Say Anything

High school is a chance to find your voice. The voice whose many parts allow you to experience all that high school holds. The voice which cheers so loudly during Homecoming it is hoarse the next day. The internal voice that provides motivation when facing a tough opponent. The voice that joins with others of the same interests in a common pursuit, even when meetings start at seven in the morning. The voice of intellect that echoes off classroom walls. The casual voice that jokes around with friends on the weekends when the pressure of school is off. It could be loud and outspoken or it may be quiet and reserved, but it's the voice used in self-discovery and allows you to make an impact. It's not only the physical voice but the actions and emotions used to express yourself that says who you are. Say something profound, say something shocking, say something ridiculous, say anything.

"How we spend our days is, of course, how we spend our lives."

When the Lights Go Down...

"Prom was the fairy-tale ending to the year; the dance floor provided a stage for us to come together and then we sailed off into the night, happily ever after." - Dana Augustine

Prom. That single word sparks a slew of adjectives in someone's head. Michelle Nielsen, senior, said, "classy." Diana Pezza, graduate, chose "phenomenal," while others had to make up or combine words to fully describe the incredible night. Nicole Sementa and Marie Esposito, graduates, called it "swizzeet" and Nicolette Novarro, senior, exclaimed that it was "fantabulous!" Any way one decided to put it, Prom was a hit. But why? What made this dance extraordinary? What made this dance so different?

For starters, before a couple even reached the Crystal Gardens at Navy Pier, they potentially spent upwards of $650. With tuxes at $70, boutonnieres and corsages at $15 each, dresses at $200, shoes at $60, nails at $40, hair at $50, and tickets at $210, one night cost a fortune. Most agreed that it was more than worth it, with Jessica Winn, graduate, even going as far as to tell her date, "I know I was worth that $210 [for the tickets]."

Upon reaching Chicago, prom attendees stepped into the beautiful Crystal Gardens, surrounded by trees and the sound of flowing water. The shooting water across pathways created a gorgeous backdrop for pictures and dancing. Anthony Santiago, graduate, said, upon entrance, people immediately showed off their "sweet dancing skills," making the night even more memorable. and Nielsen, senior, exclaimed, "I loved the boys in tuxes!" After Prom, many students walked outside and stepped onto a nearby boat, the Odyssey, and set sail for Post-prom, which Sara Nester, graduate, loved because "the party never stopped."

Once the students arrived back at York, the party did not stop even at an exhausting 3 AM. Prom marks a weekend-long celebration at the end of one's junior or senior year, unique from any other dance. Kevin Novak, senior, put it best, "Prom wasn't one night; the weekend as a whole was the experience." Waterskiing at lake houses, bonfires at dunes, swimming at the beach and more—the dance floor was not the last stop for Prom attendees. All in all, Novarro summed up Prom when she said, "I would not change a single part of it for the world." All of this made the difference. - Kristina Albarello

Last Chance... Say Something!

For the class of 2007, graduation day was the time to say anything, and everything, before leaving and entering the next phase of their lives. Each song performed by York's orchestra and graduating students, and each speech made by Candice Brain, Marie Hansen, and William Mayers expressed the sadness and excitement the graduates felt. "This year the seniors have come together to be the most-spirited class York has experienced," expressed Mackenzie Tovey, graduate.

Joanna Lucca, graduate, noticed the transformation of the field house from "sports arena into dignified Pomp and Circumstance." This fed into the emotionally charged persona of the graduates as they marched in a flood of shining green gowns to embark upon the culmination of their journey as York High School students. The emotions exchanged on this day support the feelings t Robert Sefer, graduate, expressed, when he said, "my days at York may be over, but the memories will remain due to the friends I have made and the times we have shared."

Ms. Diana Smith, Principal, gave this class a thumbs up as she bid them a fond farewell, saying that York has done its job preparing them for the world ahead, as they have matured into capable young men and women over the past four years. She also recognized the impact of their York Duke pride, saying that the spirit and excitement the class of 2007 portrayed will long stand out.

The days of high school are few and numbered and fly by before one gets the chance to really appreciate the significance of these milestone years in a student's life. It is through the partaking in the graduation ceremony that William Kenny, graduate, realized "high school, and especially senior year, can be incredible if your class comes together and makes it that way, so class of 2008, be ready to carry on the torch." - Margaret Kenny

Through Rain or Shine...

Whether it is piles of homework, quizzes and tests, or simply relaxing during the summer months, it is great to know that at the end of the day friends are always there. How else is it possible to get through high school without a couple of good friends along for the ride?

Catherine Callahan, senior, said "A great friend is one who listens and supports you when it is most needed." Friends are the ones who are there when the need for them is greatest, whether it is supporting important decisions or simply hanging out. "When one of us is sad, we usually eat cookie dough, drink chocolate milk, and have a girls' night out," Erica Nelson, Stephanie Japcyak, and Kayla Kummerow, juniors, said.

> "A great friend is one who listens and supports you when you need it most." – Catherine Callahan

There are always good memories with friends during the summer when the pressure of school is off. With all that free time, there is plenty to do. Ginger Madden, senior, said, "This summer, my friends and I shopped in Chicago, went to the beach, and had 'game nights' when we'd play everything from ping pong to basketball." Amy Drahos, senior, mentioned one of her favorite memories from the summer, saying, "I went to the Taylor Swift concert with five of my closest friends. It was really fun because we all had a good time together." Sophia Kelly, freshman, showed you do not have to do much to enjoy time with friends. She and her friend "went to Michigan and spent all day on the beach getting tan."

Whether it is during the school year or summertime, it's always good to have a friend to look to for cheering up with whom to simply relax. Friends are the ones to turn to for support and for the laughs needed to get through high school.

The Power of Purple

"Somewhere out there is the next oncologist or researcher who will find a cure for cancer and their drive and desire will have all started with a little spark called Relay for Life." - Tracy Stourac, Relay for Life Committee

What difference can one night make? All the difference in the world. It takes one night, one community, and one organization to raise money to save lives. Relay For Life brings together communities all over the country for one purpose: to raise money for cancer research to ultimately find a cure for cancer.

Cancer affects the lives of millions around the world and many in the community. "I would say that people are drawn to Relay because everyone knows someone who has been affected by cancer and so it's their way to help," said Carly Hamilton, junior.

Participants were required to raise a minimum of $150 and there were many ways people raised money for the event. "I wrote letters to my family and friends asking for donations," said Matt Mordini, junior. "People had garage sales, bake sales, and car washes," added Marisa Stefani, junior. In the end the community raised a total of $53,684.49.

The event took place at the track, which teams walked around while they helped to raise money for the cure. It started off with a lap for the survivors and caregivers only. After, all of the teams joined them, to show off their team and Relay spirit. Immediately after, the festivities began. "There are a bunch of cra... and fun laps and a dance party by the stage. There are... also contests and prizes awarded," Hamilton explained.

At twilight the event held their luminaria ceremony. Paper bags filled with sand each con... tained a candle and name of those whose lives had been touched by cancer. This created a luminous display with the inspiring words "Hope" and "Cure" spelled on the bleachers. Everyone fell silent as they were lit around the track. People took time to "honor cancer victims and survivors," said Stefani.

The event took place over 12 hours. Some people had trouble staying up, but it was an all night party for the rest...with some help though. "Energy drinks and the support of friends kept me up," said Mordini. "The combination of sugar and Relay spirit kept me up," commented Stefani. Relay For Life would not have been the success it was without "Everyone coming together, helping and supporting one another," said Laura Kline, junior. Working Hard or Hardly Working?

The students at York bring a new meaning to the word "work." In the past, students have taken on a side job--most of the time a weekend job or for a few hours after school.

Many students this year were incredibly ambitious and decided to take on a full time job or even two part time jobs. "I knew two jobs were going to be a lot to handle, but it's not as bad as it sounds and you get used to the long schedules after a while," said Rhonda Russell, senior.

Many of the students work the long hours because they are working for something specific. "I've been working a lot lately because I'm saving up for my trip to Europe," said Courtney Monaghan, senior. Like many other soon-to-be grads, Emma Keldsen, senior, had another reason to earn money. Keldsen explained, "I'm starting a second job soon because I need to save money for college and a car."

Many underclassmen started working to take advantage of the spare time that was left after school and homework. When asked how they handle and balance all the activities they were involved in, Callie Klatt, junior, said: "I wake up, go to my morning cross country [practice], then school and work. I get home and do my homework, go to sleep late and the cycle repeats all over again."

Determination was a key factor in achieving what students wanted. Whether it was saving for college, a trip to Europe, or to earn spending money, going to work brought York students one step closer to their goals.

A Wonderful Week

When a person looks back on their high school experience certain events stick out in their minds. For many, Homecoming provides students with memories that will last a lifetime. Homecoming 2007 brought even greater challenges than previous years. Student Council member Luke Jorwic, junior, said: "This Homecoming was extremely stressful because we only had nine council meetings until Homecoming week started. Everyone was busy, but we got it all done in record time!" Not only was Student Council, which is primarily in charge of planning Homecoming, working against time, but they also had the pressure to fulfill the student body's expectations. "We have the responsibility of impressing over 2,000 people," Mark Olalde, sophomore, stated.

Despite all the obstacles that Homecoming brought, the outcome was very successful. There were many factors that added to the success of Homecoming. "My favorite part of Homecoming week was on Friday at the pep rally, and all the hallways being decorated in green," Katherine Schroeder, senior, said. For some, the spirit days were a highlight of Homecoming week. "I really enjoyed class color day because so many people really got into it," Schroeder added. To top Homecoming week off, the dance proved to be a major hit. "This year the dance had the best decorations," Jacqueline Neidhardt, senior, said. Schroeder agreed: "The most fun part of Homecoming was the dance!" All the hard work put in to make Homecoming a success paid off. "Everything was awesome!" Roger Coffin, senior, added. Spirit week and the Homecoming dance went above and beyond the expectations many held. For some though, the simple things made Homecoming enjoyable: "It was neat because I'm a senior and I'm taller than everyone," Coffin proudly stated. No matter what it was that made Homecoming special for each individual, it provided many wonderful memories students will be able to look back on one day with enjoyment.

And I Think to Myself...

"I kept thinking, 'How did I end up here... I'm in freaking marching band!'"
- Hannah Shepard on becoming Homecoming Queen

As students stepped into the commons on the night of Homecoming, they were greeted with a smaller version of the Eiffel Tower strung with lights. Flags from many countries decorated the walls, and captured the theme of the evening: "What a Wonderful World."

To achieve this atmosphere that portrayed the theme so well was not an easy task, especially with such high expectations. "People expect Homecoming to be something special, more so than any other dance," said Student Council member Julie Chamberlin, junior. Student Council worked from eight a.m. to nearly two in the afternoon the day of the dance. Even though it was hard work setting up for the dance, "it's a lot of fun and you feel like you have accomplished something when you're done," as Erin Rouchi, junior, said.

The Commons was packed with students who arrived at the dance after many preparations. By that time, both the guys and the girls were relieved of the stress of Homecoming. The asking was done, she had already said yes. That was s hard for Linnea Wernette, junior, after "he took to a beach in Chicago and while I was in the w ter he put a message in a bottle. When I found t bottle it said 'Will you go to Homecoming with me inside." As for the girls, they had found that perfe dress and hair and make up were just right. With the stress gone, students were able to enjoy all t Homecoming festivities and appreciate the wo Student Council put in to make this night so specia "The Eiffel Tower was really cool and really fit t theme. After seeing the decorations, I was really e cited to hit the dance floor," said Lauren Kelly, senio

Despite having lost the football game, st dents still enjoyed their Homecoming. "The peopl who cheer at the end of the game are the real fan and their spirit carries over to the dance and makes a night to remember," said Hannah Shepard, senio

Get Fired Up

From the pool, to the field, to the court, York athletics hold many championship titles. Coaches and athletes alike have "passion, drive, and dedication to their sports," according to Neal Deiters, senior. At the same time, the coaches and the athletes do not stand alone. The fans shared those same qualities at every game.

The fans could be summed up in three parts. First of all, apparel. Every Friday, fans sported their York colors at school. Matt Guerrieri, senior, said, "Seeing everyone dress up really creates a sense of unity and shows the players our support." For Homecoming, fans got more extreme with Guerrieri's King and Queen of the Couch group, Dawn of the Dukes, who dressed up as green zombies.

Tailgating was the second aspect of fan support, consisting of grilling out, playing "bags," tossing around a football, and coating oneself in green and white body paint. Garry Howell, senior, described tailgating's importance: "The pre-game allows everyone to come together to get pumped up." Kristina Albarello, senior, said, "It's great to be in an atmosphere of such excitement surrounded by a sea of green. You know everyone's there for the same reason: to support the team."

Finally, the third part of a York fan is cheering at the game. The noise coming from the student section never stopped; Howell said, "No matter what the score is, we keep on cheering to keep the team motivated." Roger Coffin, senior, noted the York fans' unique nature by asking, "Seriously, who else does a mosh pit after every touchdown?"

The fan section never let the athletes fight alone. The fans were a constant at every game. The spirit, tailgating, and cheering set the Duke fans apart. Although that is not a championship title, it remains a reputation to forever keep. - Kelly Connolly

The Art of Excitement

From the very first kids to catch candy in their mouths, to a dramatic, yet hilarious scene from the Broadway musical Rent, to a Russian dance, "Moscow," the talent show and Fine Arts Week combined for a huge success. These talents, however, did not magically appear on stage; it took preparation and hard work to make Fine Arts Week and the Talent Show successful. It took a lot of enthusiasm and perseverance.

The talent show was the big event of Fine Arts Week. For three days and one night performance, the talented students bravely went up on stage and showed the school what they could do. "Being in the talent show is a good way to express your talents and skills," said Fiona Kan, junior. The students who participated got the chance to express themselves.

> "Being in the talent show is a good way to express your talents and skills." - Fiona Kan

Students who wanted to be a part of the talent show first had to tryout. "Tryouts were kind of nerve-wracking," said Kan. The students had to perform for judges who decided their fate in the talent show. The students found tryouts to be difficult but they also thought they were rewarding. Keith Potts, senior said, "Tryouts were fun. It's neat to see people's different reactions to things." Whether a fun way to show their talents, or a "nerve wracking" experience, students faced try outs for a chance to appear in the talent show.

