Through the years, MARVEL comics has continued to captivate audiences with its depictions of the heroic battles of good versus evil. As children we would eagerly flip through the pages, enchanted while watching our favorite heroes save the day. Like the comics which now sit on our shelves gathering dust, our views on the heroes we once read about have faded into the background of our hectic lives. It's time to revisit these childhood adventures, however, as high school presents the challenge of discovering the superhero in all of us.

The strength we saw in our heroes as children is reflected in our commitment and dedication to our academic and extracurricular endeavors. It is the reason why we rise before the sun for morning practice, why we stay awake to finish art projects and essays after the rest of the town has gone to sleep. It is because of this inner strength that we are able to rise up to the occasion, whether it's sinking the winning basket, finding the courage to ask a question, or comforting a friend.

We also come to realize that although we may fall short of our goals, there is beauty in the attempt. We embrace our failures as lessons to be learned, using them as motivation to continue on and face the next obstacle.

We join together to fight against issues that plague our world. By volunteering at the Northern Illinois Food Bank, plastering posters throughout the school, holding food drives, and collecting gently used shoes and clothing, we set out to eliminate hunger and poverty. We bring awareness to the struggle for human rights and an end to violence through V-Day, Relay for Life, and the Day of Silence. Our combined efforts allow us to make a positive impact on the world around us.

Just as our eight-year-old selves raced into school, we should capture that same child-like curiosity and become excited at the prospect of learning. With our vast abilities, we have the opportunity to create our own possibilities and change the world. We no longer need to search the pages of comic books for our heroes. Now, we are our own heroes. We are something to MARVEL at.

TOUR

Here's to the NIGHT

To all junior and senior students, Prom lasts for only one night. It is a night filled with dancing, eating, and spending the evening in Chicago. But for the Prom Committee, preparations for prom last all year long.

The committee was composed of the junior class of Student Council, and they, along with advisor Ms. Denien Larson, worked on fundraisers and preparations throughout the year. Rachael Vana, prom chair and senior, said, "I am so excited to see it all come together because it took so long to plan." The prom committee met every other week starting the very first week of school. They made all decisions concerning food, location, raising money, and the theme. Prom cost was very expensive, so the prom committee did as much fundraising as they could to offset the price. Along with fundraisers that the students put together, like candy sales and playing cards, the PTSA donated $4,000 which helped pay for the buses and part of post-prom. Larson explained why she took on the position as Prom advisor and why all the hard work paid off: "I like working with all the juniors and it is just so fun to go to prom!"

After all that preparation from student concil, the students met at school, and took buses to downtown Chicago with all their friends. They arrived at the Crystal Gardens at Navy Pier, where prom was hosted. The students ate and laughed with friends, then they got to dance for the rest of the night. Everyone had fun, and then most of the students headed over to post-prom, hosted on the Odyssey, and got to continue the night of being with their friends and dancing. "Post prom is fun because you can go on the top deck, and look at the skyline," Christianna Ianucci, graduate, said of her favorite part about post prom. The whole night took a long time to put together, and the work paid off making prom a memorable night. - Abby White

THE PLACES YOU'LL GO!

"A great man is one sentence. What is your sentence going to be?" These were the words left to the senior class of 2010 by School Board member Mr. David Carlquist as they sat in the fieldhouse on graduation day. The future lay ahead of them, the past four years a mere memory. Despite the uncertainty of what the next chapter of their lives would bring, anticipation of the endless possibilities filled their minds. Spencer Martens, graduate, said, "I was ready to get out of there and start my new life."

Alexis Rosado, Mary Alex Japczyk, Erik Westerberg, and Mary Ann Kissinger gave speeches about how York challenged them not only academically, but also socially and emotionally. They wished their fellow classmates the best of luck in future endeavors, and ensured them that they will each carry a part of York with them no matter where they go. Japczyk captured the finality of it all when said, "Today we take one last step as a class." The 2010 senior class was one for the books. Complete with star athletes, and highly talented singers, musicians, actors, filmmakers, and writers, it was clear that no student ran from any challenge. In addition to getting in touch with their creative side, they also had one hundred and forty eight Illinois State Scholars, the highest number in York history. The colleges that the students were accepted into exemplified their academic achievements. Martens said, "We had a ton of kids get into really good schools. That's a direct reflection of the students' work ethic."

As the students left the hallowed halls of York for the last time, there were no regrets. Trace Gaynor, graduate, said, "I could not have asked for a better high school experience. I'm so glad that I got involved in the school, and took advantage of every opportunity." It's true that the class of 2010 left some big shoes to fill. However, stepping up and trying something new is half the battle. Kelly Johnson, graduate, said, "Finding something you get excited about, whether it be a sport or a club, will... truly make your high school experience."

FUN in the Sun

School's out, and everyone has plans for the summer. Every minute of summer was packed with things to do. Some people spent time relaxing after a long year of school, but many students got amazing opportunities to travel and help others.

