MANY JOURNEYS . . .

No matter how closely you look amongst the 2,648 students here at York, you will not find two that are exactly the same. It is this characteristic, the diversity of interests and qualities of its students, that makes York the outstanding school that it is. No matter what path you choose when you enter York's doors, each road at York ultimately attempts to lead to the same destination: Excellence.

The lifestyles, organizations, sports, and academics of York each contribute something special to the journey to excellence. Getting decked out in green and white during Homecoming Week, getting involved in your favorite extracurricular activity, overcoming the pain of a close loss to a rival, and sharing your interests with others all come together to form the excellence that York represents and the excellence for which each of its students strives. So no matter which path you take during your time here at York, whether you are a runner, a theatre enthusiast, or a trivia junkie, be prepared for the ride of a lifetime, York.

As one of the school's longest running traditions, Prom was a huge event attended by hundreds of York students every year. This year was no different as the normal tuxedos, evening gowns, corsages, and boutonnieres were visible throughout the crowded dance floor and the relaxing settings of Navy Pier's Crystal Gardens.

To make the dance a reality, Student Council juniors, under the direction of Ms. Denien Larson, fundraised. Ms. Larsen, the fifth year sponsor of the event, said, "The largest contributions for Prom came from the carnations [sale]." She added, "Student Council approached local business organizations to make an add booklet." To lower the school's costs for the event, Student Council worked throughout the year to raise these funds. Student Council webmaster Mansi Parikh, senior, said, "Working on Prom was stressful, but it was worth it in the end because everyone had fun."

The students who attended the dance appreciated the effort that was given in order to make the night one to remember. With the upbeat music, beautiful surroundings, and happy crowd, the "Time of My Life" themed Prom was fun for all, and it was a night that will be fondly remembered. Kelly McHugh, senior, said, "Between the music and the atmosphere, Prom was really the time of my life."

"We've done our work and paid our dues," Kelsi Brown, graduate, said these words in her speech "The Castle of Now." For the students, the time came and went, and high school was over. The graduation ceremony had many speeches that gave advice to the graduating class on how to approach the future and commemorated the memories that had passed. As Michael Ross, graduate, put in his speech the words of Theodore Geisel, "How did it get so late so soon?" High school went by quickly, but the students will carry certain memories and skills into the future. Daniel Gonzalez, graduate, said in his speech titled "Carpe Diem," that the students met "the challenges of the journey we've had." He also said that these students "have become intellects, athletes, and scholars." They grew not only academically but also physically and intellectually.

The ceremony summed up all that the students experienced throughout their four years of high school. Justina Grillo, graduate, felt the emotions that came along with the ceremony. She said that the graduation ceremony "represented not only what we learned academically but friends, inspiring teachers, the whole high school experience." High school was not just about academics but also about learning life lessons. Amanda Schroeder, graduate, said the ceremony was "a great way to end four years of high school."

The students all took many paths to get to graduation day, but they all achieved success by graduating and moving forward in their lives. As Ms. Diana Smith put it in her speech to the graduating class, "This is York." The graduating class, along with the rest of the student body, was unique and made York a special place filled with memories. The ceremony was a memorable one that would leave a lasting impression. Also, as Gonzalez said, the graduates were "kind of a big deal." They definitely made their imprint on York soil. - Mary Kate Rohn

The Castle of Now

Kelsi Brown

"As I stand here and look around at my fellow graduates, we share a moment we have all looked forward to for a long time. We've done the work and paid our dues, and now it's our turn to tip our hats and say farewell. Right now, we anticipate walking across this stage and receiving our high school diplomas. We can think of our family and friends and recognize how fantastic they all have been in getting us to this moment. I invite every one of you to enjoy what is happening right now, because if you're here, you've earned it.

But this moment, just as all others before it, will soon be gone. Every moment that we pass through is sure to speed by, and just as Silverstein puts it, 'As soon as you're in, you're out.'"

Summertime & the Livin' is Easy

The minute school ended, students, rejoicing the end of another school year, poured through the halls. As students parted ways for the summer, they each shared a common goal: to make the most of their time.

John Hennessy, sophomore, decided to take advantage of his summer by studying abroad. He spent five weeks studying French and European history in Paris. While he was there, he met students from all over the nation and was also able to explore the city. "The program that I went to Paris through was called Oxbridge," Hennessey explained. "It was an amazing learning experience and I definitely had a lot of fun while I was there."

Others found themselves among the familiar hallways of York taking summer school. Though summer school is oftentimes dreaded, some found themselves pleasantly surprised. Trace Gaynor, senior, said, "I went into summer school thinking that it would be a drag, but U.S. History with Mr. Torney was easily one of my favorite classes at York."

Many of York's students were lucky enough to travel. Meghan McManus, senior, went to New York this summer with her summer theater class. From Broadway shows to Times Square, she experienced all New York had to offer. "We spent a lot of time in Broadway watching shows such as Shrek and West Side Story. Our experience in New York was as bright as Broadway." Some students were even able to travel outside of the country. Taylor Thorpe, senior, was accompanied by some of her classmates on a trip to Italy. The group traveled in a gondola through Venice; ate authentic pizza, pasta, and gelato; and saw many of the famous landmarks in Italy like the Parthenon and Colosseum. Thorpe reminisced, "It was the time of our lives and I know none of us will forget it."

Doing Their Part

Every year, the youth of the community come together one night to celebrate Relay for Life. Brigid O'Keeffe, graduate, said, "Relay is an all night walk in which people receive donations from family and friends for their team and the American Cancer Society. It is a celebration of all the work they have done."

In order to take part, participants must be on a team of about ten members, sign up online, and raise a minimum of one hundred dollars. In past years, Relay for Life was an event in which all ages came together, but this past year York students celebrated an exclusively high school celebration in April. Vanessa Godoy, graduate, said of her commitment to Relay for Life, "I am a committee member because Relay for Life allows me to help cancer patients and their family." This past year, York Relay for Life committee members got students and faculty more involved in the event in many different ways. For example, they painted a hallway in honor of Relay for Life, they asked other clubs, sports, and organizations to be more involved in the event, and they worked to bring the entire school together.

Sarah Menas, graduate, said, "I feel so much better knowing that we are doing everything to celebrate and remember those lives that have been touched by cancer." As a whole, the York student body raised over 52,000 dollars for cancer research. Follow the Yellow Brick Road

'Sold out!' These were the words heard a week before the play was performed. The Wizard of Oz was York's spring production that was a hit throughout the community. The hard work of the cast, crew, and directors and the new technologies not only enhanced the play, but they also allowed it to become a huge success.

The Wizard of Oz was not like any other play ever performed at York. There was so much technology involved. "The technical aspects of The Wizard of Oz were incredible...nothing like we have ever done at York before, so it was a new and exciting experience," stated Kayla Kummerow, graduate. In The Wizard of Oz, the cast was able to get people in the air and fly, thanks to the new technological aspects that this play featured.

All the practices that were held were the key to the success of the play. "Practices were anywhere between one hour to nine hours. We just ran through scenes and perfected everything," stated Matthew Mordini, graduate. The scenes were acted and practiced to perfection while adding new pieces of technology. "With adding new tech in every run, it got more amazing each time we saw it," stated Kummerow.

The technology and the practices were not the only things that made the play successful. Ms. Rebecca Marianetti was also a key factor in the play. She helped each member of the cast get into character. "Ms. Marianetti helped me find just how good Glinda really is and just embrace it. There was a fine line between being a good witch versus a conceited good witch, and I think she helped me find the best witch which really added to the performance," stated Kummerow. By helping each student understand the complexities of his or her own character, Ms. Marianetti enabled the cast to find the 'oomph' that each character needed to keep the audience's attention.

Overall, the hard work of the cast, crew, and directors allowed The Wizard of Oz to be as successful a production as York has produced recently. The new technologies that were added enhanced the overall performance. The success of the play, as evidenced by the selling out of the show, caused it to be something not easily forgotten. "The excitement on opening night was something I will never forget," said Stephanie Japczyk, graduate. - Karla Bayas

Royally Spirited: HOMECOMING 009

Bond, James Bond or shall I say Duke, York Duke. On Monday September 28th York High School transformed into Casino Royale, a place for big spenders and the insanely spirited. This year the students filled the halls with not only green and white, but with the thrill of a high stakes casino and a place where only top agents could roll.

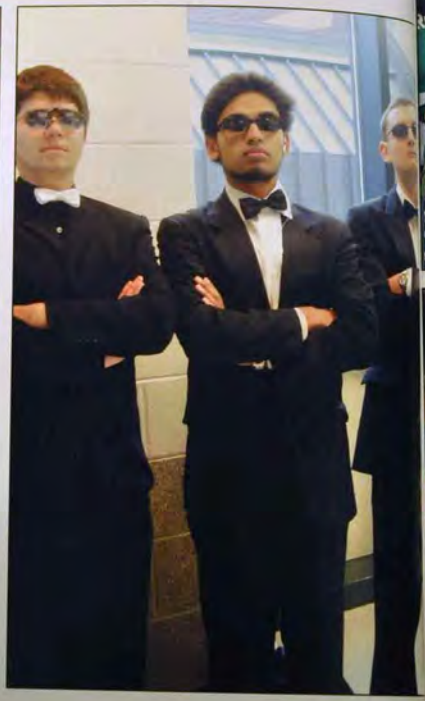

From the annual King of the Couch competition, to hallway decorating and the Powder Puff game, York High School came together as one. The pep rally on Friday kicked off the weekend festivities. Kristina Murray, senior, said "I loved how much everyone cheered at the pep rally and showed so much school spirit. Looking up into the stands it was like a sea of green. York has more school spirit than any other school."

Throughout the week students celebrated spirit days; while there was pajama day, class color day, and green and white day, this year there was also secret agent day, an ode to James Bond, and decade day where tie dye and long braids seemed to be the outfit of choice. "Decade day was by far my favorite spirit day, seeing everyone dressed in plaid pant suits and tie dye is quite a site to be seen," said Daron Buckley, senior.

Everyone had different things he or she loved about Homecoming week, whether it was the craziness of green and white day, the dress or the fact that "no one stresses about homework." King of the Couch

Sitting on a big green sofa during a Homecoming football game does not really seem like that big of a deal. However, to a few of York's most spirited seniors, it was worth dressing up in women's clothing and little girls Halloween costumes.

The York Brotherhood, consisting of Christopher Catalano, Ray Yong, Peter Coffin, and Anthony Albergo, seniors, began their journey before Homecoming week was even on the minds of York students. The boys of the York Brotherhood were brought together last summer by Christopher Catalano, forming the ultimate group of York Spirit. They made this year's Homecoming one to remember, with enough kilt wearing to last everyone a lifetime, which seemed to be the boys favorite part.

King of the Couch has been a long time York tradition and this year was carried on with lots of Duke pride. The boys cheered and tailgated all the way to the top to be named this year's Kings of the Couch, setting the bar high for next year's competitors.

Boom! was here

Homecoming: it is a night of smiling, laughing, and dancing the night away. That was what York's Homecoming 2009, Casino Royale, was all about. "We really pushed the envelope this year," said Meghan McManus, senior, the Secretary of Student Council.

This year, Student Council added a lot of changes to the Homecoming dance, starting off with the new DJ, Boom Entertainment. The DJ changed the whole atmosphere of the dance; there were lights everywhere, and an MC who interacted with students made the dance a lot more personal. "The best part about the MC was how energetic and entertaining he was," said Brittany Biggs, senior. This year, Student Council worked hard with the administration to make the dance fun for students but also appropriate for the administration. "The main goal for the dance this year was to focus on the students," said the Student Body President Mary Japczyk, senior. "We wanted them to have a fun and happy time," said Japczyk. Student Council reached its goal. After the dance, students raved about how awesome the DJ and the dance were. "It was the best Homecoming out of my four years here at York," said Danielle Koch, senior. She added, "The dance in general was really fun. It was crazy. I couldn't have asked for a better Homecoming to end senior year." - Melissa Brunke

Behind the scenes

Through the curtain, the audience can be heard scrambling to find seats. The lights dim in the auditorium as the crowd shuffles in. The music starts, and the show begins. While all this is happening, the cast members are in the dressing room, putting on the final touches to their characters' outifts and making sure all their makeup is in place. The cast gathers together as a united group one last time before hitting the stage for the show.

The actors and actresses told stories and listened to pop music behind stage to get pumped for the anticipated show, but the audience knew nothing of it. All they saw was the calm, collected actors in full character who created an image for their eyes, while behind the scenes, everything was complete chaos. Behind the curtain, everyone was scrambling around and making sure that all the props that needed to be on stage got out there on time, but the long preparation produced flawless set changes. After the show was complete, the cast gathered in the dressing room to praise each other on an awesome show. Then, the cast went out to dinner to celebrate its accomplishment and yet another amazing production.

As the audience piled into the auditorium, the actors and actresses took the final look in the mirror and said their last 'break a leg.' With bated breath, they walked on stage. Lights. Camera. Tragedy.

The York Drama Club put on the production The Cherry Orchard. This play took place in Russia during the 1800s. "The play had so much energy, and there were so many entertaining characters," exclaimed Christina Buckley, senior, after seeing the Sunday afternoon show.

Each character had very solid personalities. Pischik was a goofy lady who had a lot of medical problems including asthma and a gout in her leg. Lovely, the female protagonist, was in love with a man in Paris whose romance could never flourish due to the distance between them. Lovely gave money to anyone who came her way and as a result became in debt and had to sell the Cherry Orchard, the home in which her family grew up. Once the Cherry Orchard was sold, the family's new life began. To enhance the story, the cast made a huge, twenty foot high mansion consisting of maroon curtains, steps leading up to French doors, and even real paintings lining the walls. All of the pieces of furniture used were antiques adding to the 1800s atmosphere.

A lot of hard work went into the final show. During tech week, the cast started rehearsal after school and went until after six o'clock p.m.. This involved running every scene with both casts and perfecting every action and every line. "We have very talented actors; we really are blessed here at York," stated Meghan McManus, senior, about the cast of The Cherry Orchard. Along with the actors, the back stage crew put in a ton of time and effort to make this play possible. - Brittany Biggs

Oh, What A Night!

The Four Seasons's song "Oh, What a Night!" gave Turnabout its upbeat, energetic theme. Students excitedly participated in "Snowcoming Week" by dressing up to the daily themes as well as coming to Turnabout. The girls had the chance to see how the guys felt every time Homecoming and Prom came around. It was a new and exciting experience for many that came.

The girls had the magical experience of having all the power at the dance. Shannon Rohn, graduate, jokingly explained, "We just can't let it go to our heads." Cara Mucci, junior, agreed, saying, "I loved asking! I felt in control." Did the guys miss having all of this power and control? Alexander Abramski, graduate, did not miss it at all. He said, "It's nice to relax for once and not have to be stressed out on creating some elaborate way to ask a girl." Matt Hilgendorf, senior, agreed with Abramski, saying, "It's sweet. We don't have to do so much work. It's the girl's problem now." Students enjoyed the swapped style of this dance that will never go out of style.

The night was different as dancing was strictly watched over, yet couples still swayed to the music on that special night and enjoyed each other's company. As the song said, "Oh, what a night; hypnotizing, mesmerizing me. She was everything I dreamed she'd be. Sweet surrender, what a night!" - Angela Block

This IS YORK

United they scream and green they bleed. This year has been full of exciting spirited events, spirited students, the new and improved Homecoming dance, and the annual Pep Rally. York High School has always been known for its school spirit. This year's Dukes really lived up to that reputation and raised the expectations even higher for next year's group of seniors.

Duke Pride exists not only through talented players and their persevering spirits but also through the very hearts of those in the stands cheering for those players. Students of all grades, from the freshmen to the mighty seniors, have expressed their pride for this over seventy five year old school through homemade signs, body paint, and chants. Some students show their pride to support their beloved school, some to have a reason to dress however they feel they want to personally express themselves, and others simply do it to be recognized. York students have felt the way Shawn Goetz, junior, does when he states "I want to make the best experience in the place where I will be spending four years of my life."

Spirit and the way the school represent that is what helps the students separate themselves from other schools. As they look back upon York as a place where they felt at home, they will remember who they were, why they screamed and "this is York". – Jill Gentile

The Jivest of Grooves

George Gershwin, the famous American composer, once said, "Life is a lot like jazz. It's best when you improvise." York students in the music department supported this statement by providing the school and community with the beauty of jazz. Of the many music groups in the music department, Jazz Ensemble, Combo, Jazz Lab Band, and the vocal jazz group comprised the jazz performing ensembles. With improvisation and emotion as their inspirations, York's musicians spread the smooth yet tempestuous groove of jazz to the school and beyond.

In his last year at York, Mr. Curt Merrill, along with Mr. Michael Pavlik, taught the harmonious ways of jazz. Because both teachers still were on the gigging scene, they brought real world experience to their students. Mr. Merrill has been a part of this school since 1968, and this was his last year after both playing first trumpet as a student and coming back to teach and conduct Jazz Ensemble. "I think it is important to have in school because jazz is the only truly original American music," he said. "One of the great things about jazz, like all music, it gives students a great way to express themselves." Mr. Pavlik, the Director of Bands, played trumpet in the Elmhurst College Jazz Band, and he said part of his love of the distinct style of music stemmed from the fact that it is an "art form based on improvisation. That's primarily a right-brained activity, and we need to experience that hemisphere of the brain."