Once students were chosen to be a part of the show, they practiced their act to make the performance one of grace and beauty. Caroline DeGaetano, senior, said that her team, Exclusively Flawless "Practiced a lot. We met three times a week, for three hours a day to dance." Others, like Potts, also practiced long hours. Potts said, "Sometimes I had to practice for just an hour or two. Others I had to practice for weeks." Even though some found practicing to be tedious, practicing made performing easier.

Students performing in the talent show found the experience to be worthwhile. Patrick Hamill, junior, explained, "I had a good time and got out of class to play guitar. What a deal!" Meena Iyer, sophomore, said that she and her dancing partner, Mansi Parikh, sophomore, "Had a blast performing." Most of the performers found that their hard work paid off, and the end result was an entertaining talent show full of excitement and enthusiasm. - Shannon Rohn

Forever Starts Tonight

"Turnabout is a great. You get to sit and relax and let the girls do all the work. Then you get to enjoy the night with your whole group of friends." - William Reichert

10:00 AM: Her: getting her nails done. Him: sleeping. 1:00 PM: Her: getting her hair done. Him: still sleeping. 4:30 PM: Her: taking pictures in the living room for her parents. Him: maybe showering. 5:30 PM: Her: anxiously waiting for her date to come pick her up and take her to group pictures. Him: finally getting his suit and tie on.

Turnabout: (n) The worst time of the year to be a girl at York. Not only did she need to worry about whom she was going to ask and how she was going to do it, she also had to pick out a dress, make appointments and stress about everything under the sun.

Guys, on the other hand had nothing to worry about this time of year. All they had to do was sit back and relax and wait for that one special girl to come ask the important question: "will you go to turnabout with me?" Matthew Joseph, junior, said, "I like Turnabout because I can sit back and let the girls do all of the work. for once, I don't have to be the one to come up with the idea.

When the dance started everyone filed the cafeteria for a night of dancing and hanging out with friends. All of the girls arrived in the gorgeous dresses and the boys in their nice shirts and ties. The cafeteria was filled with blaring music and dancing. Although Turnabout may be the worst time to be a girl at York, the outcome of the stress is worth everything. - Nina Gortowski

The Lyrics of Snowball

From hip-hop artists expressing their feelings to 80s hairmetal rockers opening up to one another, Snowball brought out the best in people. "Operation Snowball serves as a fun weekend for people to both meet new friends and learn about making good decisions in life," said leader Margaret Kenny, senior. Speakers were brought in who shared their experiences, and small groups discussed thoughts on issues high school students face. With enthusiastic and passionate leadership headed by Ms. Rachel Zinger, the students and teachers who attended Snowball rocked out while learning life lessons.

Although it was an educational experience, Snowball was certainly not lacking fun. Hours and hours of Ride the Pony, Jonathan Koch and Michael Carey, juniors, cross-dressing, underground dance parties, and mattress jousting were only a few of the crazy events of Snowball. "By far my favorite part of Snowball was when Ms. Leslie Stipe rode Oliver Rivera in the Country group's 'Save a Horse (Ride a Cowboy)' dance for the talent show," laughed Sarah Dyer, a senior and a leader of the Country group. The boys' cabin at Balsam was not to be out done as it waged wars based on, according to Jimmy Zars, senior, "the 300 Spartans." The fun just never stopped.

Even with new leadership, Operation Snowball was more successful than ever. "Ms. Zinger really stepped up. She did amazing," said leader Alexandria Spokas, senior. Snowball achieved far more than only teaching students about the negative effects of substance abuse. It built friendships that will last for a long time. "I love getting a chance to know students and teachers out of school when the walls come down and people can be real," reflected Mrs. Stipe. "You see people afterward you did not notice before and you say hi in the halls, that's why Snowball rocks," said Dyer. It was a weekend of fun and education, seriousness and craziness, and in the end, the lyrics of Snowball once again resounded its message of good decisions through the halls of York. - Mark Olalde

Only you can change your fate

The members of the Drama Program knew the meaning of hard work. To make the spring production of Aida a success, they put all of their effort into the audition process, just so they could make the show. To audition for Aida, prospective cast members not only needed to learn a section of a song or two, and then sing what they learned for the director, but they needed to recite a scene from the show as well.

After the nerve-wrecking audition was over, the 10-week-long rehearsal schedule began. The directors divided this schedule up in to three different types of rehearsals: Dance, Music and Blocking. Dance rehearsals focused on learning and running the major dances of the show. The cast's Music rehearsals took place in the choir room, where they learned and reviewed their music. Blocking rehearsals were to ensure that the cast members knew their lines.

Putting on a show as successful as Aida, which, according to Kendall Knysch, senior, was "one of the best shows put on at York," would not have happened had it not been for the many different types of people that make up both the cast and the crew. Aside from the actors, the set crew was vital for making the show run smoothly. Their job was to build the sets and assist the stage crew, who changed the sets in between scenes and acts and provided the actors and actresses with their props.

> "Aida was one of the best shows ever put on at York." - Kendall Knysch

The emotions that the cast poured into Aida made the show all the more worth it. "The passion to make the show the best it can be and the passion to express ourselves really put the show over the edge," said Lauren Tackbary, senior. Aida came and went in a flurry of emotions ranging from sadness to excitement. Into the Mist...Brigadoon

"Brigadoon was such a good learning experience. I had the opportunity to improve my theatrics while still having a blast with my friends." - Kyla Gavlin

Imagine spending two and a half hours, Monday through Friday during the summer to rehearse. All the actors and actresses of the production were driven with one common goal: to produce the best possible musical. This often meant sacrificing other things; such as late night movies with friends or summer barbeques. All of their hard work paid off though in the end after the curtains came up and the show went on and everybody was ready to dazzle. This summer's musical was Brigadoon. Brigadoon is about a town that only appears for a day once every 100 years. To the people in the village though, it only feels like a day. So after one day the town leaves in the mist and then reappears in 100 years. In order for the village to reappear again no one in the town may leave or the inhabitants will disappear into the mist forever. However, when two American tourists stumble upon the town while on vacation, they fall in love with two village girls and stir things up a bit in the village stuck in the mist.

Brigadoon was directed by Mr. John Forsythe and music director Ms. Rebecca Marianetti. The choreographer was Ms. Shannon Welling. This year, there was a surprise visit, very shocking for most. It was famed Broadway star Heather Headly, most recognizable for being the original Aida on Broadway. Randomly on one summer day she called Ms. Marianetti and offered her skills for a few rehearsals. Kyla Gavlin, senior, said: "It was just awesome. There are no other words to describe it. Her help was unbelievable. She took some people aside for some time and after she helped them you could really tell a difference in their tone and pitch." Her work, along with the actors and actresses' work obviously paid off when the chorus in the play obtained near perfect pitch.

This year, the cast underwent many clinics to make sure everyone could act in a Scottish accent. Overhearing many rehearsals, you could hear the cast practicing their Scottish accent in the making. The cast also went through numerous clinics for choreography so the cast could sync their dance skills with the beat of the music.

The leads were Timothy Scott, graduate, who portrayed Jeff Douglas, Keith Potts, senior, who played Tommy Albright, and Melanie Hughes, senior, played Fiona McLauren. Their hard work, along with the rest of the ensemble was critical because they were all dependent on each other to put on the best show possible. Along with the actors, there was also a crew to make sure the props were in order and the lights were shining on the right character.

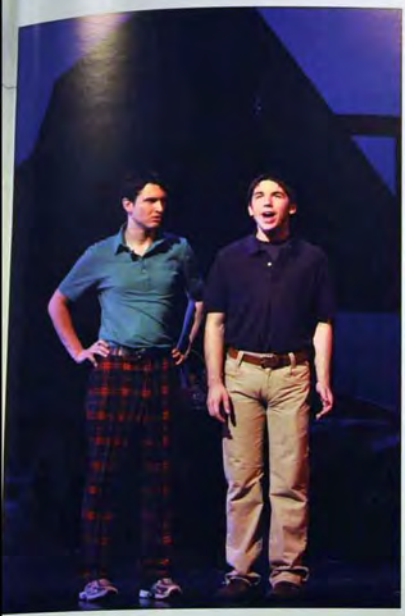

While all of these rehearsals sound overwhelming, the cast still managed to fit some fun in. This year the seniors got freshman buddies to help them along the way. It really eased their nerves and it was fun getting to know some of the incoming freshmen. They also played cards, and reenacted Harry Potter sorting. Evidently the cast of Brigadoon managed to have fun while still having professionalism that was evident in the final product. This good mix of fun and seriousness keeps the actors and actresses coming back for more summer after summer. - Courtney Gavlo

Who done it?

What do you get when you mix a murder scene, a conniving butler, and a few crazy characters? The fall production, Clue. The play was all about secrets, lies, blackmail and murder. When a few crazy characters were thrown into the mix, the plot grew interesting.

This thriller took the audience on a mysterious adventure to find out who the murderer was, what the weapon was, and in what room. While there were only six suspected characters, the butler, Mr. Wadsworth, and the maid, Yvette, also added to the main character cast. Once the murder occurred, every character was a suspect and it was up to the audience to solve the mystery.

A key element of the production was the ability to change the ending of the story every time. The ending could never be spoiled by previous viewers and those who went to see the production more than once were yet again surprised to see a different murderer.

When asked what their favorite part of the drama department was, Lauren Tackbary, senior, said "the in school family." Actors practiced everyday after school from 4:30 to at least 6:30 and often even later into the night. "When you spend that much time with the same people you really get to know them," said Katie Mundle, senior.

The cast demonstrated a great mixture of hard work and fun. "While the cast and I worked hard to make the production the best possible, we hope that this show will live in the memories of our fellow York students," said Mundle.

Weekend of Drama

This year the drama club did something different for the winter play. They had not only one, but two different plays featured to appeal to any audience. First were the One Acts and the other was "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown." Each day of the weekend switched between the two so every day there was something different to see. Amy Davelis, senior, said, "It was really fun being able to do both plays because it was something different every day instead of the same play four times."

> "It was something different every day."
> - Amy Davelis

This one-of-a-kind weekend gave the students and staff an opportunity to witness the talent of York's Drama department. It also gave them an opportunity to see an interesting twist on needing help and a classic American cartoon brought to life. On playing Charlie Brown, Trevor Cardea, sophomore, said, "I loved Charlie Brown when I was younger, he's like a classic, so getting to play him on stage was a great experience."

The One Acts, short one act plays about needing help, were a creative way to entertain the audience. Davelis said, "I hoped the audience would like that choice for the play because it switched topics and scenes instead of focusing on the same one for two hours. It gave the audience some variation."

"You're a Good Man Charlie Brown" was a completely different, but equally entertaining drama production. Melanie Hughes, senior, said, "It gave us a chance to basically be kids again. Everybody knows Charlie Brown so we could go all out and people would actually get it."

Overall the productions were a success. Cardea said, "I hope we have the chance to do this again because I don't think it could have gone better any other way."

The Funky Fever

"Even with the smaller crowd that Spring Fling attracts, you can still have a groove-tastic time. I wouldn't change it for the world." - Grace Blevins

Fever. It causes your heart to pound. It causes your forehead to sweat. It causes you to get the chills. It causes your temperature to rise. Spring Fling attendees felt all of these symptoms as they danced their Saturday night away in a Saturday Night Fever.

Spring Fling gives the chance to close your eyes, open up your closet, grab whatever your hand lands on first, and throw it on. This is the sight that greeted many Spring Fling dancers upon stepping onto the dance floor. "The outfits were righteous," said James Sullivan, junior. From go-go boots to enormous fros, the dance really had it all, and the fun did not stop at crazy attire. Cody Stein, junior, exclaimed, "I really got my groove on!" He loved that the only dancing allowed was disco dancing. Jeremy Farrar, junior, had the greatest time dancing the night away with his friend[s] well. "Spring Fling is the very last dance of [the] year—the last time to go crazy on the dance [floor] with all of your friends," Farrar explained. "[We] wouldn't want to end their year with a little dud[...]

Not to mention, the pressure does not [exist]ist. There was no preparation, no dress shopp[ing], no stressing about a date, and none of the w[orries] that accompany the other dances throughout the year. Ginger Madden, senior, agreed. "The b[est] part had to be that I did not have to fret about [anything] or being asked to the dance. It was a wor[ry]-free good time." Hannah Shepard, senior, stat[ed] "I even decided to go at about 6:30 pm, a mere [few] minutes before the dance started, and it made [no] difference! With no planning to do, I went and h[ad] a rockin' time." A Saturday Night Fever good t[ime]

York's Globe Trotters

Nothing is finer than our own York students traveling the globe representing York worldwide. Summer is already great for the purpose of not having to go to school, but it is even better when a trip to a foreign country is added.

Andre Gordillo, senior, spent part of his summer traveling all over Europe. He went to countries such as Holland, Switzerland, Belgium, and many more. When asking Gordillo if he missed being home, he replied, "I missed my family and friends, but nothing could beat the experience I had. I had a great time and would not change anything for the world."

> "Nothing could beat the experience I had."
> - Andre Gordillo

A group of French students also traveled to France this summer with French teacher Ms. Debbie Rine. Samantha Bauer, senior, noticed some differences in the lifestyle of a foreign country. She said, "I thought that it was very weird having two hours for lunch and still not coming back in time. In America everything is so fast, but in France they actually like to sit down and chat and spend hours on the terrace."

Not only did the French students travel to Europe this summer, but so did the Spanish students. These students traveled to Spain with Spanish teacher Mr. Raul Gaston. They experienced their culture by going to a discoteca and seeing flamenco dancers. Catherine Callahan, senior, said, "My favorite part of Spain was the little villages and the little shops we visited. It gave a chance to practice my Espanol as well."

The Italian students also traveled to Italy over the summer with Ms. Loredana Manfredini. They saw many famous sites such as the Sistine Chapel and St. Peter's Basilica. While the traveling was difficult at times, it was worthwhile to the students. Vincenzo Colella, senior, said, "It was really cool to see all these things but it was very tiring. We probably walked 15 miles in the heat! But it was definitely worth it." They also got a chance to taste authentic Italian food. They ate many delicious foods including pizza, bruschetta, and gnocchi.

