the advisory committee, said "There are a lot of musical acts and I want to incorporate some more drama and art." However there were some very diverse groups this year such as the About Face Theater Company, Page to Stage, Student Musical Competition, and an Irish Fiddle band. The About Face Theater Company was hired by A.S.I.S to promote awareness and acceptance towards all kinds of people. The group performed several shows with great success. Page to Stage was a student performance of short poems, much like Java Live. The Student Musical Competition showcases the compositions of gifted students performed by other students. An Irish Fiddle Band was brought in by Junior Ester Krause, who performs and competes with their own compositions often, to perform during the talent show.

A creative end to the Fine Arts Week this year was the Java Live show, where performers showcased some of the best poetry and short stories in the school. New to the show this year is the student art work along with the readings. So ends a week full of musical, literary, visual, and dramatic entertainment performed by gifted individuals who wish to share their gifts. - Madeline Brodt

Where in the World Are the York Dukes?

What's so great about traveling? No, the question is what isn't great about traveling? Hot guys and girls, good weather, new foods, new people, and good times are only some of the reasons to travel. But these Dukes didn't just travel, they left the country to explore the world!

"The reason I went to Germany is because I wanted to see the world, and I was studying German," said senior Bradley Olalde. Bradley went to Germany over the summer of 2005 with seven other Yorkers. "I had a really good time," said Brad.

Freshman Demi Passaris went to Greece over the summer to visit some of her family who lives there. "The culture there is just so laid back, it's really nice. On top of that, the weather is amazing!"

Senior Kara Nottelmann went to Spain over the summer of 2005. She was not used to the culture shock she encountered while there: "Spanish men aren't used to seeing light-haired American girls, so we got whistled at a lot." She wanted to experience the different culture, and be on her own for a few days. When asked what she liked most about her visit, she said, "There's a place called Pans and Co. It's kind of like Panera, only better. I could eat it every day."

2005 to Lithuania and returned to America 10 months later. Marie said, "I did French-back-to-back in fifth grade, and ever since I have been hooked on traveling. I try to do as much of it as I can." Although Lithuania is a small country, Marie had some troubles navigating at first. "A few times I accidentally took a bus in the wrong direction and I ended up in a really bad neighborhood. After a while I began to know the cities like the back of my hand!"

Sophomore Sinead Flood visited Ireland in February of 2006 for a dance competition. Sinead liked many things about the country, but she liked the boys the most. She said, "I liked the candy and the accents! Every guy dressed very well and had a nice accent." The weather in Ireland was gloomy, but she still had a great time.

Junior Marleigha Lossin visited London, England in November of 2005. She enjoyed the different culture she experienced when she was there. "Everyone took the underground everywhere, and the night life started at twelve." And of course, Marleigha liked the boys she met and saw there. "There were really hot guys on the train all the time!"

Traveling was a great way for these Dukes to experience new cultures, foods, and people. They had a great time and got to see new places. - Jenna Lindman

The York Hockey Club . . .

Beats the net!

Hockey has been regarded as one of the world's oldest and most difficult sports to play. It has evolved over 200 years and is continually growing, reaching new heights and breaking new records. This was exactly the theme of the York Hockey Club, whose twenty-one members broke some new records of their own.

The YHC had a challenging but successful season. They were in a constant battle with Downers Grove South for the first place spot, but, in the last regular season game, a victory over Glenbard West helped York end on top. With an impressive 15-4-1 record, the YHC not only finished 1st in their own division, but also took 1st overall in the ISHL.

York went on to the Cougar Cup playoffs with high hopes to continue on to the State Tournament - The Blackhawk Cup. Unfortunately, York was defeated in the first round, but their success in the regular season still ranked them 15th in the State.

"It was disappointing to loose right in the beginning because I know we could've gone all the way," said senior forward Jordan Martinez. "But we did have an awesome season. Probably the best in the past four years I've played."

Even though York suffered in the playoffs, they had an outstanding regular season, which many will never forget. Their overall teamwork and the strong bond between the players and the love of the game was the best it's been in years. Which means, next year, the YHC will have to step their game up even further to get higher than they did this season. - Maureen Ohler

This isn't

Tea and Crumpets

When the sport of badminton comes to mind, one might think of two quaint couples chatting away as they sip their tea and eat their crumpets while gingerly batting the shuttlecock over the net. However, the girls on York's Badminton team would like to argue otherwise. "If you can survive this, you can survive anything," says captain senior Brittany Meding.

Badminton may be thought of as a traditional "backyard" sport, but York's forty-one member team practices over eighteen hours a week, including numerous Saturday mornings at 7:30am. There's no slacking off in these practices because it is there that the top players are chosen by Meding and junior varsity captain, senior Karen Russell, to participate in the upcoming meets. The girls usually have one to two meets a week and play fifteen matches (scored to twenty-one) each meet. Ten singles players compete as well as five doubles teams.

The girls also competed in five Saturday morning tournaments, taking first place at the Glenbard South tournament and coming in second at York's own invitational meet. These tournaments usually start at 7:30AM and can go as late as 3:00 PM.

This year, the girl's record greatly improved thanks to last year's tough conditioning and aim of improving their game. "We lost so many players to graduation two years ago," said coach Wayne Fite. "Our team's strength is in the depth of our line-up."

The Lady Duke's also set two specific goals to meet: to win their invitational meet, where they took second, and to beat their toughest competitor, Lyons Township High School, which they did in a close win, 8-7.

Coach Fite's passion for intense conditioning as well as his and Russell's supportive sponsorship and pasta parties contributed to York's 5-2 record and Junior Varsity 1 record, their only loss to a champions Downers Grove team. "Overall, our goal is to be physically and mentally quick, and to make a statement at conference with peak performance," said Fite.

A strong line-up, excellent coaching, and teammate support are these girls' season one to remember. Their impressive record is looking up next year," said Fite. "Badminton is a backyard sport? Not to these girls. They'll send you back inside."

It's 90 feet to first No matter where home is!

Do not let the fear of striking out keep you from playing the game is exactly how one would describe the way the baseball team played. They were fearless and pushed their limits to the extreme. They went into every game thinking about nothing but baseball and focused on winning the game. They practiced every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday and everyday at 5:45 in the morning. They had game every Tuesday and Thursday and two games on Saturday.

Another thing that helped improve the team, besides practice, was the returning players. Some of the members of the team were returning from the previous year and were familiar with each other's abilities. This helped them to know what to improve upon and how to defend themselves in the outfield. The defense strategized and used their best skills to stop the opposing team from scoring. Senior David Burchfield said, "You can count on an aggressive performance from the defense." The team had returning members Brett Fankau who was an important starting pitcher and Kevin La who was an excellent hitter, which helped the team to win. They worked really hard and together as a team. They put all their effort into practice and pushed themselves so they could be their best.

The members of the team themselves were very strong-willed players and wanted to win. Junior Kevin Sullivan described the team as "Competitive because we don't like to lose, we try hard to win." This kind of determination is what helped the team to win.

Coach Brad Sutter was very proud of his team and said, "We are beyond where we thought we'd be and we're so pleased with where we are." Obviously this team performed to their best ability and made the Duke team something to be proud of. - Lindsey Dyer

Practice Makes skills come ALIVE

Tuck, twist, and salto are a few of the common terms used in gymnastics and heard among judges at the meets. With the known reputation as "one of the oldest sports around", this year's team continued to keep the compelling sport living strong. With numbers of 24 athletes, 2 coaches, and 1 manager, the season easily spelled success.

Practices went six days a week for three grueling hours. Each started with conditioning that consisted of muscle strengthening. Later, the boys continued by splitting off into groups to practice on specified events such as the rings, horizontal or parallel bar. Some days, the team would perform a longer workout by adding an additional time towards the end of practice for more conditioning.

Junior, Nathan Webb, said "practice is physically demanding and can be fun if you want it to be. You can learn a lot if you are willing to."

The team bonded together, both in and outside of practice. This seemingly led to be a winning factor throughout the season as the boys accomplished excellent placements in every meet. According to Coach Richard Larsen, "the teams had great chemistry and work ethic and did well this year."

These athletes have proven their balance, strength, and agility in every practice, more so at every meet. Although like many other sports it has its ups and downs, this team always got right back up and provided York with another outstanding record. - Rachel Arenz

Kickin' it into high gear

It's one on one between the goalie and the opposing player. The player kicks the black and white checkered ball with all her might. It curves towards the corner of the goal. Too late the goalie dives for the ball, and everything seems to go in slow motion. The next few seconds determine whether the ball is saved or if it will go past the goalie's outstretched arms and swish into the back of the net.

While this shows the exciting side of soccer that most people think of, it leaves out the work needed for a successful season. York Girls' Soccer Team prided themselves on teamwork on and off the field. In the beginning of the season the girls took a weekend trip to work on unity through group activities and ropes courses. Sophomore Jessica Winn said, "The trip really helped us get to know each other and act more like a team."

This unity proved necessary for success in a sports team that puts eleven players on the field at once. It forced them to work together at all positions for eighty minutes of play every game. It became necessary for the upperclassmen to stand up and act as leaders for the six underclassmen on the team so that they would play well as a team. Captain senior Erin Sahly and the other seniors were responsible for keeping the entire team working well together, especially through their phenomenal 9-2 first half of the season. Sahly believed that "All positions are equally important on the field, and we are not a team without them all."

Working as a team is made all that much easier when coached by the Illinois High School Soccer Coaches Association coach of the year, Ms. Lindsey DiTimasso, the coach in her final year after six successful seasons as head coach, retired after the season. More Than Just Playing

In any sport, the truly defining element of the game is the effort put forth by its participants. Of course, raw talent is an important aspect of any game, however talent will only take a team so far; effort will elevate them to the very maximum of their potential. This is a fact that Girls Softball coach Tom Babyar knows as well as anyone. "Everyone is trying," said Babyar. "There is lots of effort, I see improvement and I feel they are growing as performers."

In softball, all positions and situations need to be broken down and mastered, as well as intense drill and form-work, individual practice on hitting, fielding, and overall smart softball skills.

Softball is a game that requires knowledge of the game and focus in every play, and without the contributions of every girl on the team, the group would never be able to function as a whole. Senior captain Rachel Ahrens identified with the importance of team unity, saying that they must "play together as a team and support each other." Every girl knows that softball is a team sport, every position relying on another. Without the pitcher, the game could not function. Without a right fielder, the game would simply not be practical, because a ball hit to that side of the field would go untouched. Softball is a game that is tailor-made for a cooperative team, and the unity of a York squad is a perfect example of such a team.