Four unique ensembles in the music program were mainly influenced by jazz. The vocal jazz group was a collection of the most talented singers at York, drawing the inspiration for their performances from the jazz world. Mr. Pavlik said, "The main goal of Jazz Lab Band is to provide an entry point for people with little to no jazz experience." Jazz Lab Band was a no-audition band that taught the art form to musicians hoping to experience it, yet the band sounded anything but amateur. Combo was a group that shared its music throughout the community through numerous gigs. Jazz Ensemble was a selective band, and Mr. Merrill said, "We try to perform the highest level literature possible." Often possessing Mr. Merrill's customary tuba and flute, rare for a big band, the Jazz Ensemble worked hard to perform stellar renditions of Ellington, Monk, Puente, and Basie. An alto saxophone player in Jazz Ensemble, Samuel Patti, senior, explained, "You can put so much more in jazz than you can in classical, such as improv, and you can make it more your own." - Mark Olalde

We Are YD...

The York Hockey Team was successful this year due to a great mix of upperclass talent and leadership combined with an influx of young skill that enabled them to have what many consider the most successful season in the history of York hockey. The boys also needed some extra confidence to help them win. This year fans stepped up to the challenge. York Hockey had fans like no other this year, they had spirit nights, such as pajama nights and York Pride night. The team showed their appreciation by handing out t-shirts to the first fans to arrive. As assistant coach Scott Sinde said " I would say our fans are a big help too. I think they got in the heads of the other teams players and it is like having extra players on the ice for York." The hockey team may be strong, dedicated and althetic, but the students screaming on the side of the ice defiantly added an extra edge to a great season for the boys.

Tearing UP THE ICE

What is a sport that involves ard work, determination, and killful skating on ice? This was ork Hockey 2009-2010.

The hockey team this year as the best hockey team York ed ever had. "This is definitely e most talented team that I have d the pleasure of coaching out of five years coaching," said head ach Mr. Greg Mrfocza about the 09-2010 team. "This year's team the most speed and depth the has seen in years," added assistant coach Mr. Scott Sinde. This year's hockey team sure was the team to be looking out for from the opponent's point of view. The York Varsity Hockey Team was phenomenal this year. "We are ranked seventh in state and first in our division so far this season," said Angelo DeSimone, junior, about his team. The team was very successful this year and was planning to make it to the state championship. Mr. Sinde stated, "Our number one goal is to make it to the state championship, and with our talent this year, it will be a goal worth working for."

One of the York Varsity Hockey Team's best attributes this season was its speed. "Speed is our best aspect this year. We are extremely fast, and it sets us apart from other teams," said Mr. Mrfocza. The speed and hard work of the Dukes really paid off against their rivals, Hinsdale Central, with a 4-3 victory.

The teammates worked really well with each other this year, and it showed when they played on the ice. "We have great chemistry as a team this year compared to previous years. It is better because we all grew together playing on the same teams," added DeSimone.

Hockey is unlike any sport because players have to be able to hold their own body weight on their skates and be able to skate on ice at a high speed. It sounds impossible, but the York Hockey team can do that without a sweat. - Melissa Brunke

A Smashing Success

"My favorite part of coaching is seeing the athletes succeed," said Ms. Nicole Young about her talented team. The success came from practicing six days a week and playing several games throughout the week. Not only did they play one match a day in practice, but there were also three games each match.

The season had many highlights for the team. Ellen Stein and Michelle Duprey, graduates, were captains and led the team to these highlights. Stein said, "My favorite part of the season is Senior Night because you can see the team spirit from everyone, and the JV team makes it really nice for the seniors." This enjoyable night was a great way to cap off a fulfilling season for the girls. This gratification was a direct result of the support from the coaches and other teammates.

"The coaches help us get better by pushing us to do more and not settle. There's always another level for us," said Stein. The coaches were really supportive of the team and helped the players in every way. "They coach us in between games, push us during practices, and give us hard workouts to help us get better," said Olivia Schneider, senior.

The teammates were all supportive of each other as well, and their support allowed the team to succeed. "When I had a loss, my teammates encouraged me and gave me ways to improve," said Schneider. They reminded each other that the loss was only one match and much could be learned from it. This mindset allowed the girls to fight through their setbacks and reach victory as a team, so their fourteenth place finish in State due to six State qualifiers came as no surprise. - Fallon McDowell

A New Attitude

With a new head coach came rejuvenated hopes. The York Baseball program went into the season with a new energy, and that energy was translated into renewed success on the field. This energy also created an optimism that raised the program's expectations for the year. "We want to win twenty games, win the league, and make an impact at State," said Coach John Walters.

The most notable change in this year's team was the passion with which the team played each game. This, according to Captain Andrew Johnson, graduate, was brought about by Coach Walters. Johnson said, "Coach Walters has brought a new enthusiasm to the team and the game. He keeps us moving at all times during practice and enjoys the game as much as the players." This passion played a large part in the team's improvement this year.

Also a major factor in the team's success was the camaraderie the team displayed throughout the season. Johnson said, "After playing the summer season together, I can see our team has become much closer together. Everyone picks each other up, and there is never any guilt being tossed around." This bond meant each team member would try his hardest, not only for himself, but also for the team and every member of it.

When the team's passion and camaraderie were combined, it resulted in a successful season. The Dukes finished the season with a record of 18-14, highlighted by a second place finish in the West Suburban Silver and an impressive team batting average of .309. With this new attitude and a group of talented returning players, next season should continue the trend of improvement that this year's team started. "The junior class has a good group of bats that should give our lineup some power. For the first time since I've been at York, we're probably the favorite to win the conference," said Stephen Adkins, senior. - Mark Nosek

Knowing the Basics

Gymnastics is a sport that requires much skill, dedication, and endurance. When the Dukes go to a meet, the team can participate in any six events. These events include floor, vault, pommel horse, rings, high bar, and parallel bars. Even though each event has its positives and negatives, they are all very unique in many different ways.

To perform on the vault, the gymnasts run down a runway, which is usually carpeted or padded. After reaching the springboard, the gymnasts jump off the springboard and onto the vault. Once in the air, the gymnast proceeds to twist or turn before landing on the mat on the other side of the vault.

The pommel horse is one of the most difficult events in the gymnastics meet. This is not due to the strength but the skill required. The average pommel horse exercise involves single or double leg work. After the routine is complete, the gymnast dismounts onto a mat at one end of the horse.

Ring routines involve a massive amount of arm strength. Rings consist of two rings approximately fifty centimeters apart that hang from a support above. The movements are mainly held positions unless the gymnast swings into another hold. The most famous hold is called the Iron Cross, which is a hold performed when the gymnast extends both arms straight out from both sides of the body, parallel to the floor and holds the position. After the routine is completed there is an aerial dismount to the mats below them.

The parallel bars consist of two wooden parallel bars elevated above the ground at equal distance. The routines involved in this event are normally focused on swinging skills and hand holds. Another event involving the bar is the high bar. The high bar is an elevated bar above the ground on which gymnasts perform different large swings. Also, a main difference of the high bar compared to the parallel bar is the different grips. The grips and swings are the main concept of each of these events.

The Ultimate Test of Strength and Skill

The Dukes step into the gymnastics balcony, and as the light reflects off the equipment, the Dukes warm up to compete for the gold. During the 2008 season, the Dukes were proud to take home the state title. After this, there were no further questions regarding the talent of the Boys' Gymnastics Team. Timothy Drahokoupil, senior, stated that winning State "hasn't been done in twenty-five years. It's definitely our greatest accomplishment." Still going strong from the 2008 season, the boys pushed forward to continue to impress the crowds with their strength and dedication to this sport. The boys worked every day after school to train in each specific event and to strengthen each person's muscle endurance. The Boys' Gymnastics Team worked their bodies until they ached every day during the season. There were many obstacles through which these boys had to push, but through it all they had a fantastic seasons.

One of the biggest struggles of this past season was the absence of long-time coach Mr. Richard Larsen who led the team to the state championship. He was an outstanding coach that pushed each boy to their limits to have them pursue excellence throughout each event. Even though the boys helped Coach Larson leave with a bang, he was still missed. "Because Coach Larsen was no longer coaching, it was weird not being with the same coach and adjusting to new coaching methods," said Alexander Messina, graduate. With these struggles, the gymnastics team was still able to adjust as they continued to strengthen their talents with the new coaches. - Brittany Biggs

Crushing the Field

Lacrosse was quickly becoming one of the most popular sports in the country when the York Boys' Lacrosse Team was formed. In the York community, this new team fueled the growing popularity locally. In only two years of existence, York's lacrosse team already developed a popular showing in the school.

Part of what made this sport so enticing was its fast-paced, exciting nature. "I enjoy the competitiveness of the game," said John Grubbs, senior. The sport consists of a small rubber ball and a long handled racquet. At one end of the lacrosse racquet there is netting used to catch and cradle the ball in play. The racquet is also used to carry and pass the ball across the field in order to shoot into the goals at either end to gain points for the team.

The game involves much physical contact as well as the mental and speed aspects. Students enjoyed going up against teams and clubs of other high schools, as they hoped that someday their club would become a full-fledged sport at York.

Sports are supported and run through the high school, yet clubs must be started by students. When lacrosse was first starting, a lot of students jumped to the great opportunity to either learn a new sport or extend the talent and skill they already possessed. As the eager students piled in to participate in the sport, they also had to be aware that the lacrosse club had to follow the regulations of IHSA sports, such as the code of conduct. "We act responsibly and as a team, just as any sport would do," said Grubbs.

Paving the Way

With every rigorous sport comes discipline and vitality. The members of the Girls' Lacrosse Team were well aware of this fact as they gave their all to the team. Even though the club was brand new this year, the girls proved their abilities with a record of nine and one with many hours spent at practice. "This season was a huge success. It exceeded expectations," said Mr. Ryan Walz, the head coach.

Even though Girls' Lacrosse was a club, it included all the responsibilities and guidelines that came with any sport classified as an official team. All thirty-six girls were expected to be on time to practice every day and to give one hundred percent at each one. Each practice was a half hour to two hours long and included many drills for both conditioning and knowledge of the sport. Bella Reinhofer, sophomore, said, "We have to run a lot because in lacrosse you're constantly moving." In addition, the girls were required to practice five or six days per week which gave them the drive and ability necessary to succeed.

Those rigorous hours paid off as the club included two teams, each of which accumulated its own list of achievements. In only the first year of the program, the two teams beat some of the best clubs in the area. "We had one loss at the A level and went 9-1, and the B level was 3-2," said Coach Walz. While the season proved to be a huge success, the girls still knew that much of their success came from hard work based upon the bond they shared as teammates. Kelly Nitkitas, sophomore, recalled, "Eve... one was really close, and we kn... what we were going to do on t... field."

Coaching Staff: Head Coach Mr. Ryan Walz

A few years ago, the Boys' Lacrosse Team was started, but last year counselor Mr. Ryan Walz decided it was time for the girls to show what they have and come out for the brand new Girls' Lacrosse Team. "There is a huge demand for lacrosse. Next year there may be as many as 175 students in lacrosse here at York," said Coach Walz. This sport came a long way from its preparatory school roots. "Our girls' team was excellent last year. We lost one game at the freshman A level. We beat powerhouse teams like OPRF and Hinsdale Central," said Coach Walz who was expecting "big numbers again this year." Coach Walz also said that this coming season, there would be a Frosh/Soph level and the next year, a Varsity level. "I expect the teams to be very good. Most of our girls come in with no experience, and they quickly learn how to play," said a hopeful Coach Walz. With a bigger team this year and returning key players, there was a bright year ahead for the Girls' Lacrosse Team.

Pushing the limits

"Scoring the game winning goal is the greatest feeling in the world," said Kellie Osgood, senior. Many would agree that winning is the best part of the game. However, in order to win, a lot of practice and hard work goes into the game. "Soccer is different from other sports because you are constantly on the move. It is a very unpredictable sport. You have to be aggressive no matter what size you are," commented Samantha Graziano, senior.

Conditioning is a huge part of soccer. One has to be in shape to run down the field and steal the ball from the opposing team. Although the conditioning was not very fun, it paid off in the end. "The game of soccer requires a lot of running. It's intense and nonstop," says Ashley Bowman, senior. Every day, the girls would run suicides, a sprint from one end of the field to a checkpoint and back, gradually getting farther away, for half an hour or more at the beginning of practice. The girls really pushed themselves because they had to be prepared to work for their eighty minute games. "Practices are hard, long, tiring, and challenging but you learn every practice, and you prepare for the next game," commented Katherine Gratzianna, senior.

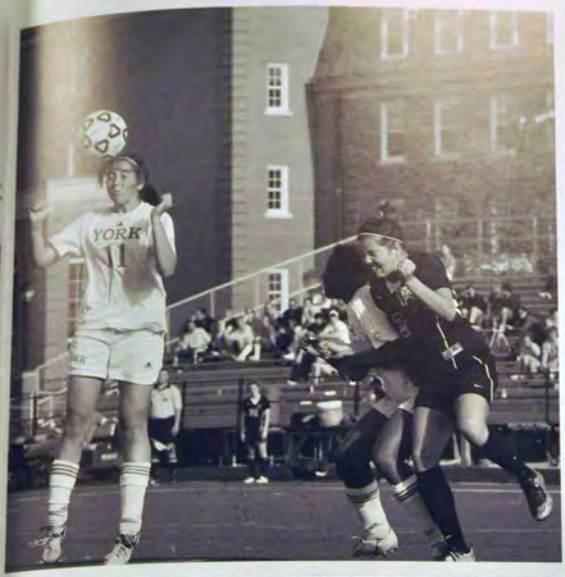

The girls ended their season 11-5-3, and won the playoffs 3-1. At Conference, the girls went 3-3 and received fourth place. One of the team's favorite quotes, by Babe Ruth, was, "The way a team plays as a whole determines its success. You may have the greatest bunch of individual stars together, but the 'team' won't be worth a dime." - Lauren Zomparelli

A League of Their Own

Lisa Fernandez, an Olympic pitcher for Team USA softball, once said, "I make my weaknesses my strengths and my strengths stronger." This declaration was a testament to the dedication the Girls' Softball Team had for its season. The players stepped up to the plate each day at practice and strived to improve their game. Practice consisted of running and stretching for warm-ups, throwing, and agility drills to improve their speed on the base paths. The girls spent the majority of outside practices perfecting defensive plays for different situations, such as runners on first and third and bunt coverage. Inside practices focused on offensive skills. Batting cages were set up to practice live hitting while tees surrounded the outside of the cages to teach muscle memory and proper form. The girls, knowing that when game time came around they would be ready to take the competition head on, took full advantage of their resources.

Each softball position requires specific talents. Pitchers learned strategy, how to approach batters depending on their number in the batting line up, and whether or not they were slappers. Catchers became the quarterbacks of the team. As the eyes and ears of the entire field, it was their job to oversee communication among players as well as keep up morale. Infielders worked on quickening their reflexes because they were such a short distance from the batter's point of contact. Outfielders played a role as well and needed strong arms to throw the ball back to the infield. There were many roles on the team, and everyone worked together to be successful. "No one person can carry a team," said Charlene Osinanski, senior. "You need people to hit, run, pitch, and field. Everyone has to do their part."

The season was not without challenges. When a hitting slump came over the team, these girls refused to back down; they trained harder. Lucy Poro, graduate, said, "We took extra batting practices and put in a lot of work on our offense. Even at the optional practices, the girls worked hard to perfect their swing." The girls persisted and eventually came out of their slump. Although they fell short in the playoffs, they set a high standard for next year's team. Gina Knutson, graduate, said, "In order for a softball team to be successful, there must be teamwork, communication, and love for the game." Through the girls' hard work and dedication, their season was truly one of which to be proud. - Shannon Kwit

The Mental EDGE

In a sport that is individual most of the time in competition, mental toughness is necessary to stay focused and motivated. Mr. Tres Heimann saw the importance of the mental aspect of the sport, and began challenging his athletes mentally in addition to their physical workouts. He had his team read The Mental Edge by Kenneth Baum to improve the athletes' approach to the game. The book gives an in depth analysis of different ways in which to mentally approach sports to maximize performance. Different people on the team would be assigned different chapters of the book to read and summarize. They then would report back to the team and teach their team members the ideas they had picked up through the book.

Coach Heimann pushed mental toughness throughout the entire year through literature, extra practices, and an overall new approach to the game. "Tennis has to do a lot with sports psychology because with singles it's only you on the court and you have to help yourself and can't get negative," said Coach Heimann. The team then took his message to heart and went into every match with a mental advantage over the opponent.