Colleen Sestan, senior, and Jessica Tooley, sophomore, also traveled to Croatia during the summer to visit family. Sestan and Tooley not only enjoyed spending time with their families, but they also enjoyed shopping in downtown Dubrovnik. Like many other York students, these two travelers had a great time experiencing the life and culture of another country over the summer.

The Mighty Dukes

Agility, intelligence, and teamwork are all qualities that are essential to be part of the York hockey team. Since hockey is such a fast pace sport, it is important to stay with the pace. In order to be successful at this sport you needed to "have excellent hand-eye coordination, be quick on the ice, and cooperate with your teammates," according to Garrett Schwarz, junior.

The team had two practices and two games each week. During practice the team did dry land training, conditioning, system work and drills. "We are expected not to make the same mistake twice during practice, and to give 100% all the time," said Joseph Ross, sophomore. Also, it is important to "treat practice like a game," said Schwarz.

> "We are expected not to make the same mistake twice during practice, and to give 100% all the time." - Joseph Ross

The team practiced at Center Ice Arena in Glen Ellyn for an hour and a half, twice a week. The time it took to get there, put on the gear and get back, was another hour. Hockey was a very time consuming sport, but it was the intensity of this sport that made everyone love it. Reno DeSimone, senior, said the thing he enjoyed most about hockey was "hitting people into the boards."

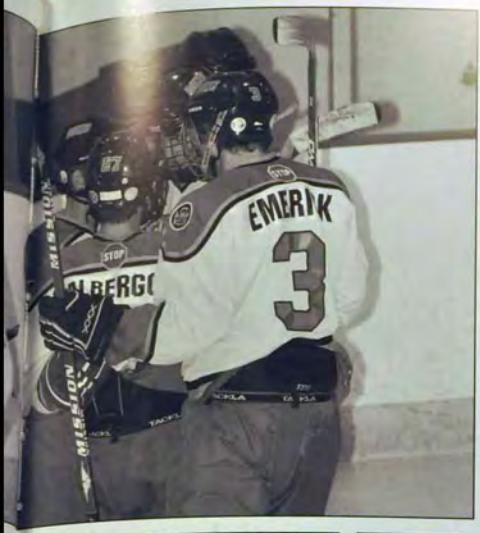

The boys had to learn to balance schoolwork, social life, as well as being part of a varsity sport. DeSimone led the team as the captain, and Michael Hlavacek and James Aylward, seniors, were the assistant captains. The captains' role was to speak to referees politely and to set a good example for the rest of the team. "The captains, Reno, Mike, and Jim, will go far this year as seniors because they have done a good job of leading the team," said Steven Skawski, sophomore. Some people would wonder why hockey is so enjoyable. The Beginning of Greatness

The roar of the crowd. The pounding of sprinting feet. The grunts of pain and exertion. All these became part of the lacrosse season as they heard the sweet sounds of victory. After arduous weeks of practice and conditioning, the team opened its successful inaugural season. "We had the desire to try something new and push ourselves in new ways," said captain Joshua Elmore, sophomore. "Our goals were to get a team together, get organized, and do well," said Thomas Pankau, sophomore. Led by captains Elmore and Andrew Dalbis, junior, and backed by a team made up of both seasoned and new players, they did just that, finishing strong with a record of 11-4-1. With enthusiastic coaches and passionate players, the team's first season ended as a great one.

After only one season, the team left its mark and immediately started looking toward the future. During the course of the year rivalries were developed, a team was created, and goals were formed for the future. "We wanted to get a team toget and get organized," said Pankau, "and I think we complished that." By the end of the season, t were a close knit group who won and lost toge er. Watch The Birdie

"The day you take complete responsibility for yourself, the day you stop making any excuses, thats the day you start at the top." - Marie Hansen

Many think to play badminton people just hit a birdie back and forth across a net set up in the middle. In reality, badminton consists of much more. It takes the heart and soul of each player trying to make the season her best, along with dedication, and a lot of hard work. These made a true badminton team.

The girls' badminton team met every day of the week except for Sundays, and each practice was filled with drills and different exercises to strengthen the players and make them perform at their best. Each practice focused on drilling the girls and having them play scrimmages against each other to prepare them for competitions and matches.

Rachel Parr, graduate, said, "Practices aren't always great and I don't look forward to them all of the time, but the outcome is well worth the struggle we put in. It makes us better players overall."

The badminton team gave it their best shot this season and experienced great success. Megan Moran, senior, said, "We definitely came together and became great friends during the season. The team as a whole was really great and so much fun." The girls worked hard and long to come together and be the best that they could possibly be. Determined to Win

Sweat drips down his face as he step back into the distorted batters box. It is the bottom of the seventh inning and the team is down by one. The count is full and he know where the pitch is going, low and outside. The coach wants the ball in right field and that's exactly where he is going to put it. The pitcher gets into his stretch, here comes the pitch. WHACK! The ball screams down the right field line and a smirk forms on his face as he sprints to first base because he knows the runners on second and third are going to score easily. That victorious feeling was a common emotion for York's baseball team in 2007.

> "You can tell how much a team wants to win by the way they practice; our team practices extremely hard."
> – Mr. Phillip Bodine

The team's success was earned by hard work not just natural talent. In the preceding summer season and also in the intense workouts throughout the school year, before and after school. The team performed well in the summer, making it far into the playoffs during the summer league. Marcus Boozell, senior said, "Throughout the summer, our team often played more games in a week than there were days." This immensely increased the endurance of the players. The time, effort and dedication the York baseball team put in to their play really was evident when watching them play. Mr. Phillip Bodine, Head Coach, commented on the team's hard work, when he said, "You can tell how much a team wants to win by the way they practice, and our team practices extremely hard." The team would often practice twice a day. Players would wake up at four thirty a.m in order to get to practice on time.

Being a part of York's baseball team was a big commitment but it paid off in the long run. Brian Sloan, senior said, "Practices were tough but they prepared us for the games and gave us a chance to win close games". The team had several close victories with a solid winning record. The main contributor to this was the great amount of hard work, practice and dedication.

Rising to the Top

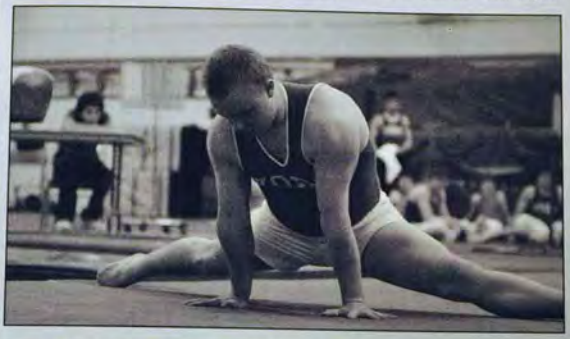

Good things come in small packages. This held true for the 2007 York Boys' Gymnastics team. They overcame many challenges, including small team. "As for the team, we had a very small team, which puts a lot of pressure on each individual competitor," said Luke Kahovec, graduate. A small team leaves little room for mistakes. Despite this, the team had a very successful season.

The hard work that led to the success of the 2007 season started with practice. "We start at 3:30, condition for twenty minutes. We then have a team meeting, learn routines, and then practice these routines for two hours," head coach Mr. Richard Larsen said. Putting in so much time and effort was bound to pay off for the team. "Our goal was to win state," said Mr. Larsen. "Any opportunity to compete in the final eight is a successful season though," he added. With finishes no lower than third place in any of their meets, the boys were well on their way to post season success. As a result of their accomplishments during the regular season, the team qualified for the state meet. When describing his emotions going into the state meet Kahovec said: "Competing in the state meet is a lot of pressure. However, the adrenaline makes the meet so exciting. It is also nice to know that York is once again known for its gymnastics team." Larsen stated: "You have to relish the pressure when you get to that point."

The team had a very successful run at the state meet finishing in second place. In addition, Christian Carmona, senior, won three individual state titles, which had never been done before. "We win as a team, and lose as a team. What they did is very good," remarked Larsen. With Kahovec being the only graduated senior from the team, the outlook for the following year should be very promising. "We have the same goals in mind," said Larsen. Gotta Kick It Up

Team bonding could easily be the most important part of any team. If a team does not get along, they will have trouble winning games. Luckily, this year the girls' soccer team got along very well. Kylen Mills, senior, explained "The team is much closer this year."

> "We play like a team and we go down like a team."
> - Nicolette Novarro

Soccer got a new head coach, Ms. Rachael Shepherd in 2007. The team focused on their skills thanks to this new addition and she also had high expectations for the girls. Michelle Nielsen, senior, said, "We are expected to think and talk about only soccer from the time we get on the field to the time we step off the field."

The team put a lot of effort into their practices and it paid off. Some practices started at 5:30 AM and others took place after school. Practices consisted of warm-ups, drills, physical fitness, and scrimmages. Stefanie Matsas, junior, described them, saying "Each practice we begin with a warm-up. Next we practice the various soccer skills that we need to improve on." The emphasis on fitness was huge this year and when asked about the most difficult part of the season, many members of the team mentioned fitness. The difficult practices and hard work brought them all together and gave them all something to have in common.

The teams worked hard and all this work made them bond as a team. Alexandra Cicinelli, junior, said "When we have practices, we bond with our team and we also bond with our coach." Nicolette Novarro, senior, described the team saying "York Girls' Soccer is like a second family, we play like a team and we go down like a team."

Who Says Girls Can't Play?

The name of the game may be softball, but this sport can be far from soft. This can be an intense sport: from the endless drills to the constant batting, York girls broke all sorts of stereotypes, especially the one that girls cannot play ball. These tough softball pitchers pitch forty feet away from home plate, which means the ball is coming at the batter fast. It could even be compared to a 90 mph baseball pitch, but these girls would have never be caught cowering from a ball. Kelly Sullivan, senior, confidently said, "We aren't afraid of getting into the game, most of us have been playing since we were little, all of this is very natural."

> "We aren't afraid of getting into the game, most of us have been playing since we were little, all of this is very natural."
> - Kelly Sullivan

Softball practice can be very repetitive because they have to perfect their technique. They started practicing before spring even began, pitching and batting in the Joe Newton Field House, waiting until the weather was better to go outside. Three days a week the softball players conditioned early in the morning. Sullivan talked about morning practice, "Even though everyone dreads getting up in the morning, conditioning in the morning kept us more focused on our goals." Despite what people think, softball is not baseball. They use different strategies, more trick plays on defense and more bunting on offense. This meant these girls needed to be fast. These girls most definitely broke the stereotype of girls cannot play ball.

Whoever says girls cannot get along did not know this team. "The team got along very well, there was never any conflict and everyone was so supportive of each other," Sullivan. Julie DeYoung, senior, spoke about her favorite part of being of the team: "York has a lot of school spirit, and a ton of fans come out to the games to support us."

Captains Elizabeth Malone, senior, and Sara Kowalski, graduate, were huge contributors to the organization of the team and gave encouragement when needed. Samantha DeBarnardis, senior, talked about the importance of their leadership, "They are always organizing team bonding event and giving the team confidence when we need it."

It's Tennis Time

Back and forth the ball bounces across the court. The team warms up, trying to perfect their serves before the match. one of the team captains Jason Roan, graduate, looks down the street, sees the opponent's bus rolling up and yells out as everyone else joins in, "It's tennis time!"

The boys' tennis team was full of dedication and commitment. They met six days a week. Practices ran for two hours on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. Matches lasted for three hours on Tuesday and Thursday. Saturdays consisted of all-day tournaments. Although it was a large time commitment, the boys constantly worked hard and strived to do their best. Mark Nosek, sophomore, said, "The competition and one-on-one aspect of the game really drive me to keep going."

That dedication and commitment, in part, stemmed from Jason Roan and Charles Pacelli, graduates, who contributed a great deal as captains of the team. Mike Altergott, senior, commented, "They really demonstrated awesome leadership and served as good role models for the whole team." In addition to the leadership from the captains, the team received instruction from Mr. Bill Sir, the head coach, and Mr. Keith Mills. Mr. Mills helped the team to refine their doubles skills, which they found to be a big help.

Every drop of dedication and every leadership role contributed to the team's success. As a result, they finished the season with a final record of 37 - 22. Mark Dziuk, senior, said, "We're in a pretty tough conference but our hard work allowed us to persevere." - Kelly Connolly

Anything You Can Do, I Can Do Better

"The track team is like a big family of crazy, goofy brothers–we love the environment, what we are doing, and the whole team."
- Scot Johnson

The starting gun goes off. Your pulse quickens as your feet carry you around the track as fast as they can. Your breathing is sharp as your body gives everything it has to win this race. As the finish line looms ahead, you pass as many opponents as you can in your attempt to win the race. You lean in for the win, giving it one last push and...

The Boys' Track team knew exactly what it took to win races and prevail at meets. "You never fall to the top of the mountain," Mr. Charlie Kern would always say, "it takes a lot of hard work and perseverance." Their season began in January and extended until the middle of May. Practices ran for two hours after school, with a variety of workouts for the various types of events. Distance runners worked on endurance, sprinters shaved seconds off their times, and throwers made sure that they were at the top of their strength. Pole-vaulters and long jumpers worked on agility and speed, and high jumpers focused on their leg strength.

After countless hours spent in the [illegible] house running on the track, the time came when th[illegible] team could show other schools what they were mad[illegible] of at several meets both at home and at surround[illegible] ing schools. Not only did they show other schools what they could do, but they showed the state a well, by competing and placing at the state meet.

The track team was more then just a group of boys that ran together after school in the hope of winning a few meets. These boys were dedicated, committed, and hard-working individuals that had hopes of going for gold. Throughout the season, their bond grew from friendship to family, and for many of the seniors, these boys and their coaches were there for them for 4 years. "I definitely wouldn't be where I am today if it weren't for track," said Nicholas Kuczwara, graduate. "Everyone should go out for it. Track is a no cut sport but the experiences you will have while on the team make all of your hard work worth it." – Amanda Sim[illegible]

Take The Lead

If you are looking for a tough, strong, and committed group of girls look no further than the Girls' Track Team. When it came to track, these girls knew how to suck it up, stay positive, and be tough. Their season was long, practices were intense, and meets were hectic, but in the end their hard work paid off with a great record.