Although their season wasn't the perfect gem that they hoped for, they know the value that every year possesses for the future of the team. Of course, there is the cliché adage "It's not whether you win or lose, but how you play the game," but the girls did more than just play; they put their heart and soul into every pitch, every catch, and every play. The effort and style of the team showed the true nature of a group of women and their incredible desire to have the best season that they possibly could. - Shepard

Game... Set... Match!

A bouncy, light weight, yellow ball tossed into the air for a spectacular start to the season. Man on man, there was no room for error due to the ongoing competition. However, there was plenty of room for inter-team battling.

Starting off practice with a drive to Berens Park, with Coach Bill Sir behind the wheel, the teammates filed on to the tennis courts. Singles or doubles, these Dukes were always trying to be their best in order to determine placement in matches. Junior Jason Roan said "there was no bad blood. Everyone wanted to get better so we pushed each other to win every match. We just tried to have fun, even though it did get competitive at times." Matter-of-factly, Roan said "if a player lost in an inter-team game; that was that. There were really any hard feelings." The team qualified for sectionals making it truly a rewarding season.

An excitement came over Coach Bill Sir when he stated with enthusiasm that the team was their "best they could be." The previous season of 7:4 brought these players a right set of attitude towards one another; sense in which they were certain to carry with them the rest of their lives. Sammy Choyke

Balance. As described by senior Ronald Stefani, it is the ability of "our track team to have such an awesome blend of hard work and fun." It is difficult to maintain such a delicate balance season after season, but this is what separates this team from other high school track teams and what makes this team so successful.

Family. The team, including coaches and members, created a very unique atmosphere to be in day after day. When working with friends at practice, the next day at the meet their friends became their competitors. This made staying positive and encouraging towards each other extremely crucial. The attitude of this team was what kept them together and made them so victorious. Senior Justin Jones said, "I really enjoy the competition, between my teammates and between competitors for other schools. I also love seeing other guys improve, such as underclassmen showing what they are really made of." As hard as it can be to take constructive criticism and instruction for two or more hours six days a week, all of the participants took it in stride, used it, and were better for it. Senior Matthew Dettman said, "I wouldn't be where I am without the coaches that we have. I don't think anyone would be. I love just taking in everything they know and using it in any way possible."

Distinctive. A unique aspect of this team and sport is the diversity of talent needed to succeed at a variety of different events. During practice everyone splits off to work on their individual events with their respective coaches. Such categories of events include long distance running, sprinting, jumping, hurdling, pole-vaulting, and throwing. It seemed like it would be hard to keep the team as one, practicing separately every day, but coach Mr. Stan Reddel said, "The kids know that just being on a team is more than just performing. Our kids are very good about knowing their job isn't done after their event; they go on to cheer on their teammates who are still competing."

Furthermore, the participants not only chose their captain, graduate Michael Bennett, but also got to pick their MVP, graduate Sean McNamara and put faith in them as their team leaders. At the State meet, Bennett and McNamara led the team into Charleston, Illinois, where at Eastern Illinois University the team won second place, proving that at the end of every meet no matter the importance, the team is still one, and still united.

RUN JUMP THROW

NOW They do it All

They stretch, run, lift, and put a lot of dedication into what they do. They endure the pain, and get that feeling when they know they finished their race and shaved tenths of a second off their time.

"A lot of times, practices are pretty hard. Occasionally, we have our easy days." Junior Michelle Connor describes the practices. Alternating running and field events during practices, one to two days the work outs were hard, another one to two days was either a meet or conference, with the two remaining days an easy work out for recovery.

With all the training they do and all the success, they still had some things they needed to work out. The distance runners needed to work on speed during their turnover. The team also needed to train more on different surfaces to help prevent injury.

With all the hard work came rewards which this girls had seen. For the first time, the team took first place at their own York Invite. The varsity team beat out Willowbrook, and took fourth place at the Downers Grove North meet. The 1600 meter relay team consisting of senior Molly Sullivan, graduate Brittney LaSpisa, junior Courtney Wilson and senior Margaret Gregory broke the record of 4:07 with a time of 4:06:23.

With a record-breaking season, and many good memories all the hard work, training, stretching, and pain they endured had paid off. "We have a good group of girls and good captains. The team has a lot of depth too. They just need to believe they are good because they are," head coach Ms. Annette Schulte said. - Amanda Roszel

This years team...

Closer than ever

The doors fly open to the green and white gym. The first and most prominent object in one's court of vision is a bunch of boys bumping and setting volleyballs. This is the boys' volleyball team working hard at practice.

Volleyball is more than just a sport for Coach Fatty Iverson, it's part of her life. "This year's team was as close as a family," Iverson said about her team. "They [the boys] communicate the high expectations they have for each other. They show the trust and respect they have established for each other in drills and games. They joke with each other in a friendly way." Graduates Michael Westendorf and Sean Wagner were hand-picked by Iverson to lead the team as captains. "In volleyball it is very important that your captains can communicate well with the coach and the officials as the floor representatives in matches, so they are not chosen popular vote," explained Iverson.

This year's team was one of the closest so far. According to Ben Tregler, "Volleyball is a team-oriented sport, so we bond a lot of time we play...it [the team] is fun and promotes good teamwork." They communicated well with each other and acted more as a family would than a team of teenagers.

Some guys set personal goals. Tregler "set the goal to be a starter" and the team also set a goal to finish the season over .500. They worked hard throughout the season and reached their goals. They shared goals and helped each other achieve them and also made a commitment to be a part of the team which requires showing up every day and giving it their all no matter what is going on in their personal or school lives. - Claire Sheridan

BIG in Heart ... Small in Numbers

The Football team has Homecoming; the cross country team has state titles, the basketball team draws a crowd, but what about water polo? While water polo may not be as widely known as some other sports, the Boys' Water team delivers a great game for every crowd, no matter what size. As their coach Mr. Mark Forde put it: "I love every aspect of the game...It's great to see the sport is finally growing and becoming recognized." Indeed it is great to be recognized.

This year's team chose captains which included four seniors who played the sport for all four years together: graduates Timothy Balgemann, Tyler Cruse, Andrew McClintock, and William Waychunas. They worked together to help one another perform to the best of their abilities. "It's great to see the guys become such a great team as the year progressed," explained Coach Forde. The boys only became closer and better throughout the season. Coach Forde continued, "Our water polo team is very close, and they really have fun as a team." Many of the members enjoyed how close the team was when united against other teams. Junior Robert Kowalkowski said his favorite memory from the season was when the "entire team got a yellow card for being 'too loud' while cheering. We would also go to Rainbows, Fontanos or sometimes play Frisbee after winning meets or hard practices."

Coach Forde really believed and stressed to his boys that "being part of a team helps with many aspects of life. Teamwork and team-building skills were the most important and foremost. Second, the positive socialization the guys gain throughout the season and dedication to the team and to practice is good for the boys' welfare. Finally, the workouts encourage positive, healthy habits for their futures." Coach Forde was a positive role model for his athletes. Kowalkowski said, "He's a good coach and he has done a lot for our team." Junior Andrew Waychunas agreed saying about Forde, "He's a big Irish-lad who's more like a friend than a coach." Their record was better than last year's and they were finally recognized by the media and coaches as one of the top 20 teams in the state, finishing at about .500. They played very hard and had won against some of the other top teams in the state.

While water polo may not draw as big a crowd as some other sports, that never dampened the spirit of the boys on the team. If anything, the lack of attention motivated them to strive higher to prove to the world that they are just as cool to watch as other sports and that they deserve recognition for their accomplishments, no matter how big or small the crowd. - Claire Sheridan

No Horses in this pool!

The Lady Duke's many accomplishments were achieved by jumping into the freezing pool, doing swimming warm-ups, and passing drills during the grim hours of the morning. In addition to this tough morning routine, after school practices consisted of scrimmaging and offensive and defensive strategizing for upcoming games. The girls practiced both the physical and mental components of the game. A water polo game consists of four quarters of seven minutes each. Each team tries to score against the other team's defense through many series of passing and shooting while treading water in a pool.

Other components of their game consisted of communication, determination, and most importantly teamwork. As junior Rebecca Pilolla said, "When we work together, we know where our teammates are in a game, so together we can achieve more." The girls showed their team unity through their constant encouragement. As sophomore Ellyce Redmond said, "We have encouraging coaches and teammates that pump us up and encourage our playing before and during the games."

Varsity coach Mr. David Rafferty-Flatter and JV coach Ms. Katie Martinelli were pleased with this season, as was the entire team, as the team ended up with a record over 500. The team's constant determination and hard work throughout the season paid off in more than just a long list of achievements. The Lady Duke's ended up with new friends, new pride, and most importantly new-found respect.

25 Alive in 2005

Cross-country, noun(s). A familiar word imbedded into the hearts of students all over York High School. The tradition of the boys cross country team has been rooted into our hearts permanently; never will we forget this year's impeccable season.

To some, running is a sport; to others running can be a way of life! Although the cross-country season is just a few months long the training continues for months following the season. Practice is everyday, six days a week and everyone is also encouraged to run on Sundays! Training for cross-country is high impact physically and mentally. Not only is the muscular endurance of long distance running required, as well as a positive mindset is a necessity! There you behold the key to this team's success: a positive outlook and a never give-up attitude. Juniors Benjamin Sharkey and Joseph Field believe that, "By being number one in the nation we have a lot of pressure bearing down on us but we still have fun."

Coaches Joe Newton, Charlie Kern, and Clyde Ware taught this team life lessons that will forever be remembered and never forgotten. 2005 marks Coach Newton's 50th year of being at York High School, and if the team is successful at capturing the state title this year will mark the 25th for Newton. A select few of the returning star members to this year's team included Eric Dettman, Matthew Dettman, David Montgomery, and Nicholas Kuczwara. Juniors Michael Fry and Timothy Jung, along with Sophomore Thomas Achien also contributed to the team's success. The hours upon hours the dedication the athletes have put into the team have finally paid off. Senior Eric Dettman said "It was quite an experience being able to run for Newton, not only has he taught running to each one of us but lessons that will never be forgotten, it was amazing!" Train Right, Eat Right, Dress Right, Sleep Right,
Pride, Excellence, Tradition

It's 3:30 pm and while a vast majority of York High School students have already gotten home and flipped on the television to watch old TV. Reruns, the York Girls' Cross Country Team has just begun one of their very hard practices. While most people cringe at running the loathed "mile" during gym these girls can't get enough of it. During a typical practice the girls run anywhere from five to nine miles. These long and strenuous practices prepare the girls for meets where they must run three miles at their full speed. What made these practices so strenuous according to sophomore Catherine Callahan was "the intensity and high speed of the team."