The Winning APPROACH

A year after the head coach retired and another senior class graduated, questions loomed large as the near future of the team was in question. Those questions surrounding the team were barely perceptible before a former York tennis star led the charge to quash any doubts. Even with a passionate coach, the team would need motivation if it was to compete in its conference which contained three top ten teams in the state. Together, the team and coach set out to revamp a decent program and transform it into a stellar one.

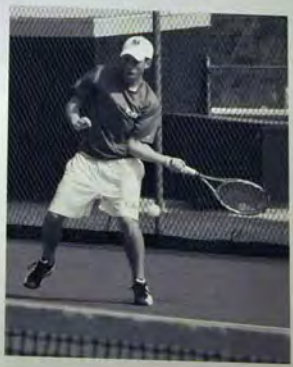

Mr. Tres Heimann, a two year assistant to the former tennis coach Mr. Bill Sir, took over as the new head coach and immediately began pumping new life into his team. He quickly surrounded himself with the leadership he would need to run an efficient team by appointing Christopher Vargo and Keith Holmer, graduates, and Mark Nosek, senior, as the new captains. Then, he began instituting morning practices two days a week to supplement the normal five practices each week. Nosek said of the new practices, "Coach Heimann has instilled dedication and a disciplined work ethic, both of which have positively affected our game on and off the court." The team members brought a new approach to the game with a reinvigorated practice regime and experienced leadership, but they made sure to keep the traditions of the team alive. "We are trying to start [new] traditions and carry on Coach Sir's," said Coach Heimann.

Perhaps one of the most dramatic changes Coach Heimann brought with him was an emphasis on the mental aspect of the game. He required all his players to read The Mental Edge by Kenneth Baum and report to the team on what they learned from it as a way to improve their mental approach to the game.

With all the tools necessary for success, the team began its mission to prove itself as one that could compete. In a grueling conference and sectional that contained Hinsdale Central, the State champion, the boys still qualified their entire Sectionals team by sending Nosek and Vargo to State in singles and teams of Nathan Ahlgrim and Christopher Delgado, seniors, and Lawrence Scinto, graduate, and Jackson Parr, senior, in doubles. With the team's statement made, Parr said, "Year after year we are a consistent team, but with a new coach, we are looking toward a bright future." - Mark Olalde

Overcoming HURDLES

The Boys' Track Team settled for nothing less than dominance. Every year, the team qualified for State, attended the meet, and displayed an excellent performance. All of the athletes and coaches worked extremely hard throughout the entire season with the State meet in mind.

This year, the team took an outstanding first place at State. This achievement was possible because of the excellent coaching staff. As Jimmy Sullivan, graduate, said, "The coaching for York Track is second to none. Across the different events, we have one of the best coaching staffs in the country." Head coach Mr. Stan Reddel was named the AA Boys' Track Coach of the Year. Besides the team's exceptional coaching staff and rewarding season, the team also shaped leaders, maintained focus on its goals, and created everlasting bonds.

There was no doubt that the seniors led the team. The seniors were expected to show composure and confidence and carry on the York tradition. The motivation that the seniors gave helped the team to stay focused and be able to maintain the reputation the Boys' Track Team created in previous years. The goal-oriented atmosphere created within track helped its athletes to carry over an outstanding work ethic and apply it to different areas of their life.

The teammates continued to motivate each other and push through the demand of track throughout the entire season. "My athletes are very goal-oriented and have a great work ethic. Because they work so hard, they tend to be a very close team," explained Mr. Reddel.

The team finished out the season with a strong performance as they took the State title. The Boys' Track Team was a great example of a team that worked together and won together. They proved that they could make the York track legacy of success last forever. - Cara Koscher

State:
A WINNING TEAM

Last year the Boys' Track Team had eleven members go down State at Eastern Illinois University in Charleston, Illinois. The team included Jack Driggs, junior, Andrew Smith, Matthew Schacht, seniors, Patrick Morgan, David Way, Khara Williams, John Fox, Terrance Williams, James Sullivan, Steven Sulkin, and Jordan Herbert, graduates. David Baker, senior, was the team's manager. The boys took first place as a team with an individual first for Sulkin in the 3200 meter race.

With Mr. Stan Reddel being named the class AA Track Coach of the Year, the team knew from the start that it was in for a winning season. The teammates' hard work and perseverance was shown since day one as they upheld the traditions that came along with being a member of the Boys' Track Team. After a close second the year before, the team's drive to win the State title this year was out of this world.

The York Boys' Track Team had accomplished a lot over the years. This included not only winning lots of State titles and individual trophies, but it also included forming lasting relationships that molded these young boys into men with lasting morals and values.

Over Leaps & Bounds

The monotony of riding the bus to and from school. Walking to the same block to the same spot of sidewalk, waiting for the same late bus and the same driver. Once on the bus, it's the same people, and it's always the same scenery. The cold snow in the winter-the rain in the spring getting your shoes, socks, and feet all wet. It just is not pleasant at all. Yet, the Girls' Track team had no complaints when riding the bus for 3 and a half hours. Why? It was on a journey to the Illinois State Finals in Charleston. It was a full bus because it had the biggest state team with a lot of depth in a few seasons.

In order to get to State, they had to fight their way through Sectionals at Leyden. The 4x800 relay team won their race, beating Downers Grove South. The 4x100 and 4x400 teams also qualified. Meghan Frigo, senior, pulled out all the stops and got a second place finish in the 2-mile run to qualify for State as well. At Conference, the 4x800 team set a new conference meet record by defeating Hinsdale Central, who had dominated that event the last few seasons.

With such a large team, there were some struggles. However, the benefits definitely outweighed the struggles. Ms. Annette Schulte, the head coach, said, "The team is really diverse. We probably have one of the widest spreads of talent because there are so many different events for different girls to participate in." There may be a lot of girls, but the word "team" is strong among them. "Track is a great experience because I know how to set and achieve goals and have developed friendships that will last for life." – Micaella Cosentino

Nothing Comes Easily

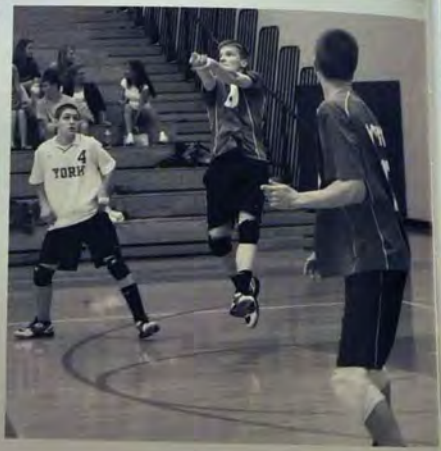

"Our biggest challenge was the great turnover that we had from the previous year. Only Steve Ogdon and Marty Weith had been on Varsity before," said Ms. Patti Iverson. Not only were there just two returning members, but also nine other members of the team were juniors. Going into the regional tournament, the Dukes faced off against one of their rivals, Benet Academy. York was viewed as the underdog in the match; however, this was not going to prevent them from getting to the next round. "We played really well as a team, and we showed everyone what we were really capable of," said senior Taylor Stipe. York went on to win the final game 25 to 21 to advance to the next round.

Looking Forward

The gym goes silent. The opposing team serves the ball. The Dukes, receiving the serve, scramble to get the ball up. Bodies dive to the ground. The crowd cheers on the player for making the perfect pass. Then, the setter sets the ball in a perfect arch to the awaiting hitter. The hitter slams the ball down to end the rally. Exhausted, the team cheers and pulls it together. That's only the first point.

After finishing last season with a record of nineteen wins and seventeen losses and ending up 3-3 in Conference, the Dukes started out this season with a goal to win the conference and do well in the playoffs. Although the Dukes fell short of their goal, they were not disappointed in the way their season went. The team took fourth at the Conant Tournament and also won two close matches against Downers Grove North and Addison Trail. The Dukes then went on to beat Benet Academy in the first round of Regionals.

The team consisted of nine juniors and five seniors. Of the five seniors, only Steven Ogdon and Martin Weith were returning players. Although the majority of the team was new to Varsity, the Dukes were hardly lacking in any way. A junior that season, senior Jonathon Ruprecht was the team's leading middle attacker with 171 kills and 109 blocks. Fellow classmate William Thompson added 112 kills and 76 blocks from the opposite position. "Alex Tess did much of the setting and Taylor Stipe added some excellent performances as well," stated coach Ms. Patti Iverson. For individual honors, Ogdon and Ruprecht made All-Conference and Ogdon, Ruprecht, Thompson, and Weith made All-Area.

The biggest challenge the Dukes faced was going back into the season with only two returning seniors. "It was a big adjustment to get used to each other, determine the best offense and defense for the team, and finally find the chemistry that would make us successful," said Coach Iverson. - Michael Stotzer

A year removed from an exceptional season that saw the school's second State appearance, goals were set high for a determined team that contained almost all the members of the swim team. With speed and ambition, the team set out to make a splash in the exceptional field of Illinois water polo.

However, before the season even began, doubts abounded about the strength of a team that lost many key players and leaders. Captain Colin Albue, graduate, said, "Since we lost four fundamental starters after last season, the team has had to reform." Even with four key players gone, the team still had several great players upon which to rebuild. Albue said, "Marc Krolikiewicz is a fantastic hole-set, one of the best in state, and John Onstwedder is one of the best goalies in the state and is returning All-State." Based around the captains, Albue, Onstwedder, graduate, and Krolikiewicz, senior, the team prepared for a tough season.

The year contained close games across the board with heavily contested games being fought tooth and nail. Some of the team's best wins came at tournaments at Schaumburg and Lyons Township in which the boys came in as underdogs and left victorious.

Although the team lost to Oak Park River Forest at Sectionals to end the season, the boys were optimistic. "Whether we rock out to techno, load up at Cici's, or duke it out in Mario Kart, we are the closest-knit team you can find anywhere. We only win because we do it together," said Mark Olalde, senior. The team put in as much time and effort as anyone around York, so the pool balcony should be much more packed at the next game. Whether they play a well known sport or not, the members of the York Men's Water Polo Team put on a spectacle worth seeing.

Waves OF HEART

Lining up on the side of the pool, she can feel her heart begin to race as she stares down the competition at the other end. Suddenly, the whistle blows and the pool becomes chaotic. Eleven other girls are swimming around her with their minds on one thing and one thing only: get the ball. She reaches the ball first. The shot clock clicks on, thirty-five seconds to score. With the defense charging at her through the water and the clock ticking away precious seconds, she has to quickly make her move. Can she handle the pressure?

Water polo is not for the faint of heart. One of the most challenging aspects of the sport is that the girls are not allowed to touch the bottom of the pool while defending their goal as well as trying to score. Jaime Redmond, junior, said, "You're always treading, driving, shooting, and defending. The constant movement gets extremely tiring." The competition was challenging, but training was rigorous as well. Workouts were intense. The coaches were committed to driving these girls to excellence, and the team took on the challenge. Jacquelyn Kurdas, senior, said, "We are really stepping it up. The girls are getting really good and returning players are even better."

With the return of so many Varsity players, the intensity of both competition and practice was raised as well. Time normally spent on drills would instead be used to perfect offensive plays and defensive strategies. Janet Skukas, graduate, said, "It definitely shows in our record as well as our playing technique." The Varsity finished its season strong with a record of twenty wins and nine losses and took third in the West Suburban Conference. It takes more than talented players to be successful, however. Team chemistry was a key component as well. Redmond said, "I think that we all play very well together whether it's a senior and a sophomore or a junior and a senior." Many members on the team also felt a strong sense of leadership. Jessica Cleveland, senior, said, "Anyone [on the team] can be a leader. It's in your actions in and out of the water. I think we all have exhibited leadership qualities." This leadership was just one of the many things that the Dukes looked forward to in seasons to come as the Girls' Water Polo Team once again strives to go above and beyond. – Shannon Kwit

Building the traditions

Every year, the York Cross Country Team made its way to the State meet. With twenty-six State Championship titles, the team developed a tradition of riling up the top seven runners through the practice of "TP-ing." Gathering on the Thursday before the State meet, roughly 220 kids went to each house and "TP-ed" the house of each runner who would be running in the State meet. "No other team at York competes at State every year, but York's Cross Country does. This tradition is developed through the runners themselves because of the excitement that State brings each year," said Michael Stotzer, senior. Due to the team's phenomenal success, the tradition was one of many ways to express the team's pride in York's cross country team. In addition to the annual attendance at the State meet, York was always represented in the National meet, too. Overall, not only did the runners of York earn the cross country team a reputation of great running, but they also earned the reputation of classic spirit. Although there were many factors that contributed to the image of the team, its spirit and traditions were imperative in its great reputation.

"Can I trust you? Are you committed to excellence? Do you care about me?" Coach Joe Newton asked the runners of York Cross Country these questions at the beginning of every year, and these questions were the main focus that defined York's unbelievable history. Having won twenty-six State Championships and twenty National Championships, it was not difficult to understand why everyone throughout the state knew of York Cross Country. Keeping up the tradition, York's 2009 team showed extreme success. On September 17, 2009 in the team's first meet, York took first place at Downers Grove North. "We've won all our meets with the exception of the invite at Palatine, where we got second," described Andrew Smith, senior. In addition, the meet on October first brought similar results with York taking first place again. Not only did the upperclassmen run well, but the freshmen of 2009-2010 proved to have the ability to potentially bring yet another State title in the future.

Always aiming for excellence to the best of their abilities, the runners set the standard goal of winning Conference and then State. Despite the fact that running for York involved extreme determination and rigorous hours of devotion, the team members were very close and had a fantastic time representing York Cross Country. "The friendships I've made and the experiences I've had have really made my involvement with the Cross Country Team an absolutely fantastic experience," said Jack Driggs, junior. Clearly, the team did not only grow together when running, but they also developed close friendships over their time running for York. In addition to the great fun involved with York Cross Country, the life lessons each runner took out of the experience was extraordinary.

Dukes Attack in a pack

"Everyone, no matter what level, fully supports each other," stated Emily Hogan, senior, about the structure of the team last season. Ms. Annette Schulte, the head coach, was very proud of her team because the runners gained a lot of confidence and matured from the year before. "Our team is one hundred percent focused on one goal. We have no doubts we will go very far," said Anna Ratliff, senior, about the girls' commitment to the team this year.

The girls worked hard every day of the season and worked on improving their times for each race. The athletes were so dedicated to their sport that they went before and after school to work out and learn how to protect themselves from any injuries. During the season, the girls woke up bright and early to run about three miles, do abdominal workouts, and lift weights, all before they started their academic school day. At the beginning of each day, the girls had a quick group meeting to discuss the plans for the day and hype each other up. During this meeting, the athletes continuously stretched to warm their muscles. When the meeting was over, the top runners hit the prairie path for a seven to eight mile run and the other groups ran about two to three miles and built up by a mile every week to improve their skill. After this, all the girls took part in a cool down and then proceeded to go to a thirty minute injury prevention meeting. "The girls run about a half a marathon each week," Coach Schulte said about the team's practices during the school week.

The Girls' Cross Country Team focused a lot on pack running. In pack running, girls were grouped by running ability. In each group, the girls made sure that there was a leader of each pack and always had at least one girl who was going to have a hard time keeping up with the rest of the pack. This exercise allowed the team to get comfortable running and adjusting their speed to the other girls so the pack stayed together. The girls depended on each other for support throughout all the nerve-racking meets and hard practices, but all the captains agreed on this one statement: "What you put in is what you get out [of cross country]." - Brittany Biggs

Working all the time

Friday night lights were on, the crowd was packed, and the band had already played. It was game time for the York Dukes football team. This year's team was ready to hit the ground running as soon as its season started, partly because the season never ended. As Jeremy Dvorak, senior said, "We worked really hard in the off season starting with Power Club in the spring, then conditioning during summer, and then doubles in August, and now we're hitting the season full steam." The athletes were always working hard for their personal goals as well as for the team's goal of performing to its highest level. What made York's football program different from other programs was that there was a strong tradition of success.

There was a level of excellence to uphold with the football team that was expected of everyone. "We expect the players to be at the practice daily and work hard," said Mr. Bill Lech, the head Varsity football coach. The team had to practice for its tough competition on this year's schedule which included many highly ranked schools in the state as well as get used to the sensation of the new Astroturf on the remodeled field. The Dukes rose to the challenge, though, as they worked hard in the face of adversity.

The athletes always tried their best because they realized that they represented this great school not only on the field but also off the field. "We know that the school looks up to us, and we have to do what we can to be role-models," said Captain Kevin Kahovec, senior. That sense of honor was a part of the York football program and the coaches were grateful for the athletes' actions in being symbols of York. As Coach Lech said, "We have great kids who work hard."

Fighting hunger

Northern Illinois Food Bank

The Northern Illinois Food Bank is a non-profit organization and member of Feeding America. They are located in Wheaton, Illinois and distributed 7,000 pounds of food in its first month after conception. The NIFB grew tremendously in the past twenty-six years, distributing more than 22,500,000 pounds of food in 2008 and serves over 524 food-assistance sites in thirteen northern Illinois counties. Last summer, the Dukes football team did its part in the fight against hunger by joining up with the NIFB to volunteer and help the organization out. Last summer, the football players came for a group session where, due to their incredible strength and commitment, they were able to pack over ten thousand pounds of food into trucks to be delivered to those in need. "It was an exhausting but rewarding experience for all of us," said Kevin Kahovec, senior. Thanks to these Dukes, hunderds of families were able to get a hearty meal. These Dukes knew that the battle on the field is important but so is the battle off the field: the battle for the needy. Great job Dukes!