Many people were lucky to be able to travel to fun places this summer. A group of students went to Italy and visited many cities throughout the country, like Venice, Florence, Rome, Capri and many more. The students went sight-seeing and were able to visit famous places like the Vatican and famous monuments. Monica Scinto, senior, said, "The best part was to have freedom and just be able to walk around Rome by ourselves." While these students were having fun in Italy, another group of students went to Spain. While they were traveling throughout Madrid, they got to see bullfighting, different historical monuments, and Christopher Columbus's grave. The students were able to go shopping and experience different culture and food. Rebecca Medina, senior, said, "The best part was spending ten days with great people getting to experience an absolutely beautiful country."

While many students got to travel for fun, others spent time in different places volunteering for others. Rachael White went to Costa Rica and helped conserve turtles. "Putting yourself out of your comfort zone allowed opportunity to meet lots of new people, and it made the trip really worth while," said White. Other students got to go on mission trips. Grace Dvorak, junior, went to help work crew for her church. "There's noth more amazing than to work together to others," said Dvorak. Towards the end of summer, another group of students from went to Birmingham, Alabama to help b up houses. "I like doing construction w because it feels really rewarding finishing the project for someone else," said Andy Gotsch, senior. Whether traveling, helping others, or just relaxing, there were many oppourtunities to make this summer gr

COMING TOGETHER
FOR A GOOD CAUSE

Every year students flock the field ...ose to come together for a great cause ...ol have fun. This event is the annual ...dent Relay for Life. The event started ...t with students signing themselves and ...eir friends up to join teams in the hopes ...f raising money for the Relay for Life and ...ncer awareness in the community. The ...ent was lead by mostly seniors and other ...volved students.

The relay was a lot of work but ...so a lot of fun for everyone involved, as ...athryn Bennett, graduate, recalled, "the ...st thing about relay is the night of the ...tual event because after you've worked hard to fund raise on your own and with your team you can reap the benefits by having a big sleepover with all your friends."

Relay also left a strong impression on every student because it allowed them to commemorate those who have passed or suffered from various kinds of cancer. "Relay has such a strong effect because it's not only a way to remember those we've lost to cancer, it's also a way to fight back against cancer and help those who are struggling with it now. This is especially true with students because every year there's a couple kids who are diagnosed with cancer and I think that has a strong impact on their peers because it becomes more of a reality that cancer can happen to anyone," added Bennett.

The relay teams were made up by any student group who wanted to be involved. Many York teams and clubs created Relay groups with friends and family to support them. 42nd Street
A "Backstage" Musical

This year's spring musical was full of Broadway magic, glitter, costumes and don't forget the kick lines. 42nd Street is about a young Broadway hopeful who moves from a small town in Pennsylvania to the Big Apple. The young girl Peggy Sawyer, played by Kelly Carlquist, graduate, becomes friends with a few of the Broadway girls, but runs into trouble with the prima donna Dorothy Brock who is past her prime, played by Julie Peterson and Emily Spokas, graduates. When Dorothy breaks her ankle the chorus kids assure Julian Marsh the head producer of the show, played by Brian Kulaga, graduate, that Peggy is perfect for the role and can dance circles around Dorothy. Of course no musical would be complete without some kind of romance. Not to disappoint, Julian falls for Peggy, but in the end once Peggy is a Broadway star she leaves Julian standing alone on the opening night to go to the chorus party.

This musical is one of the first of its kind to be put on here at York, with all of the heavy choreography and tap numbers that could put the Rockettes out of business. "A lot of people would compare the plot of this show to the movie 'All About Eve'," said Trace Gaynor, graduate. Most of this year's cast included long-time drama members like Kelly Carlquist, Trevor Cardeu, Brian Kulaga, Julie Peterson, Emily Spokas, Cassie Pacelli, and Megan McManus, all graduates.

"The opening number is my favorite part; it is very sharp," said Gaynor. The musical took place April 29 through May 2, and for most of the cast it was their last production at York. "It definitely was a different type of musical, it stepped out of the box for productions that have been put on at York in the past," said Diana Perez, graduate.

Choreography played one of the biggest roles in 42nd Street. Choreography work started after casting with a two week class during the winter and specialized in teaching the basics of tap. Once regular rehearsals began, the expectation was that every cast member memorized their entire song before learning the specific choreography for that particular song. Also, during the Summer Theatre Conservatory of 2009 a series of rehearsals focused on tao. The choreography came together quickly for the spring musical. "Everyone helped each other out . . . learning from each other and working together, making new friends along the way," said Perez.

LIKE HOME-COMING

Every school year about a month into classes, students begin to hear a common word throughout the halls- Homecoming. The homecoming week is a much anticipated way to begin the year. It gives all students a chance to relax and have some fun with peers at the football game, then clean up and go to the main event, the dance. This year's dance theme was Cirque du Soleil and the commons was decorated in vibrant colors and lots of glitter. As students came into the dance and marveled at the decorations they began to hear the steady beat of music coming from the much loved DJ from Boom! Entertainment. They then flocked to the dance floor to enjoy their night.

Homecoming is planned by student council and as council planner, Karen Martinez, senior, said, "we begin planning in the summer and when we come into the year we vote on ideas and this year we really wanted something different and unique." Unique is what they achieved. The school showed much enthusiasm for the dance and they had an all time record for the number of tickets sold and amount of money raised. Martinez also added "I think a lot of people were excited for Boom! coming back and they all really want to be there." With this strong tradition there was strong yearning to be involved.