"Don't be afraid to be great" head coach Larry Bassett said to the girls before each meet. He would say this because sometimes the girls were afraid of their full potential and actually being great. Also coaching the team was Mrs. Annette Schulte. The girls started the season off with a bang, taking second place at the St. Charles East Invite, and third place at the Lake Park Invite. The goals for this year's team, like every other year according to Coach

Bassett were to win conference, regional and sectionals and place the top three in state. The team accomplished most of its goals. They took second at conference, losing the title to Hinsdale Central in a six person tiebreaker. They then went on to win sectionals and regionals which qualified the team for state. The team went down state and rocked it. They took 10th place. The runners that competed for state this year were seniors Molly Sullivan, Heidi Tucker and Katelin Sawosko; the sophomores competing were Angela Pizani, Allie Hall and Margaret Sack; also representing the freshman class was Shreya Khat

While all of this running may seem overwhelming to some, the York Girls had fun during the process. The night before each meet the girls would gather at a teammate's house for a party. During the pasta parties, Heidi Tucker said "we eat massively and dance to techno and Michael Jackson." The girls also formed invaluable friendships. As junior Kara Andersen put it "the team is so inspirational." - Courtney C

Remember

The Dukes

"Over-rated", the York fans screamed at Downers Grove North as York took an early 7-0 lead. Downers Grove North, the defending State Champions, was now losing and never competitor, was now losing and never were able to come back. "The game proved how good we are and that if we continue to improve we can achieve great things," Coach Bill Lech said when asked about the game. The York Varsity Football team did accomplish great things, such as, winning the West Suburban Silver Conference. York's first Conference Championship since 1997. Coach Lech was a new coach this year. Coach Lech is and alumni of York High School. It was a lifelong dream of his to come back to York. He had of his to come back to York. He had great experiences here and he wants to share that the players he coaches. The difference between our players and players he's coached before was, "The players here are more dedicated, they appreciate what it means to work hard and they enjoy the benefits." Some of their goals were achieved due to the player's hard work and mind set to never give up.

Junior Ryan Grieve a left guard on the varsity team said the most enjoyable thing this year was, "Seeing the support of our fans out there. Our fans played a huge role in the Hinsdale Central triple over-time Homecoming game." Like Justin Peacock said at the pep rally, "People asked me why Hinsdale Central for Homecoming. The real question is why not?" York never gave up and the team kept fighting, there was no doubt that York wouldn't win. As the crowd poured onto the field, smiles could be seen from miles away, the thrilled look on the varsity player's faces could not be compared to anything greater. The huge smiles and the amazing season of the York Varsity players will never be forgotten. - John Bretl

Different Strokes

FOR DIFFERENT FOLKS

Where can you find a student who not only has a strong golf swing but a great attitude, and talent to boot? The York boy's golf team would be the place to look. Mentally strong and physically talented, these athletes train hard at each practice to represent York and enjoy doing it. "I really love to play golf and a lot of my best friends play," says sophomore Benjamin Halen. "My favorite part of being on the team is getting to play golf everyday." Whether it is competing on the course or hitting at the driving range these guys are all about having fun and doing their best.

Golf itself is a challenging sport, but just making York's team requires a large amount of skill and discipline. Out of the 42 students who tried out only 18 made the team. The large turnout for tryouts may be credited to the success of the squad. This year the boys finished with a six and four dual record, came in fourth in conference, and advanced to regionals and then sectionals. This was no easy feat. The team's conference is a difficult one which includes schools such as Hinsdale Central, Glenbard West, Downers Grove North, Oak Park River Forest, and Proviso West. Even with that much competition their lead player just narrowly missed qualifying for state by only four strokes. The Golf team's success comes from hours of practice. The squad practices every day after school with the exception of Fridays. A normal practice can include playing nine holes of golf to hitting at the driving range for a couple of hours. The boys, however, always remember that the main focus is to enjoy them selves and remain in good spirits. "Really the goal is to have as much fun as possible. That's what the coaches want for us. I sometimes have more fun with my teammates than actually playing," states Joseph Widmar. "Whether we win or lose we work to keep up a good attitude and even if we're in a slump we keep up a positive attitude."

The team has the potential to achieve even more success in the future. "The senior leaders are probably the strongest we've ever had. We have a group that has some major ability and is fairly talented," says coach Jim Borel. The boys are confident of themselves and skills also. "I'm definitely the coolest kids in the school," jokes Halen. With the many achievements and ability it's no hard to disagree. — Dana Augustus

These Girls... Are Up To Par

It takes people 20 years to get 3000 hits in baseball. Golfers do it in one afternoon practice, at the golf course. People also say that golf is a "mans" sport but apparently not anymore. The girls' golf team is taking over. For the first time in York's history the team is went to sectional competition.

These girls were hard working and dedicated players. They practice everyday and sometimes gave up there Saturdays to play for the team. Daily they would get on a bus. Get to either Oak Meadows course or Sugar Creek's course, to practice and represent our beloved school in conference competition. The girls are split into groups to work on techniques such as putting, chipping, and driving. Their golf season started early august and end in September. The meets they work most for are conference, regional, and sectionals. Those meets are the ones that determine if they go to state competitions. The coaches that dedicate the time to help these girls are head coach Barb Tilden and assistant coach Gary Walker.

When asked if the girls improved from last year? Assistant coach Gary walker answered, "Right now we have the same top three, but four, five, six, and seven have all made pretty good improvements. All the girls have made improvements in scoring, putting, chipping, and driving." When coach Walker was asked what he liked best about coaching, he answered, "The best part of coaching is working with high school aged athletes that want to play or perform as good as they can and its just a huge plus if they want to continue to play at a college level." Some of the girls want to continue well into college because they have been playing since they were young. When asked how she became involved in the sport, Senior Lauren Laftsidis answered, "when I was 10 years old my dad taught me how to play. When I got here I found out that the school had a golf team. So I joined." Most of the team has been playing since they were ten, eleven, and twelve. The prior experience of some of the team members also helps the team put more attention on the players that need assistance. It also benefits the team in general, so that the coaches only have to make minor adjustments to swings of the players with experience.

The girls golf team is a very hard working team that helped each other get better and supported each other when they play well or not. The golf is an amazing sport and if anyone thinks it is boring pick up a club and try it then say you don't like it. So when you think that 3000 is great for baseball. Just know that 3000 is nothing in golf. - Stephanie Aguilera

Kickin' It

Up a Notch

"Team unity," this is what co-captain, junior Jordan Lomnicki, identified as the York boys' soccer team's greatest strength. A factor that created this strength was that the varsity team had nine starters returning from last year. All of this experience made the team practically unstoppable. They finished the season with a total record of 13-6-5 and a conference record of 3-3. The team was even seeded 4th in sectionals, out of 18 teams.

Coach Markus Roy made strides in his first season as the head varsity coach. He was able to improve the record from last year from 9-10-2. The Dukes added 4 wins and also lost 6 games less than the previous year. Coach Roy believed that there were a few keys to success. He had his players work hard every day and they pushed themselves and each other in order to succeed. If the team was down in a game, or they struggled at practice, Coach Roy found relief in the fact that the teammates picked each other up. It was most necessary for him to do it because of the great self motivation the team had. Co-captain along side Lomnicki, junior, Randall Richter noted that the team worked well as one unit with no individuals, who "hogged the ball" or would not pass, on the team. The team was able to rally together and move the ball around the field from player to player. Richter considered this to be part of the team's success.

The success of the team was exhibited in the Dukes' game against St. Francis. Both Lomnicki and Richter agreed this was the highlight of the season. The team was down 2-0 at the end of the first half but then they tied it up for the score of 2-2 until the last minute when the Dukes scored to pull ahead and made the score 3-2. St. Francis was tough competition for York, which made victory truly sweet.

The team's competitive nature, persistent hard work, skill, and the effort put forth were all big parts of the team's success. All in all though, Lomnicki claimed that the team chemistry the York boys' varsity soccer team had was the most important part. - Kristina Albarello

SWIM FAST DIVE PRETTY!

"GO DUKES!" the crowd shouts! The girls take their marks. They get set. They GO! Through the crystal water, the girls swim as fast as they could. Moving up and down the lanes, each girl races to finish first. Finally, the race is over, and the girl who wins pops her head out of the water. She looks at her time, she yells "YES!" York wins! The coach is very excited. "The best part of coaching, is to see the surprised look on someone's face when they have just accomplished something," head Coach Dave Davis said.

The girls swim team all worked as hard. "Most of the girls work just as hard and love the sport as much as I do," said senior Caitlin Humrickhouse, the captain of the team. They practiced before school two days a week, and Saturday mornings. A normal practice averaged swimming 5000 yards! The team was divided into two workout groups, one more challenging than the other. Some people switched from the lower workout group to the harder one this year, to challenge themselves more. This year, they looked for more people to join the upper level group. "With so many girls it's hard to keep us all as a team," said senior Emily Hatz, another captain of the team. Even though the swim team is some what disorganized they still work hard together.

One of the strengths as a team is that they supported each other and helped each other overcome obstacles. "One of the strengths as a team is that everyone pushes each other really hard," said junior Laurel Hecox. Even if there were problems between girls on the team, they were resolved. "One of the pressures in being a captain is that you have to be willing to settle conflicts between people. You have to set an example," said senior Emily Hatz. The positive atmosphere that the team created made everyone get along magnificently and they all are encouraging of each other.

The girls swim team is hard working, dedicated, and willing to put the extra mile in order to achieve a goal of theirs. Even though they were supportive, they also had a lot of fun on the team. "Sometimes we have too much fun and don't work as hard as we should," said senior Caitlin Humrickhouse. - Rakhi Shah

Don't Settle For Love..

In the words of the freshman and sophomore team, love means nothing! What they really mean is that the score at the beginning of a match is love to love, or zero to zero. Therefore, the end result of a game is not affected by how well or how poor the girls play at the beginning of the game.

The York Girls tennis team practiced every day after school at Baren's Park, which was held under the direction of head coach Mr. Dave Williams and assistant coach Ms. Laura Eck. During a period of two hours, the girls worked not only on serves, over heads, and other fundamentals of the game but also on different aspects Mr. Dave Williams felt the girls needed to improve upon. "Our practice is based on the weaknesses from our previous matches," said Coach Williams. The hard work put forth by the team really paid off and varsity not only had a great start to their season when they tied for first place at the Wabonsie Valley Invite, but also had a fabulous finish! The girls won sectionals and placed 1st in the State.

"I'm sad it's over because it was such a good time, but I want to be people to have as good as an experience as I did," said senior varsity captain Becky Jenkins. The varsity team is also lead by senior captain Jennifer Williams. There was a new addition to the team this year: freshman Kelly Be, whose unexpected talent really added to the success of the varsity team.