Swinging TO SUCCESS

"It's all about your inner calm, your ability to forget everything and just golf," said Spencer Martens, senior, describing his game. This year's golf team was a small team with big ambitions. There were a total of seven seniors on the team, most whom had played for all four years. "There is a lot of senior leadership as well as new talent," said Joseph Hlavacek, sophomore. The boys ended their season with a 6-5 record and had four boys go to the sectional meet. The team took 5th in their conference, 2nd place at the regional meet and 6th place at the sectional meet. Jacob Wilms, senior advanced down to state.

With all the success, a lot of hard work and patience was there. The boys' coach Mr. Borel said, "The game teaches you life lessons; you can get a hole in one and feel on top of the world, then shoot a triple bogy on the next and feel awful. It really teaches you about your character." The boys certainly showed their character by winning the Geneva Invite and placing in the Redhawk and Addison Trail invites.

Being one of the smaller teams at York, the boys were close and came together to work on their game. Whether they were supporting each other in games or working in practices the boys pushed each other to excellence. Matt Boria, senior, recalled, "The best part about practices was having competi... with other guys on the team."

Boys vs. Girls

Every year, in the midst of their season, the Boys' and Girls' Golf teams come together to play the much anticipated annual Boys vs. Girls golf match. This year, the teams proved to be good competition for each other. The teams were split up into two boys and two girls in each group, and they played a nine-hole course.

Before the match the Girls Team came together to design homemade t-shirts just for the event. While this might be a fun time to relax, socialize, and have fun with the other team the competition was taken seriously. Each team played their hardest to win. Overall the boys took first this year, but the girls' team put up a fair fight. "We were tied going into the last hole," recalls Cara Kosher, senior. One pairing even played two playoff holes to break the tie, but overall the boys won.

Fairways and PUTTING GREENS

Look out for the York Girls' Golf team. They had a great season and they made it all the way to sectionals as a team. Most of the girls' goals were to improve in some way this season and they all did, whether their goal was hitting down the fairway, putting or getting out of sand traps. There were sixteen girls on the team, ranging from freshman to seniors.

This year the team placed second in Conference (Woodridge) and Regionals (West Chicago). The team made it to Sectionals (Lemont) and they placed fourth. The team did not go to State together, but Mary Kate Rohn, senior, went individually and placed in the top 50. When asked about the state meet Rohn said, "It was a really exciting experience and I was glad to represent York High School at the state meet." All of the players became friends during the season and all of the girls' loved playing golf and hanging out together. At the meets, the coaches, Ms. Tilden, and Ms. Babyar, went around the course to see how the girls were doing and Mrs. Babyar said, "Once when we were playing at an invitational all of the girls asked how their teammates were doing when we came to check on them." This just goes to show how much the girls cared about each other and how much they wanted their friends to succeed. The girls also made the team very original and Cara Koscher, senior, said "when in doubt bling it out." And that is just what the girls did. They all personalized their uniforms and made everything reflect who they truly were.

The team traveled to courses all over the Chicago-land area. Some of the courses they went to were very difficult. New courses always posed a challenge and they took it as another learning experience and as a chance to improve their skills.

York's usual course was Sugar Creek, but this year the team had their invitational at Medinah Country Club, which was a very challenging course, but the girls played very well; they took second overall in the invitational. The team also competed in the Plainfield Invite, where they took second, the Joliet Invite, where they took first, and they were the returning champions at the Carl Sandburg Invite. All of the these invites allowed the girls to challenge themselves and prove that they were truly excellent. -Lizzie Diamond

New Kid In Town

Mariano Grana

Who is Mariano Grana? He was a senior on the Varsity soccer team who transferred to York because his high school, Driscoll, closed its doors to all students. There were many changes that Grana had to get accustomed to because he was new to York.

Driscoll was a private high school in Addison and was much smaller than York. Along with dealing with a bigger school, the soccer team at York was "a lot more serious than Driscoll," said Grana. Since he got to play on York's Varsity team, it opened his eyes to how much time and effort goes into playing soccer. He explained that not only did York students care more about soccer, but they also "have a lot better skills." Grana was impressed how experienced the York players were compared to his last school.

It was sad leaving his old high school and friends, but many good things emerged since he left. Grana was excited to be part of York's Varsity team because he had more time to play with its longer season, the competition was greater, and more opportunities were available.

Goal, Goal, Goal!

"Step up!" yelled York's Varsity soccer goalie Carmine Sementa, junior. Those words of encouragement were for his fellow teammates during a home game at Bryan Middle School. This idea was reflected in their play as shown by their five wins at the Addison Trail Invite in the beginning of their season. The reason for their success was because of their experienced captains, Stefan Salzano and Eric Moreau, seniors. Mr. Markus Roy, coach, was pleased with them because "they have so much character, heart, and determination. They are great examples because they show the juniors that." Without its great captains, the team would not have done as well as it did this season.

One of the soccer team's most significant games was against Morton. Morton was the team to beat because "they are better than last year and will be a hard team to beat," said Salzano.

Games were when all the long hours and hard work came together. Players needed the endurance to play as long as Mr. Roy needed them to play. They also needed to be aware of what was going on during the games at all times and to know what to do during plays. Salzano explained, "Players have to refrain from talking back to refs and other players before and after the game." This was difficult, but it was necessary to maintain composure during games.

On an everyday basis, the team was expected to always give one hundred percent each time as the players stepped on the soccer field, about six days a week. Practices consisted of footwork, and small games. Captain of JV Will Ritter, senior, stated, "Attendance and being on time for practices is really important." A Varsity player explained just how seriously the players take their sport. "No matter what situation, whether it's family or a school problem, you have to just put everything aside and put soccer first," said Klaudio Kamberi, senior. - Amanda Rafter

TO THE FINISH

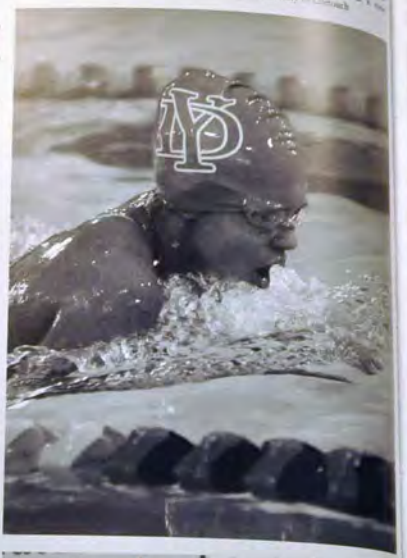

At 5:15 in the morning, teenagers everywhere were sleeping soundlessly in bed, and dreading the hour when they must arise. Meanwhile, the York Girls' swimming and diving team were walking down the hall towards the pool with smiles and looks of determination on their faces. They knew that the long hours of training they put in this season would pay off once the State meet rolled around. One of the team's major goals this year was to have several of their girls make it to State. Nonetheless, captain Melissa Landers, senior, said, "If we swim badly, we'll always have team spirit." With such a dedicated team, no one could disagree when Mr. Dave Davis, Head Coach, said, "[The girls] get along like one big, happy family." With several morning practices a week and after school practices almost every day, not to mention pasta parties and meets, it's no wonder these ladies formed such a strong bond.

No one would have guessed that these cheerful girls were some of the hardest working athletes in the school. Training, laughing, and working hard were just a few of the things the girl's swim team did together each and every day.

Despite the hard work, the girls had plenty of fun. Each year, they have a "candy dive," where the coaches throw Skittles into the water, and the swim team dives in and eats them. Between how the water is dyed from Skittles, and the good-natured spirits of everyone, this is a tradition everyone looks forward to each year. No matter what they were doing, the York Swimming and Diving girls could be seen , striving to achieve their goals and to have a good time.

Welcome to the Court

"We hope to cause as much damage as possible!" said Coach Tres Heimann when asked about the quality of the tennis team this year. The York Girls' Tennis team had a colossal reputation to live up to, and this year there was no slowing down. They kept the energy up and set high goals for themselves to win the conference meet and place top twenty in state, and the girls worked hard to achieve these goals.

The tennis team had a good combination of new players and returning players who all worked together in the goal of finishing 17th in state. The girls' practices were demanding as they perfected serving, volleying, and hitting every day after school at Berens Park. Annie Fazzio, sophomore, explained, "Tennis is a team environment where everyone practices to get better." The Girls' Tennis Team refused to settle for mediocrity and they played to win.

The meets were hot and long, but everyone rallied to support their teammates. Captain Kendra Mills, senior, recalled, "Tennis is an individual and team sport. Even though the matches are individual, your score counts for the whole team." Although the tennis team was very diligent and dedicated, it was not all work and no play. The Varsity team had some fun traditions, like themed Friday's where they would pick a fun theme and dress accordingly. The traditions helped them grow as a team and show their school spirit. The positive atmosphere that the team created made it easier for everyone to improve and develop their skills, and it paid off in the end. Serving THE HEAT

Walking past the gym, one can see a group of girls dancing and holding pinkies. This may be a strange sight until the observer finds out what the group is all about. This was the Girls' Volleyball Team, and it was getting ready for the next big victory. MacKenzie Pittman, senior, said, "We did team pump up dances called 'Little Sally Walker,' 'Jump on it,' and 'Do It.' They were really fun and got us pumped up before every game and tournament." With fun activities like this, it was no wonder the girls had such a successful season.

The Girls' Varsity Volleyball Team finished the playoffs with a record of twenty-eight wins and only nine losses. Not only did they win the majority of their games, but they also won several games that they were expected to lose. Lauren Zerante, senior, said, "One of my favorite moments was beating Geneva in the sectional semi-final. They were the number-one seed and were a great team. We upset them and came back from losing the first game to beat them in three." The girls made it really far into the playoffs, until unfortunately, they came across the same team that beat them last year, St. Charles East. Pittman said, "This was a tough match. We wanted it so badly and took them to three games after being pretty much shut down in the first game. But we just couldn't pull the third game out. They were a great team, though."

Defining SCHOOL SPIRIT

"The fans were crazy! They literally made it so much more fun to play. Playing in an exhilirating game itself was fun, and with the fans, it was ten times better. It gave us that little bit of confidence and energy that we needed. We couldn't have asked for a better fan section this year," said MacKenzie Pittman, senior.

This year at any given game, there was always a faithful group of fans who were ready to sing, yell, dance, and do whatever it took to pump up the team and to distract their opponents. The fan group contained many dedicated students, who at any moment could go from standing calmly, to pushing each other over, celebrating a great hit, or an rejoicing for an under-dog win.

No matter what the occasion was, win or lose, anyone within a ten mile radius could hear the Girls' Volleyball Team's fan section cheering on the team.

Only with THE BEST

One of the most memorable moments of the Dukes' basketball season was always the Jack Tosh Tournament that occurred during Thanksgiving weekend. The tournament was one of the most prestigious and oldest tournaments in the state; this year being its thirty-sixth year in existence. The tournament always contained some of the toughest teams in the state, which made every game one worth watching. York ended up beating South Elgin High School and Downers Grove South High School this year. They lost to Riverside Brookfield by two points in overtime, and Riverside Brookfield went on to come in second overall in the tournament. York finished in fifth out of sixteen by the end of the tournament. When asked about the tournament, Mr. Al Biancalana, York's head coach, said, "You're playing against some of the best teams in the state, and it helps you grow towards the second half of the season."

Shooting FOR SUCCESS

It is fourth quarter, the game is on the line, and it is do or die time; this is York basketball. The Boys' Basketball Team was one of the most demanding sports teams in the school. Practices were highly organized with an incredible level of intensity, while the main focus was always on the next game. Despite the demanding atmosphere, head coach Mr. Al Biancalana said, "The players do a wonderful job at practice." The team needed to practice very hard because its competition included many teams that did not give anything easily. The boys' competition included most of the top ranked teams in the state.

The rigorous schedule also had another side effect of bringing the team closer together. Kevin Kahovec, senior, said, "We all get along pretty well because of all the time we spend together." The boys worked hard throughout the season, and leaned on the seniors for leadership. Coach Biancalana described the seniors as being "responsible, quality leaders who have developed growth not only on the court but off as well." The teammates became a close knit group, striving to do their best at every opportunity. - Masood Haque

For three months every year, players on the Girls' Basketball Team worked their tails off. The Varsity team's season began with a great start, and it was winning games left and right. Captain Evan Semmelhack, senior, commented on the team's progress, "We started off the season very strong, and like every team we went through a little slump, but we got back on track and will be great competitors in the state tournament." The team improved greatly over the season and learned along the way.

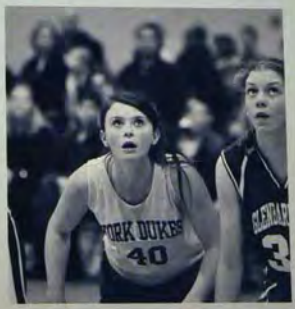

The players went over the opposing team's offense and defense before each game, so they would know what to expect. Many of the players would listen to their favorite music before starting games because it would pump them up and get them in the zone. Games were high energy because every girl would try her best to help the team succeed and win games. Mr. Jason Reinecke, Varsity coach, said that during games his goals were to "try to make the best decisions for the team and encourage the girls throughout games." The team, along with the coaches, worked together to learn from one another.

The coaches went all out and planned each practice beforehand, down to the minute. This way, the team would use its time on the court effectively. Every practice started out with stretching and then quickly changed gears to shooting drills. Each day there would be a different focus for the girls to work on. After the warm-ups were completed, scrimmages usually took place. At the end of every practice, each player had to shoot a certain number of free-throws before she was done for the day.

The biggest rival for the Varsity team was Hinsdale Central. Hinsdale Central was consistently good, but the Lady Dukes showed them who was boss. Towards the very beginning of the season, the Varsity team beat them by a total of eleven points. It was a huge win for York. York had not beaten Hinsdale Central since the year before.

Stop, Drop, and Bowl!

Bowling is a competition against oneself. There are few factors involved preventing bowlers from doing their best. There are no weather conditions, no defense, and no factors besides the bowler herself getting in the way of a top performance. The girls on the York Bowling Team did the best they could for themselves and their teammates every day.

A lot of hard work and dedication went along with being a part of the Girls' Bowling Team. The girls had difficult practices every day at Stardust in Addison. They started out with warm-up games while working on specific techniques, and then they began scoring and working on their overall game. They practiced bowling strikes and spares with the help of their teammates and their coach, Mr. David Williams. Morgan Pruitt, sophomore, said, "We all have different styles, but we always try to push and improve each other."

All their hard work at meets and practices paid off this year, and the girls did really well. One of the JV members had a perfect season, and Christy Chiappetta, senior, qualified as an individual to compete at the state meet in Rockford, Illinois at the Varsity level. This was Coach Williams's third girl in his six years of coaching to go to the state meet. "The season starts November first, and by January first the improvement starts to show. It's really exciting to see that change," said Mr. Williams.

Although the team members worked hard, they had a lot of fun while learning to play a great game. They had a lot of fun traditions. For example, the captains made up cheers to help energize and excite their teammates during meets and practices. The team was made up of a big mixture of different girls from every grade. Micaella Cosentino, senior, said, "I like that bowling is one big team and I get to make friends with all different girls from all different grades." Perfect 10

The Girls' Gymnastics Team set many goals for this season, and the team accomplished their biggest goal yet: getting 130 points at a meet at Downers Grove North. They really showed that with hard work, practice does make perfect. "The team this year really worked well with one another, and it was alot better than last year," said Captain Allison Fazzio, senior, about the team. With a new coach this year, the team did not know how this season was going to work out. The new coach actually helped the team accomplish its goals and become what it was at the end of the season. "I love our new gymnastics coach!" said Fazzio. She added, "She does a great job pushing us to be the best gymnasts we can be and has allowed us to grow so much as induviduals but also grow as a team." Colleen Burke, senior, also added, "She isn't trying to be our best friend. She doesn't give us sugar coated criticisms. She gives it to us like white on rice which helps us improve, and boy, have we improved!" With that said, this season for the Girls' Gymnastics Team was one of the best yet with many more successful seasons ahead. - Melissa Brunke

Just Keep SWIMMING

Passion, dedication, hard work, and the ability to overcome adversity are only a few of the characteristics that the members of the Boys' Swimming and Diving Team embody. Determined to succeed, they went through long, grueling practices and even tougher meets. "It's really hard work, and it takes a lot for everybody to get through the practices, but in the end we know our hard work will pay off," explained Captain Sebastian Pernal, senior.