As one of the more anticipated events of the school year, homecoming had a high standard from York students. This year's dance exceeded its standards including Boom! Entertainment and the hard work from the student council staff to make the dance memorable. - Kathryn McGirk

SCREAM!

Stepping over the threshold of the back entrance of the school Monday morning she was skeptical, like many other students about the turnout of spirited students, like herself. As she walked farther south down the first-floor hallway to make her journey to her locker she felt comforted by sights of slippers and robes filling the hallways. All fears of being singled out in the hallways due to her ridiculous appearance disappeared, and she knew her fellow student body was also willing to put themselves out there for one week out of the school year to represent the school. Homecoming. The week when one not only accepts, but actually embraces every student covered in body paint and wearing footie pajamas.

This year's spirit days included pajama day, class color day, circus day, "Would you still be my friend if I wore this?" day, and green and white day. Many things about this week separated it from the others. "It was a lot harder to concentrate," said Theodore Harrold, freshman. It was also a week when "no one made fun of freshmen," according to Jeffrey Hain, freshman. The atmosphere at school not only changed but the attitudes at lunch and sporting events did as well. The Student Council played a major role in building up the students' anticipation for the events of the week. This year's activities during Homecoming week included a pie eating contest at lunch, a school dance off, as well as junior-senior battle of Simon says with Mr. Terry Clarke as Simon.

At the Homecoming football game everyone cheered on their fellow students. "The excitement of the Homecoming Game is something that pumps me up all week," said Senior, Dana D'Onofrio. At the dance students and celebrated, whatever the outcome, dressed in their best. It was the extreme differences of the week that brought everyone together as a student body. Students expressing who they were and they all went through the same excitement and the same lack of concentration. Since they all knew they were going through it together, they accepted each other, because it was the one week where differences truly made everyone the same.- Jill Gentile

WE BLEED GREEN AND WHITE

When you step through the doors of the Green and White Gym for the pep-rally, when you pass through the entrance of the stadium for the football game, when you pass through the hallways on your way to class, you see the school spirit and support from students all around. Everywhere you go, waves of green and white. Cheering, shouting, screaming, laughing fans. Their spirit joins together to support the school they love.

Entering the Green and White Gym for the Pep-Rally, the feeling of excitement and power of the student body rippling throughout the gym was evident. The freshmen, new to all the excitement and school spirit, looked all around the gym, searching for familiar faces and wondering what was going to happen next. The sophomores, having already been through one Pep-Rally, were ready for their second and were excited for the show. The juniors were waiting for the show to start and to shout out their school spirit, hoping to beat out the roar of the seniors. As expected, the seniors totally stomped out the weaker shouts of all the underclassmen with their hard-trained screams and shouts of school spirit.

The year was full of amazing achievements and plenty of changes in school life. From a homecoming win to an increasingly supportive student body, people felt the spirit going around. Erik Hoaglund, junior, said," The blackout at the Homecoming football game was one of the coolest things I've ever been a part of." But there was more than just greater spirit going around the school. According to Anil Keeramkary, senior, "York has become so much more diverse. [There are] so many new types of people and groups you would think this was a college as opposed to high school." Out of York's growing diversity emerged a sea of school spirit. BIG CITY LIGHTS

Throughout the hallways of York the girls nervously thought of ideas on how to ask their date to the turnabout dance. The turnabout dance goes against all traditions of the boys asking girls to escort them to a dance. This particular dance puts pressure on the girls to step up and ask the boys themselves, along with asking they also pay for the boys' tickets and dinner if they decide to go out. Lucy Lapalermo, senior, told of the unique idea she had to ask her date. "The way I asked my boyfriend was by writing a note saying 'you would melt my heart if you went to turnabout with me' and put it in the bottom of a heart shaped pan, then filled the pan with water and froze it so he had to wait until the ice melted to see the message inside." The next step was to wait until the night came to set all the plans into motion.

As the students filed into the commons their excitement overcome them as they walked through the hallways greeting friends and faculty. They walked down the hallway from the gymnasium lobby, as they looked around the floor was covered with a green catwalk scene and the walls covered entirely with the silhouette of the Chicago skyline. "The feeling the decorations created with the city line was very welcoming" said Allison Price, senior, about the ambiance. Girls' dresses of all lengths and colors surrounded the dance floor like a paint palette. Beading and chiffon floated around while the boys' outfits proved that they cleaned up well, to look like young m with all the manners that went with the part. Girls in dressed in a variety of color and patterns floated around the dance flo while the boys dressed with button up shi complimented by just the right tie joined them for the night they had been waiting for. ARABIAN NIGHTS
THE EXPERIENCE

Arabian Nights isn't just part of the ever popular Aladdin movies. It was also the play chosen by York drama for the fall production. Arabian Nights marked a break from the traditional style of production done at York, where the audience was arrayed throughout the house. Mr. John Forsythe and Ms. Rebecca Marianetti, directors of York drama, decided to wall off all of the auditorium seats and instead spread the seats around the outer edge of the stage. This brought the audience into the play, as they were within a few feet of the actors for much of the play.

This also meant the show they picked needed to have a variety of interesting and expressive characters, as the littlest emotion was seen by the audience. Arabian Nights fulfilled this extremely well, ranging from serious characters, such as the king Shahrya, portrayed by Michael Dreger, junior, to humorous characters such as the Persian, played by Eric Helm, sophomore, and everything in between.