"This year, we are really close as a team, and we all bond well together. Everyone gets along well and it's so fun that way," said captain sophomore Christy Diamond. The girls also had pasta parties before meets which helped them to become even closer as a team. When asked about why she joined the tennis team, varsity player, Maggie Madden replied, "Because I LOVE it. It's fun and the pasta parties are the best part." - Maggie Kenny

Bump, Spike, and Set

As Good as They Get

Pinkies grasped tightly, a group of girls form a tight circle on the court. Each one contributes her wishes to the goals for the game. The circle splits, and the girls take their positions on the court. The York Dukes girls' volleyball team is ready to play.

This year's team was composed of girls from the tenth to twelfth grades and new-to-York coach Patty Iverson. Despite an assortment of different grade levels, the team got on extremely well. Senior players helped the younger girls get used to playing at the varsity level by teaching by example and sharing experiences from past years. Eight of the girls had an opportunity to play in the Prairie State games in June 2005, which helped them get acquainted as a team. Not only did they spend much time together at practice and games, the girls had pasta parties before games and spent time together outside of school going out to lunch.

Practices were after school for anywhere between two and a half to three hours after school and on some Saturday mornings. Practices consisted of running, stretching, and drills for passing, hitting, blocking, and serving. Once a week, the girls jumped into the pool for plyometrics, exercises using explosive movements like jumping, to help with their strength.

Leadership from coach Patty Iverson prepared the girls for the tactical part of the game with knowledge and encouragement. One of the ways she helped the girls with this aspect of the game was by using situational drills that involved hitting and serving the balls to strategic spots on the court. This year's captain was senior Audrey Darley, who was, as sophomore Megan Koval put it, "As solid as a rock."

Learning to play as a team is a hard thing to do, but through practices, encouragement, motivation, and learning to trust one another this year's players brought the ideal amount of individual ability and hard-working attitude that made them a successful team and lead to a great season, with a final record of 19-15-3. Coach Casey Stengel said, "Finding good players is easy. Getting them to play as a team is another story." All together, the combination of old and new players, a new coach, a strong captain, and hard work at practices and games made for an excellent season for the girls volleyball team. - Sinead Flood

"One Heart"

They brought new hope!

Basketball, the sport that really never had much of a place, next to cross country or football. The basketball team this year past has changed that. York is no longer known for its "long green line", but for its incredible basketball team. This team brought out a whole new fan base along with school spirit from students and staff. When senior captain Shannon Dunne was asked what is different this year from last? He answered "Everything. That is the perfect word." Well it was apparent that the biggest change this year was having a new coach. For if you want to win him the team wouldn't have had the opportunity to go on and win the silver conference for the first time since 1968 or win 1954 regional.

Head basketball coach Al Biancalana has changed the team completely. He was hired and has done nothing but change the program. The coach has 24 years of teaching experience and having coached at Stage High school and Bradley University, definitely helped. When asked why he became a basketball coach? He said "I love the game and I love teaching it." When the Coach Biancalana was asked what specifically he had brought to the program he responded by saying, "I have given the team direction and purpose." that is no lie the team has dramatically improved from last year. Although the talent was there, it was hidden in the players and the coach made them show the amazing potential they could have and encouraged them to improve.

A lot of the team has improved, but the time between last year and this year, is a year of experience that adds on to the many they already had. Most of the basketball players have been playing since they were children. Some had been playing for 14 years. When Senior Nicholas Zerante was asked how long he had been playing the sport he answered "Since Forever". When Senior Captain Shannon Dunne was asked the same question he said, "I've been playing for twelve years."

The team was incredible and we expect a lot of the returning players next year. Hopefully this new found legacy continues for many years. "Basketball, the ultimate sport, because of that there is a place for everyone to contribute and become a valuable part of the program", says the coach himself, Al Biancalana - Stephanie Aguilera

Nothin' BUT NET

When you combine talented girls, a hard working coaching/managerial staff, dedication and determination, the outcome is a strong team that receives respect.

The York girls basketball players practiced a minimum of two hours everyday. Each practice consisted of 70% basic skills and 30% game strategy and plays. Head coach, Mr. Steve Cochran said, "The strength of this year's team is its defense and work ethic. Lots of teams would fold under pressure but this group has continued to work hard everyday on their basic skills and their tremendous defense has kept them in almost every game".

But even more so, great team chemistry made the girls' performance on the court even stronger. They were physically and mentally equipped with power. Senior point guard Brittany James said, "Everyone is friends with everyone. We play as a team and have each other's back". As for improvements from last year, it's all about playing as a team and coming together as one. Coach Cochran states "Our system calls on the players to be unselfish and requires true team play. Because of our size, we cannot play a few players. We must pressure the entire team. That takes a team".

Everyday these girls put forth their best effort and enjoy the experience and lessons that come with the game. With that, they were able to take knowledge learned in season, which goes above and beyond a game of basketball, and carry it with them towards their future. After practice, close-call games, bad calls, working as a team to win, these girls revealed who they were on the court and proved their love for the game. - Rachel Arenz

Imagine this: twenty three girls pulling into two of York's mini-buses headed off to Stardust Bowling Alley to practice their bowling skills. This is just what York's bowling team does. They practice their skills so they'll be ready for their meets where they have to bowl three games, and six games on weekends to their best ability. At a typical practice the team usually bowls five games, each game focusing on something different. In their first two games they bowl for strikes only, and on the third game they bowl for the seven and ten pins only, and on their last game they bowl to get their highest score.

Bowling, unlike other sports, doesn't have bad wind condition, or bad weather to use as excuses for bowling badly. It's all up to the person. Unlike tennis, or soccer, where you play against an opponent, bowling you do independently-but compete against opponents' scores to try to beat them. According to coach Dave Williams "ninety-five percent of bowling depends on the first two steps you take". Sounds a little nerve-racking doesn't it? Well it is, and involves 100% concentration in order to get the results you want.

The bowling team is under the guidance of Coach Dave Williams, and Coach Larry Bassett. Varsity standouts include Seniors Allison Prosek and Veronica Pollack; Juniors Jennifer Jensen, Marie Hansen, and Jessica Lambert.

While the girls did take bowling seriously, they still managed to fit a lot of fun in. According to Junior Marie Hansen "bowling is really social, we all help each other out, cheer for each other and we do big sister, little sister." - Courtney Grob

They're Flippin' Awesome!

Flipping upside down, swinging from bars high above the floor and balancing on a beam are all difficult tasks, but imagine trying to perform these under the scrutiny of judges. This would scare many people but it is this pressure that the York High School's girl's gymnastics team thrives upon. "Gymnastics isn't only challenging physically, but mentally. It takes balance, strength, a then there is also the fear factor that plays a large part in it", says head coach Kandi Pajer. "The girls are pretty hard working and have goals in mind which helps the team out a lot." Unlike most sports there are four different events that five girls from each level can compete in. The vault, the beam, the floor and bars are all very dangerous to perform. The judges give scores out of 10 to each of the individual that compete for the team on each event. These scores are added together and determine the teams rank. The team faces tough competition against various schools. The girl's main focus this year is not the other competitors' improvement throughout the season, staying healthy and having fun. "This year we did okay. We usually score 126 for total team points at dual meets which is an improvement from last year," says sophomore Olivia Kosh. Teammate sophomore Stephanie Sen adds, "We always have a lot of fun. Even though we aren't always the best team." Though the girls missed overall during the year did not meet up to their expectations, sophomore Jacqueline Stefani, Jordan Wilson and Shannon Wilson all qualified in individual events at regionals. "The girls help each other out a lot," says Pajer. The tight knight group enjoys the moment of their season and have already begun anticipating next year. "Joining the York Girls gymnastics team is an awesome experience and it was all year long" says Sen. It is their determination next year's team will become a force to reckon with. — Dan Augustine

Chlorine...

THE COLOGNE OF CHAMPIONS

"BEEP" The buzzer sounded and six swimmers dove into the water for another exciting race of the 2005-2006 boys swimming season. According to Head Coach Mr. Mark Lueck there are the most swimmers here they have had in years. They came in ready to swim and had a great season.

When asked what he enjoyed most about coaching the boys swimming, assistant coach Mr. Dave Davis said, "seeing success in my swimmers after all of the hours of hard work and the excitement the athletes have for going out on a daily basis." When he says hard work he means hard work.

Practices started at 6:00 in the morning and went until about 7:00. The boys would jump in the pool ready to swim despite the few hours of sleep most of them had gotten the night before. The morning portion of the week out included some kind of running or swimming conditioning that Mr. Davis had planned in order to get or keep the boys in shape.

After a long school day the guys wandered on down to the pool again for a full after noon of swimming. Their afternoon practice started promptly at 3:30 and went until 5:30. If they worked hard and did not cause trouble, they might get lucky and get out of practice a half an hour early. The afternoon practices were packed full of interval training and stroke mechanics to get those guys to swim as precisely and quickly as possible. Without this hard work they would have never done as good as they have this year.

All of the hard work paid off at the end of the season. After putting in three and a half months of hard work and determination they sent three boys to state for four different events. The boys included were Sean Freidheim for the 50 freestyle and the 100 butterfly, Kevin Sullivan for the 100 breaststroke and Nathan Webb for diving. The boys should be proud of their success in yet another great swimming. Chlorine really is the cologne of champions.

Layin' Down the smackdown

Wrestling could possibly one of the most difficult sports at York High School. Wrestling takes determination, perseverance, and strength. The wrestling team participated in exhausting and strenuous practices and even sometimes came in before school.

This season the team had a great coaching lineup. Coaches for this year were head coach Mr. Terry Clark, assistant coaches Mr. Gary Walker, Mr. Terry Grider, Mr. Matthew Cochran, and Mr. Dan Urbanski.

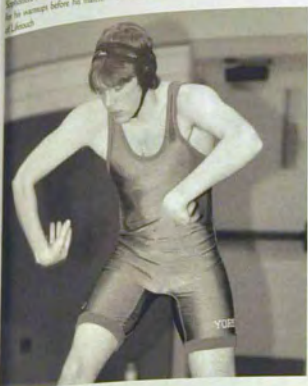

This season, the wrestling team competed in many competitions. There were over twenty dual meets and about four major tournaments. Junior Nicolas Senese said, "Our most exciting meets were against our rivals Lyons Township and Glenview West."

The team had a variety of different ages on the team. This year did not prove to be a difficult year for the team. As Junior William Kerney said, "The team this year is getting along very well. We all work well with each other. We are working hard and doing well." Indeed, they did quite well this year. The wrestling team did well at the conference, regional, and sectional meet.