The girls had a long season, 16 weeks that had up to 16 meets in the regular season. One quality all the girls needed from the beginning was commitment. Ms. Annette Schulte, head coach said "Everyone assumes that we are first in conference, but they don't realize how hard it is to get to the top." At practice drills and work outs were intense. At meets there were no down times, and warm-ups before their race were mandatory.

> "You learn alot from people on your runs, and you get a sense of who everyone is."
> -Christine Saenz

Even though track is a "no cut" sport, there are specific skills needed in order to participate. "A good work ethic, positive mentality, and form led to our success," said Shreya Singh, junior. They also needed to know what was good for the group and not just themselves. Most track events are individual, but each girl knew that her goal was to help out the team as a whole.

Although the girls worked "military style," according to Ms. Schulte, there was time to relax and enjoy the season. "You learn alot from people on your runs, and you get a sense of who everyone is," said Christine Saenz, senior. There were more than 90 girls on the team, so team work and cooperation were essential.

When practices got intense, it was sometimes easy to be frustrated, but Ms. Schulte added, "We needed to be able to work well with others even when we were sore, crabby, and tired."

Ms. Schulte explained how the team focused on synergy. She explained that synergy was infectious. Whether it was good or bad, it would spread amongst the girls on its own. They focused on the positive, but they would always find something that they could change for the better. Having this mentality helped them become more confident and supportive during their meets. During every race and event, "everyone lines up around the curve to cheer," said Ostling.

After participating in track, the Girls' Track Team finished up a great season by finishing 6th in indoor conference and 4th in outdoor conference. The team knew how to buckle down and boost their intensity, becoming stronger as individuals and as a team.

Spike it and Score

Motivation, long hours of practice and inspiration are all key components in every sport, but what makes volleyball any different? "I love the intensity of the game and how it's very fast paced for a non-contact sport," answered Kyle Stipe, graduate.

It is no surprise that team members have to learn to get along, but for the members of the boys' volleyball team getting to know other each came easily and it helped with trusting each other. "It all comes down to trusting your teammates; in volleyball, you really [all] have to be on the same page," explained Roger Coffin, senior. Trust, respect and learning to rely on each other were important in learning to work together as a team. Varsity players may have known each other for four years so depending on each other came easy.

> "I love the intensity of the game and how it's very fast paced for being a non-contact sport."
> -Kyle Stipe

Ms. Patricia Iverson started off practices with drills. She said, "A new drill I started was an active stretching exercise in order to stretch the muscles and warm up at the same time." Practices also consisted of blocking warm ups, ball handling drills, and finally getting pumped up to end the practice with a scrimmage.

The dedicated players achieved enthusiasm through a variety of ways. Team captains Nicholas Kozura, Anthony Santiago, graduates, and practice captain Matthew Brahm, senior, pumped up the team with their own style. The music and lyrics of "Black Betty" by Ram Jam as well as their own warrior chant that they made up got the team energized.

Win or lose, the expectation was that players tried their hardest. "All you can do is be the best you can be. There is no shame in getting beaten by a team," Ms. Iverson said. The players did their best in trying to play the right way and that was the one thing that Ms. Iverson asked for.

"When the team does well, each member gets a good feeling," Roger Coffin, senior, said. After practice, they made a goal to make the next practice even better. It motivated the players even more in order to keep up their inspiration. Striving to do better and enthusiasm for the game was always present for these players

More Than Horsing Around

"We were all buddies, and were all pulling for each other, more so than other sports. If one person fails, then the whole team fails." – Scott Harrington

Imagine trying to play football while in a 13-foot deep pool and trying not to drown. The boys' water polo team does this every time they put their green numbered caps on and jump in the water. Not only must they keep their heads above wather, but they must also swim the length of the pool trying to make a basketball-sized yellow ball go into the net so they can score.

Water polo is a hard sport to play. "It's a lot more physical than any other sport that I've played," said Masood Haque, sophomore. The boys on the team found the physical aspects of the sport, such as treading and swimming for long periods of time challenging. Joshua Cole, sophomore, found it difficult to "not drown yourself." Treading and playing the game for a long time made the boys tired and some of the newer players found it hard to stay afloat. To add to the difficulty, referees do not usually see what goes on under the water, and other teams would be pretty harsh.

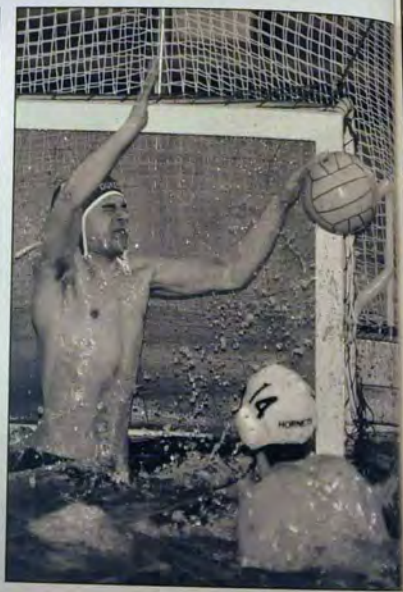

Even though it was difficult, the team played each game with the support of their coaches. Scott Harrington, graduate, said, "Coach Dom and Coach Forde taught us how to give our best every time we play so that when the game is over we have no regrets."

The boys proved that they could work incredibly hard and be successful. Eric Krolikiewicz, graduate, said their most intense match was the third game of conference at Lyons Township. He said, "We were down eight to one at half. We went on a six to one run in the third quarter to put us down by two." They went on to lose the game, but they fought until the end and proved that they would not give up. Even the boys who were on the bench were still a part of the game. Kevin Byrne, junior, said that he helped out by "Cheering from the bench and keeping everyone's spirit alive."

The boys made the best of what they thought was a difficult season. Harrington said, "This sport takes a lot of commitment and is really physically demanding, but you'll never play a more fun sport and have better teammates and coaches."

Marco. . . POLO!

The Girls' Water Polo team was in third place in sectionals, third place in conference, and twenty-first in the state. They were told that they have the best defense in the state. Their success was partially due to the strength of the eleven now graduated seniors that were on the varsity team. Courtney Monaghan, senior, said, "The faith that they have in me and in the team helps me to become a better player and has helped us all to improve this year."

> "I feel like we really came together as a team this year." - Arielle Rebek

The practices were every day except Sunday. They started out with swimming. They then went onto passing weighted balls, treading, shooting practice, and other various drills. Led by the seniors, all of these drills helped the team to bond and be successful. Therese O'Toole, junior, said, "Water polo is a lot of work, but it's worth it in the end."

Unlike the game of "marco polo", water polo can be a rough sport. It is a combination of soccer and swimming. The scores of most of the games this season were very close which made for a lot of excitement. At the games, all of the teams cheered each other on and supported each other. Arielle Rebek, senior, said, "I feel like we really came together as a team this year."

Why They Run

A nationally ranked team and coach, twenty six state titles, eleven second place state titles, and four third place titles. What other reasons are there to be a part of the York boys' cross country team? Many ask why two hundred boys join the team just to run? What motivates them to run together? How are the coaches able to keep the attention of so many boys? The answer is more than the coaches teaching boys how to run; it was about "tender love and care," something that Mr. Joe Newton talked about often.

The program was about becoming a better person. Rojin Thomas, senior, explained about the program, "York cross country is amazing, because of our coaches. If it was not for the program, I would not be the same runner, or person I am today. Throughout my years Mr. Newton found something in me. I would never have found in myself. The coaches care for each and every one equally, that is one reason the York cross program is great."

Cross country was the most successful high school cross country team in the nation. No other team expected to take first. They were committed to their team and coaches. "It's the little things that make a huge difference, it about taking the time to come in the morning for a run, the hill work at Katherine Legge Memorial Park, the program is based on willing to make sacrifices to be great," Michael Rizzo, senior, explained.

Run fast, work hard, and have a good attitude. Many other lessons were taught while running for the boys' cross country team. "The workouts that the boys do are incredibly difficult. Once you finish that kind of workout you're better able to handle other difficult situations that will undoubtedly occur later in life," said Mr. Charlie Kern.

Run for the fun of it

"We all have our own personal goals, but we share the same main goal of placing at State."
- Angela Pisani

Imagine having an hour-long meeting with stretching and then running more than a quarter of a 26.2 mile marathon every day. To the average student, this sounds like an intense workout. For the dedicated girls on cross country, though, it was nothing new. Angela Pisani, senior, agreed. "We are guaranteed to run 6 to 8 miles every practice."

It was sometimes a challenge to be on the team, though. Aside from the hard daily workouts, the girls needed to stay consistently committed to the team. Over the summer, the girls spent a lot of their time running in practice to prepare for the next year. During the year, the girls had to "wake up early for practice and go back after school", said Megan Fry, sophomore.

It sounds like hard work for everyone individually, but the girls stayed motivated through each other, and this made all the hard work wor it. Molly Platt, junior, explained, "Everyone work really hard, so it is nice to be around these people Visiting the girls at any one of their practices meets confirmed their positive attitude. The tea really enjoys what they are doing and it show

The team also improved from previou years. "This year's team is working harder, so muc more time is put into practices," said Catherin Callahan, senior. These girls were really dedicate to what they do, and their hard work always pa off. At their conference meet, they took third, an there were smiles all around. Amanda Wilms, s nior, said, "The best part of the team is the pe ple. We're people- people." The girls loved wh they were doing, and they did a great job doing – Emma LaPalermo

The Boys in Green

"Who are we?...YD!" was the chant heard throughout the stands during Homecoming against Lyons Township. Cheerleaders danced, students painted themselves from head to toe in green paint, and the football team entered the field like heroes. "There's no feeling more exhilarating than walking onto a field of cheering fans," said Nathan McDonald, senior.

Support poured down onto the boys as a jam-packed stadium roared with their approval. Though the team did not come out of the game with a victory, their ability to stick together as a team was truly inspiring.

Mr. Bill Lech, head coach, led the football team into three consecutive conference championships, and the team truly respected him. When asked his favorite team tradition, Thomas Judge, junior, said that it was "Coach Lech doing his speech before every game. That gets everyone fired up." Some of Mr. Lech's most famous words of advice were, "Work hard and have fun. Don't take anything for granted."

> "There's no feeling more exhilarating than walking onto a field of cheering fans."
> - Nathan McDonald

The team followed his advice, and planned on going above and beyond the 10-2 record of the previous year. To do this they needed to train harder and with more dedication. Taylor Spaulding, senior, strongly believed that "The 6 AM summer camp and early morning lifts helped to make the team into what it was." Their hard work paid off and soon the team was in their first playoff game.

Once the game began, the loss at Homecoming was nothing more than a memory as York fought against Curie High School. Although they played on muddy ground and under rainy skies, the team pulled out of the game with a win.

Even after winning their first playoff game the team remained humble. They capped off the incredible year with a winning streak. Captain Thomas Augelli, senior, summed up the sentiments of the entire team by saying "Our greatest accomplishment hasn't been accomplished yet."

A Fighting Spirit

"Victory is always possible for the person who refuses to stop fighting." This may have been said by Napoleon Hill, an early 20th century speaker, but it certainly applied to the Boys' Golf Team. Perseverance was the key to the success of this year's team. At times during the season, the boys could have given up, but they showed their character by trying even harder.

One of those moments took place in the midst of their season. After a tough five-stroke loss to a talented Hinsdale Central team, York rebounded for a huge victory over rival Lyons Township. One of the key scorers in that win was Christopher Brasko, a senior who exemplified great perseverance. After not making the team his sophomore or junior year, he decided to try out again his senior year. Not only did he make the team, but he also qualified for sectionals. York's head coach, Mr. Jim Borel, said Brasko "became one of the better golfers on the team, and his perseverance was nice to see."

> "This group was by far one of the best teams we've had at York. - Mr. Jim Borel"

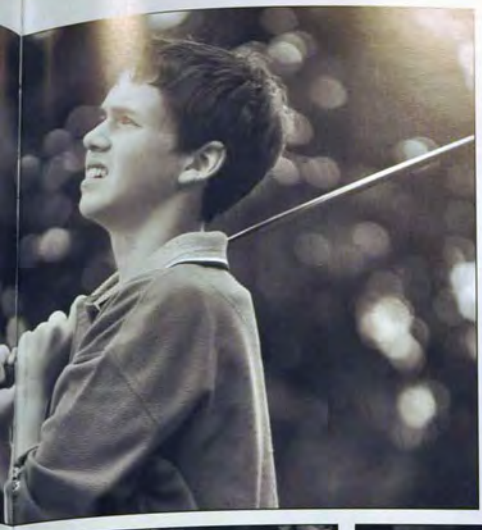

The determination by the entire team led to a great season filled with some amazing accomplishments. The team showed their depth by having three members qualify for sectionals. Benjamin Halen and Brasko, seniors, and Andrew Wethekam, junior. The most memorable moment, however, had to be Halen's hole-in-one on the 9th hole at Maple Meadows against Wheaton North. Wethekam, who was playing with Halen at the time, said, "It was the coolest thing I've ever seen." Overall, they finished with an impressive 7-3 record in dual meets, and the season was considered a success. Going Fore The Green

Eight o'clock on an August morning while most students would probably be sleeping, the girls golf team was out on the dew-covered golf course in the humid weather. Whether it was a practice or a meet, the girls tried their hardest and worked to improve their game. Doing so was easy with two motivating coaches and kind, supportive teammates.

Messing up or making a bad shot in front of others can sometimes be embarrassing. That was not an issue with this team; "If someone has a bad shot, we laugh it off and no one's feelings are hurt," said Caitlin Regan, senior. Regan continued by saying, "There are a lot of classy and down-to-earth girls on the golf team and it's awesome to have those types of people be your teammates." The team had great chemistry. They worked well together and supported each other; "I love being part of the team because everyone is so friendly and encouraging," stated Mary Kate Rohn, sophomore.

> "I love being part of the team because everyone is so friendly and encouraging. - Mary Kate Rohn"

As well as having fabulous teammates, the girls had two amazing coaches: Ms. Barb Tilden and Ms. Peggy Babyar. They made competitions and other stressful situations relaxing; "One thing Mrs. Tilden would say to us when we were nervous before a meet was, 'There are over a million people in China and they don't care what you are doing.' That would always cheer us up," explained Rohn. Ms. Tilden and Ms. Babyar kept the girls motivated and encouraged them. Sarah DiDominick, junior, contended, "They go to such great lengths to keep us motivated and they always treat us to custard at Culvers." As well as being supportive and motivational, the team members and coaches were great at celebrating their success.