Each of their practices was a test of mental and physical endurance. "Practices are usually physically exhausting and mentally draining. You really have to push yourself to keep going," said Captain John Groch, senior. On a normal day of practice, the team practiced for an hour before school, and then it resumed practice every day after school for two hours. "We typically swim anywhere from five thousand to six thousand yards, about four miles, every day. In the morning, we do mainly dry land activities, and after school is when we swim," explained Martin Kaleta, senior. The coaches, Mr. Dave Davis, Mr. Mark Laurich, and Mr. Larry Barcheski, implemented a variety of different drills in order to help each swimmer and diver get closer to his goal times or scores. "The coaches are really helpful. They push us to our limits and motivate us to give our all each and every day," said Adrian Guzman, junior.

Another source for motivation for the boys was from their teammates themselves. "Swimming with the guys is great because whenever you're down, they pick you up and make sure you don't quit," said Groch. The team also knows how to balance work and play during practices. "The team is a random but great group of guys that love to swim and dive. After a while, we become a family," explained Captain Mark Olalde, senior. Their perseverance, along with their hard work, was one of the main reasons why the members of the Boys' Swimming and Diving Team had a successful season. - Mansi Parikh

Food for THOUGHT

The Boys' Swim and Dive Team knew how to make sure that swimming was not all work and no play. The swimmers and divers maintained various traditions in order to make room for some team bonding and fun.

One of the most well-known traditions of the team was breakfast at senior Andrew Sullivan's house. Every Friday for the last several years, all of the Varsity swimmers or the athletes that went to all of the morning practices that week would run over to Sullivan's house and enjoy breakfast and quality time with their fellow teammates. "It's awesome because there's always tons of food there, and it gives us a lot to look forward to at the end of the week," explained Martin Kaleta, senior.

Another tradition was going to Old Country Buffet after Saturday morning practices. "It gives us another opportunity to bond with the guys we spend so much time with every day," explained Jorge Solis, senior.

These traditions helped bond the Boys' Swim and Dive Team together and give the swimmers and divers many things to look forward to throughout their season, while also leaving them with nothing but fond memories of their time on the team.

Bring on the Mohawks

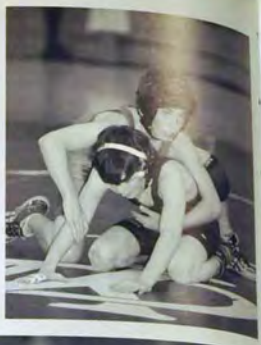

In the third quarter of the school year, students might have noticed a surprising increase in the number of mohawks around the school. This was no social epidemic but rather a wrestling tradition. When asked about the team's mohawks, Mr. Terry Clarke replied, "I hate them!" Four years ago, the day of the last regular season meet, a few guys got together and gave each other mohawks for Regionals. Since then, each new team has added a few more to the group of people with mohawks. This year, virtually the entire Varsity team had them. "I see it as a symbol of unity for the team," said Captain Ryan Daly, senior. The wrestlers wore their mohawks around school for the week up to Regionals before shaving them off the day before the Regional meet. Although Coach Clarke did not agree with the look of the mohawks, he did admit "it contributes to the team unity."

Keeping a Tradition

Wrestling falls into a category with only a handful of other sports at York that consist of an individual aspect as well as a team aspect. During a dual meet, all fourteen wrestlers representing fourteen different weight classes needed to contribute positively for the team in order to come out with a win. At the same time, during tournaments and later in the year during the state tournament series, it was very much an individual sport where it was only the single wrestler that had control over the outcome of the rest of his season.

The Dukes set out this season with a goal to win the Conference meet as well as the regional meet. That would not be easy because the West Suburban Silver conference could be considered the toughest conference in the state of Illinois. At the end of the season, the conference had five teams ranked in the top twenty-five in the state. Although the Dukes fell short of their goals, "we did the best we could and came close in both challenges," stated Captain Erik Westerberg, senior. York succeeded in qualifying Troy Valdez, sophomore, their 119 pounder and Jim Nudera, junior, their 189 pounder for the state meet. The Dukes also placed second at the Mahomet Seymour invitational. Westerberg led the victory by finishing first in the invitational. Westerberg was also a regional champion, a sectional qualifier, and All-Conference at 215 pounds. Ryan Daly, senior and Westerberg lead the team as captains through the year "and provided outstanding leadership and standards for the rest of the team" said Mr. Terry Clarke.

Towards the beginning of the year, Mr. Clarke was inducted into the Illinois Wrestling Hall of Fame with over three hundred wins and twenty-five years coaching. "I've learned a lot from other coaches through the years. I used to share an office with Mr. Newton, I coached with Mr. Grider for a number of years, and I also worked with Dick Cambell," said Mr. Clarke.

Loud and Proud

Cheerleading was made of more than the movies tend to show. Cheerleading at York was about more than skirts and sweaters. Cheerleaders and coaches alike at York wanted to express how much hard work and dedication went into the behind the scenes aspect of cheering.

A typical day at practice, according to cheerleader, Melissa Brunke, sophomore, started with stretching and tumbling. Then, a review of any necessary cheers followed. The team learned difficult stunts and cheers and perfected them all. Because these girls had practice two times a week on Tuesdays and Thursdays in addition to games and the occasional Friday practice before a game, there was clearly a high level of commitment to raising school spirit. These girls not only had to promote spirit, but they also had to have it as well. Ms. Ashley Egley, the team's coach, supported her team as she called them energetic and said that during practice "you will always find a group in a good mood." York welcomed the first-year cheerleading coach Ms. Egley after she had previously coached poms at Bolingbrook High School. She loved getting to know the girls just as much as the girls loved getting to know each other. The past year of hard work brought this group of high school girls closer together with the love of cheering as their link. The bonds that the girls formed had turned into memorable friendships. The favorite part of the year for almost all the girls was the Homecoming and pep rally performance. They got to pump up the entire school with specially prepared routines for the halftime of the Homecoming game, and even when not doing a practiced routine, they showed their enthusiasm with enthusiasm and pride. You Can Dance
IF YOU WANT TO

At every halftime of York's football and basketball games, the York Poms squad showed off a highly choreographed dance routine. During their dance, they not only wowed the crowd but also pumped up the Dukes to get ready for the second half. However, the York Poms Team was not here just to show off at halftime. They worked hard all year to prepare for competitions that ultimately led to qualifying for State at the end of the year. Helping the Poms achieve their goals were senior captains Danielle Koch and Lauren Reichl.

By February the team was at the end of their long season that all started off with a lot of hard work every day at practice. Poms sponsor Dawin Wu said, "We have tryouts in April, summer practices, and at the end of the summer we attend Universal Dance Association camp to learn new dances and work on technique." Koch explained, "Our practice always starts with stretching...then we work on either our game routine or our competition routine."

Having to create a dance from scratch seems like an impossible task for most, but the squad was always up for the challenge. Koch further stated, "Every girl comes from a different background of dance, and the differences are definitely shown in each routine we perform. We generally just listen to the same music repeatedly and begin forming moves to it." Every dance was filled with a great mix of music and a variety of amazing moves.

Poms is a great way to help bring spirit to York, and more importantly, it is an outlet for girls to do what they love: dance. Though the team was a lot of fun, they sometimes encountered creative differences. Koch said, "The hardest part is agreeing on the many ideas that are being thrown out for the same part, it is hard to decide." Even though there may have been some disagreements, everyone on the team had a lot of fun. Koch concluded, "I love forming bonds with all the girls. They mean a lot to me." – Daniel Milling

Half-Time IS JUST PRACTICE

No matter what the football score was, York's Poms Team still performed their halftime routine. However, students did not realize that performing at halftime was not the only priority for the team. When there was no upcoming game, the team practiced for the important regional competitions. Sponsor Dawin Wu explained, "In order to qualify for State, you have to compete at mulitiple competitions to earn a certain score and place in the top third in your category." This season, the girls brought home a first place trophy. Along with the hardware, they also cemented a spot down at Peoria for the state competition. York Poms has been on the rise by making it to State each of the past five years. Last year they did their best ever with a fifth in AAA Kick. Ms. Wu said, "We are bringing another Kick routine." The team was ready to leave it all on the dance floor, and their preparation showed in their impressive eighth place finish in this year's AAA Kick. - Daniel Milling

Organizations

The Value of Learning

Even before recorded history, markets and money were present as bartering, and then later, coinage allowed for trade. It was only logical, then, for York students to start a club dedicated to learning about economics and the ways in which wealth, business, and markets operated in the modern world. "I started the club because I love the subject. I think it is important for students to get involved in it and the economy," said Ms. Jessica Weldon, sponsor of Economics Club and an economics teacher. With enthusiastic students as dedicated to learning about economics as Ms. Weldon, Economics Club was ready to lift off the ground.

As interest grew in such business classes as AP Microeconomics and AP Macroeconomics, students involved in the classes found a new interest and decided to explore it further. The president of the club, Edward Sack, senior, was instrumental in getting it started, and he said, "I thought Economics Club was a necessary thing to have at York because it teaches life lessons, and I personally believe it's the best club here." Sack's statement of dedication was one echoed many times by the club's members. Rachel Nelson, senior, was the secretary and another central figure in the formation of the club. She said, "Economics is my favorite class at York, and Ms. Weldon is my favorite teacher."

From observing a strict tradition of eating donuts every weekly meeting to inventing new theories on how to invest, Economics Club always had fun but always kept it educational. The members participated in the Stock Market Game investing theoretical money in an online competition to learn the workings of markets. Ms. Weldon said, "I saw an opportunity to get involved in competition, and I was asked by students to start it. I didn't want to force it on them, but when they asked me I said, 'let's do it.'"

They planned to take investing one step further: into the real world. They hoped to recieve a grant which would allow the club to invest in the stock market to gain real-world experience and to start a scholarship if the portfolio developed successfully. The club even learned a little about one intangible that no theory or study can truly touch: kindness. The club traveled with RAYS, another York club, to the Northern Illinois Food Bank as a part of York's featured charity for the year. Whether it was giving back to the community, trading stocks, or simply learning about the economy over the morning's donuts, Economics Club began with a momentum that showed no signs of letting up. - Mark Olalde

Testing the Markets

When Economics Club was formed to educate students in the workings of financial markets and institutions, a community member, Mr. Rod Stipe, saw a fitting opportunity to foster an interest in economics in honor of his father, Mr. Sterling H. Stipe, Jr., Ph.D, an economist who saw beauty in the field of economics and wanted others to share his passions. Mr. R. Stipe donated two thousand dollars to the District 205 Foundation to honor his father, who had recently passed away. "Mr. [R.] Stipe's suggestion was for us to invest this money into the stock market to experience investing as a real-life experience," said Ms. Jessica Weldon of the donation. As a result of the exceptional generosity of one family and its dedication to learning, the students in Economics Club will be given the unique opportunity to experience the real world while still in the classroom.

Empowering
THE NEXT GENERATION...

Empower: "to promote the self-actualization and the influence of women's movements has been inspiring and empowering women." This completely defined York's own women's rights group, Empower. With a goal to raise girls' self empowerment and confidence by talking about current issues in the media dealing with gender roles in today's society, it also raised awareness that even in current society there were issues with women's rights.

Some of the group's biggest contributions to women's rights were the fundraisers the group held for Kiva, whose mission was "to connect people through lending for the sake of alleviating poverty." Empower's donations helped female entrepreneurs in third world countries pay for their basic needs when starting their very own business. "Getting together to raise money for a good cause is one of Empower's main goals for this year," said Clara Lewis, senior, president of Empower.

Ms. Virginia Highstone, advisor, saw Empower grow throughout the years. This year they established a complete board of directors made up of President Lewis, Vice President Kyle Ann Sebastian, senior, and Secretary Benjamin Villareal, junior. "Empower has also had a growing number of boys which has been the biggest change through the year," said Ms. Highstone. This fine board made it the priority to raise the awareness of women's issues to the students at York and beyond.

The 2009- 2010 Empower organization had big and bold aspirations for women's rights for not only girls at York, but also for women everywhere. The skills that the young men and women learned through Empower were skills that could lead them to a bright future. As the Merriam-Webster Dictionary defined it, Empower is the promoting of self-actualization and influence of women's movements inspiring the empowerment of women. York Empower was certainly inspiring empowerment of girls in this school. – Cara Koscher

Strengthening the Hand

Although many people throughout the world were not entirely aware of what handball was, York's Handball Team demonstrated how fascinating the sport really was. Playing in a non-competitive way, Handball at York was an extremely intense, fast-moving game packed with fun and excitement. Meeting every Thursday, the members of the team gathered at Courts Plus and played from 4:30 to 5:30. When asked about a typical practice, Alexander Fisette, junior, described, "We normally warm up for about twenty minutes and then play singles, doubles, and occasionally knock-out." Additionally, the team organized a few brackets throughout the year in which each team member played against each other, eventually leading to a victor.

The main goals of the team were really to focus entirely on playing handball and having fun while doing so. Although the competitors did take part in an annual tournament, the club was traditionally very relaxed and enjoyable. "It's extremely basic, but that's why I enjoy it. It's not too much of a commitment, and it's really relaxed," said Ian Wincentsen, junior.

In addition to the enjoyment associated with handball, the York Handball Team learned from the best. Ms. Megan Mehilos, the head coach of the team, had an extremely impressive history with the sport. Having won four national outdoor tournaments and one indoor tournament, Ms. Mehilos provided York players with the knowledge of what it takes to play handball to the greatest of their ability.

Playing handball was not only enjoyable but was also a great bonding experience. Students had the privilege of coming together on a weekly basis, strengthening both their skill in handball and their friendships, and being another great addition to York's activities.

Fight for your Rights

In a world wide battle for peace, Amnesty International will always be a force. Whether it is working to help abolish the death penalty, stop violence against women, or just being able to say what one wants, they support human rights. York's Amnesty bases their goals off the direction given down by the head Amnesty International organization in Washington, D.C. With unequaled enthusiasm and passion for peace and equal rights, they spread their efforts through our hallways.

Round one started off with a strong contender for best hallway decorations during the Casino Royale-themed Homecoming. Sticking with the theme given down by Student Council, they made it their own by making the Amnesty hallway a "Don't Gamble with Human Rights" motto. Following Homecoming, their next big event was the winter concert. Many Dukes of all grades, and even faculty, literally banded together to put on a spectacular show for all those who filled the commons from one end to the other. Femur Lab, With Our Sunken Ship, The Gnarwaals, and Shy Guy Says all took the stage to support human rights and added to the excitement of helping others throughout the world. Masood Haque, senior, said, "The concert was an excellent showcase of all the various music talents at York."

Round after round and while the calendar flipped pages, the students continued to get the word out throughout the school. Flyers blanketed bulletin boards for people to do things such as donating to the earthquake relief in Haiti, going to food banks, and joining Amnesty to take part in a write-a-thon to help free a woman. Though they were attempting to tackle issues much bigger than York itself, the way they got there was by taking small steps. Ms. Joan Davis summed up the school's personal goal when she said, "Having the kids know the issues exist is our personal goal so we can continue to grow Amnesty International here at York." -Micaella Cosentino

Circle of friends

How often do high school students worry about what people think about them, if their hair is okay, or if their clothes are in style? Members of Circle of Friends have realized that none of this matters.

On the website, the first sight was the club's objective: "Circle of Friends is dedicated to increasing the circle of friendships at York Community High School. Students from all backgrounds and abilities meet twice monthly–once to plan, and once to execute our events. In addition to 'fun' outings and parties, we hold regular fund-raisers and service projects. The democratic way the circle operates allows anyone to take a leadership role."

Everyone instantly accepted everyone else for who he or she was. No one judged and everyone became friends. Sam Slocum, sophomore, who was a member of Circle of Friends, said, "People don't realize the difference you can make in someone's life just by being their friend."

Everyone put in a lot of effort for all of the Circle of Friends parties and gatherings so everything went as planned. Everyone enjoyed themselves at the parties and was glad that the club members put in the effort for such a great time.

Next time you meet someone new, think about the difference you could make by being their friend. Then go out and do it. You might be surprised at what you find. - Lizzie Diamond

Elmhurst Children's Assistance Foundation

Elmhurst Children's Assistance Foundation (ECAF) is an organization dedicated to helping kids with special needs. ECAF raised money to help special needs kids and their families who needed financial aid.

One of the events was Special Kids Day. On a day in December, ECAF had a day for kids with disabilities to get their picture taken with Santa.

ECAF came up with the idea to have the Kiddie Cars in town. In the past, they decorated and displayed cars, trains, turtles, and rain barrels. They used the Kiddie Cars for their auction at their golf outing at the end of the summer.

ECAF used the money it raised to help families with bills ranging from speech and physical therapy to medical equipment to rehabilitation. They also used some money to install the chair lift for Elmhurst's public pools.

One With Nature

The highlight of every year for Eco club was always the summer canoe trip. Members went up to Winter, Wisconsin to spend a week canoeing down river. They spent every night at a different campsite, stopping to fish and take in the natural beauty around them. They had the opportunity to wrestle with the natural elements while drinking in all of the ecological wonders that they came across on their expedition down the river. To fully capture the experience, there was no modern technology allowed, even cell phones, except for emergencies, letting the students fully immerse themselves in their environment. Ryan Gorecki, junior, said, "I don't think I've ever been more in touch with nature than when I was out with them in the wild." This was truly a fantastic way to really appreciate the natural beauty surrounding everyone!