The wrestling team works very hard and persevered through many difficult practices. This year, through hard work by the coaches and wrestlers, the team brought great pride to the York and Elmhurst communities. - Luke Kahovec

Duke Cheerleaders

Bring it on

The sun is beating down and the bleachers are filled with fans while green jerseys buddle in the background, the York cheerleaders make their way in front of a crowd of five hundred people watching their every move. As they neatly line up in front of the fans they naturally keep their composure and all at once begin a routine they spent weeks creating and practicing. Everyone in the bleachers is fixated on their routine and drawn in by their chants and cheers. These are the York cheerleaders; the girls who help create school spirit in order to motivate York athletes rain or shine and this year they proved to be a success.

After school on a regular basis, the cheerleaders met in the gymnasium area ready to practice and finalized choreographed cheer routines. Spending a couple hours practicing often involved stretching, jumps, stunting, tumbling, dancing, cheering, and practicing sidelines. Although cheerleading can be tiring, all the girls agreed it is worth it in the end. Cheerleading is not just a one season sport but accounts for an entire year.

This sport is not just about practice and competitions but is more so involved in friendships and strong bonds amongst these girls. Just about every cheerleader has made a life long friend. Senior Kristin Heraty said, "the girls are a lot of fun and we've grown really close, we clicked right away". While first year coach, Ms. Megan Foley said, "This is a growing year with a lot of new members; we're continuing to bond". With that, York's twenty-seven York cheerleaders can be seen at countless games, cheering for York's fine athletes to bring home another win. -Rachel Arenz

POMS MAKE You Lose Control

EAT, SLEEP, AND DANCE! That is exactly what the Poms did this year. This dedicated group of talented girls practiced year round to impress their peers and compete in intense competitions.

The summer going into this year, the York Poms qualified for nationals for the first time in history. "The team this year has been more aggressive than last year. 'I think the team is striving to be more competitive', said Christine Lambert, sophomore.

Tryouts were also very tough this year. "Tryouts were pretty crazy, it was one of the most stressful weeks of my life", said Christine Lambert. Although tryouts were very difficult, the hard work paid off. That continued throughout the season and it showed when they performed at the football games and Homecoming Pep Rally.

The Poms achieved many things during this year too. They competed in eight competitions. To prepare for competitions they would do their dance many times, and they would correct any mistakes they might have had. In addition to that, in the fall they had their annual carwash to help out their team. This year the team made over a thousand dollars, and had an awesome time in the process. Christine Lambert said, "The car wash was a lot of fun, and we made a lot of money. We had a lot of different types of cars and enjoyed doing something a little different than other teams."

As you can see the York Poms had a very successful year and enjoyed it too. Go Poms! - John Beel

not just another club

For these students, Auto club is not just an extracurricular activity that looks good on a college application; it is a preparation for their future. Auto Club is an organization that helps to prepare their members for real life in the automotive world. "We don't just play around, these kids are here to gain experience for their futures in the automotive world," as Mr. Ron Robak put it. Mr. Robak supervises all of the meetings and gives the members help when they need it.

The members learn independence and responsibility by choosing to spend their time at meetings. Junior Nikola Maksimovic believed that Auto Club has helped to open up career opportunities for many students... (it's) been really fun and I have learned a lot from Auto Club has also stuck with their past students even past graduation.

In fact, when an Auto Club member graduates, they autograph the inside hood of a car club works on all year. Many have continued their careers involving the automotive world. Former students who now own car related businesses or are just still fans of cars come in and help the members out. They help to teach them the art of body work and to prepare them for competitions like the Ford AAA and UCCA.

Mr. Robak believes that Auto is one of the most successful clubs here at York because "we mix fun and business, which most clubs fail to do and that is why we are so successful." Auto club helps to bring their students the experience and preparation that they need for their futures in the automotive world. - Claire Sheridan

CHECK Them Out, Mate!

Chess Club, it's not just a club, it's a team! Chess Team is a more fitting designation than 'club' for these chess playing gurus. They meet every Tuesday and Thursday to learn more about the game and try to master it. As they took on other schools as opponents, they hoped to get a win for the team. The Chess Team did very well at competitions this year. These kids are crazy about chess and aren't afraid to show it. "I never think about anything but chess," said senior Jonathan Gher. "I eat, sleep, and drink chess!"

The Chess Team was created five years ago by Mrs. Leslie Stipe. A few students suggested how they thought there should be a chess club and Mrs. Leslie Stipe then decided to sponsor it, even though she had no previous chess-playing experience. The club soon became a place where friends gathered to compete against one another and learn from each other. Every chess-player on the team was unique in their own way. "We're a very diverse group," claimed Stipe, "It's a fun mix of people."

Though it helps, one didn't need to be especially good at math to be a good chess player. That's just one of the stereotypes Mrs. Leslie Stipe was trying to have the club defy. She said, "The stereotype that only boys play chess has also been broken [by our team]." The Chess Team has added several women to the club. Andrea Munger said, "All the other schools [we play] are surprised when there are girls."

Not only did these kids come to play chess, they also came to have a good time and eat some food. "Mrs. Leslie Stipe makes awesome salsa" Munger said.

All in all, Chess Team is a team of good friends and good times. "If you want to make some good friends and play some brain-teasing chess you should definitely check us out" said John Gher. - Jenna Lindman

A Circle Has No Corners But A Friend Around Every Curve

Imagine that it's that time of the month again. A time filled with laughter and music, a time for food and movies, and, of course, a time to plan the next week's kickball game. There's music and dancing, planning and planning. Yes, it's that wonderful time of the month again; it's time for the gathering of York's friendliest organization, Circle of Friends.

Each month, a group of students and students with disabilities come together to eat, drink, and be merry, and plan fun outings and future meetings. For almost every holiday, the Circle would fight for their right and hold a huge party, enjoying hours of games, fun, and food. Music was also an essential element of these parties. "The students loved to listen to music, especially Rock 'N Roll," said Circle advisor, Mr. Andrew Bendelow. "[Senior] Cheryl Nolasco can do a wicked Michael Jackson impression."

Aside from partying hardy, the Circle would also divide into teams and play various sports. Kickball was, by far, their favorite, with each player being an essential part of the team. Senior

Christopher Wagemann was the all-time all-star pitcher, but was no match for junior Jonece Dansby who held the record for the most homeruns. Other than kickball, the Circle also liked to play soccer, volleyball, softball, and "knee-ball," a slower paced version of soccer where the players "walk" on their knees.

Individually, these activities may have seemed demure and ordinary; but together, they made a bigger picture, and ultimately fulfilled the main purpose of Circle of Friends. "The purpose of Circle of Friends was essentially to bring the whole school together and to widen [one's] typical circle of friends to include people of all kinds," said Mr. Bendelow. People of all colors, shapes, and sizes could come together and be themselves without fear of being judged.

So when that special, special time of the month rolls around again, Circle of Friends will be there to comfort and console and to share the latest kickball tips and strategies.

They Aren't Egotistical!

They're Eco-Tistical!

Ecology: the study of organisms and the environment. With our world being in the condition that it is we owe much thanks to those who are eco-friendly and trying to preserve our planet.

This is exactly what Eco Club's mission was. With a group of 30 kids who are sponsored by Mr. Bob Blaus they did simple tasks to help the environment. For example, they met every Tuesday during alternative lunch periods to recycle the school's paper waste.

They also collected things like sneakers to help make new playground surfaces or crayons that can no longer be used and then are remolded into new ones. They then collected empty Altoid boxes to put the new crayons so that they could send them to places who needed them like schools affected by Hurricane Katrina.

Other activities they do to help the environment are collect old cell phones, batteries and empty ink cartridges so that they can be properly disposed of.

Usually Eco Club goes on many field trips, but unfortunately due to the field trip ban they had been unable to this year. So many of their outdoor activities had been cancelled, but they try to do the best that they can with what they have, said Mr. Blaus.

Ecology Club at York has affected students in many ways. "I think Eco makes the students aware of environmental issues that are neglected by the student body," said junior Elizabeth Hickey. This club helped students to take action and help save their planet. These students truly carried out the meaning of reduce, reuse, and recycle. - Lindsey Dyer

The Spirit Of York: First Class

One of the very first things you learn as a kid is the golden rule, treat others as you would want to be treated. First Class spent one Wednesday every month reminding us of that golden rule and the four pillars of First Class: pride, dignity, respect and attitude.

The four pillars aren't just for fun; we need to live them out and the activities that they planned helped to make their pillars to work in the real world. First Class is about keeping up the all of the four pillars that maintain York's atmosphere.

First Class maintains York's positive attitude and makes it a better place to go to school. "First Class helps to maintain the fine traditions of York. Every member makes a difference..." some of the students make fun of the activities. "But it doesn't matter to members because the activities help to voice problems that the majority of York is unaware of," says Junior member Claire Sheridan. Whether it's dealing with school spirit or preventing bullying, they got it all done.

In order to get all of these things done, First Class needed a lot of people to help. Lucky for us, all of these people had a ton of school spirit. Not all of these people were in the club, some were teachers and others were students who weren't in the club but who lead the activities during second period classes.

Since First Class has started, it has made York a model for other schools. First Class helps to create and maintain school spirit. This year one of the things they wanted to work on was reinforcing what the guest speaker said about bullying. They had a discussion on what the school should do to stop bullying and got lots of feedback. One of the things that First Class definitely got done was remind each and every one of us that we should treat each other with pride, dignity, respect, and a good attitude.

The Verdict...

Is In!

York's law team has always done well over the years, and this year is no exception. Things are looking up with many new members and a new advisor. York's law team competes in roughly five events a year. They compete with the same members and further into it. The case this year is based on three teenagers being suspected of damaging gravestones in a cemetery, on a January night. The beginning of the year started out with the law team meeting to discuss the information. As the year goes on, individuals of the team focus more on getting into their roles of the case and practicing their actual trial. Getting into the role of the character and getting everything to be near perfect before trial time takes a lot of hard work. Law team practices Tuesdays and Thursdays after school, as well as meeting on Saturdays with real attorneys to help with preparation. Although practices take up a lot of time, law team members all agree that it is worth it. "The mock trials get intense, but it is a great challenge to be able to work through with your teammates." Says Caitlin Regan. During mock trial competitions, real attorneys and judge's score team members on a scale of 1-5. They are scored on things such as how they present their information and how well they seemed to have prepared. The trials take place in real courtrooms. The mock trials provide great experience for the members, most of which who would like to pursue a career in law related professions when they get older.

"The law team is constantly getting better" said Jacob Wolff. "Older veteran members are continually passing along the knowledge and experience gained over the years to the new members." The law team has high hopes as usual for all of this year's competitions. - Tracie Widmaier

Keeping It Current

What is Model UN one may ask? The Model UN team has been around at York for 15 years. Senior Maggie Baker explains the club by saying, "We assume the positions of member countries of the United Nations and discuss possible solutions to major world problems." Each student is assigned a country and they research the country and their stand on an issue or current event. Ones they had this year included the hurricanes and the tsunami. They then take that research to a conference in Windsor, Canada for the Canadian American Security Councils. Each year, the team here at York is the only one from Illinois that is invited to that conference. Last year, Juniors Samuel Sletten and Jose Nietaras both received awards for outstanding delegate at that conference and they were hoping to increase the number of awards this year.