With the audience this close the set also had to be built to much greater detail, as the old rule "If you can't see it at 40 feet, it doesn't matter" no longer applied. The audience was as close to the set as they could get, with some people even sitting on extra pieces. "I thought it was cool sitting on stage. I had one of the pillow seats and someone dropped water on me and threw a hat at me. It made me feel like I was in the show," said Erik Nerison, senior, after seeing the show. So the set was built to create the experience of not only seeing the show, but being in the middle-eastern locations where the show took place. "Since the audience was on stage we wanted to create a set that was more personal than the standard set. The sand, along with the stage being walled off, gave the audience the feel that they were in the Arabian desert, not an auditorium" said Mr. Adam Liston, the Technical Director. About 2,500 pounds of sand were spread across the stage, covering the entire acting area and giving the sense of being in the desert, watching the actors moving and kicking up sand.

Countless hours of work were put in by the actors, crew and directors to create a show where the audience wasn't just there to watch, but felt as if they were part of the show, and those hours paid off with a truly unique show. - Blake Harms

THE SNOWBALL EFFECT

Every year Operation Snowball brings in a wide range of students of all different interests and ages. Upon arrival to York, the first timers and freshmen drop their suitcases and look around nervously for an acquaintance they have still maintained from years back. Once introduced to their small groups, an awkward "Hi" is a typical greeting which begins the Snowball effect that will grow into a great relationship by the end of the weekend.

For the past three years Operation Snowball has been held at Camp Wonderland in Wisconsin. There, students participate in a variety of team-building games and activities with small groups and large groups. Ride That Pony is without doubt "Snowball's trademark game" said Erin Marten, graduate. Ride that pony is a dancing game that causes everyone to step outside their comfort zones. It consists of everyone forming a circle, while several others dance around the interior of the circle to a chant. When the chant restarts, anyone in the middle trades positions with someone on the outside, and the process restarts. "If you have never experienced the energy of Ride That Pony, you are missing out on a truly amazing time," said Kelsey Andersen, graduate.

The Snowball leaders are undoubtedly the most important aspect of Snowball. "As a Snowball leader, we spend a good portion of the year planning the weekend," said Andersen. The leaders set the overall warm mood of Snowball from day one by being outgoing and entertaining. The outcome of the weekend really rests upon how the leaders act during Snowball. Last year's Snowball theme was The Olympic Games. Each team was given a theme representing a certain event in the Olympics. The weekend was filled with classic tag and gym games that would eventually spark the weekend long debate of which team was the best.

In addition to games, speakers were also part of the weekend which informed students of the benefits of always using good judgment and the dangers of drinking and driving. Two of the speakers were parents who previously lost their son or daughter in a car crash that was a result of drunk driving. Other speakers were also very interactive and inspirationsl as they talked about doing your best every day.

At the end of the weekend, everyone's met their goal of creating new friendships and having a great time, but they also learned valuable lessons. "Snowball is all about making good decisions and influencing others to make good decisions as well. The program is made to teach anyone how to take care of themselves both mentally and physically," said Andersen. – Michael Stotzer

GET ROWDY

BUT KEEP IT CLASSY

One Goal, final four, along with winning the metro west and scholastic cup. Winning is the goal of most sports teams, however York Hockey meant business. With a record setting 49 players trying out for varsity, this team had the potential for greatness. "Varsity is fantastic, the speed of the game is a lot faster and the competition is a lot harder," said Bradley Johnson, senior. Many new players meant a fresh start for Coach Mr. Phil Gabrielsen. "A team that has camaraderie and that can work together as a unit is a team that can win it all," said Gabrielsen. "We have a fantastic group of young men who work well together as a group and work hard to represent the school positively."

The team had grueling practices five nights a week, and games once or twice a week. The members of the York hockey team spent a lot of time together. "This team has a lot of love and respect for each other" said Nicholas Albergo, captain and senior. This team went above and beyond by getting together in their spare time for pasta parties every Friday before games or to just play roller hockey if the weather was nice. All of this bonding led to a close-knit team that went all out in their attempt at excellence. With a strong run towards the playoffs, the team finished the season respectably.

Another tradition that the boys developed was the cheer they said at the end of each practice as a time for them to come together and show their unity. "It's pretty basic, just a '1,2,3, Dukes' for the most part. Every once and a while we'll say something different though," said Johnson.

The fans loved everyth... that this team did. "We love the fans, the... make everything interesting. We have the... best fan base around," said Albergo. Eve... game, the fans would pack the place. "It'... fun to go to the games because it gets so... crazy. The fans get pretty rowdy too," said... Reed Moskal, senior, a frequent attender... hockey games. The fans were sure to get a... experience at every game. The celebration... of breast cancer survivors was a night to... remembered in a diferent way. Who Else Can Make
LITTLE BIRDIES FLY

Badminton is more than just a way for girls at York to stay active. Just like any other sport, lessons are learned by playing the game. Kelsey Andersen, graduate, said, "Badminton has taught me self-discipline. To be a good badminton player, you have to put energy into not only your game, but at practice every day." On the team, practice was not taken lightly. For each girl this was a chance to improve their game and physique for the season.