Although morning meets and practices were tiring, and Saturday invites exhausting, the girls made it through the season successfully. They tied for third at conference and had more wins than losses. Up and Down the Field

Leadership, intelligence, quickness, and anticipation were all different qualities that each and every one of the York Varsity soccer players possessed. Soccer is a very fast paced game and the momentum of the game can change very quickly. If the players do not have these qualities, then the team will struggle. Jesse Merdian, senior explaind that "If one person slacks, the whole team is affected." In addition to being physically ready, the players needed to have a winning mind set, and to aim high and perform at their best. If one person was down, then he could have a negative effect on everyone's attitude.

Everyone gave 100% effort all the time because "How you practice is how you play" said Jesse Merdian, senior. "Practice is two hours long everyday if we work hard. If we do not work hard, practice will be extended" said captain Garry Howell, senior. Mr. Markus Roy ran his practice by working in three areas: small games, tactical games and improving overall skills. In order for the team to play well, the players had to build solid bonds with each other. The team bonded when they attended a division one soccer game at DePaul. "The closer we are as friends, the better we play on the field" said Howell. Through all the practices and games the team had, the boys learned to balance school work and social life along with all the expectations that applied to being part of a varsity sport.

With all the hard work the team accomplished, the team finished the season with a record of 7-12-3 and a 3-3 record in conference. Mr. Roy said one of his favorite parts of coaching was working with his athletes. He said, "The more I coach, the more I learn about the game." Mr. Roy believes that success in these skills brought victories to the team.

Ready, Set, Splash

The girls' swim team used physical and mental endurance and support from their coaches to achieve their goals. That goal was sometimes one tenth of a second. Swimming takes a lot of physical strength as well as heart. The team exemplified these qualities.

A normal day for the team included morning practices from 6 to 7:15 AM. They also stayed after school every day for practice that ended at 5:30 PM. During practices, the girls focused on improving their race and time. Practices involved drills, sprints and working on different strokes to get them down to their goal times. "Practices were set up depending on the distances and the skills each swimmer had," said Ellyce Redmond, senior.

Swimming takes more than just physical strength. According to Rachel Polkow, junior, "Swimming is not only a physical sport but a mental one as well." It required inner strength to win. "No matter how physically prepared you are, you won't do well if you don't have the right mind set," stated Melissa Landers, sophomore.

Support from coaches Mr. Bill Dick and Mr. Dave Davis kept the girls swimming hard and taught them not to give up. "They pushed us to work super hard during practices, so when we swim as fast as we can in our meets, we can see the results of our work," said Polkow. During meets, the coaches did more than just watch. "In meets, they were on the sidelines cheering and encouraging us to do our best," said Shannon Rohn, junior. The coaches were always actively helping them in practices and in meets.

The support from the team and their hard work helped them achieve their goals. Girls who had not swum before improved and became good swimmers and everyone saw their times drop. This team of more than sixty girls had a big ceremony at the end of the season to say goodbye to the seniors and emotions ran high. These girls made up more than a team. "Smash, slice, serve, rally, win..." All of these words are the York Girls' Tennis Team's basic vocabulary. It takes skill, coordination, and a little luck now and again to be successful. The girls were focused on their goal 100 percent of the time, playing their best. Their season was based on practice, support, and fun. This proved to be a great strategy for the team during their season.

Coaches have said 'Practice makes perfect,' throughout the entire history of sports. This was true for the tennis team. The practices benefitted the team immensely. Kelsey Andersen, sophomore, commented that, "For practice, we played mini tennis, hitting down the alleys, reflex volleys, overheads, and serves." They did some tough drills, too. But as they went further into the season, they got into a basic routine. The coaches did leave some room for fun during practices, though. Julie Chamberlin, junior, said, "We played games like queen of the court or up and down the river."

The three coaches, Mr. Dave Williams, Mr. Bill Sir, and Ms. Laura Eck, helped the team achieve its success credit. They gave the girls so much support throughout the season. Kendra Mills, sophomore, contended that, "Mr. Williams was really helpful during matches, w he gave us tips on how to win." The coaches' support a the practices were not the only vital thing to the tea success. The addition of new players and the improv ment of returning players helped. On the subject of provement, Ellen Stein, junior, noted that, "We addec lot more variety to our games," and Courtney Grob, nior, said, "We have a lot more depth on our team." T improvement led to success in matches. Keepin' It Classy

What does it take to be a successful team? The answer is respect for your fellow teammates, devotion to the team, and love for the game. Fortunately, all of these things were not something the Girls' Volleyball team had to work on.

They spent time practicing together, playing together, winning together, and even enjoyed some pasta parties together before games. Kimberly Scudder, senior, said, "Our team had great bonding right from the beginning."

> "Our team had great bonding right from the beginning." - Kimberly Scudder

The team's devotion was tested during their strenuous practice sessions. Kayla Mullaney, junior, said, "We run do push-ups, crunches, and tension band workouts. We block and do partner ball handling, then the actual drills start."

When game day came around the prepared team put their pre-game nerves aside and focused on doing well and having a good time. Callie Pittman, senior, said, "Everyone is really pumped up and excited. It's all we talk about through the day, so when we get on the court there's a great energy." The team played well and had a successful season, with an ending record of 24-13. Elizabeth Malone, senior, said, "Our excitement and accomplishments allowed us to connect well together and to succeed." Girls' Volleyball truly did succeed winning first in regionals and making it all the way to sectionals.

The Kings of the Court

"The best part about York basketball is the competitiveness and the team chemistry that we have."
- Kevin Kahovec

Following the graduation of many starters and key contributors, the Boys' Basketball team took on a new identity this year. Although many new players had to step into a starting role for the Dukes, the squad was still able to have a successful year.

While there were numerous young contributors to the team, it was still the seniors who led the way. "Our successes this year were directly related to the leadership efforts of our senior class," said Mr. Al Biancalana, the team's head coach. Two team members who were instrumental to the leadership and success of the team were captains Steven Ganser and Roger Coffin, seniors. "Our captains provided a great example of how to act both on and off the court," said John Bretl, senior.

Other reasons for the Dukes' success were the lessons they learned and the instructions they received during their gruelling practices. "A normal practice is very intense competitive, and it gives us the opportunity to improve different parts of our game on a daily basis," said Kevin Kahovec, sophomore. Also the pressure-filled practices helped prepare the team for any close games they had, like their thrilling victory over highly touted Oak Park River Forest at home. "We wanted to make the practices tougher than the games to try to make the games a little easier," said Mr. Biancalana.

Even though the season was very demanding, all their hard work eventually paid off. "The commitment that you must give is really challenging, but it is all worth it in the end," said Kahovec. While the seniors will undoubtedly be missed, there is no question that the future of York basketball looks very bright.

One Team, United

"We're like one big happy family. We are all close...like sisters!" - Marjorie Yarbrough

Cheering fans, a pep band, and jam-packed bleachers. These are not occurrences frequently seen in previous years, but this year the Girls' Basketball team accumulated a huge amount of support from the student and faculty population. Marjorie Yarbrough, junior, credited their success this year to the team cohesiveness: "We are just so close--we care about each other like we were related." The girls really awed their fans this year by reaching a respectable record of 15-14. Erin Kilgore, senior, believed that "The most challenging moments have been rising above the adversity we face. Sometimes we have losing streaks and it's always difficult to overcome that. We have accomplished a lot by having twelve wins so far."

The girls could not have accomplished their victories this season without a lot of practice. "We do a lot of drills with running and conditioning, and all the drills help us to keep in condition," said Courtney Owens, junior. It was these drills which helped lead the girls to such a successful season.

But this year was not all difficult drills and complex strategies. The girls were able to have fun too. Head coach Mr. Kenneth Dowdy said, "The girls have fun together and that togetherness has led to more success on the court." Not only did these girls know how to have fun on the court, but they also knew how to have fun off the court. "We like to head over to Jamba Juice or we'll all go out as a team to breakfast or lunch," said Stefanie Matsas, junior. These team gatherings outside of the basketball court were perhaps the reason why the team got along so well.

These girls spent a difficult season growing together and learning from each other. But what was the secret of this successful season? Kilgore said, "Believe in yourself and don't let others cause you to second guess what you are or how you play." - Hannah Shepard

I Prefer To Go Bowling

She looks up at the screen above her head and sees a big X show up. Even those who do not bowl know what that means: strike! The bowling team proved their greatness this year by striking themselves to a record-breaking season.

When the season opened this year everyone knew that they had a special team on their hands. Katherine Schroeder, senior, said, "I could tell from the energy of the group and the excitement that everyone had for the game that we had a great team this season."

> "I had to pinch myself to make sure it was real." - Elizabeth Lawrence

They started out the season by having a perfect record after the first weeks of the season. They continued that streak of amazing games by winning the Hinsdale Tournament for the first time in the history of girls' bowling at York. This came as a shock to many of the girls. Elizabeth Lawrence, junior, said, "When we found out that we won I couldn't believe it. I had to pinch myself to make sure that it was real."

The end of the season concluded with Tina Bonarirgo, senior, qualifying for state. Bonarirgo said, "It was amazing to be able to make it to state. I only wish that all of the girls could have made it and gone with me." Despite the fact that not everyone qualified, all of the girls were there to support her at the big meet.

A big beginning, this season, concluded with a great ending for the girls making it a very memorable year for everyone. Schroeder said, "It's my senior year and I went into this thinking that I would have a good time like all other years and finish up the season like usual. One Spirit

"I try my hardest to improve everyday. Not only for my personal satisfaction but for my teammates as well." - Jordan Wilson

In most high school athletics, it is typical to see a team's different levels all working separately. However, that was not the case for the girls' gymnastics team. The JV and Varsity teams made the effort to come together as one spirit. In practice and meets, the girls paid no attention to the level or year of their teammates. Their only concern was to motivate one another to a successful season.

The team practiced Monday through Friday for two and a half hours a day. Invites were on Saturdays and dual meets were on Wednesdays. At practices, the team first stretched, then rotated between the different events: vault, uneven bars, beam, and floor. The last part of practice was spent on conditioning. Jordan Wilson, senior, said, "Since we all work out together, it's easy to get to know each other and make the freshmen feel welcome and part of the team." Nicole Cleeton, junior, said, "All the girls really work well together. A lot of new friendships have been formed."

At meets, the team warmed up together, then competed individually. Wilson said, "You always want to help your team improve their score. As much as gymnastics is an individual sport, you also have to think about the team. You don't want to let everyone down." Stephanie Strejc, senior, said, "If I'm competing and my nerves begin to take over, hearing my teammates cheer me on helps me focus right away and pushes me to do the best of my ability."

Aside from the girls' teamwork, another tribute to the great season was the addition of two new coaches. Wilson said, "At practice, each person is able to work with all three coaches and get their feedback. It's helpful to work with all three because they each have different strengths and perspectives." Strejc said, "They really know how to work with everyone's personal strengths and weaknesses. Therefore, I've really taken bigger risks in learning new skills." All in all, the girls set a great example of how much team unity factors into success.

Leave it in the Water

"Once you're on the team, you have to go to all the practices and work hard." - John Onstwedder

Freestyle. Backstroke. Breaststroke. Butterfly. Diving... these terms were very familiar to the Boys' Swim and Dive Team. It was a lot of work every day, but all that hard work paid off. They swam as hard they could in meets, and in the end, their work at practice really showed.

Success did not just come to the team. They had to work hard each day so that they could improve their strokes. They practiced mornings before school at 6:00 and after school for two hours. They also had practices on Saturday mornings. John Onstwedder, junior, commented, "Varsity can be brutal sometimes. A lot of the time you feel like giving up, but you can't." The amount of practicing that the team lead to success.

There were three coaches who guided the team as they swam and dove to success. Mr. Mark Laurich and Mr. Dave Davis were the swimming coaches; Mr. Richard Larsen coached diving. Michael Sgarioto, junior, said, "Coach Laurich demands a lot of commitment and dedication. Coach Davis makes you tired but proud of yourself." They did ask a lot of the team, but the team did all that they were asked.

Meets were a great opportunity for the team to show off all that they had accomplished at practice. Meets were difficult, but enjoyable as well. Sebastian Pernal, sophomore, mentioned, "Meets are just like regular swimming with more screaming." Onstwedder also said that, "You get a little nervous at times but you just have to remember to have fun."

The team found that swimming was very rewarding both in and out of the pool. Sgarioto said, "It makes sleeping easier and it also makes you more focused in your studies." The team got to practice their favorite strokes and also improved at the same time. When asked what his favorite thing about swimming is, Pernal said, "I get to swim and be with friends."

Real Men Wear Spandex

There is no doubt that the wrestling team has proven their greatness this year. Wrestling is physically and mentally demanding, but the boys were up to the challenge. As the year progressed, so did the team. They became stronger and were driven to go all the way to Sectionals.

A lot of boys tried out for the team, but wrestling was not for all of them. A lot of commitment was needed to be put forth by each member in order to meet the physical demands of the sport. The coach looked for "hard work and dedication," said Patrick Hamill, junior. They also needed to be "willing to sacrifice a lot of your free time and food in order to make weight," said Scot Johnson, junior.

Wrestling required hard work and intensity from boys, therefore the team consisted of the many who were the most dedicated and committed to the sport. "Practices are very hard," said Dominik Lipinski, senior. They had intense work-outs that consisted of different types of drills and matches, and were held for two and a half hours after school, every day.

Mr. Terry Clarke said his main goal for each season was to "see improvement in a young man," and the team achieved and exceeded his goal. The team started off rough, but, "This season was special because we came so far," said Dale Lewis, junior. They started out 2-7, but in the end won the Regional Championship. They then headed off to Sectionals which was unanimously the best moment for the coaches and team.

In It To Win It

From April to March, from football to basketball, the cheerleaders worked hard and showed the school what they were made of. They were hardworking athletes that practiced all year for three different seasons: football, basketball and competition. Throughout the year they showed endurance, determination and enthusiasm for their sport, which helped them improve as a squad.