Now, one might ask, what goes on at meetings and conferences? At meetings team members usually discuss important announcements and decisions that need to be made. They also plan for upcoming conferences and talk about parliamentary procedure. For conferences they research and write a paper about the issue they were assigned and get it checked and revised by team leader Mrs. Angela Sebastian. They then go to the conferences with their assigned country and debate for the weekend. One wins the debate by convincing other students that their idea is the best.

Does all of this sound interesting? According to Mrs. Sebastian, "Model UN is a great way to learn about politics and get involved at York." The best thing, she says, is seeing shy people get involved in conferences and seeing them really excited about world issues. If there is someone out there who always watches the news and is caught up on all the world events, then Model UN is the place to be. The best part of every year is debating real United Nation issues through the eyes of students. Model UN is York's way of keeping it current.

Service and Leadership

... all for the greater good

It's 7:10 am, and while most students were still trying to get out of bed, some of York's best students headed towards the school for a meeting of only the most elite scholars: the National Honors Society. The sponsors this year were Ms. Tatiana Bonuma and Ms. Sukhpreet Singh. The officers, President David Montgomery, Vice president Jenna Silver, Secretary Ronald Stefani, Treasurer Catherine LeRose and Historian Allison Witham put their skills to use by running all meetings. Scholarship, Leadership, Service and Character are the four words National Honors Society members lived by. They did many service projects throughout the year, which included coupling with Student Council to do a massive food drive. They donated all of the goods to an organization in Chicago. The other fundraiser they have done in the past is flocking, or charging someone a price to adorn a friend's yard with pink flamingos when they are having a celebration.

While NHS needs sponsors, like any club, "it's very student run," help with inductions and selection. The meetings are run by the officers," said Ms. Bonuma. Because the members of NHS have so much in common, such as their impeccable grades, superb leadership qualities, and their desire to help others, it is natural to think that they were all the best of friends, but that is not the case. Senior Vice President Jenna Silver stated, "the nice thing about NHS is that while you have your political preps, and your nerds, we all overcome our differences in the end to get the job done." - Amanda Simo

Represent!

York's Intelligence

The fast thinking students at York have had another year of victory. The Scholastic Bowl, a group of twenty-nine gave their best efforts and came out with success. The Math team has worked hard and found themselves in a similar situation. Together these students applied their education to the competition, giving our school a good name.

The scholastic bowl is a team at York that goes to tournaments where they go up against two different schools. At each meet there are roughly 16-20 students. With a Varsity and Junior Varsity team, five people represent the school at a time. One match lasts roughly an hour with 30 questions. Highlights on the team include sophomores Andre Gordillo, Chelsea Reutcke, and Robert Marsan. Also, junior Maxwell Allison specializing in current events, Russian Literature and pop culture, and junior Matthew Kipnis. Senior Yanbing Cui is a long-time scholastic bowl hero, having been a captain since sophomore year. Mr. Jeremy Paschke the head coach said, "this year we've been on the winning side of a few blow-out victories".

The Math team similarly competes with their smarts, however, math team wins math tests and the outcome of a math team meet depends on how their tests turn out. One York math team representative Aneasha Suresh mentioned that she "likes math team because of the candy contests". At math team meets, after the competition is over, twenty-five questions were given out to the teams and the team that scored the highest got candy. In addition to the fun, Aneasha Suresh argued that math team made the members smarter. Suresh said that "It raises my IQ every second." Clearly, Scholastic Bowl and Math team members made this year a successful one through their hard work.

Helping Others

Key Club is the oldest and largest service program for high school students. Key Club International counts nearly 5,000 high school clubs worldwide. The York Community High School Key Club goal is to solidly establish themselves within the community of Elmhurst as well as the York community. The York Key Club is sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Elmhurst. The Kiwanis Club works closely with York's Key Club to offer members many opportunities for service and leadership.

Key Club is entirely volunteer based. They help raise money for charities and other organizations and have various projects throughout the year. The Key Club works closely with the Kiwanis Club on their Peanut Day and Pancake Day programs. Other projects that they participate in are Relay for Life, DuPage Senior Citizen Council, Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, and United Community Concerns of Elmhurst. Key Club are always open to any new project ideas and are always ready to serve the community.

Ashley Dick, a senior this year, contributed greatly to the success of the first full year of Key Club. "Being involved is what I do and this definitely satisfies that part in me." Val Stewart, Director Community Relations and Publications, is also a member of the Kiwanis Club of Elmhurst and helps organize the events that they provide services to. Since last year, the Key Club has gone from 10-15 members to about over 60 members this year. Everyone is getting involved, being active and serving others, as well as making new friends and taking on new experiences. - Christine Saenz

Listen Up!!!!

We have something to say.

Fear, anxiety, panic, cold feet are all words speech team have taken out of their vocabulary. The speech team did what most people in this world fear the most: speak publicly. These students take risks and speeches to another level. With a little bit of style and dazzle the speech team leaves jaw dropping effect on any audience.

Speech team meets on Mondays to discuss the week's events. In addition to their 8 classes a day and other extracurricular activities, speech team members have individual practice sessions with their coaches each week. The practice varied from 13 speaking performances, memorized speeches, original material, and improvisations, with others. At these rehearsals speech team members get their speech or skit critiqued by their coach.

Almost every Saturday morning at 6:00 a.m., the crew gathers at York to travel to competitions. Senior Heidi Tucker explained, "Speech team is sweet because we get to eat, compete, and beat. What I mean by 'beat' is that we beat the other teams and their mothers," she added, "kill their mothers" and then went on to make a disclaimer saying that she was not being literal.

Speech team in all odds was never just a "team" but, more like a family. Each member of speech team developed relationships with each member on a personnel basis. Always determined and cheerful the team took every challenge as the ultimate test to prove everybody their performance stood alone every engagement with other schools. - Jason Lukose

They're Not Lost in Translation

Who needs to travel the world when right here at York, the best of a range of cultures were celebrated every week? Italian, German, French, Spanish and International club all gave students the opportunity to enjoy different cultures, without having to leave Elmhurst.

Learning about other cultures isn't boring. As senior Italian club president Natalie DelPercio said, "We learn, but we still have fun." In Italian club this year, there was plenty to enjoy. Meeting every other Monday after school, members of the club enjoyed activities like making food, including pizzelle cookies, Italian waffle cookies, and homemade pizzas, Bocce ball tournaments, and making ornaments at the Christmas party. Italian club gave its members better understanding and appreciation of the culture through activities and experiences.

German club has been around for a long time at York. This year, the club celebrated the 43rd annual Weihnachtsfest Christmas Celebration. The festival was complete with modern German music, caroling, a Rumpelstiltskin skit, and German desserts. Besides the fest, the German club gave students, "A chance to learn about the culture in a more relaxed environment," as advisor Ms. Laura Halvorson said. It achieved this through cultural activities that included cooking, crafts, food, and sometimes German films.

This year, French club gave students the opportunity to use the language and have fun. One main event this year was Immersion Day, during which students participated in various activities while doing their best to converse in French the whole time. Members also threw a Mardi Gras party, complete with food and gifts, and had an end of the year lunch at a restaurant where they sampled some French food.

Many students study Spanish at York, but there isn't always time to learn about the culture while in the classroom. Spanish club members encountered Spanish food, music, and language that they couldn't have just learned about in a class.

Instead of just discovering one culture, International club members learned about the food, music, and cultures of a number of different countries. Students of different ethnic backgrounds were given the opportunity to share their culture with other students. Sophomore Emma LaPalermo said she enjoyed being a member of international club because "You get to learn about other cultures in a unique way, not just from a book." At the end of the year, the club celebrated with a movie night.

The Italian, German, French, Spanish, and International clubs all gave students the opportunity to celebrate and discover the food, music, games, and art of the cultures by participating all within the walls of York. Sinead Flood

The Band Played On...

"Mr. Merrill Rocks!" Sophomore Matthew Webbecky could not help but contain his excitement for York's band instructors, as well as the band itself. Part of a band's success relied not only on how dedicated the students were, but also on how much the instructors were involved. Judging by the 200 musicians in York's band, it was obvious that these talented and devoted instructors were doing their jobs and made band an extremely successful program. These instructors include director Mr. Ron Polanich and Mr. Curt Merrill.

There are currently three different levels bands here at York. Most freshman and beginning players start out in the Cadet band and work their way up to Concert and finally Symphonic. The Symphonic band consisted of York's finest players and "You have to be fundamentally solid, it also takes hard work year round and the ability to interpret and play challenging music," felt senior Colin Grandemard. Band is also more competitive than most may think. Students competed and auditioned in order to make first chair which according to Mr. Polanich, "Takes much practice, private lessons, consistent daily attention in class, and a little prayer."

Students in the Symphonic or Concert band were required to participate in Marching Band. If it weren't for marching band, York's home football games would not be the same! The Marching Band put on a great show and really got the crowd going during half time. Also, the Marching Band was fortunate enough to have the opportunity to perform in the Northwestern stadium along with about 30 other high school bands during half time. "It was such a cool and fun experience playing in front of such a huge audience; the stadium was packed!" Replied sophomore Amanda Simo. York also has a Pep band, which performs during Basketballs games.

Students who shared an interest and wanted to specialize in jazz music have the option to audition for jazz band. Unlike York's other bands, jazz band did not rehearse daily and it was not a class period. Students who play in jazz band met after school.

Once a year, all band members perform a solo, on which they are judged on. Also, chambers, groups of about four to six people, can choose to show off in front of the rest of the band, playing a piece supplied by the band director.

Overall, the students in band are those who like to rile up the crowd by playing during half time, while at the same time are extremely dedicated and hard working. - Margaret Kenny

Do Re Mi...

Putting Words To Music

Among all of the basses, tenors, sopranos, and altos there is a certain camaraderie. Choir brought a lot of things together this year involving different types of people, languages and songs.

A lot of progress was made this year. Before the concert, the singers had to learn the music. First, they needed to warm up and they did this in fun little ways like using SOLFEGE, in other words Do Re Me Fa So La Ti Do, to Yo ho like pirates. They then moved to learning notes then the words that went along with them. When they had the music memorized they were ready for their concert. All of this took place during only one period for several different songs.

The choirs split into small groups, called chambers, which had three or more singers in them. They worked together on their individual vocal skills in a group. Then they all had a chance to perform them for the class.

This year the choirs sang songs in Gaelic French, Japanese, and Spanish. Plus a southern spiritual, Don't Let Nobody Turn You Round.