Warm-ups were an average of thirty minutes, with the girls getting into shape through lunges, crunches, sprints, and push-ups. Drills to improve their footwork were also practiced. Andersen remarked, "I just have to remember that the coaches make us sweat for our own good. If we don't try, we get nothing out of it." The girls would then break off by team and practice game strategies and techniques. Clears, drops, drives, and smashes are some of the many tactics used during match play.

Game situations were run through as well. Jennifer Josephs, graduate, said, "We usually end practice with live play doubles or singles." By going through the motions in practice, the Badminton Team was ready to take on the competition.

There were high hopes for the team beyond season. Elizabeth Trumbull, graduate, said, "We beat DGN for the first time in eight years. We will definitely have six state qualifiers." - Micaella Cosentino & Joachim Canete

CONSISTENCY MAKES THE VICTORY

The baseball team experienced a lot of change this year, but that change also helped them finish the season strong with eight straight wins before their last game. After the 2-2 start to the year, the team realized being talented did not lead to automatic victory.

The team beneffitted from new head coach Mr. Dave Kalal's leadership. Before coaching here, Kalal taught and coached at Downers Grove South High School. Kyle Leone, graduate, said about the coach, "He did a very good job getting to know the team, he did very good with what he had."

The team benefitted from strong players as well. The Elmhurst Press named Joseph Boozell, senior, and Robert Fisher, graduate, as East DuPage All-Area Team Honorable Mentions. There were other notable accomplishments as well. On April 13th Matthew Pisani, graduate, pitched a perfect game against Hinsdale Central. "It's pretty big," Kalal said of the win. "I'm excited." Two victories over Hinsdale Central put the team in a good position for upcoming conference games. "Matt Pisani's Perfect game was definitely the highlight of the season" said Leone. Raymond Yong, graduate, led the team in batting average, hits, doubles, walks, on-base percentage as well as slugging percentage.

made of steel

Only a year removed from three straight top three finishes in State that included a State title, the Boys' Gymnastics Team was not about to let their momentum or renown slip away. The repeated drama of a team rebounding from the loss of its senior talent and leaders reared its head once again, yet the team ignored these and all setbacks with confidence. Mr. Larry Ohannes, the second year head coach, was full of pride in his program when he said, "Kids know the tradition and come in and are honored to be part of the tradition." Timothy Drahokapil, graduate, captain, added, "Losing the seniors is tough to take, but gets everybody in the mentality that they need to step up." With a history of success and a future of possibility, the team chalked up for a season of greatness.

Led by Drahokapil, Caleb Strejc, and Nicholas Criel, seniors, who were the captains, the team vaulted into another season full of top notch competition.

Ohannes and the rest of the team were especially excited by the increased participation and interest in gymnastics. "We have a lot of things the program hasn't had in a long time. Participation is up, and people who didn't make other sports are joining the team and learning a lot." Strejc said that the new memb... was exciting, and it was "cool to see t... program growing." JUST LAX-ING

WITH MY BROS

One of the fastest growing sports in the country is Lacrosse, and York's program is no exception. Each year the York men's Lacrosse team gets stronger and stronger, which is good because they have big goals. When asked what the team's goal was, Steven Skawski, graduate, stated, "Win a state championship.'

In order to achieve their goal the team worked hard. Every day they practiced at Beren's Park, where they also played some of their games. Other home games were played at Redmon Field. Tough competitions included the games where the York Dukes faced off against Lyons Township and St. Ignatious. However with a strong senior class, the team hoped to crush the competition. Top players included John Grubbs, Joshua Elmore, Jason Kuzara, Brice Barratt, Jack Deiters, and Thomas Pankau, graduates. Every player worked hard on and off the field to prepare for the games. By working off their strengths, and improving their weakness, York's Lacrosse team created a stir in the world of high school lacrosse.

The Lacrosse team however was not "all work and no play." The team really had a strong bond. Jeremy Fisher-Haase, graduate, also commented, "My favorite part of the team is the great team chemistry. Playing Lacrosse is always fun with this great team." The York Lacrosse team was young, but it was already laying the foundations to have a strong tradition. Michael Brunke, graduate, suggested, "I encourage everyone to give Lacrosse a try, because it is such a fun sport to pick up and play." – Daniel Milling & Ellen Goese

GOING
Two Years Strong

This past season has been only the second season York had a girl's lacrosse team, but if anyone went and watched these Dukes compete, it would seem like they had been around for decades. The girls this season were absolutely incredible, working hard to prove themselves as a team and doing a fantastic job at it. "The kids we have are excellent.... overall good kids," said Mr. Ryan Walz, head coach.

They are fifty-five girls this year, and they had two teams set up, a Frosh/Soph team called a JV 2, and a Junior Varsity called JV 1. The girls had exhausting practices every day focusing on building fundamentals and basic skills like cradling, throwing, stick control, and shooting the ball. Then they moved on to mastering plays and strategies that they used to crush their opposition.

All their work paid off because this year they won the Oak Park River Forest Tournament. They faced incredibly tough competition such as Oak Park River Forest, Evanston, and Lyons Township. They won seven to six against Stevenson in the championship game with a game winning shot made by Haley Supina, junior, which was described as "the best shot on the team" by Kathryn McGirk, junior. When asked about the season and all the hard work that the team put in, Lauren Mola, senior, said, "It's really rewarding to see all of our hard work pay off throughout the season."