Practices were held from 3:30 to 5:30 every day. They included running, sit-ups, pushups, and anything used to improve each cheerleader's endurance. They also practiced their stunts. "During practice, there was a lot of conditioning; when we did stunts we were there until we got it right," said Jasmine Watkins, junior. These practices helped them to perform not only during football games but also during basketball games and competitions. JV and Varsity did not have separate practice times, so they bonded and worked together for their eleven month season. "We work together as a whole and we critique each other's mistakes," stated Sarah Gher, sophomore.

This season was different from the rest. With new coaches that pushed the girls to try their hardest, the girls' skill levels were at an entire different level than previous years. "Our coach is willing to push us to our highest potential," said Watkins. The squad won many awards at camp including top team performance, and top team game day. They also qualified for Nationals and this was the first year the girls have accomplished this. This season was not just about practices or competitions. The girls gave back to the community by volunteering at shelters.

With hard work, the squad was able to improve, win, and remain filled with school spirit every step of the way. "Having an eleven month season was hard, but we really get to see the results of what we do in practice everyday, and that makes the blood, sweat and tears worth it," said captain Amanda Simo, senior. - Karla Bayas

Don't Stop the Music

"Since we're always together, we can have fun, but still work hard. Being on Poms is like having twenty-two sisters who love the same thing as you do."
- Jaime Widmar

Watching the Poms squad perform at the Pep Rally, or any of the sports games, not many of us think about how much hard work goes into each and every routine. The team practiced seven months out of the year, Monday through Friday, from 3:30 PM until 6:00 PM everyday. They also had to create a new dance for each game they performed at. If you did not know all this, the team's performances probably look like all fun and games.

Not that the team did not know how to have fun. Part of the thrill was performing in front of the whole school "as it is just a blast to dance in front of so many people!" exclaimed Brittany Smith, senior, who also captained the team with Corinne Vittori, senior. Handball = Swollen Hands

"No matter how good or bad you are at it, it is hard to not have fun!" - Kurt Sanderson

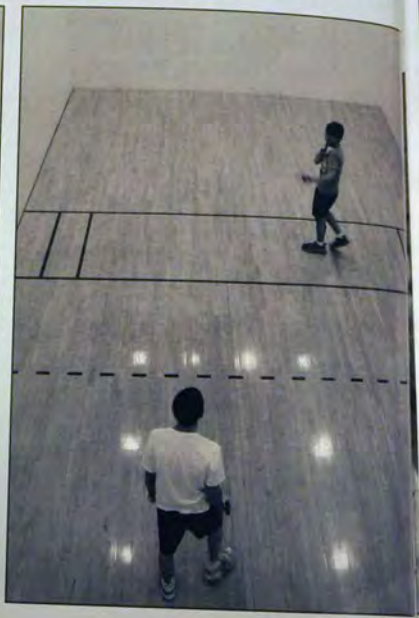

What's the one sport that requires only a little blue ball and 4 white-washed walls to play? York's intramural handball started an intense season this year. While some may say that handball looks easy, Andrew Matsas, senior, said "check out our swollen hands." Many members joined handball because of its uniqueness but Nicholas Fisette, senior, said, "It keeps me in shape in the off season as well as improving my hand-eye coordination.

"Handball is played on a racquetball court. The goal is to force your opponent to hit the ball so the ball bounces twice or does not make it to the wall when he/she hits it back. Fight for a Life

"All around the world, Amnesty's symbol of a barbed wire candle brightly shines and radiates the importance of human rights for everyone," shared Megan Koval, senior, when asked to describe what Amnesty entailed.

Every Thursday, Ms. Joan Davis led the students to help speak for those who could not. Ms. Davis said, "The work we do can make a difference in the world, students learn they have power!" The club's main concern went towards others in order to raise awareness for the human rights violated throughout the world.

This worldwide organization protected the rights that every person should have, from women's rights to the issues with the Iraq War. Not only did they deal with violated rights but Amnesty dealt with a variety of issues including the injustice in Darfur, Myanmar, and the war prisoners of Guantanamo Bay.

Technically, "We did not 'discuss,' we took action to inform people of situations like the genocide in Sudan or the education problem in Africa," said Alicia Ledonne, junior. The Amnesty students fundraised through petitions, planned concerts, and researched current issues. They made a difference on a global scale and their dedication was achieved through hard work.

"I liked that we were able to accomplish our goals but still had fun doing it," Dana Montgomery-Gair, senior, commented. Future generations will look up to and respect the passion and effort Amnesty demonstrated. Not only did they try to make a difference in the world, but they also made a difference in someone's life close to home. - Riya D'Silva

My Friends are My Estate

Making new friends can sometimes be difficult. Circle of Friends created an environment where making new friends was fun and easy. The club's web page, created by Mr. Andrew Bendelow said that the group was: "...dedicated to widening the circle of friendship among students in both the special education and general education programs at York." This group met twice a month with a variety of students to plan and hold events. Some favorite activities were dancing, ice cream socials, movie parties, bowling and basketball. All students were able to be involved regardless of who they were. Everyone was able to relax, be themselves and have a good time. With advisors Mr. Andrew Bendelow and Ms. Marie Thielenhouse, a caring, secure, and fun environment was created. Circle of Friends invited all students and made them feel comfortable and welcome.

> "Everyone in this group is incredibly kind hearted." - Cristina Ponce

General meetings consisted of planning activities, playing games, dancing, sharing ideas and having lots of laughs. Cristina Ponce, junior, stated that, "This group is so much fun, we always have a ball!" They had fun spending time together and getting to know each other better. Kelly McDowell, senior, said: "I love being in Circle of Friends because I get to be with other kids that I might not otherwise get to know. We all have a great time together."

When mentioning how rewarding working with this group was, Mr. Andrew Bendelow said: "I find it extremely gratifying to be able to work with these students." Everyone was kind to each other, polite, thoughtful and friendly. Ponce exclaimed that: "Everyone in this group is incredibly kind hearted." Everyone had a great attitude and was kind to each other.

Circle of Friends was a great opportunity to meet new people, make friends, and participate in fun activities. The best way to make friends and feel comfortable is in a caring, secure, fun-loving environment, which is just what this group created. Students were able to let go of their worries, be themselves, and enjoy spending time together. – Angela Block

Going Green...ECO Style

"Eco Club is a club where students get together and help out the environment and recycle for our school, and once we do that we go on environmentally friendly trips!" - Sydni Lawler

With global warming melting our earth and landfills overflowing with waste, most would say our environment is in serious jeopardy of becoming unlivable. If we continue the wasteful lives that most live, we will be doomed. Eco Club totally defied these wasteful ways of living by going "green" in most aspects of daily living. Through their relentless passionate love for our environment perhaps we are not so doomed after all.

Eco Club was comprised of students who felt strongly about preserving our Earth. It was led by Mr. Bob Blaus, who guided these students into green life. Although they met only once a month as a group, one could get involved with weekly recycling that took place every Tuesday during lunch periods. Every Tuesday, Eco members went to each classroom to gather recyclable goods. Each week there was enough recycling to fill a ten yard dumpster. Along with recycling paper, they also recycled many other things. They recycled cell phones, which were then placed to victims of domestic abuse. They also recycled cardboard, ink cartridges, and batteries.

Along with recycling, Eco gave back to the community numerous times throughout the year. They did a book rescue to recycle used books. Also, at the end of the year they did a textbook rescue. Any unused textbooks at the end of the year, which were not being continued, got recycled to other areas in need of textbooks. Biology books went as far as India. They started an end of the school year locker clean out. Usually students toss out old notebooks and folders not knowing that they could be recycled. This year, the recycled school supplies went to victims of Hurricane Katrina.

While Eco Club gave back to the community and environment in many ways, they also got to experience it hands on. A perk of the club was the awesome trips they got to take if you were an active participant. If a student qualified with service hours he or she got to take part in rock-climbing and biking trips, canoe trips, and a winter cave trip. Truly, this club gave back yet had a blast at the same time. - Courtney Grob

Empower Yourself

Ms. Virginia Highstone put it best when she said, "Anything boys can do, girls can do better." Empower is a group dedicated to the advancement of women's rights. It is an issue often overlooked by the student body. However, it is an issue the men and women involved in Empower are certainly paying attention to. "Empower's main purpose is to promote women's equality through awareness, and to fundraise for women's issues," said board member Laura Adkins, senior.

Empower fundraised for many groups involved women's rights. Besides the normal candy sales these boys and girls also donated money to crisis centers meant to specifically aid women. They participated in adopt-a-family, a program in which a family in the school district is assigned anonymously to Empower. Depending on the age and gender of the members of the family, Empower bought presents and donated money for Christmas.

A normal meeting in Empower consisted of so much more than sitting down, eating doughnuts and drinking orange juice. Board member Alex Brinkmeier, junior, said, "Empower lets you speak openly and it keeps you informed on current events." Most meetings consisted of a discussion on women's rights, or a current event regarding women's equality. "The discussions are interesting, and you really learn a lot" said Gregory Cordina, senior. Many students went to Empower meetings so that they could be in a relaxed environment, one that accepted everyone with no questions asked.

It is no wonder that Empower is such a fast growing group at York. With regards to the attractions of Empower, board member Laura Adkins, senior, replied, "Empower is a place where there are no stereotypes. It's the perfect place to learn." - Hannah Shepard

Welcome to the Juggle

Juggling is their passion and patience is their guide. The students who participated in juggling had to be willing to practice their meticulous art carefully in order to achieve precision. However, they were not alone. Mr. Jeremy Paschke, the advisor, as well as other juggling peers helped members of the club to achieve success in the "jungle" of juggling.

Members of the juggling club found the experience to be enjoyable. Alex Horning, freshman, said that his favorite part about meetings was, "All the fun new things you can learn." Most of the meetings included practice with juggling balls, rings, and diablos. The students also aided each other in learning new tricks and techniques.

Mr. Paschke also participated in the fun and helped struggling students. He taught himself how to juggle when he was in the fifth grade, and about six years ago he rediscovered the enjoyable pastime. Mr. Paschke taught new students to juggle by first having them practice with bean bags. Once they got the hang of that, they were encouraged to use other objects such as balls or rings. The most important thing about juggling, said Mr. Paschke, "is learning patience." He believed that, "Practicing a little bit at a time for a long period of time will ultimately make you a better juggler."

> "Patience is the most important part of juggling." - Mr. Jeremy Paschke

Besides patience, precision was also an important part of juggling. Mr. Paschke said, "Patience is the most important part of juggling." Students needed to practice consistently in order to achieve new heights in juggling.

The jugglers in the club had a good time practicing and learning new tricks. They also made new friends that helped them become better jugglers. It would appear that some learned how to navigate through the jungle of juggling.

Peace is Every Step

"We are able to discuss world issues and find ways to resolve them without resorting to violence." - Michelle Williams

What would it feel like to be a diplomat? Members of Model UN were able to experience being a representative of a country every week. As diplomats, they discussed world issues and strived for peaceful solutions that every country would be satisfied with. Model UN cared about the welfare of all human kind. They met every Thursday morning with advisor Ms. Michele Carlson. Kelsey Dietrich, senior, explained how Model UN is different from any other club. "Model UN is unique in that it combines geography, politics, research, public speaking, and acting. You get to simulate actual events, both past and current, and sometimes you can see how your results compare with the real UN." Members enjoyed the variety of subjects and skills brought to each meeting and conference.

At general meetings, the group discussed upcoming events and did research on their country's views. Michelle Williams, junior, said, "At meetings we discuss future conferences or how a conference we just had went. We also plan fundraisers to raise money for travel."

Williams continued by saying how much fun the group was: "I enjoy the people in the club the most. By traveling to places such as Canada or Ohio and rooming together, you make friends and create bonds." Dietrich talked about the bonds between the members. "I love group and the friendships the most." By traveling, talking meetings, and doing research together, these students able to enjoy each other's company and become friends.

Members of Model UN were able to take and come up with solutions to create peace. The Honor and Service

"Noblesse Oblige," nobility obligates. This simple phrase is what National Honor Society represents and what its members loyally follow. "I dedicate myself to being part of NHS because its four pillars, service, leadership, scholarship, and character, echo my own values," said treasurer Anthony Clarke, senior. NHS selected the top students who displayed these qualities to become part of the organization. The students then turned outward to give back to their community through service.

"Through NHS we hope to promote character and dedicated service," said vice president Jessica Woll, senior. Students involved in NHS complete a minimum of sixteen hours of service their senior year by doing anything from volunteering at hospitals to tutoring. In the process of completing the service, students went on mission trips all across the country to fix homes, helped out locally by cleaning up the town, and worked at York with the mission to recycle. It was important to the students to do this service.

The values that NHS promoted helped students learn to work and become better people. "The students of NHS work to improve themselves and the community through hard work, setting a good example, and exemplifying great leadership," said Brennan Bowman, senior. Easy as Pi

The Math Team did what most people dread. Everyone on Math Team enjoyed solving complicated problems because it was "challenging, yet rewarding," said Eamon Hannigan, sophomore. To be a member of Math Team you need quick-thinking and dedication because "I got up way too early to do math," said Ryan Shea, sophomore.

About 40 people were involved with Math Team. Anyone could be a part of the team as long as they were enrolled in an honors math class. Some members have been a part of Math Team their entire high school career. Andrew Hsi, senior, said, "I joined when I was a freshman because I just enjoy doing math." The team practiced every Tuesday in Mr. Max Schoenberg's classroom. Mr. Schoenberg was a big help when it came to a problem someone did not understand. During practice Mr. Schoenberg would provide problems from previous matches to help practice for upcoming meets. This year the Math Team's biggest competition was Naperville North.

> "I got up way to early to do math." - Ryan Shea

The Math Team practiced once a week for about thirty minutes, and had a meet once a month that lasted about three hours. The Individual matches lasted about 30 minutes and had 5 questions regarding a specific mathematic topic. When it came time for a meet, a test was given to the Math Team members. Only the top 8 students from each grade would compete. Although not all the members competed in the matches, everyone was still important to the team because everyone learned from one another. The Math Team members gained knowledge, worked hard, and had a great time doing it.

The Key to Success

"Helping others is a great way to get involved in the community and it gives you a great feeling about yourself."
- Laura Klein

If anyone at York was looking for a way to get involved and make a difference in the Elmhurst community, they needed to look no further than Key Club. "We do activities that help the community and those in need while still having fun," explained Treasurer Michelle DuPrey, junior. One of the best parts about Key Club was that they focused on improving the area in which we live. "It's very local because we really try to help the Elmhurst community," said Ms. Val Stewart, the group's advisor. The great group of students that made up Key Club was what really made the club successful.