Besides the variety of music the singers were exposed to they got to hang out with their friends while doing what they love. Learning little things about their craft made it an extra bonus. Junior Jose Nateras says it best, "What I like best is the ambiance of the music makers." Overall the goal is the final product, the concert.

Cadet choir and concert choir let males and females voices shine; while Choraliers had only sopranos and altos. So many people joined choir that only concert choir was able to have the professional looking choir robes.

Choir can be a relaxing experience. Putting your heart and soul into the music and be an release after all of the hard pressures of the school day. Overall choir combined different people, types of music, and languages to create an enjoyable environment for all. - Madeline Brodt

It's Not What you Can do for Yourself...

It's What you Can do for others!

What exactly has FCCLA accomplished here at York? Most students are familiar with the organization but really have no idea what it is all about. Family Careers and Community Leaders of America is a nationwide youth organization geared toward high school students who want to help better the community and assist families in need. A major part of FCCLA is also aimed towards promoting interests students may have towards a possible career opportunity within the family and consumer science field. The qualifications for being eligible for FCCLA are simple; any student who has taken a Family Consumer Science class, such as interior design, clothing, or any of the variety of food classes, is able to join. Sophomore Emma LaPalermo, secretary of her Advanced Clothing class, said, "I really enjoy clothing class and wanted to join a club that shared my interests." The officers each had their own set of responsibilities and duties to tend to but also work together to plan service projects, such as sending needed items to troops in Iraq, to get the rest of their class involved.

One major advantage of being a member of FCCLA was having the opportunity to go to competition. Students were given the chance to compete for the Family Consumer Science class they were taking and were judged on their work. Competition allowed students to have a fun learning experience by giving them the chance to meet and see other students work. "Students gain a knowledgeable experience through competing in the specific area they may want to go into later in life," said Ms. Pat Shumate who teaches Interior Design. She is one of the FCCLA sponsors along with Ms. Barbara Lasko, Ms. Diane Marten, and Ms. Wendy Soltau.

In addition to competition, FCCLA plays a role in serving others. Along with sending letters and supplies to the troops in Iraq, FCCLA adopted two needy families for Christmas. "We are working on our adopt a family project for Christmas. Our class is buying gifts for a little three year old girl, we're really going to spoil her," said senior Abigail Toth, who is the president of her Interior Design class.

Overall, FCCLA consists of High School students who just want to make a difference and gain a fun memorable experience. When asked what she likes best about being apart of FCCLA, senior Ashley Dressel replied, "My favorite part about being in FCCLA is helping the community and going to competition." Living The Dream

Many students at York dream of going on to college and becoming a teacher. However, the students involved in Invite to Teach do not have to wait until graduation and college to make that dream come true. Invite to Teach is a program where seniors have the opportunity to take time out of their day, go to an elementary or middle school in District 205, choose whatever grade they would like to teach, and learn beside the teachers they would like to become. Before they can do this, however, they have to undergo a rigorous application process. The requirements are at least a 3.0 GPA, outstanding attendance, must be at least a junior, and they have to be interviewed with the coordinators. Of course, they also must have a genuine interest in teaching. When asked what the best thing about Invite to Teach is, Senior Kristina Zars said "when you teach the students something new for the first time, and they understand it, it feels like I've done something right." This is not an easy task. The children sometimes look up to their Invite to Teach student, but other times they look at them more as a friend, and the younger the grade level, the more patience that is required, due to their lack of understanding in some subjects. When the York students are in the classroom at their school, they do many activities with the kids, which include reading aloud, teach an occasional lesson, and work with small groups.

When the people in Invite to Teach are not out at their separate locations, they meet at York for a regular class period every Monday. Here they work on lesson planning and discussing the main projects they do throughout the year, such as developing an educational game and incorporating it into their lesson. They also discuss what makes a good school, bullying, gender equality, lesson planning and enrichment activities. Senior Kelly Hourihan had a good way of summarizing invite to teach: "it really is an amazing program for anyone interested in pursuing education. It really helps you to decide if you want to continue on that path- it gets you into an actual classroom as something other than a student." - Amanda Simo

From Studying Books... ...to Saving Lives

Medical Careers consisted of twenty-four selected students who were interested in the medical field. Students applied for the class by writing a page long essay describing why they want to be apart of the class and what they thought they would get out of it. Throughout this year long class, students learned about anatomy, physiology and practical application in their first semester. Second semester, the students had the opportunity to shadow nurses and technicians in eight different rotations at the hospital.

While in these rotations, the students got to interact with patients, ask medical questions, and gain a general understanding of the area they were working in. There are twenty-eight different rotations and the students get to each choose eight to make apart of their learning experience. Some new additions to the class, that set it apart from past years, were the class added a dental office to the curriculum, which inspired a new emphasis on dental care. Mrs. Feigh, the head advisor of Medical Careers, hopes to expand orthopedic practices because many students are interested in that field, in years to come.

When asked what a rewarding aspect of the class was, Mrs. Carie Feigh replied, "When kids come back, we stayed in the field, and they say how Medical Careers helped them succeed." The best part of the class, for her, is teaching the students who are motivated and are new into the subject, applying themselves to what they do. Senior, Sammy Choyke declared, "I came into the class, knowing what field of medicine I wanted to go into. Going through the rotations and seeing exactly what each rotation specified in my interest shifted some, but at the same time confirmed that medicine truly is my calling." Others, such as Choyke, found that Medical Careers has sincerely helped them plan their next step in life. John...

Violins, and Cellos, and Harps Oh My!

Imagine fifty high school students gathered in one large room during the middle of a school day. If you're thinking total chaos, you're wrong, because for the York Orchestra, this was the recipe for wonderful music.

All three levels of the York Orchestra—Cadet, Concert, and Symphony—met to practice for a class period every day this year. The orchestras included experienced violin, viola, cello, bass, and harp players with woodwind, brass, and percussion instruments from the band joining the regular string instruments about three times a week during their lunch. 135 total string musicians came together everyday to make music, not mention the band musicians who joined in about three times per week. Classes started with tuning and warm-ups, which sometimes included scales, and then jumped to rehearsing pieces of music. The job of teaching the music was orchestra teacher Mr. Ostwald's job, who said, "It is one of the biggest challenges, but most fun parts of the job." Musical pieces included orchestral, symphonic, and sometimes even music from movies.

This year, the orchestra also traveled to University of Illinois and Illinois State University. While at Illinois State, the York orchestra shared two concerts with the Illinois State orchestra. The orchestra also had several concerts throughout the year. While the orchestra did not participate in any competitions, the personal drive of each of the musicians helped to make evident the change in sound from the beginning of the year to the end of the year.

The goal of the program as Mr. Ray Ostwald put it was, "To expose students to great music and to develop and encourage important personal qualities through cooperation and music making." Sophomore Abigail Eskenazi agreed. She said of orchestra, "It really helps you in the long run." The success of the orchestra was unmistakable to York students, staff members, and families who had the luxury of hearing the wonderful sounds of some of music's rising stars right in their own school. - Sinead Flood

Mission: school unification

Having the whole student body to represent gives the York Student Council quite the challenge, but with leadership, dedication, and a whole lot of effort, they made the 2005-2006 school year a success. From organizing the homecoming dance to fundraising for prom, stu-co gave the York Students a decked-out year.

York Stu-co is an important correspondence between the student body and the York staff. Max McClintock, a student council leader said, "High school students have much more influence than they may realize". Student council helps get the needs of their peers heard by the York staff.

Every year special events are given as responsibilities to each class. Freshman sponsored the spring fling and the faculty tea, the sophomore class sponsored turnabout, the junior class sponsored prom, and the senior class sponsored the winter dance and were given the job of selecting the next year members.

Having decorated the student commons for homecoming, Student Council was proud of the attendance, a record number. The week before the dance, they had the student council lock-in, where they stayed overnight in the school to decorate for the upcoming homecoming week.

Working 5th period during their lunch every day except Wednesday, stu-co organizes fund raising and planned events. During this time, they worked out the activities that were focused on. Max McClintock added, "We have specific committees for teacher appreciation, spirit week, publicity, music in the hall, Adopt-A-Family, and the other committees that are created just for homecoming". The money raised by fundraising went to help pay for York's special events and bring down the price of prom tickets. As Jacob Wolff puts it, "Stu-co is good". - Heidi Tucker

Whistle While You Work!

Hands on, competition, hard work, learning, and fun. These are all words that could describe the VICA and DECA teams here at York. Throughout the year these organizations worked to get a chance to compete in state wide and national competitions.

"DECA or Distributive Education Clubs of America, is marketing education," said DECA instructor Mr. Jim Borel. Student enrolled in this class completed in business and played against other schools. They did role playing for restaurant and, financing credit, and product marketing. "We have a lot of fun in this class. I really enjoy learning about all this cool stuff," said Senior Taylor Strandt. "What many people don't understand about DECA is that it is actually a club. We meet fifth period and we get a class credit" said Taylor Strandt. This was a good class to take if you were interested in business as a career.

VICA, also known as, Vocational Industrial Clubs of America, is a national and state organization that helps to promote pride in work and craftsmanship as well as work ethic. This club competed in different industrial technology areas including graphic arts, wood working, and automotive. Mr. Ken Ross, the teacher who runs VICA, said, "It's a place for the kids to really excel in the things that interest them." They are highly recognized by employers in the industries involved with industrial tech. Each year the VICA team went down state to compete. Junior Ian Rusnak said, "It's fun, and everything's paid for." Junior Thomas Krakau, The Vice President of the VICA, has many fond memories of VICA. "Mr. Ross is a great guy. I'm happy to know him."

In order to be in VICA or DECA you needed to be able to get involved. The hard work and time the club members put into their competitions paid off. They had rewarding experiences throughout the time they were in the clubs. - Jenna Lindman

EXTRA! EXTRA!

READ ALL ABOUT IT!

What a year for the York hi. They wrote about various subjects from editorials to making mazes for the "confused and aimless York population," said Edward O'Keefe. This year's newspaper had a lot of insightful articles and well as a better graphics. They wrote about issues that were thought provoking, which made the student body and the administration more aware of such matters. "The best part of being on staff is that it's a constant source of ideas for graphics," said senior editor Nicholas Kalmus. The York hi staff according to Mr. Andrew Bouque was one of the "best students in the school, who raised good issues".

This year York hi had one of the most creative and diverse group of students on staff. They had many different issues than the previous years. Mr. Andrew Bouque, advisor of York hi, commented, "I get to interact with the most lively and interactive students in the school". The writing had also changed this past year. "I believe the writing this year was much stronger," said senior editor Edward O'Keefe. The staff really gave an excellent edge to the paper.