Next year the team will officially be added to the York roster of spring sports instead of being a club sport which will be a wonderful addition to our current list. There are only good things for the future of the Lady Dukes Lacrosse. - Masood Haque & Blake Harms

She Shoots, SHE SCORES!

Briana Scurry, starting goal keeper for the U.S. women's national soccer team once said, "A champion is someone who does not settle for that day's practice, that day's competition, that day's performance. They are always striving to be better. They don't live in the past." The 2010 Girls' Soccer team did just that as they embarked on a new season with a 9-2 score and a 3-0 score in the conference. The team had high hopes for completing the season with a great record and eventually making it to the state playoffs. Katherine Gratzianna, captain and graduate, said, "I am always pushing myself to do better so that hopefully it rubs off on the players next to me and push them as well. If our progress continues, I believe we will be able to do really well in Conference and hopefully make it to state."

The team faced many challenges, including their grueling practices. The girls practiced every day except for Sundays for two to two and a half hours before or after school. The girls warmed up for ten minutes and then practiced various drills based on what Ms. Rachael Sheperd, coach, believed the team needed to improve before their games. Jillian Ernst, graduate, said, "The best part of practice is when we have high intensity and work really hard. I feel that this is what makes us play well in games. It's really fun to watch when we are really having a good practice and working to achieve all of our expectations." The team had various drills, but the favorite one was called "Birdie in a Perch" in which the coach yelled out a phrase and the team has to pose as the phrase she calls out. It serves as a drill to increase team bonding and to pump up the team before long practices.

A very important aspect of the team that contributed to much of its success was the team's closeness and respect for one another. Megan LeDonne, senior, said, "We always try to stay positive with each other and give each other good directions with what our next move should be." Communication along with respect has helped the team score goals and increase the team's morale. Gratzianna also added, "We are all like a family through the thick and thin we have very strong relationships with everyone that is on the team."

The team ended their successful season on a high note by advancing to regional finals.

GIRLS in Spikes

"Strike three you're out!" This phrase became quite common to pitchers Tessa Kroll, Jordan Woll, and Charlene Osmanski, as they brought the heat to another spectacular season for the lady Dukes' softball team. The team's success this past season can be attributed to the girls' hard work and perseverance. After losing some key senior players, it was time for the Dukes to step up their game. Filling the void that the seniors left was a challenge, but with rising talent from the underclassmen and leadership from the older girls, the team was bound for greatness. Despite their age differences, Danielle Morency, junior, said, "everyone gets along well with each other, and our chemistry is really important when it comes to performance on the field."

Team chemistry became crucial when IHSA rewrote the high school softball guidelines, creating greater distance between the bases, as well as moving the pitcher's mound to forty-three feet, three feet longer than previous years. Mary Carol Sullivan, senior, said "there is a lot more hitting action because pitchers have slowed. It makes [playing] defense more challenging." To prepare themselves for competition, the girls set out to improve their athleticism and skillset. Outdoor practices were held at Bryan Middle School. There the girls practiced executing double plays, pickoffs, steals, and first-and-thirds. Practices in the fieldhouse allowed the team to focus on the fundamentals. From bunting, to slapping, to fielding a ground... the lady Dukes were striving for perfect...

Functioning like a well-oiled machine led to numerous victories for the Lady Dukes. Morency said, "You can...solely rely on one person to carry the team." Teamwork and communication ... the foundation for execution under high pressure situations, and the girls used ... building blocks to take their competitive... the next level. Through the softball team's cohesiveness, determination, and winning record, their season was successful.

Practice MAKES PERFECT

In the spring of 2010, a group of boys spent their days practicing and working towards one goal. That goal was to better their skills as players, and ultimately as a team. The boys' varsity tennis team did exactly that. The captains were Mark Nosek, Nathan Ahlgrim, and Jackson Parr, graduates. Their job included leading by example, leading warm-ups and lending their time to help players with less experience. Nosek explained, "being a captain is a privilege that is taken seriously, but it is also a lot of fun too."

The beginning of the season was often rained out on account of spring showers and thunderstorms. When the bad weather held off, a typical match had three singles competing, while four double teams competed with partners. Since the team was on the large side, often more matches were added to compliment the number of players. After all the matches were completed, all of the team victories for both individual and doubles were added up. Even though one might consider tennis an individual sport, Mr. Tres Heimann, coach, said, "They were very team oriented, and the goals for the [individual] students were always for the good of the whole team."

Warm ups consisted of the team captains leading the stretches. These warm ups were an important start to daily practice because it raised the players' heart rates. Each practice then transitioned into hitting warm ups and competitive practice games. Every week a different theme was picked to practice their skills in. Those themes would be incorporated for both singles and doubles. Sometimes practice concluded with breakdown situations so the players could learn what to do in various plays. Parr recalled, "we often finished practices by playing live matches against our teammates." This helped the team learn what they needed to improve in a healthy environment.