Every member was required to do at least five of the numerous service projects offered. These projects could have been anything from a car wash to Key Club's Bowling Event. Besides the projects, there were weekly meetings on Tuesday mornings. "It's not required to go to ev ery meeting, but it's strongly recommended be cause that is when members learn about the up coming events," said DuPrey. As one can see, th students involved with Key Club truly were ded icated to making a difference in our community.

Throughout the year, Key Club complet ed a variety of service projects that helped ou all sorts of people. The group's favorite project according to Ms. Stewart, was probably Senior Citizen Chore Day, during which they helped out with yard work. Besides the Chore Day, Key Club also sponsored a Pancake Day, worked at a Bags 4 Kids event, and raised money for Leukemia patients. All of these events were for a great cause, and they helped the members reach their goal, which was to "help as many people as possible," said DuPrey. - Mark Nosek

Road Map of Cultures

Why spend money to travel to different countries to learn about their culture if it could be found at York? The dedication of the Spanish, Italian, French, and the International Clubs let students learn about different cultures and languages without leaving the country.

Spanish Club met twice a month on Tuesdays or Wednesdays. During the meetings, they learned about different Spanish speaking countries and cultures through presentations and movies. They made food from Spanish countries. Not only did they learn about Spanish cultures, but during the holidays they adopted a Spanish speaking family and purchased Christmas gifts. "You learn so many new things about Spanish speaking countries in a fun environment," said Lisa Hernandez, junior.

Bocce Ball, Tarantellas, Coppa and Tombdau are some of the cultural activities that the Italian Club was able to experience. They met every other Thursday until 4:15. During the meetings they cooked Italian food while they learned about the culture. "It is a fun club and we eat very good food," stated Angela Mastromauro, senior.

The French Club did many different activities during their meetings. They dedicated one day to cheese, when they tried many different samples of cheese. They also had scavenger hunts. "We had to go around the school and find clues in French," said Sameera Jagirdar, sophomore.

Don't want to stick to learning just one language and its culture? International Club focused on many different cultures and languages. "It is a mixture of all different cultures and countries," said Rinu Thobias, junior. International Club met about every other Thursday, and during their meetings, they had many presentations on different countries. They played games that were specific to some countries while they ate and listened to cultural music.

And the Answer Is...

"Scholastic Bowl is a club which requires confidence and a broad range of knowledge of various topics," said Colin Hope, junior. Being confident was important because you must be confident in your answer when you buzz in. Covering trivia from French literature to biology, Scholastic Bowl had it all. Being a member of Scholastic Bowl required knowledge from all areas. However, each member had a certain topic that was their specialty.

> "Scholastic bowl is a club which requires confidence and a broad range of knowledge of various topics." - Colin Hope

Scholastic Bowl was divided into two teams: junior varsity and varsity. Practices were held every Monday after school. At practice, Mr. Jeremy Paschke would provide typical trivia questions that may come up in a match. The club also held mock setups during practice, and sometimes competed against the faculty. Even against the faculty, the students did exceptionally well, even leading for most of the time.

Matches were very interesting. First, a toss-up was asked. The first team that buzzed in and answered correctly was given a bonus question. A bonus question had four parts with four different answers. The team was then given an opportunity to answer these bonus questions. However, if the team answered some incorrectly, the opposing team was given an opportunity to answer them. There is a time limit on these questions, so members had to combine their knowledge and quick thinking to earn their team points.

Scholastic Bowl did exceptionally well this year, but "we could have done better," said Dylan Logan, senior. The members of Scholastic Bowl gained lots of knowledge from each other this year and had lots of fun doing it. - Michael Stotzer

Fixing One Car at a Time

"For these participants, it's a fun club to be able to work and build something of their own to be proud of and interested in."
- Mr. Ronald Robak

Brakes, engine performance, suspension work, heating and cooling, air conditioning, the list went on and on for the members of Auto Club. The club met every Tuesday for two hours to learn about the key components of automobiles. It was a club for anyone interested in cars that liked to work in a more hands-on environment and had an interest in building automobiles.

Mr. Ronald Robak had at least 30 to 40 students participate throughout the year. "Members of Auto club learned through in an interactive way through demonstrations," Robak commented. They also learned how to handle specific problems such as brakes and motors and how an engine worked. After they talked about how to diagnose a specific problem, members took safety into consideration when they worked with the power tools.

In Auto Shop, "we did restoration projects, built hot rods, and even designed our own personal vehicles," added Lisa Hernandez, junior. The Auto members used the shop to work on their own projects. The projects led Connor Martin, Joseph Roberto, juniors, and Gregory Polak, senior, to Springfield, Illinois to compete against other high schools for their collision repair projects.

"We worked hard on each of our projects every time we met but had fun while doing what interested us," William Reichert, sophomore, mentioned. They continued to learn whenever a problem with a car happened. Having a common knowledge about the function of cars, they felt a sense of belonging. They will continue to learn and yet still have time for breaks to eat what Robak called 'energy bars'.

Pushing the Limits

Dance team? What? Isn't that the Pom-pon squad? "No, not at all" said captain Johanna Parker, senior, "our team is something completely different." This dance team is a breath of fresh air for the school. With the traditional Pom-pon squad and Cheerleading squad, this club brings a different style to the table.

The Urban Arts club is a new dance team that started last year, with a great sense of style. The squad emphasized hip-hop in their dance routines, with dance steps unlike that of traditional dancing. They took mainstream music, steps and put their flavor on them.

The group was new to the school so it was compared to other groups like it. It received a great response from the student body. "They really spiced things up because they are something different; York got to experience a whole new flavor," said Katherine Schroeder, senior. They have made a great name for themselves next to the other preforming arts, meeting and exceeding all the pressures. "I think what makes the dancing so unique is that it doesn't have as much structure as the other teams. We can bring ideas from the television and pop culture that has nothing to do with school," said Parker.

The team consisted of close friends who dedicated themselves to pop culture and enjoyed it fully. "We have so much fun when we practice. It's like having a dance off every other day," said Airielle Ruberte, junior. The club met three times a week.

Homecoming was the first true performance with the gym packed with students. "It was the biggest rush to stand there waiting for the music to start and the gym being silent it was great and worth the work," said Caroline DeGaetano, senior. - Stephannie Aguilera and Christine Saenz

They've Got Rhythm

When some people think of the band, they envision a high-spirited group of students in green and white uniforms with feathered hats marching onto the football field playing a familiar tune with their shiny brass instruments. While this is one aspect of the band program, it certainly does not represent all that these students do. Not only did students learn the notes, but they also learned respect, commitment, and pride.

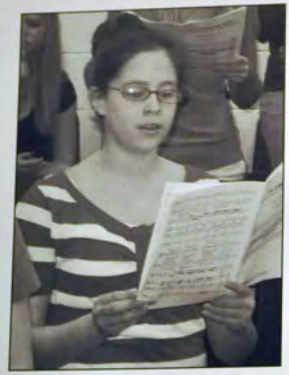

The band program consisted of three groups: the cadet, concert, and symphonic bands. These classes were combined to form other ensembles to provide a variety of music for the students. Mr. Ron Polancich, the director of the band, said, "We try to offer a lot of different music for each instrument." Because of all this variety, Mr. Polancich said, "There were once twenty-five rehearsals in a twenty-four hour period."

The students in band learned more than just how to play their instruments. The three factors stressed on the students were commitment, respect, and pride. The students needed to commit themselves to improving as musicians. They were expected to respect each other, the teachers, and the equipment. Most importantly, they learned to have pride in the program and themselves. Mr. Polancich said, "This year's group demonstrated the pride factor better than any other year."

The students in band knew how to show school spirit. Not only did they perform with spirit, but they also had a great time. Molly Field and Brigid Baker, juniors, agreed that the hardest part about band was, "leaving when the bell rang." The band was more than just a music class for some of these students. The Music in Them

"Singing your heart out" is not just a phrase or a motivation you tell people before they have a performance. It is a motto for all levels of the York Choir. They worked hard each and every day to prepare themselves for performances and most importantly, to improve their singing ability. Singing takes a lot of focus. There were many songs to be memorized. For the choir, however, it was not just about memorizing the songs; it was about finding the meaning and a connection to their lives.

The choir practiced every day of the year during first and fourth periods. It was just like a normal class, except for the singing part. To prepare for performances, Kelsey Andersen, sophomore, said that, "Right before a performance we'll go through all of the songs and work on details such as dynamics and tone." In choir they did not just sing it; they worked on the little details, too. Those little details were very important when it came to performing. And then when they got to the actual performance, everything started to get harder. Abby Miner, sophomore, described performances as, "There's a lot of build-up because we practice so much leading up to it." In performing, there was not always a lot of pressure; there was room for enjoyment. Steven Maimonis, junior, mentioned that performances are, "Fun as well as entertaining. I love watching the other choirs perform and I love performing." It was a lot of work, but also a lot of fun.

> "I love watching the other choirs perform."
> - Steven Maimonis

The choir would not have been where it was if it was not for Ms. Rebecca Marianetti. She was there every step of the way for all levels of the choir. She helped them improve their singing ability and helped them recognize the meaning of what they were singing. Kenna Rago, sophomore, said, "Ms. Marianetti knows a lot about music and is flexible in explaining things to the class and offering ways to help us." Ms. Marianetti was very encouraging to everyone. Jessie Rodriguez, junior, mentioned that, "Ms. Marianetti makes choir fun. She encourages us to keep going when the music gets tough." The support that she gave really helped the choir to be where they were.

There were difficulties in being in the choir, though. Laura Klein, junior, said, "It gets frustrating when one part in a song is hard to get; so we sing it a bunch of times." Also, Felicia Austin, junior, mentioned that, "It takes a lot of energy to stand all period and focus on the song." Working really hard all the time does have its advantages and rewards, though. If someone were to ask the choir what their favorite part was, they would not get just one answer. Rodriguez said, "I love being in the choir because it is such a relaxed environment." The students in choir sang and enjoyed being around each other at the same time. They had lots of fun, but still got a lot of work done.

Improving voices and practicing the songs really paid off when it came to performances. Focus and memorization were the keys to success in choir. Finding the meaning of the songs and lyrics helped a lot when they sang. The choir put feeling into what they sang. And that was what it was all about.

It's All in the Strings

Music comes in all shapes and sizes. For the orchestra, however, it's all in the strings. Strings are not just another part of their instruments. They made beautiful music when hard work was employed. The orchestra practiced to improve their skills and impress the audience.

The Orchestra practiced every day during 2nd, 3rd, and 5th periods. Class work prepared them for concerts. Stephanie Dantino, junior, said, "We usually work on music for our upcoming concert and we do scales and technical warm-ups to learn new things." Some of the students went above and beyond with their practicing. Janine King, junior, said, "I usually practice the pieces we are doing in orchestra, but also what I'm learning with my private instructor."

Mr. Ray Ostwald, the advisor, helped the orchestra improve. According to King, he "tells us that whenever we need help to not hesitate to ask." He also gave the students a chance to play faster, more difficult pieces. Mary Jordan, sophomore, said, "I like playing music that's faster because slow music can get kind of boring."

The performances showcased all their hard work. Sebastian Pernal, sophomore, said, "At first, they were scary because of stage fright, but now they are like taking a walk in the park." Practice did help when it came to the performances. Dantino added, "They are a lot of fun because you get to show an audience how much hard work you put in."

Orchestra proved to be rewarding. Jordan said, "The most rewarding thing is meeting new people who like to do what you do, and making friends." King said, "One of the most rewarding things about being in Orchestra is being able to play many varieties of songs, and to play some of the compositions of the most famous composers." Life is a Science

Family Career and Community Leaders of America (FCCLA) was a club where students who enjoyed Family and Consumer Sciences were able to show off their talents and even compete with other students around the state. Competing at the state level meant having an opportunity to qualify for nationals where they offer scholarships to pursue their interests in college. FCCLA was about being recognized for their services and learning how the real world industries worked. Everyone was able to do what they loved, and gained more experience by being part of FCCLA.

There were over thirty skill areas one could participate and compete in. From there, students met with their teacher and became experts on their category. From interior design to family values, there was something for everyone. Each category was taught by different teachers of the Family and Consumer Sciences department. They usually met once a week for an hour before or after school. There they prepared for their competitions. Michelle Williams, junior, explained what mornings were like: "We usually prepare by perfecting our art both in its presentation in words and approach." Students also prepared by watching television shows and reading books and magazines on topics that specifically had to do with their category.

How a competition worked depended on what chapter they were in. They had set up their display or presentation by the setting they were given, then they had to present it to the judges, who gave them a score. They had to manage their time and make the deadline, all while perfecting their presentation. Ms. Barbara Lasko talked about why she enjoyed working with students in FCCLA. "I got to see individual growth in both skills and confidence as they prepare for and participate in the competitions, and spending time at conventions helps you to relate in a different way as adult and student."

FCCLA was not only about impressing judges, it was about being able to do what they were passionate about, and gaining skills that they would carry with them after high school. Andre Gordillo, senior, explains how beneficial FCCLA was: "It's a really good club to be a part of, it's great for college experience, and it offers real world knowledge in up and coming industries as well as offering great service projects." - Christine Saenz

Teach By What You Do

It seems like all little kids, when asked what they want to do when they grow up say, "I want to be a teacher!" Most of those kids end up changing their mind as they grow older, but there are a select few who keep that dream all through their school career. Those are the students in Invite to Teach.

Invite to Teach consisted of both in class time here at York and classroom time at the school that the students picked to student teach at. Most students chose to student teach at a school they had previously gone to with a teacher they may have had. In their respective classrooms the students were assigned different jobs by the teacher. Nicole Schmelter, senior, said, "We observe the classroom, assist the teachers with copies and other work and assist with lesson planning and teaching."

In order to achieve a grade in Invite to Teach the students had to plan out lessons and activities and conduct them with the class. The teachers then evaluated them on their performance and provided basis for a grade. Most teachers did a nice job of also giving feedback on the work that the students were doing and providing suggestions on how to improve on lessons and activities. Achieving a grade was not the only important thing in Invite to Teach however; achieving a relationship with the students in the classroom was important also. Kimberly Vicary, senior, said, "In order to achieve the best relationships with the kids, its essential that Invite students get involved at their schools outside of the classroom. I helped coach basketball and I'm helping out with volleyball in the spring."