Making a GREENER WORLD

The goal of Eco Club was "to foster a love and better understanding of nature's delicate equilibrium in the York family and in the community so that all may be better stewards of the planet on which we live," said Mr. Robert Blaus, the club organizer.

Eco Club's main focus was to get involved in activities in which it was able to better the environment. The club also strived to make others aware of the impact individuals make on the environment in hopes of encouraging others to live greener lives.

Eco Club met every Tuesday after school to discuss ways it could help York live a more eco-friendly life. Members also met during their lunch periods to collect all of the recycling bins in the school, taking care of the dirtier half of recycling. Eco Club also ran the text book rescue at the end of the year as a means of recycling all of the old books in York and sending them to kids who needed them more than York did.

Eco Club also had the privilege to travel on various environmentally active field trips. From rock climbing to spelunking into caves to rowing down the river, Eco Club got out to get a greater appreciation of the world. According to Ryan Gorecki, junior, "You become very close with the other members on the trip, and you live very environmentally friendly."

A Festival to Remember

This year's Winter Drama Festival featured two very contrasting performances. Opening the festival on Thursday and concluding on Saturday was the heartwrenching drama Rabbit Hole, which portrayed how two parents were affected by the unexpected death of their young son. Opening on Friday and ending the festival on Sunday afternoon was the incredibly hilarious show The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee, which depicted six main spellers in their quest to become the county spelling champion.

Rabbit Hole's intimacy and drama were unlike any other performance done at York. Emily Spokas, senior, said the show was so intimate and life-like that "it's going to change the dynamic of York Drama forever." The five person cast became so close that they considered themselves an actual family, which included "the good moments and the trying moments too," said Meghan McManus, senior. Mr. John Forsythe was the glue that held everything together when things got tough. "He really lets us take the wheel with our characters and our scenes," said Spokas.

The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee was easily one of the funniest shows ever to hit the stage at York. Brian Kulaga, senior, who had the unique experience of participating in both of the shows, looked forward to an interesting aspect of Spelling Bee: the guest spellers. "I can't wait to mess with the audience participants!" said Kulaga. Also, the intimacy and simplicity of the set gave the show a special feeling. "It's simple and phenomenal at the same time," said Kulaga. Whenever the cast had a question, they turned to their director, Ms. Rebecca Marianetti. "Ms. M knows when something doesn't look right, and she's not afraid to tell us. She won't settle for anything less than our best, which allows to us to put on such incredible productions," said Cassandra Pacelli, senior. - Mark Nosek

Where was the place where people could have fun, meet others who shared similar interests, and learn about the great culture of Italy? Italian Club was the place.

This year's Italian Club became a sanctuary for students wanting to learn more about Italian traditions, food, and games. The club had a great start to the year by winning the Homecoming hallway decorating contest with an almost perfect score as judged by the administration. The club added Italian flags and flashing lights to give their hallway an extra factor of vivacity. "The students have much confidence now. We put a lot of work into the hallway," recalled Signora Loredana Manfredini, leader of Italian Club and a York Italian teacher. Along with Signora Maria Barbanente, a first year Italian teacher at York, and the Presidents, Mark Olalde and Anthony Melone, seniors, Signora Manfredini planned and led the meetings and events that the club hosted. To add to the Homecoming victory, the club started its first ever scavenger hunt in the beginning of the year so the club members could better get to know one another. While having fun was a very important aspect of the club, the club never lost sight of its goal to learn about and experience the uniqueness of Italian heritage. As the club members delved deeper into Italian culture, Olalde said, "I enjoy experiencing the culture through the food, music, and awesome traditions because Italia is one country that has lessons and experiences that can better all of us." - Kathryn McGirk

All Around THE WORLD

Model United Nations was a relatively unheralded organization at York High School. This was unfortunate. Students stepped into the shoes of ambassadors from UN member states to debate current issues in today's world.

While playing their roles as ambassadors, students followed the same parlimentary procecure of the UN itself. Delegates utilized three types of debate: formal, much like a timed speech; moderated caucus, with delegates speaking form their seats; and unmoderated caucus, with delegates moving freely around the chamber, speaking to any country they chose. The ultimate goal was to reach a resolution by the end of the conference.

All this work was an effort to find solutions to the issues from countries around the world. This was an incredibly challenging task, but the students always got their work done in time for the upcoming conference. According to Margaret Quigley, junior, "the work pays off in the end because being aware of world issues helps in daily life."

Before playing out their roles in a Model UN simulation, students spent hours upon hours researching the issue their group would address. Students typically had a month to prepare, writing postion papers on their assigned topics.

Students looked closely at the needs, goals, and foreign policies of the countries they represented at the event. The students learned how countries felt about concerns such as nuclear proliferation, human rights, the environment, world-wide poverty, the environment, and economic development throughout the globe.

The insights they gained from their discoveries in history, geography, culture, economics, and science contributed to the excitement of the event once the role-playing got under way, but also provided members with the advantage of knowing what is going on in the world. - Kelly McHugh

The Sweet Taste of Success

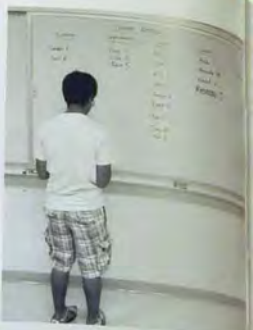

The most thrilling portion of each Math Team competition is undoubtedly the Candy Bar Contest. In this segment of the contest, the team is no longer split up by grades to take an individual test. Instead, the entire team collaborates to work together on a very difficult problem set consisting of twenty questions.

The timed round is incredibly hectic. It consists of twenty difficult questions covering a multitude of topics and a few tie-breakers. One student is selected to run the board and write answers down so that other students can confirm or challenge the team's existing answers. When time runs out, a judge collects and grades each school's answer sheet to see which team had the most questions correct. Then, as Rachel Nelson, senior, said, "The school with the most questions correct wins a giant bag of candy!"

Although the quick pace of the round and high level of difficulty of the questions caused some schools to wilt under the pressure, Mr. Max Schoenberg believed the Candy Bar Contest played right into the strength of the team. He said, "Often we are at our best as a team when we work together and share ideas."

Take It Max

How many ways are there to write a nine-digit number containing each of the digits 1-9 so that the first digit is twice as big as the second and the last two digits are both odd? If you were able to tackle this difficult question and come up with the correct answer of 7,680, then the Math Team was the place for you. Math Team members worked on challenging questions covering many topics, not just probability, at their weekly morning practices in preparation for their evening competitions against other high schools. The success of York's Math Team was a result of lots of time spent practicing and great instruction by the coaches, Mr. Max Schoenberg and Ms. Linda Lahti.

At the weekly practices, team members were given a contest from a previous year as practice. All the grade levels then collaborated to discuss different methods of solving the tough problems. When the problems were too difficult for the students to solve, they had no question to whom they should turn. "Mr. Schoenberg can solve any problem, and he is really patient while explaining it to those who don't understand as well as he does," said Rachel Nelson, senior. The coaches also did their best to prepare each student for the particular topic of the upcoming competition. "They always help to make sure we know everything we need to for each contest," said Tom Jankauski, junior.

This preparation resulted in many great achievements throughout the year, such as the results of the year's opening competition in which each grade level placed either first or second, and the Dukes finished first overall. To make the night even better, the team came out on top in the hectic, challenging Candy Bar Contest. "We were all extremely excited since York had never swept a competition like that in our history," said Schoenberg. This success continued throughout the year and resulted in another successful season for the Math Team. - Mark Nosek

Unlocking the Doors to Service

Somebody once said that "being good is commendable, but only when it is combined with doing good is it useful." Key Club strived to instill this principle in its members by encouraging them to give back to the community. Key Club is a service based organization that finds opportunities locally to lend a helping hand. "Key Club revolves around service projects and fundraisers. We seek opportunities to help out whenever we can. However, the main goal is to develop character as they learn to give back," elaborated Mr. Christopher Gemkow, the advisor of Key Club.

Key Club members volunteered with the Elmhurst Park District and other organizations in the hope of making a difference. "Being a part of Key Club is a great way to give back in a variety of different ways. There's something for everyone," said President Kyle Ann Sebastian, senior.

Key Club required its members to be involved in three major service projects and two minor ones throughout the year. Members had many options for service projects. They helped with Senior Chore Day, Polar Express, Tickled Pink, and Peanut Day. Along with the various service projects, weekly meetings were held on Tuesday mornings. "The meetings are optional, but there are always a lot of people who show up to find out about upcoming events and what other projects they can get involved in," said Kevin Rzeszutko, senior.

Key Club not only encouraged students to become involved in different service projects, but it also inspired members to learn how to become better leaders. "Many of the members chair different service projects and learn a lot about becoming organized and productive leaders," explained Sebastian.

Key Club members not only helped others, but they also developed into great leaders. They learned about the greatest gift of all: the gift of giving back. Go ahead York, unlock the doors to community service. - Mansi Parikh

Tickled Pink

When asked about the best service project Key Club participated in, the most common response was Tickled Pink. "Tickled Pink is probably the most fun for all of the girl members of Key Club. They get to spend a day with girls, have a party, and do some good for breast cancer patients," said Mr. Christopher Gemkow, the advisor of Key Club.

Tickled Pink took place on October 26, 2009, and over thirty members showed up to Elmhurst Hospital to participate in a fundraiser for the Breast Health Center. The actual event was run by the Elmhurst Junior Women's Club, and Key Club members helped with the kids' activities and the raffles. "It is an event where families can come for an evening of friendship, fun, and fundraising," said Historian Nicole Carey, junior. From shopping to eating, the attendees were surrounded by fun at this event.

The Key Club volunteers mainly helped out with many kids' activities during the event, including face painting, bozo buckets, an accessory walk, painting nails, styling hair, and other activities throughout the night. "The event is usually really fun for the volunteers. It is usually very successful, too. This year we raised a little over seven thousand dollars," explained Carey.

Tickled Pink became one of the bigger service projects in which Key Club members participated. It balanced work and play for the volunteers and helped give the members a chance to directly give back to the community.

Talking Circles Around the Competition

The Speech Team did what many people fear most: speak publicly. They took speeches to another level. While most people feel panicked when asked to give a presentation, the people on Speech Team did it with ease. This year, the team set high expectations for themselves and set a goal to get a trophy from every tournament.

Speech Team required a lot of commitment. In addition to Monday meetings after school, Speech Team members also had individual practice sessions, and each person on the Speech Team specialized in one or more of fourteen different events. "Speech Team is fun because you get to go into a round and perform in front of an audience," said Rhiannon Damm, sophomore. Then, almost every Saturday morning at 6:00 a.m., the members of the Speech Team assembled in front of York and got ready to be loaded onto busses. They traveled to different schools to compete and perform the materials they had been working hard to perfect.

The Speech Team was about a lot more than just learning how to deliver speeches. "Speech Team is an activity that teaches you a life lesson. Whether you're on a date or giving a business presentation, everyone will be able to use the skills they have learned on the team," explained Mr. Mark Golebiowski, coach. They grew together as a team on the long bus rides to and from school and developed a lot of traditions. "We've made a Speech Team song," explained Brian Kulaga, senior. They sang the song on the way home from competitions and in the beginning of practices because it helped unite the team. We Speak Good

Although the Speech Team did well at all of their tournaments, they did especially well at the Palatine Turkey Tournament on the 21st of November. The team showed up ready to have fun and compete and stayed focused throughout the competition. The Speech Team had many people break into finals; amongst them were Meghan McManus, Brian Kulaga, and September Blue, seniors. Kulaga and McManus broke into the finals in the category of Humorous Dramatic Acting and received first place overall in the Varsity Competition. Blue placed second overall in the Novice Competition. "Everyone's improving so much, and the results of last weekend's tournament showed it," said John Sullivan, junior.

Breaking the case

All rise for the York Law team. Whether it was for the interest in law, curiosity in pursuing a future career as an attorney, or just the joy of arguing, this group is dedicated. Like real trails, mock trials take place in a courtroom with a judge in charge. Each student is given a specific role to play throughout the year at the different trials, and the best way to prepare for a trial is to "Practice! Practice! Practice!" exclaimed Dana Modrowski, senior.

Every year the team was presented with a different case that they worked with throughout the season. This year, the team worked with a civil case that involveed a car accident between two teenagers. The twist in this case was that both teens were leaving a party where alcohol was served, and eachclaimed to have not consumed any. However, both had alcohol in their bloodstreams. The plaintiff was suing due to pain and the loss of a possible swimming scholarship.

When working with a case such as this, the team needed to know the case from every angle. Jissy Cyriac, senior, stated, "By the end of the season, every single nuance in the case is perfected through many intense practices and competitions." Each participant had to be ready to refute and question members from other teams about every aspect of the case. Witnesses especially needed to be prepared to answer any question the opposing team had and might use against him or her. The team had to stay focused throughout the season for anything. Jackson Parr, senior, believed, "Focus is the strongest part of our team." - Lauren Zomparelli

A Battle of Wits

What team attended academic trivial competitions? York's one and only Scholastic Bowl. The club's goal was to improve the cultural literacy of students by competing against neighboring schools. Under the leadership of Gavin Fahey, senior, his teammates competed against other high schools in the area.

Competitions consisted of two teams from each school and five players on each team. The questions asked were from a wide variety subjects. Question categories included language and literature, social studies, mathematics, fine arts, and miscellaneous topics. One bonus question asked at Willowbrook High School even covered famous movies. Students had to master each subject in hopes of doing well at competitions. The atmosphere leading up to competitions was always friendly and fun. When the competitions started, Jorge Solis, senior, commented that meets were "fun but intense."

The schools that were the biggest competition for Scholastic Bowl last year were Oak Park River Forest and Hinsdale South. Mr. Jeremy Paschke, one of the team's sponsors, stated, "Oak Park River Forest was very good and will be a really tough team to beat."

Students had to commit their time to Scholastic Bowl by attending biweekly practices on Mondays and Wednesdays. During practices, members went over questions that were asked from previous years because that was one of the few ways to prepare for competition. In these mock trials, all types of questions were asked to test each member's limits and to help members learn in the process. - Amanda Rafter

Get in the Zone, AUTO ZONE!

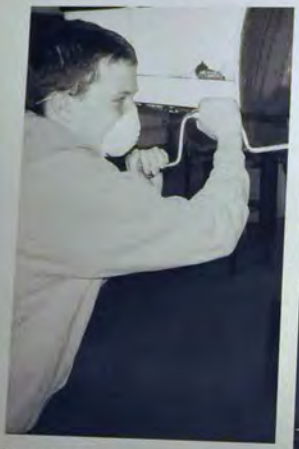

Every Tuesday a dedicated group of students met under the direction of its sponsor, Mr. Ronald Robak, for two hours. Once the students were ready, they were split up into groups and started working on many different kinds of projects. "Right now we are working on repairing a VW Rabbit and a Mustang Cobra," stated Auto Club's President Amanda Smith, senior. "I have been in Auto Club all four years because I have always loved working on cars." One car worked on was owned by student and new member Theophile Khayat, junior, who said, "York Auto Club is a great way to learn more about cars and how to cheaply fix them. There is a good group of people here, and we have a great facility to work with."

Fixing engines was not the only activity that Auto Club performed. Throughout the year, they had many long-term goals. "Our main work is trying to build our own York Auto Club hot rod," explained Mr. Robak. Even if a hot rod may be foreign to most students, one thing that was everywhere in the news was going green, and York Auto Club was no different. Mr. Robak said, "Right now, we are working on a green project. We are trying to change a gas car to an electric car."

It seemed no matter one's skill level, anyone could find pleasure in the numerous aspects of Auto Club. Zachary Starr, senior, said, "My favorite aspect is the overall general good time that we have." Putting in a little elbow grease has never been so fun. - Daniel Milling

Crossing the Language Barrier

¡Nos encantamos la cultura espanola! In English, this means, "We love Spanish culture!" The students in Spanish Club dedicated their time to learning about the history, language, and culture of various Spanish-speaking countries. Ms. Vicky Gomez, the club advisor, described Spanish Club as "a group of students [who] are passionate about Spanish." The students created presentations, listened to guest speakers, and participated in activities to learn all they could about Spanish culture.

The club met Tuesdays after school twice a month. Janelle Mendiola, junior, said that during meetings they "learn about a country and discuss future events." The students made the meetings fun by creating PowerPoints with cultural information and pictures. Some students also decided to make foods that were common to certain Spanish-speaking countries, such as different types of cookies. The club was student-run, and the club members engaged each other in discussions about other countries.

The students in Spanish Club participated in service projects such as adopt-a-family. The members tried to make a difference in society with this service project by donating clothes and toys. The students also participated in the International Festival that took place in the Commons towards the end of the year. The students made food and "tr[ied] to teach others about the Hispanic culture," said Cristina Ochoa, sophomore. This festival gave the club members a chance to show the rest of the school all the cultural aspects they learned about Spanish-speaking countries.