Heimann was very pleased with the juniors and seniors on last year's team. "They worked really hard to help the good of the whole team." Their season record was 9 wins, 6 losses. - Amanda Rafter

ACHIEVE
THE INCREDIBLE

When students at York think of the Boy's Track and Field team, the first things that come to mind are hard work, determination and a lot of endurance. This year's Boys Track and Field team was like one big family. They had their ups and their downs, but when it came down to it, they were all in it together. "There were struggles throughout the season [and] injuries to overcome, but the final result showed that all of our hard work paid off," said Eric Glaubke, junior.

The track team had big shoes to fill this year, with last year's state title. "The stakes were high, so we knew what we had to live up to," said Patrick Crowley, sophomore. But the Dukes did an excellent job defending their title. Even though the indoor season got off to a rocky start, and wasn't what they hoped it would be, they still had high hopes for outdoor season. "We used indoor season as preparation for outdoor season," said Michael Stotzer, graduate. But their victory at the Downers Grove South invite rejuvenated the team's hopes for the season. "In preparation for state, the last few meets really count, and when you perform well at those meets, you know you're ready for state," said Alex Mimilitz, sophomore. They beat two of the most challenging teams, Oak Park River Forest and Downers Grove South, which push the team to work hard with high spirits throughout the entire outdoor season. "While competing, and you're racing against your opponent and you pass them, it's the greatest feeling ever," said Andrew Mackentosh, graduate. - Daniel Milling & Kailee Sweeney

ADAPT AND OVERCOME

Every year hundreds of York students meet together in the spring and have one thing in common, joining track. This year, the Girls' Track team also had another goal in mind, going to state. The team was focused and dedicated in their hopes to win State. The girls knew and understood the importance of pushing themselves and practicing. "We all try our hardest at practice and are working six days a week" said Sarah Vesely, sophomore. Natalie Gonzalez, sophomore, agreed. Even though both are new to the team this year, they too felt the inspiration to work hard in hopes to improve and possibly make it to state in the years to come. Both the athletes and the coaches put in long hours at practices which sometimes went from 3pm to 6pm. Track meets could last up to three hours and invites could be an all day event, lasting over six hours. Being a part of the team itself was a big time commitment, but no one complained.

It was clear to see the girls' focus and dedication as they continued to break personal records at every meet. Allison Fazzio, graduate, cleared 10'9" on pole vault and Emma Fisher, sophomore, ran two seconds behind the cross country state champion. An exciting and favorite memory of Kayla Liefeld, senior, was the Downers Grover North Invite in which she got a second over the state qualifying time. This fast time gave her great hopes for achieving her goal and attending state. Even though many girls believed that the 4 x 8 relay runners are known to be the strongest part of the team, Ms. Annette Schulte, coach, said, "Overall, the whole team has a lot more depth and has gotten stronger."

Every day the girls heard "Adapt and overcome", from their coach, Mr. Clyde Ware, which motivated the girls during practice. Mr. Ware mainly focused on the hurdlers and sprinters of the team but supported and cheered on all of the others girls' events just like the rest of the coaches.

From the freshmen who are just starting out, to the seniors who have dedicated their spring season for years to track, the whole team felt the team's success. "It's exciting how well we're doing!" said Meredithe Mimlitz, senior. - Lauren Zomparelli

of the court

Found in the green and white gym, the Boys' Volleyball team worked all hours striving for perfection. The players were willing to do whatever they could to become the best. Even before the season began, it was a well known fact that these men meant business.

When asked about the process that took place before the season even started, William Thompson, graduate, said "Our preseason is pretty intense. We would come in everyday, morning or afternoon, just to practice with the other guys, or to work on our skills." With such a vigorous preseason, it's no wonder that when the men went out on the court during their season, they brought it, and they did it with style and success. Jonathon Ruperect, graduate, said "whenever we play, it gets kind of crazy. We all have so much time together, which is nice since we put in so much work."

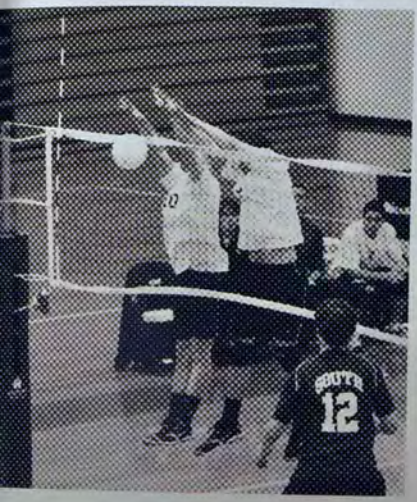

"The boys are definitely connected," said Ms. Patty Iverson, coach. "When they spend so much time together, one wrong move and they knew they were going to get teased. In that sense, we were like one big family." Despite the seriousness of each game, it was clear that the boys knew how to have a good time. The time spent between games and practices was full of silliness and practical jokes. "We had a fun time, but at the end of the day we really worked hard," said Leo Flynn, junior. These guys knew that if they were having a bad day, they could always rely on their teammates to cheer them up, and if all else failed, they would bring it to the court, and dominate the game to lift their spirits. There was never any doubt about the ability of these boys to accomplish whatever they set their minds to. - Kelly McHugh & Kailee Sweeney

PLAY BY PLAY

Water polo requires not only great skill in passing, catching, and shooting, but also the ability to successfully carry out these actions while treading and swimming in water. Playing in both shallow and deep water, players are required to exert great amounts of energy to allow for speed and agility while swimming, as well as control of the ball. Having practiced every day of the week, the team spent countless hours perfecting their swimming, passing, shooting, and treading skills.