Also, York hi had many interesting articles this year. From writing about the flu to the University of Illinois mascot, the staff raised a lot of outstanding issues which caused people to talk about topics that needed to be conversed. "We wanted to discuss a lot of issues that were relevant to things happening today," said Mr. Andrew Bouque. The newspaper brought up issues that caused discussion between the student body and faculty. "We had arguably more ideas this year," said senior editor Nicholas Kalmus.

It was a hectic year, from getting issues done by a certain deadline to even choosing what to write about. Even then, York hi produced a wonderful newspaper. One of the goals for the newspaper this year was to make it worth reading. "One of our goals was to make the newspaper more pleasing and ultimately to get people to anticipate reading it," said senior editor Nicholas Kalmus. They definitely accomplished that and more this year. Read all about it! - Rakhi Shah

Our Piece of Art

Made for True Memories

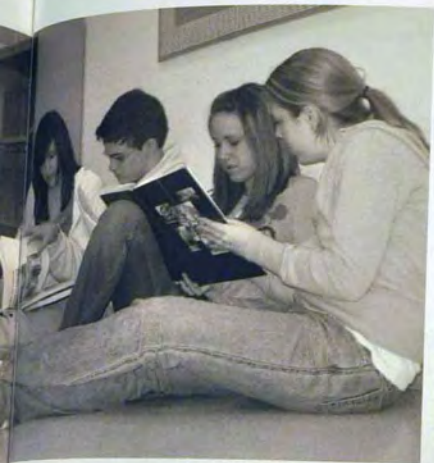

A book created by students for students. A book anticipated by the students and the staff who bleeds for it. That is the one common statement you could hear from a yearbook staff member. From picas and cropping to body copy and learning each member of the yearbook staff puts their sweat and tears into the final piece. Fortunately, members of the yearbook staff all believe its worth the time. Managing Editor Sammy Choyke said, "We do have our long nights after school working on final proofs and at times the room is chaotic, but it'll all be worth it when it's all over." However, putting in the time to make the best yearbook possible is worth the fight.

To describe the stress level each staff member has when deadlines approached is a Kodak picture to see. With five major deadlines, each with a certain amount of pages to be put into the book. Each member of the crew were responsible for their two to three spreads. It was the duty of each staff member to have interviews and a set of pictures layed out to put in the spread. With the support Ms. Isadora Parrini, the advisor of Y's Tales and the Editor-in-Chief, senior Amanda Roszel, and Managing editors Sammy Choyke and Kara Nottelmann, were in charge of making gigantic decisions and overlooking every layout. Senior Amanda Roszel loved the yearbook because, as she said, "It's a fulfilling feeling to create a book from scratch"

Even with many worries and stressful interviews, all deadlines and smiles were at all times present, the Y's Tales staff did always know how to party with Junior Luke Kahovec's dance moves. Senior Jonathan Shepard's sarcasm and Senior Brad Olade's humor.

Overall the tears and frustration of all the names not being checked, the yearbook staff realized that the stress was all part of the experience of joining a team to create a book for the students and staff of York high school. Each staff member came with the same goal of creating an awesome book and left with a smile and new ideas for the next year to do what they do best, create the book. - Jason Lukone

If you were a kitchen utensil, what would you be?

"Spork; sporks are holy grails of utensils. You can use them in soup and on lasagna, and other miscellaneous liquids and solids. Plus, all the major restaurant chains use the all-mighty spork, making it the king of all utensils. KAU!" - Matthew Hilgendorf

Left: "I'm a blender. I am made of a million different ideas, and when you put them all together, you get a yummy result (most of the time)." - Kara Sajeske

Right: "A cookie cooling rack; so I can smell all the delicious foods placed on me." - Jacob Swartz

In loving memory of Theresa Adorno

We Remember Them

*All t the rising of the sun and as its going down
We remember them.*

*At the bleing of the wind and in the chill of winter
We remember them.*

*At the opening of the buds and in the rebirth of spring
We remember them.*

*At the blueness of the skies adn in the warmth of summer
We remember them.*

*At the rustling of the leaves and in the beauty of autumn
We remember them.*

*At the begining of the year and when it ends
We remember them.*

*As long as we live, they too will live, for they are now a part of us as
We remember them.*

*When we are neary and in need of strength
We remember them.*

*When we are lost and sick at heart
We remember them.*

*When we have joy we crave to share
We remember them.*

*When we have decisions that are difficult to make
We remember them.*

*When we have achievements that are based on theirs
We remember them.*

*So long as we live, they too shall live, for they are now a part of us as
We remember them.*

NO underclassmen ALLOWED!

For their entire high school careers, the senior class had been troubled by the pressure of finals twice a year. That adds up to seven semesters of finals. By the end of the ordeal, the seniors needed to wind down and relax, even if only for one night. Senior Soiree was the only dance of the year exclusively for the senior class. The event was held at the Diplomat West, a beautiful banquet hall. Groups of friends wandered all over the large room, taking pictures and enjoying each others company. The tables were elegantly set, and friends talked and laughed with their friends while they waited for the night's events to commence. Shortly after the meal began, the students competing in the Mr. Duke competition were called to begin their preparations. Jack Guimon, Kyle Tade, John Shepard, Joe Re, and Justin Peacock all participated in the event, showcasing their skills while the rest of their classmates ate their meal. They competed in beachwear and formalwear contests, performed a special talent, and had a brief question and answer session. After the performances were complete and the meal was over, students went into the entrance hall to cast their vote for the winner. The students then went back into the main hall to dance the rest of the night. The atmosphere of the dance was different from that of any other dance. Everyone was comfortable and just having a great time together, without the pressure of entertaining a singular date, like a regular dance. After a wonderful night together, everyone went their separate ways. The night was without a doubt one that will stick out in the memory of every senior in attendance, and it will never be forgotten. - John Shepard

In loving memory of Señor Mendoza

Cultivo Una Rosa Blanca
Por José Martí

Cultivo una rosa blanca
En junio como en enero
Para el amigo sincero
Que me da su mano franca

Y para el cruel que me arranca
El corazón con que vivo
Cardo ni ortiga cultivo
Cultivo una rosa blanca

I Grow a White Rose
by José Martí

I grow a white rose
In June as in January
For the sincere friend
Who gives me his open hand

And for the cruel one that rips out
The heart with which I live
I grow neither needles nor thorns
I grow a white rose

Thank You...

Stephannie- your amazing buubbbbbb personality.
Kristina- for your love affair with John B, and your pink high heels.
Rachel- for being such a sweet girl and making sure that all your spreads were done and on time. You have no idea how much it helped.
Dana- for your sarcasm that always brought smiles to our faces.
John Bretl- for being our favorite male sophomore. You're studly.
Madeline- for your creativity, and love of photography. Your willingness to help as well was stupendous.
Lindsey- for your laugh. Need we say more? Only the uncle, goat, and llama, too.
Sinead- we wish we could Irish Dance like you. Time management was not an issue for you!
Nina- the Nina, the Pinta, and the Santa Maria. You always saw the humor in all of the tragedy.
Courtney- you've got a cute wardrobe. We'll come to raid later. Your spreads always turned out great.
Lillian- for having your glass always be half full. Your hard work throughout the entire year paid off.
Luke- for your aerobics, your hair, your mock of Lindsey's laugh, and your pregnancy. We shall miss you.
Maggie- You're adorable. Plus, your spreads rocked our socks.
Jenna- for your quirky, random conversations about anything and nothing. Thanks for doing everything we asked of you, and more.
Jay- for the times you came in on the weekends to finish your spreads. Your "Laffy Taffy" dance.
Michelle- for dealing with our excessive spreads we dump on you. P.S. you are the best spread maker we know.
MoMo- the infamous hair-do, dance parties, and your presence. You always pulled through in time crunches.
Tigerslayer- your choices on the hot guy/girl wall, eating everything in sight, smelly popcorn, and microwave usage and failure to clean it. Thanks for letting us use you as the scapegoat.
Christine- for being unbelievably nice, and not being frightened by all of the chaos.
Rakhi- for being uber organized. Major kudos for meeting ALL deadlines. We really appreciated it.
Phantom- for the bear hugs, the words of encouragement, and your flirtatious manner. "Someone dates you?"
Claire- for never being stressed out. The pressure never affected you.
Amanda S.- for being the cutest cheerleader we know. Green is your color.
Sarah- photos. All of them. Names. Checklists. All of them. Keep the enthusiasm going for next year!
Heidi- for your positive attitude despite any situation.
Tracie- for pulling off your first spread in a very short amount of time.
Ms. P. for everything you do! You have advised us in so many ways. Thank you for all the weekends you spent with us and the sleepless nights you stayed up because of a nightmare you had worrying about the yearbook. Without you, we would have never made this book. "He looooves you." "Saveeee it."

"ASK" - Amanda, Sam, Kara

This year was a part of time. We went out, lived and had experiences that changed our lives. Making new friends, learning how to juggle a busy schedule, and learning what high school is really like is something the freshman achieved. The sophomores got their first glimpse of freedom by getting their license and enjoy the last few times they won't have any homework. The ACT, college and large amounts of homework with many sleepless nights were just a few things on the minds of many juniors. While anxiously awaiting graduation the seniors began to plan out the next four years of their life. They applied and chose a college, had fun, and spent time with friends. As a whole, we played sports, joined clubs, and stepped out of those comfort boxes. We lived, laughed, loved and learned that although we had many great memories, we couldn't dwell on the past. There is so much more to do because the time is NOW.

Thirty staff members and advisor Isadora Parrini worked with Herff Jones Printing Company and Lifetouch Prestige Portraits to produce the 73rd edition of Y's Tales, the York Community High School yearbook. This yearbook served as a record of all that occurred during the 2005-2006 school year. The nine by twelve inch book had a press run of 2400 copies. The $32 book was purchased by 91% of the student body. The staff used nine computers with Adobe InDesign CS2 software to create the book. Herff Jones Yearbook Inc., located in Marceline, Missouri printed the 280 page book on 100 pound Ermine paper. Four signatures of color compliment the book. The fonts used in the book include: AHJ Della Robbia, AHJ Schnittger, AHJ Paddington, AHJ Micro Square, AHJ Ad Lib, Al II Abbot Old Style, AHJ Antique Olive, AHJ Avalon, AHJ Baravia, AHJ Bruce, AHJ Belwe, AHJ Chantilly, AHJ Enclbrush, AHJ Function, AHJ Goudy Sans, AHJ Opus, AHJ Sans, AHJ Unitus. Special thanks to Ms. Diana Smith, Mr. Kevin Brown, Mr. David Creech, Mr. Jeffrey Hartman, Mr. Mark Bibel, Ms. Maureen Olofsson, Ms. Dory Holloway, Ms. Tracy Simpson, and all contributors to Y's Tales.