The members made the club fun and engaging. Ashley Vazquez, sophomore, said, "I love how we can learn about new countries, and we get to taste food from different countries." Ms. Gomez also enjoyed "getting to know students outside the classroom and watching students teach each other about the language, history, and culture of various Spanish-speaking countries." Spanish Club was unique in that the students learned about different countries, but the members had a great time. - Mary Kate Rohn

A good way to reach one's goals is to be prepared for the future. The members of Skills USA were focused on preparing for life after high school while at the same time enjoying themselves. Through their involvement, the club members were able to learn new skills and develop old ones in order to ensure they would fulfill their personal goals.

Skills USA is an industrial technology program for students at York. To join, one must be in an industrial technology class. The members did not meet during a specific class period, but they worked to improve their skills in their own industrial technology class. With so many industrial technology classes available, Skills USA attracted many students with a wide variety of talents. Students involved in woodworking, principles of technology, automotive, graphic arts, technical drafting, architecture, or engineering were all potential candidates for the club. Advisor Mr. Ken Ross described the club as "an industrial arts focused organization that teaches professional development skills, employment skills, excellence in curricular areas, community service, and, ultimately, how to compete against other students in skills competitions."

Every year a Skills USA state competition is held in Springfield. York came back from State with exceptional results. James Harvey and Michael Navarro, graduates, took first and second at the state meet in Principles of Physics Technology. Joseph Roberto, graduate, took first place in Collision Repair and Amanda Smith, senior, took third place in the essay. Following the state competition, James Harvey and Joseph Roberto qualified to move on to the National Skills USA Competition.

In addition to the industrial technology classes the students were involved in, many students were also involved in other school activities which exercised their skills. Through their participation in Skills USA, the students learned not only industrial technology skills but also the importance of work ethic and devotion.

Time to Strategize

Chess is a pastime that has been around for centuries. To master chess, one must have patience and the ability to anticipate his or her opponent's next move. The only way to get a better understanding of chess is to practice. York's Chess Club offered opportunities for students to practice the game and to take their love of chess to the next level.

Students met every Tuesday and Thursday to practice new strategies and prepare for an upcoming match. The teams were paired up based on their current record and performances in previous tournaments. Their sponsor, Ms. Erica Henry, explained how matches were scored, saying, "Scores are based on the players' board number. Board one has a value of twelve points, while board eight has a value of five points."

Each player had to try his or her hardest in order to score points for the team. Winning a match was a collective effort. At the end of the meet, the team with the highest combined score won.

The students in the club took Chess Club very seriously. "It's a sport, not a club," said Scott Doberstein, sophomore. Just like any sport, it demanded a strategy and time in which to practice new moves. It did not take much physical effort, but the mental toll a game of chess could take on a person was surprising.

By the end of the year, the students' improvements were clearly showing. This was one of the goals set by their sponsor. "I want the students to walk away having improved some aspect of their game, whether it's time management, notation, strategy, or patience," said Ms. Henry. The students in Chess Club certainly showed this, proving that this year's chess endeavor was a success. - Shannon Kwit

Keeping The Pride

Despite the ever-approaching end of the summer, the PRIDE students continued to represent that for which they stand. The last weekend of summer, several of the students involved in P.R.I.D.E. went to a ropes course in Wheaton called the Lincoln Marsh Natural Area Ropes Course. While at the course, the students furthered their leadership skills while also bonding over the mentally and physically challenging tasks. During these tough tasks, the students who attended bonded and strengthened their beliefs in a substance-free lifestyle. The students' dedication and determination to lead the school to a drug and alcohol free life is not only impressive, but also inspiring.

Take Pride in Your Life

Pride is something all York students had in common. Every student who attended York had pride in our academics, our athletics, and in ourselves. But there was a select group of students whose pride outshined everyone else's. These students participated in a group at York called "Positive Role-models Inspiring Direction to Excellence," also known as P.R.I.D.E.

At the beginning of the year, the students who joined P.R.I.D.E. were required to sign a pledge in which they promised to abstain from participating in any activity involving illegal substances. In order to encourage this attitude, the P.R.I.D.E. board met every other Wednesday to plan fun activities for all the students in the group to do together. Not only did the participants get to attend fun events but they also got to know each other in a fun, safe environment. Mark Nosek, senior, a member of the P.R.I.D.E. board, said, "I've really enjoyed getting to know the other members through the breakfasts we've held and also the other events we planned throughout the year. It's really easy to form a strong bond with the other students."

Some of the activities that the students have done during the year included attending group breakfasts, a complicated ropes course, and York Drama productions as a group. Also, they had field house nights where they had the privilege of the whole field house to themselves and could play games like dodgeball, basketball, and ping pong. At these events, students got to be themselves without the pressures of the usual life of students.

Because the students did not feel the pressure of participating in illegal activities in order to fit in, they truly got to be themselves. It's safe to say that it was easy for everyone to get along, especially because they know that every student involved in the group had the same core values. It's no wonder this top quality group of students had so much pride; they accomplished more than the average student and obtained great relationships along the way.

Academics

Go Big or Go Home

Far from the stereotypical band geeks, the musicians in the York band program were a group of characters ranging from mathletes to water polo players to future lawyers who were bonded by one thing: a love of making music. Led by Mr. Michael Pavlik, the Director of Bands, and Mr. William Riddle, the head of the music department, the students in Band shared their passion for music in multitudes of styles including jazz, classical, and rock. From Symphonic Band to Jazz Combo to Pep Band, the band program spread its music far and wide to the enjoyment and applause of numerous audiences.

The music began even before school started as Marching Band met every week during the summer culminating in an intense week of practice before school started. The band's main set was a medley of Star Trek tunes, and the band got the unique opportunity to bring its energy and hard work to newer and larger venues when it participated in the Sugar Bowl. The band traveled down to New Orleans to perform during the halftime show of the Sugar Bowl in the Superdome with other high school bands. Feeding on the energy of marching band, pep band began its year by supporting the cross country team with a performance at the State meet in Peoria. Then, the band brought basketball games alive with a vivacity that included themes such as pirate night, a green out, and zombie night and sets including Big Noise from Winnetka, Holiday, and Hey Baby. This energy was apparent in Samuel Patti, senior, as he described Pep Band's style and said, "I played so loud I tasted blood in my mouth. That was really legit playing loud." Always the trendsetters, the band members also geared up to become the first ever water polo pep band.

The outrageous and strident side of the band program was but a facet as the concert music of the Cadet, Concert, and Symphonic Bands was the main focus. Mr. Pavlik said of Symphonic Band, "I appreciation everyone's work ethic and am pleased that we're beginning to see that music always give you back what you give it." The band also had many excellent opportunities to learn from professionals as the members of the Sousa Band and conductors from Luther College and DePaul worked with the band. Using the opportunities they were given to the best of their abilities, many musicians tried out for and made the prestigious IMEA bands. Marta Tiesenga and Kristina Murray, seniors, were selected for a state band, and Ethan Schreiber, senior, won the state competition for his personal arrangement. With small ensembles playing throughout the community, individual band members perfecting important music literature for solo festivals, and a new drum line preparing to launch into competition, it was no wonder that Spencer Martens, senior, postulated, "There is no language more fluent than the language of music." - Mark Olalde and Masood Haque

Rockin' the Big Easy

This year's Marching Band had the extraordinary opportunity to participate in the Sugar Bowl halftime show. The band went down to New Orleans in the second week of winter break and spent hours practicing in the Superdome for the New Year's Day performance. Throughout the week, the band members also had to opportunity to explore the Big Easy, and afterwards, Mel Dunne, junior, said, "I really want to come back and spend at least a summer here." While practicing for their impending performance, several band members became incredibly grateful for how much work they had put in before arriving down in New Orleans. The many hours after school paid off as Anna Ratliff, senior, noticed, "We're the best looking band out there." The performance was a once in a lifetime opportunity that would be cherished for years to come. Mr. Riddle said, "The trip to New Orleans to perform at the Sugar Bowl was an opportunity for a unique performing experience combined with the chance to spend several days with fellow band members. These experiences seem to be what students remember the most."

Lookin' Fine AT STATE '09

One of the most anticipated events of the year for members of Student Council was the weekend-long trip to Springfield in the spring for the prestigious Illinois Association of Student Councils Convention. "The State Convention is a great way to meet others and get new ideas to bring back to our own student council," said Mary Alex Japczyk, senior, who attended the convention. In order to attend, one must apply for a position such as a Discussion Group Leader, a Recorder, a member of a service project group, or a participant in one of numerous committees. York was lucky to have many members StuCo attend, including at least one member from every grade level.

One of the highlights for York's members was the formal banquet that is held during each year's convention. When the results of the election were made public, York's own Shannon Corcoran, senior, was named the Secretary of Illinois's State Council Board. This title did not come without responsibilities. "Despite the fact that the job is highly demanding, and I am often needed to attend workshops and conferences that require five-hour roadtrips, it's been an unforgettable experience," said Corcoran.

Leading BY EXAMPLE

Is it possible to imagine Homecoming Week without the great Spirit Days capped off by the frenzied atmosphere of the Pep Rally? How about the Homecoming Dance without the wildly popular new DJ? For that matter, what would a year without a single dance be like? Thanks to the incredibly hard-working Student Council at York, the student body never had to ponder such frightening questions.

"The primary function of Student Council is to better the lives of the student body," said Student Body President Mary Alex Japczyk, senior. To accomplish this goal, Student Council, commonly referred to as StuCo, sponsored and planned all the dances as well as numerous other school-wide events. Members of StuCo often put in time outside of school, even going to such extremes as staying overnight on a weekend to decorate the school at the Lock-in, in order to complete their seemingly endless tasks. On top of this, they even took time to better the community. "We also organized charity work, such as food/clothes drives and Adopt-a-Family," said John Hennessy, sophomore. On top of this, StuCo was always coming up with new ideas for how to make the student body's lives better and more enjoyable. "The new addition of a Trivia Night was also received well," said Hennessy.

If a problem occurred, StuCo knew they could turn to one of their sponsors, Ms. Sheila Fleming or Mr. Matt Moran, for assistance. "They help by advising us, linking us with other members of the faculty, and approving our ideas," said Biatriz Rivera, junior. The sponsors, however, heaped the praise back on the students' shoulders. "The group is really student run because we have such a strong group of leaders," said Mr. Moran. - Mark Nosek

Every seventh period, a group of dedicated students worked hard to create the York-hi newspaper, a student driven newspaper that turned out twelve to thirteen issues a year. The newspaper was filled with articles about world, local, and school events. There were editorials about politics and video games and also critiques on the new movies, shows, or music. Last but certainly not least, every page was filled with pictures and artwork from students on staff.

Without the talents and hard work of the students, the newspaper would crash and burn. Luckily, every year new students were recruited. When asked why she joined in the first place, Katie Travers, senior, said, "I joined because journalism is something that I may want to go into. It's rewarding to see the final product after all the work." Even with the hard work, the students still had a good time. Shannon Corcoran, senior, said, "We enjoy organizing jousting tournaments and lounging on our couch." Travers also added about the atmosphere of newspaper, "It can get pretty hilarious and crazy at times, but when work needs to be done, it happens."

In order to maintain the crazy but diligent atmosphere, York-hi had many leadership roles and special positions described by Corcoran as "our Team Editorial Staff followed by the Reporters and Artists and ending with our resident Team Captain, Pete Coffin, and Chief-O-Fun, Tara Mikes." A highlight of the year for the York-hi was always its annual The Turnip issue. The Turnip was a satirical issue, which was based off The Onion. At the end of the year there were two special issues. Concerning these issues, Shannon stated, "Senior Issue specially written and published by the senior staffers, and the Junior Issue, the last issue of the year and the first issue published by the new staff." A read through the Junior Issue allowed students to see the great things to come in the next year from the York-hi. - Danny Milling

Principles for LIFE

Leadership, scholarship, character, and service: these are the words that characterize the National Honor Society. This is an organization that meets twice a month to brainstorm ideas about how to better the community at large.

NHS was led by a student board that "meets every other week to plan the upcoming meetings and work on any service ideas," said President Will Ritter, senior. At the end of this past year, the then-juniors nominated their peers to be on the board. The students then picked five board members from this list, and those with the top votes were named president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, and historian. The five seniors that made up the board were Will Ritter, President, Emily Hogan, Vice President, Daniel Milling, Treasurer, Trace Gaynor, Secretary, and Samuel Gergets, Historian. Each of these board members ran a subdivision of NHS that met together during the monthly meetings to aid in communication and provide a more manageable environment in which to brainstorm ideas. This year the board was hoping to have a higher level of commitment and involvement from all its members and to participate in smaller scale service projects as well as the larger ones.

York's NHS organization was one of the largest, compared to surrounding schools, with approximately three hundred juniors and seniors. "I think students feel proud of being able to make a significant difference in their community and holding themselves to high standards, not to mention being [illegible] of such a prestigious organization," said Ritter. Many students had a very same perspective as their president. "It's good to be involved and good to help the community," said Jennifer Harding, senior.

The National Honor Society was built upon the principle that the students within it live by, and their drive to better the community made this one of York's most prestigious organizations. - Cara Koscher

Serving THE COMMUNITY

NHS participated in many service projects throughout the year. One of the largest projects that NHS members participated in was an Adopt-A-Family project around the holiday season in which members brought in gifts for a family in need. "We ended up with a lot of great, useful gifts for each person," said President Will Ritter, senior. Another of the big service projects, a CD drive, was held at York in the Commons. This was where NHS members brought in their old CD's they no longer used much. The CD's were organized into categories and sold in the Commons, and all of the proceeds were then donated to the Northern Illinois Food Bank. York's National Honor Society was very busy this year bettering not only the Elmhurst community but much of Illinois. They definitely knew how to make a difference in the lives of many. Keep up the great work NHS!

A Noteworthy SOUND

How would it sound to be part of a program that "celebrated" everything its members learned? According to the conductor of orchestra, Mr. Ray Ostwald, the Cadet, Concert, and Symphony Orchestras did just that. The concerts were more than simply proud parents coming to watch their children. They were times when the members of orchestra got to celebrate what they learned by displaying their hard work to the community.

Being a part of a group of people who share common intrests is a great way to expound upon and further those interests. The members of orchestra were able to learn about and produce beautiful music for that reason. Symphony Orchestra member Sophie Pomerhn, senior, said, "I enjoy playing viola in orchestra because music is a great creative outlet through which to express yourself." Orchestra was also a great place to meet new people because it attracted people who had many diverse interests in in addition to their love of music. Mr. Ostwald believed that almost every club and organization in York was represented in orchestra. The principal trumpeter in Symphony Orchestra, Mark Olalde, senior, said, "The music program at York is great because it is the social hub at York, and it allows you to meet all kinds of people."

Most people in orchestra began playing their instruments in fourth grade, which represented their commitment to the instrument. Everyone in orchestra worked hard over the year, and they all greatly improved both their skill and creative passion. - Lizzie Diamond

Bringing the East
A LITTLE CLOSER

Understanding China and its way of life was often difficult due to the complex language, unfamiliar culture, and distant location of the country. Even so, York's Chinese Club made countless efforts to understand and appreciate the country and its culture. From organizing information on China to presenting at International Day to playing Chinese games during meetings, Chinese Club made continuous efforts to recognize the unique characteristics behind the Chinese way of life. Countless participants stated that the combination of great food, interesting facts, and a positive environment were a few of the many attributes that made Chinese Club such a fascinating and happy experience.

When asked about a typical meeting, John Rafferty, junior, stated, "A typical meeting involves playing Chinese games, eating Chinese food, and planning future events, all of which are extremely exciting and enjoyable." In addition to the food and planning associated with Chinese Club, International Day and Homecoming Hall Decorating were examples of the fun activities of which Chinese Club was proud to take part. Having a large number of members, the club came together during Homecoming week to make a great representation of Chinese cultural aspects. "All the members worked together to gather art materials, pieces of art, flags, and other necessary components, as well as lots of great food, making the experience really enjoyable," said Jason Goluszka, junior, regarding the hall decorating.

"One of the misconceptions about Chinese Club is the belief that students need to be enrolled in a Chinese course in order to take part in the club, but that is not necessary," said Tony Ravenna, junior. Whether a student was looking to appreciate the culture of China, take part in fun events associated with the Chinese way of life, or find a fun get together with other students and great food, Chinese Club was a fascinating group open to all students. Brian McGillivray, junior, expressed interest in the club when he stated, "I really enjoy the opportunity that Chinese Club offers York to learn about the culture of China because it isn't really offered anywhere else." Considering the ultimate goals of the club, Joseph Vitali, sophomore, said, "We are trying to organize a trip to Chinatown as well as clothing and other items to represent the club." In addition to the long-term goals of the club, short-term goals were based entirely around appreciating the Chinese culture and having a great time while doing so. - Matthew Byrne

If the thought of becoming a teacher or getting the full teaching experience has ever crossed one's mind, then Invite to Teach is the correct course. During the last two periods of the day, juniors and seniors in Invite to Teach got the chance to go to elementary or middle schools to student teach a class.