Invite to Teach paved the way for these students to be teachers that could possibly be remembered by students forever. Not only did they learn how to accommodate all kinds of learning styles, they also learned how to touch people's lives in all sorts of different ways. Vicary said, "I would want to be the kind of teacher who has a good impact on someone and changes a student's life."

Preparing for Tomorrow, Today

York offers many different electives to fit almost anyone's interests. It allows students to try different things that they may be interested in pursuing later in life. The medical careers class does just that. Knowing that it will better prepare them for their future, students typically join the class as a way to learn more about the medical field.

The Medical Careers class curriculum changed from first to second semester. First semester was dedicated to learning all about the human body. Not only did they learn about the body's structures and functions, but they also learned how the body works and how to fix it when something goes wrong. Benita Antony, senior, said, "I really enjoy learning about real life situations and how human life works from an all new perspective." The class also consisted of dissections and stethoscope practice. Ms. Catie Feigh, said, "The students only have one semester to learn what most do in a year. It is on the same level as an honors class so they have to be very dedicated."

> "I hope they will leave this class with a passion for wanting to take better care of themselves and others."
> - Ms. Catie Feigh

Come second semester, the students gathered everything they had learned and applied it in a real hospital setting. They chose eight two-week rotations of departments such as the emergency room, birthing centers, physical therapy or nursing. David Long, senior, said, "I'm not entirely sure which field I am interested in yet so getting to try many different ones is a great way to help me decide." In the hospital, the students spent time observing, taking vital signs and assisting in daily medical tasks. Stephanie Strejc, senior, said, "We directly shadow a medical staff member each day. The one-on-one aspect from a trained professional really helps us to get some insight on the nature of the profession."

All in all, the class was a great way to prepare for one's future. It gave one a new perspective, a new way to look at one's life and the life that surrounds them. The class also allowed one to explore the medical professions to find out which one is right for them. It may have even given one an upper hand in college because they will have a better basic knowledge of the field considering many high schools do not offer a class like this. Ms. Feigh said, "I hope they will leave this class with a passion for wanting to take better care of themselves and others." - Kelly Connolly

Students with Spirit

"People don't realize how much StuCo actually does. We are behind almost every school function. It's rewarding to see everything we accomplish!"
- Christine Lambert

Homecoming, the winter dance, Senior Soiree, Turnabout, and Prom: these are just a few of the many activities Student Council planned for the school this year. Student Council, also known as "StuCo" by the members, existed to "boost school spirit and to help bring the school together," explained Sarah Dyer, senior. Student Council was vital to the school. Without it, we would have lost valuable activities. Each year, "StuCo runs coat, food and blood drives, and all of the spirit days", said Margaret Regan, senior class president.

Doing so much for the school required all members to work together on each activity. Even though the members "all have strong opinions, we do our best to compromise so we can plan our events that will be most enjoyable for the student body," stated Luke Jorwic, junior. Since there were around twelve people representing each class, StuCo was a large organization that was mostly s dent-run, "kind of like a democracy," stated Th

"Have a great day, York!"

After going through six teachers in two years, the Y-TV team knew what it took to be independent yet rely on each other at the same time. There were some ups and downs, but in the end they were always able to get the job done, and mention have a great time doing it.

In order to become a part of Y-TV, one must take the broadcasting class as a pre-requisite. There is then an interview process where returning staff members question the applicants. Finally, one must read a script on camera to be evaluated. Colleen Sestan, senior, said, "Just like any other team at York, we wanted to make sure the chosen people were qualified, up to the task, and easy to work with."

People wanted to join Y-TV for a variety of reasons. Nicolette Novarro, senior, said "I wanted to be on Y-TV because that is essentially what I want to do for my profession. I want to be a news anchor and this is a great experience for me." Morgan Witt, senior, said, "I just really enjoy being on camera and entertaining people."

At the beginning of a typical day, everyone figured out their responsibilities, went to their jobs, and set-up. The different roles of the class consisted of three anchors, a director, a camera person, a teleprompter, a switcher, a soundboard editor, a background selector, avid editors, and a pre-broadcast team. Everyone found enjoyment in the different roles. Some liked being on camera, some liked instructing what went on behind the scenes, and others liked editing the video. Once everyone was ready, they began shooting the announcements. Alexandra Flando, senior, said, "We have fifty minutes to film and edit a five minute segment. It gives us some time to goof around, but we still know what we're here to do so we do focus and get the job done."

> "I want to do my best each day so that I gain more experience."
> - Nicolette Novarro

Everyone in the class had different motivations for doing well. Novarro said, "I want to do my best each day so that I gain more experience under my belt and continue to improve my skills." Sestan said, "What motivates me the most is knowing that the entire school is going to see what we produce." Whatever their motivation, they could all agree on the great time they had. Witt said, "I admit that when I leave, I'm going to miss the class and the people in it. It's really been a lot of fun." Flando said, "There's really never a dull day. We have a lot of entertaining people in our class so it's always a good time." And as their final words, they wanted to say, "Have a great day, York!"

Writing For a Purpose

The newspaper just finished its seventy fourth year, just as the school, the newspaper has evolved. It just started out with a couple pages, and now the student body was able to read up to a fourteen page paper. The newspaper was something the students used to express themselves, verbally or artistically. Being on the newspaper staff enabled students to talk about anything they wanted. The newspaper ranged from articles that stirred up some controversy to articles that entertained us.

While students joined for a variety of reasons. Everyone had something to say and York Hi was the place to say it. Nicholas Slocum, senior, decided to join the staff because, "I can vent about world and national issues to over three thousand people." For others writing had been a passion their entire lives, "I have always enjoyed writing and politics, and I was looking for a way to combine those two and relay information to people," said Amanda Sabino, senior.

Like every class, York Hi did have its difficulties. Deadlines were enough to get any student stressed out. Most of the time students had to spend their time doing work for the newspaper outside of class. Margaret Sack and Arielle Rebek, seniors, dreaded these crunch times, "There is always so much to do and so little time, but we love it!" You could usually tell when a deadline was coming up; the staff would be rushing around to get their assignment done. On the night of a deadline they stayed in the building until around seven at night to reach their goal of about fourteen pages an issue.

The newspaper was entirely student run: they designed the layouts, took the pictures, drew the cartoons, and even checked grammar. They reached out to the student body, and were able to voice their opinions and hopefully they were the voice for the students as well. - Christine Saenz

75 Years of Tradition

Seventy-five years ago a tradition formed when the first edition of Y's tales was introduced.

Yearbook was far different from any other class, the main difference being "There is no textbook; everything is hands on. Homework consists of going out and interviewing people," explained Christine Saenz, senior. Regardless of the lack of homework, members of Y's Tales still needed to deal with the pressure to produce a good book. "The pressure to give the student body a yearbook that will capture all of the memories made throughout the year is a really hard job. We are continually trying to top ourselves from last year, so the pressure is both good and bad," said Kelly McDowell, senior.

The staff was composed of 23 sophomores, juniors, and seniors, with advisor Ms. Isadora Parrini maintaining a watchful eye to ensure work got done on time. Members of the Y's Tales staff were completely responsible for the formatting of the variety of pages in the yearbook. At the beginning of a deadline, staff members would receive the pages they were responsible for. After receiving their assignments, they typically had 3 weeks to gather various interviews, and pictures to make their page complete.

Drawing up spreads and trying to get them in before deadlines meant Y's Tales was far from a "blow-off" course, but most definitely worth the work when the book was done.

> "So much hard work and love goes into the book...It's almost unreal."
> - Courtney Grob

Editors and staff members were often required to give up days from their Winter and Thanksgiving breaks, in order to come into the Y's Tales lab to sort out the details of the book.

A lot of work went into completing the 75th edition of Y's Tales, and when the book was finished, the staff was a mixture of emotions. "At the end of the year when we're passing out yearbooks is so emotional. I'm usually fighting back tears. So much hard work and love goes into the book, it gives me the goose bumps. It's almost unreal, I almost need to pinch myself to get back to reality," stated Courtney Grob, senior.

Seniors '08 Going Strong

"Senior Soiree was amazing! I had a blast and will always remember this night! I looked forward to it for three years! Yay for seniors!" - Elizabeth Budnik

Senior Soiree was a social event only for the seniors. It was a special time for them to reflect on their four years and come together as a group to reminisce about old memories while creating new ones at the same time. Senior Soiree would not have been able to happen without Margaret Regan, senior class president. Regan devoted a lot of time and energy to making Senior Soiree a successful event: "I'm really happy with how the event turned out. It was a fun time for reflection on our time at York, while also having a blast." Thank goodness for Regan because without her, the show would not have happened.

Unlike previous years when many men would tryout for the Mr. Duke competition, Joseph Packhem was the lone contender. He dazzled and entertained the audience by doing an interpretive banana dance and answering mind boggling York trivia. He also shined when he wore his beach wear, complete with scuba accessories. Packhem was entertaining and will always be remembered for his awesome performance. The ladies are sure to be fighting over him when prom rolls around because the prize for the winner was two tickets to prom: "I don't know who I am going to take, but whoever it is will be a lucky lady!" said Packhem.

The night concluded with dancing and grooving with the help of the DJ. The night was capped off when everyone came together with arms around each other and enjoyed the last song together. The seniors of '08 will always remember this night. - Erin Kilgore and Courtney Grob

Thank You...

Kristina- For being on top of everything. Especially proofs, we never would've finished without you. You were a incredible copy editor.
Karla- For dealing with those difficult spreads. You always put in extra time during lunch and did a great job getting them done.
Angela- For running errands for us when we were short on time. And for staying on top of all your work.
Brennan- For always taking photos for us whenever we needed it. And for doing our name lists.
John- For being a great sports editor. And for walking in after the bell rang nearly every day.
Kelly C.- For all the effort and time you put into your spreads. And for all the charisma you brought to staff!
Riya- For being an amazing photo editor and still managing to do all the other work we threw at you.
Nina- For always doing what you needed to get your spreads done, including finding those seemingly nonexistent photos.
Courtney G.- For taking on the difficult job of senior editor. The section looks great. And for teaching us what an ECU is.
Erin- For using your organizational skills to make sure all the senior quotes, bios, and memories got in.
Emma- For learning quickly the ropes of being on staff and turning out quality spreads. And we love your laugh.
Kelly M.- For doing all those miscellaneous tasks we needed to get the book done like group photos. And for being consistently consistent.
Sarah- For dealing with the group photos that never seemed to end. ¡Nos encanta la clase de espanol contigo!
Mark N.- For your "Charlie Bit My Finger" reenactment- complete with the British accent. Your Maggie's new favorite.
Mark O.- For giving us music in the mornings. And for taking the exact pictures we needed to complete our pages while still doing outstanding spreads.
Mary Kate- For putting all that effort into your spreads. You're always so sweet amidst all the chaos.
Shannon- For being a terrific photo editor. You always were such a help and had such creative ideas.
Christine- For picking up all our slack by helping everyone on staff, coming in on weekends, and putting together these great pages! And for just being wonderful!
Hannah- For doing such a great fantastic job even when we gave you such difficult spreads. And just for being you.
Amanda- For being an excellent copy editor. You made our lives a whole lot easier- especially with all those proofs.
Mike- For never complaining when we gave you extra work. You were a great and well-needed addition to the staff.
Stephannie- For adding some pizzazz to the staff. We loved driving you around to get pictures for your work spread!
Steve- For dealing with the craziness of the staff and getting all your work done on time. We really missed you when you left.
Courtney M.- For doing a spread even when you weren't actually in class. We loved seeing you first hour when you should have been in physics.
Ms. P- For giving us so much of your time- during your lunch hour, on weekends, and before and after school. Even when everything was at its worst, you kept a smile on your face and supported and guided us. There would be no book without you.

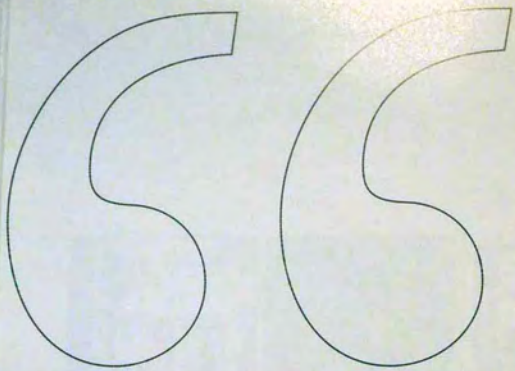

Shaggy Sweet and Maggie

Say Anything

Each day brings new opportunities to share thoughts and opinions and develop your voice. The challenge lies in making a desirable impact by the end of each year. But with each ending there comes an opportunity to try new things, take new chances, and evolve that voice. For freshmen, with the closing of this year, the timid voice that entered high school leaves more comfortable and unique. Sophomores experience new-found independence and now hold a confidence in their voice. Juniors have grown intellectually and their voice is now ready to carry them into their final year of high school. After striving to leave the echo of their voices behind in these hallways, seniors will take the voice they have developed in high school with them into their future. High school is a unique opportunity to find your voice and develop yourself. Whether that voice is candid or soft-spoken, serious or lighthearted make it your own and use it to experience all that high school holds. So go ahead, take a risk, and by the time you've left make sure you've said something. Say Anything.

Colophon

Twenty-six staff members and advisor Ms. Isadora Parrini worked with Herff Jones Printing Company and Lifetouch Prestige Portraits to produce the 75th addition of Y's Tales, the York Community High School Yearbook. This yearbook served as a record of all that occurred during the 2007-2008 school year. The nine by twelve inch book had a press run 2525 copies. The $32 book was purchased by 95% of the student body. The staff used nine computers with Adobe InDesign CS2 software to create the book. The fonts used in the book include: Isabell, Opus, Eddie, and Sharpie Print. Special thanks to Ms. Diane Smith, Mr. Kevin Brown, Mr. David Creech, Mr. Jeffrey Hartman, Mr. Mark Bibel, Ms. Maureen Olofsson, Ms. Dory Holloway, Ms. Tracy Simpson, and all contributors to Y's Tales.