Invite to Teach was an all year course, so members in the course got to teach the students from the first days of school to their last days. The Invite to Teach students taught throughout the whole year, so they grew with the students and taught them new things every day. "Invite to Teach has been the best course I have taken in my four years at York. One of my favorite things about the class is that I get to make personal relationships with the students I get to teach," said Alison Davis, senior, about the course.

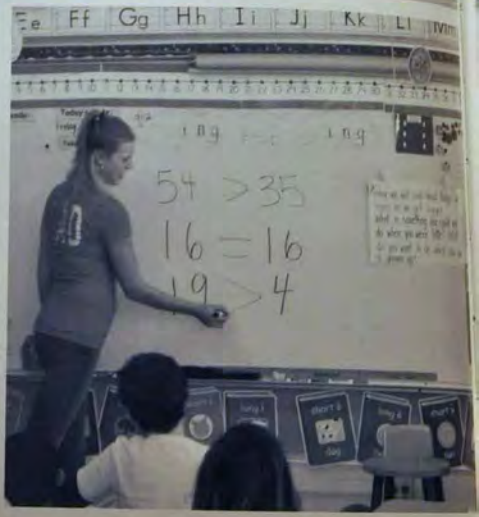

Invite to Teach was a great way to help students make a decision about whether or not they would like to pursue a career in education. "It is a great experience for students to get a feel of what teaching is like and what it takes to be a real teacher," added Emily Hogan, senior. They learned with their students every day. There was always something new going on, and more and more opportunities to become the best teacher possible were constantly presented. All their hardwork really showed that practice does make perfect.

Invite to teach was all about learning how to be a teacher and getting actual teaching experience. Each student in Invite to Teach had memories that they gained from this class and would never forget. Emily Hogan, senior, said one of her most memorable moments was when she helped one of her students learn how to read. "I was helping a boy with his reading, and he had been frustrated earlier in the day because he had trouble reading the book. I took him into the hall and helped him sound out every word together." After she helped him, he beamed with happiness throughout the whole day. Just by that little gesture of helping him, Hogan felt proud to be a part of the Invite to Teach program. Another student in Invite to Teach who gained many memories from this program was Alison Davis, senior. On the last day of teaching before winter break, her class gave her a little surprise. "A student gave me a gift bag, and inside were hand-decorated thank you cards from each student and an Edison Bobcats Sweatshirt," stated Davis. She also added, "I was almost in tears. They were all so excited it was so sweet. Nothing is as sincere as anything a child does." All the experiences they had in the Invite to Teach program made them want to become teachers more and more. Brian Kulaga, senior, said, "Walking into the classroom and seeing all of the students smiling up at you is an awesome feeling." The passion these students had for teaching was unmeasurable. One could tell by all their memories and experiences that these students love teaching with their whole heart.

Healing and Helping

"You get hands-on experience and life skills that you won't get with any other class," said Connor Damm, senior, describing the experience students got when they took the Medical Careers class. This class was one in which seniors took two periods a day to dedicate themselves to learn about the anatomy of the human body and about medical techniques. The students got a chance to have hands-on experience with the patients while they shadowed clinic workers. Kacey Morency, senior, said, "I have learned a lot about the basic diets of patients who are admitted at the hospital."

This class was unique because the students spent a semester in the classroom learning important skills. Then, they spent a semester taking turns shadowing at clinics. The teacher of Medical Careers, Ms. Catie Feigh, recalled, "The class is unique because it is one where the students take what they learned and use it. They are applying knowledge to their experiences."

While the most important lesson the students learned through their love of anatomy was how to help people, they were able to take exciting steps by watching live surgeries.

Although the twenty-five students had great experiences and learned many important lessons, the class also required a lot of demanding work from each student. "The biggest challenge about the class is the memorization and the practical exams," said Damm. The students were required to memorize many terms and study for a final that had a year's worth of information on it.

Overall, the students who participated in the class learned how to help others and gained a general desire and confidence to go into the medical field. As Caitlin Johnson, senior, said, "I would recommend Med Careers to any student who thinks they want to go into the medical field because this class gives you a sense of what you will be dealing with in the future." - Kathryn McGirk

Working the Field

To teach successfully in the medical field, the Medical Careers class had to prepare the students for the many issues and trials of becoming a doctor or nurse. One way to fully prepare the students was to let them shadow and watch live surgeries done at clinics and hospitals. As Caitlin Johnson, senior, recalled, "I shadowed different nurses and took vital signs like heart rate, blood pressure, and temperature and percent oxygen." One of the best ways the students got to learn was through watching surgeries on the human body. Kacey Morency, senior, said, "We were also able to experience a live open heart surgery at the Museum of Science and Industry." The students were able to connect what they learned in the classroom to real life situations, and they got a sense of confidence from a hands-on experience. "Going into Med Careers, I wasn't sure what I wanted to study in college, but after getting to work at the hospital and interact with patients, I now know for sure that I want to go into the medical field," said Kathryn Sadowski, senior.

Magical Melodies

This year in February, the choir group got the amazing opportunity to perform at Disneyland and in Los Angeles. Only the advanced choirs, the Choraliers and the Concert Choir, were able to go on the trip. While in Disneyland, the choir students got to go to a clinic at UCLA to help improve their singing. Along with the the clinic, they also got to perform at Disneyland. The four day trip brought the choir closer together while they got the chance to share their gifts with many different people. The students also got to take a break from singing to enjoy an on-stage version of Dreamgirls. "It's such a cool opportunity being able to go somewhere new and performing," said Kaitlyn McManus, sophomore. The trip was a success, and the students learned a lot to improve their singing and got to have fun at an amazing performance.

In Perfect Harmony

Music is something that constantly surrounds you. Hanging with your colleagues, singing Party in the USA, or singing happy birthday to a friend, everyone has the frightening experience of singing in front of people at some point in their life. The York Choir is made up of talented students who sing in front of an audience with pride.

Each day, the many choir students came to class eager and ready to work. There were so many talented students that they all could not sing together in one class. So, the choir is split into Concert Choir, Cadet Choir, and Choraliers. All the classes started by warming up and doing vocal exercises and scales. They spent their classes rehearsing for concerts and working on different pieces.

While in choir, the students had opportunities to share their voices with others. Concerts were a great chance for the classes to show off what they worked hard at in class. "I love to sing and I love sharing what I love with other people," says Diana Perez, senior. Along with concerts, students competed at competitions like the IMEA All State Choir Concert. But, one of the most exciting things about the choir class was the trips they took to perform in different places. This year, a group of choir students headed to Disneyland in California where they sang and explored a new place.

The students loved the family atmosphere and the different students involved in choir. Although the students worked hard every day, the atmosphere was laid back. Ms. Marianetti, the choir director, said, "It's a place where they can come and take a break from their stressful academic classes." Not only was choir a fun stress reliever, but it was also filled with a diverse group of students. Eva Hughes, sophomore, said, "I love choir because it brings together people from all different types of activities, and we all are brought together by singing." - Abby White

The Art Department Bubble

Every year, there was a portion of the student body that devoted its time and energy to the fine arts department. The main objective of the department was to help every student find his or her own artistic voice. It did not matter how skilled the students were as long as they tried their best and felt comfortable in their classes.

There was a wide variety of media from which all the students could choose. The courses offered included drawing, painting, digital and traditional photography, sculpture, ceramics, jewelry, digital design, and art history. They ranged from beginning to Advanced Placement courses. In the beginning classes, students learned the basics of the media to prepare them for more advanced classes.

The Advanced Placement courses were designed for students who wished to major in the arts when they moved on to college. This year a total of eleven students was selected to be a part of the course. The class size was very small, but it allowed Ms. Amanda Campbell, AP Arts teacher, to help every student when needed. It also had a wide variety of media selected by students to be studied and perfected. Anne Humi, senior, a member of the Advanced Placement program, stated that her art classes "were a great place to let your mind wander and relax during the day."

The diverse art classes at York were a way for students to test themselves and try new things in a calm environment. It was stressed that any student was welcomed to the classes offered in the art department. Students took advantage of the art courses that were offered. Ms. Campbell explained, "York is an excellent school that is privileged to have such great facilities." Many students even stopped by their art rooms during lunch and study halls for a tranquil place to rewind from their frantic day. - Amanda Rafter

YTV "Those have been your YTV daily announcements."

"Good morning York High School. These are your YTV daily announcements." YTV was a television show run by the students which aired every day at the beginning of second period. "Students sign up for a year full of hard work and dedication to the production of each broadcast put on," said Ms. Carly Croll, one of the YTV teachers. The students spent their class period planning, writing, and filming each production. Each class period rotates on and off the announcements. While one class ran the announcements, the other class worked on the Friday feature; both classes worked on a portfolio which included a production lasting more than three minutes that was due at the end of each semester. The Friday features were new this year at York. Friday features ran every other Friday and included clips that were created by each student, relating to a certain theme upon which the group agreed. A lot of work went on behind the scenes of each broadcast.

A typical day in the class began with all the students meeting at the anchor desk for the distribution of roles and discussion of what could be done better for the day's announcements. Then, each student broke off into his or her specific role. "The roles each student is divided into include the anchors, floor director, main director, switcher, sound, background, teleprompter, and the editor," said Cara Koscher, senior. As the anchors were practicing their lines, the floor director turned on all cameras and lights, and the switcher set up each shot and made sure each anchor was positioned just right. As this was going on, the main director worked with the anchors and kept the communication flow from the front of the studio to the back. The background and teleprompter set up their computers to get ready for a couple of run throughs before the show aired, and the editor made any titles necessary for the day and also makes the pre-broadcasts. After all the students were done with preparations before recording, a run through took place to help practice beforehand to deter anyone from freezing up when the cameras began rolling. This was the time to make any last minute changes. "Once everyone feels semi-confident, the camera starts rolling, and the announcements are on," said Josh Elmore, senior. After the filming was done, it was all up to the student editor who took the film and cut it to make the shots run smoothly together. Before the students knew it, the bell rang, and studio went black. - Brittany Biggs

Behind THE SCENES

The most important piece of memorabilia for every high school student is the yearbook. Not only does the yearbook detail the multitude of events occurring throughout the school year, but it also provides students with a great representation of their high school's athletics, organizations, and students. York's yearbook staff worked diligently every day to produce the yearbook, and although working hard was a requirement, fun was also involved. Co-editor-in-chief, Mark Nosek, senior, described being a member of the yearbook staff as "hilarious, enjoyable, entertaining, and fulfilling."

Being assigned multiple spreads throughout the year as well as plenty of side work, members always had something on which to work. Despite the fact that there was a definite time for work, the yearbook staff members always managed to have a great time. Considering the extent to which the members enjoy being a part of the staff, Daniel Milling, senior, felt "Yearbook is a great way to meet and interact with a variety of students and helps you learn about all of the different aspects of York that make it a great school."

Due to the fact that there were many deadlines throughout the school year that were often close together, meeting these deadlines was ultimately rewarded with something nice. Pizza parties, for example, were among the diverse rewards the students received because of hard-work and effective time management. Additionally, games, such as Secret Santa, and staff-organized parties were more examples of various events in which the students took part to make yearbook a truly fantastic experience. - Matt Byrne

What is your weirdest habit?

"I thank my DVR after it finishes recording something." Connor Damm, senior

"I drink milk after every single thing I eat." Alexandra Sieber, sophomore

"When I sit around people while writing something, I have to copy how they hold their pen or pencil." Benjamin Koval, freshman

"I'm meticulous with my paper. It must be undented." Paige Piotter, junior

What 2000s trend do you think your children will make fun of?

"Mirror pictures becasue they never made any sense. You're already looking at yourself in a mirror, why do you need a picture too?" Caitlin McManus, sophomore

"Avid Facebook users. My kids will look back and think, 'Wow they needed lives.'" Michael Regan, freshman

"Layers becasue they are so unnecessary and they just look ridiculous." Biatriz Rivera, junior

"Uggs because they are ugg-ly and everybody wears them with everything!" Kyle Ann Sebastian, senior

"Driving with the bass up and the seat low because that's the way I like to roll." Mr. Ken Dowdy

"Sitting outside of Starbucks drinking a latte because I can't go a day without caffeine." Ms. Rachael Kania

"Hiding in the Archive Room at the library. But don't tell anybody that." Mr. Andy Bouque

"They'd find me playing my piccolo at a band rehearsal." Ms. Linda Lahti

If you could break any Guinness world record, what would it be?

"The longest fight with a bear, because I've always wanted to fight one and I'll know I'll win." Jonathan MacKenzie, junior

"The Longest Eye Lashes, so people would be jealous and it would conserve energy because our eye lashes would make air." Michael Pitlock and Gabriela Williams, sophomores

"The most flip-flops in a row because that would be awesome!" Michelle Stefani, junior

"Longest jumping on a pogo stick because that would be a really fun record to break." Kyle Babbe, senior

In Loving Memory of Cody Busch, Jordan King, and Ms. Dee MacKenzie

We Remember Them

At the rising of the sun and at its going down
We remember them.
At the blowing of the wind and in the chill of winter
We remember them.
At the opening of the buds and in the rebirth of spring
We remember them.
At the blueness of the skies and in the warmth of summer
We remember them.
At the rustling of the leaves and in the beauty of autumn
We remember them.
At the beginning of the year and when it ends
We remember them.
As long as we live, they too will live, for they are now a part of us as
We remember them.
When we are weary and in need of strength
We remember them.
When we are lost and sick at heart
We remember them.
When we have joy we crave to share
We remember them.
When we have decisions that are difficult to make
We remember them.
When we have achievements that are based on theirs
We remember them.
So long as we live, they too shall live, for they are now a part of us as
We remember them.

Thank You!

Abby White - Thanks for being one of the few to understand Danny's ridiculous stories and Harry Potter references. Your awesome work was greatly appreciated!

Amanda Rafter - Thank you so much for all your hard work. We couldn't have made the book without your amazing photography skills!

Brittany Biggs - Thanks for brightening our days with your dancing and always having a smile on your face. And for telling me what to wear.

Cara Koscher - Thank you for providing the Yearbook Lab with the best Christmas decorations it's ever seen! Your giant snowflake will live on in our hearts forever.

Danny Milling - Ironically, we have no comment.

Jill Gentile - Thank you for always being willing to volunteer for extra work whenever we needed you. It was greatly appreciated!

Kathryn McGirk - Thank you for all your great spreads and hard work. We also enjoyed all the great Office references.

Kelly McHugh - Thanks for being the staff MVP. And thank you for hosting the most successful Waffle Party ever!

Lauren Zomparelli - Thank you for your tireless work this year. You were an awesome editor that will be greatly missed!

Lizzie Diamond - Thanks for the great enthusiasm you brought to 8th period every day. You were a great addition to the staff!

Mansi Parikh - Thanks for demonstrating to all of us your expertise at dancing the Cupid Shuffle. We'll miss all your great stories.

Mary Kate Rohn - Thank you for all your hard work as an editor this year. We all appreciated your good spirits regardless of the situation.

Masood Haque - Thank you for that ridiculous laugh of yours. Also, thanks for providing us with music from your iPod. Luckily, you got it out of the cabinet...

Matt Byrne - Thank you for amusing us all with your ridiculous photoshopping. Masood's distorted picture is, unfortunately, burned in our memories forever.

Melissa Brunke - Thanks for being the most cheerful person we've ever met. And for teaching us some sweet cheerleading moves.

Micaella Cosentino - Thank you for getting people under control when they got too rowdy and for putting out great spreads!

Mike Stotzer - That poor teddy bear thanks you for graduating so you'll never be able to mess with it again. Also, you were a great editor!

Shannon Kwit - Thanks for all the hard work you put in to make this book great. We really appreciated you coming in on weekends and all the other extra time you put in!

Ms. P - Thank you for putting up with our craziness the whole year. We really appreciate all the effort you put in every day, including weekends and lunch periods, in order to make the book as great as possible.

- Mack & Mack

MANY JOURNEYS...
ONE GOAL
YDukes

Although another year may have come to an end, the many journeys continue. Those formerly timid freshmen have now begun their respective journeys in high school and will have the opportunity to expand their horizons as they embark upon new experiences. The sophomores are about to begin the incredibly stressful period that is junior year. Although it will be difficult, the stress will ultimately benefit the students as they continue on their journey towards excellence. The juniors have completed the most difficult year, yet they are about to begin the next steps of their next great journey. The seniors, on the other hand, have completed their journey through high school and are ready to move on to the next stage of their life. However, their experiences at York will continue to influence and encourage them into their future. But no matter what grade you're in, we are all in the midst of a similar journey. We are all trying to navigate a life filled with obstacles, whether they be athletic competitions, seemingly impossible homework assignments, endless extracurriculars, or the stress associated with the upcoming dance. Although we may take different paths, we are all working towards the same goal of excellence. So keep trudging along York. No matter what difficulties lie in the way, keep on the journey to the one goal of excellence.