In addition to practices, games required great determination. "The games are a lot of fun, but keeping up the same intensity throughout four quarters is gruesome," said Mark Olalde, graduate. Games took place multiple times throughout the school week, as well as on weekends, and tournaments occurred consistently throughout the year, in which York played a string of teams. Successful game play depends upon the players' speed, determination, and strength. "Most people think if you're fast you'll be good, but that's not correct. Speed is important, but having determination, as well as the strength to overpower other players is most important," explained Matthew Watkins, senior.

Possibly the most significant event that the team took part in during the 2010 season was the tournament in St. Louis, Missouri. "We played really well for being in a new environment, however [we] did not play up to our usual standards. I think just going to St. Louis gave us an opportunity to expand and in the end [...] others who enjoy water polo the way we do," said Bennett Kostecki, graduate. [...] possibly the most memorable event [...] the tournament was the tornado. "During the middle of one of our games, a tornado occurred less than twenty miles from us. We got out of the water until the tornado passed, got back in, and then another occurred," recalled Colin Belfiore, junior. Although the team finished the tournament with a 1-4 record, they had a fantastic time representing York in another state. - Matthew Byrne & Kathryn McGirk

LADIES in the Water

According to the varsity Girls' Water Polo head coach, David Rafferty-Flatter, "Lady Dukes water polo is deep in pride and tradition." The girls cared a lot about each other and were focused on one goal: to be the best. The coaches put the girls through long practices and grueling games, but all the hard work paid off. As a result of their hard work, they kept the tradition of success going and took great pride in the game each and every time they jumped into the water.

The team played some games with ease, but other games presented difficulties that really brought out the talent of the girls. In many of their games, the girls faced opponents that had dirty moves and were willing to do whatever it took to keep the ball in their possession. Devon Tamm, graduate, said that water polo in general is "fast paced, suspenseful, and exciting." The games were always filled with enthusiasm because the girls switched from defense to offense with such high intensity. Tamm also said, "From the first swim off whistle to the final buzzer, there is never a dull moment." The girls worked together to defeat their opponents. They had an overall record of 11 wins and 14 losses. They never gave up, even after a loss, because as Melissa Landers, graduate, said, "We know what we have this year is special and we believe that we can go very far with it." The girls worked as hard as they could to bring continued success to the Lady Dukes water polo tradition.

The girls and their coach shared the same pride in water polo and revealed that pride through their deep level of commitment. Jessica Cleveland, graduate, said that in terms of being on the team, her "favorite part is the sense of togetherness that we play with and how we all have each others' backs." The girls looked past any losses they had and kept a close bond even past the water polo season. Rafferty-Flatter said that what he liked most about the team was their commitment. He also said that "this team loves spending time together and really wants to be known as one of the best teams to ever put on the Lady Dukes water polo cap." The polo cap was a symbol of the girls' commitment and willingness to risk injury and loss in order to fight for their school and team. They showed true pride in their sport and and their school.

FOR THE THRILL

There was no stopping this all-star team and their distinguished coach, Mr. Joe Newton. This year's team won state for the 27th time with Newton, who began coaching in 1960. This is more than just a team sport; this is where boys become men. Mr. Newton inspired them with motivating speeches before every practice and each meet, teaching this family that by working together they could keep the reputation of the York High School Cross-Country team alive.

Their workout routines were based on routine core discipline and painful training, but the rewards appeared to be well worth it. Though the practices were grueling, Newton enjoyed joking around with the kids but still demanded their respect with his tone of voice that kept them in order. One of the managers of the team William Karstedt, senior, worked alongside Newton timing the runners and typing in scores. Karsted said, "It's a very memorable experience. He has said some very inspiring things but also makes many funny comments." Even the newest members of the team felt welcomed to the team with open arms. Daniel Possley, freshman, said, "Here you feel welcome, it's not like the rest of the building because underclassmen and upperclassmen, no matter how good you are, you are treated equally." A part of being a team was working together to win, and that was exactly what the boys cross-country team worked for. "The biggest goal is always to win state," said Newton. Every year the competition was always changing. For this year's team, their greatest competition was the Oak Park River Forest team. In a few words of encouragement from Newton before a meet he told them, "Run free, don't think too much, just go run." Newton's speeches inspired the York team to achieve great fame and glory over the past fifty years, and has prepared them to win it all. This year's team once again was successful by winning state for the 27th time. - Luisa Castellanos

WATCH OUT NOW, WE'RE COMING UP

With high hopes for the state meet in previous years, the girls cross-country team was hungry and ready for first. "There is nothing more exciting than bringing some hardware home from the state meet," said Ms. Annette Schulte, coach. Schulte took a different approach to a better end result of the season. "The team is larger, more self-sufficient, and more goal oriented," said Schulte. The girls not only respected their coach, but also their teammates as they relied on each other in meets and in practice. Maggie Stotzer, sophomore, said, "Your teammates are always there to support you."

The seniors this past year were committed to doing their best since it was there last year and wanted to end it with a bang. Four of the varsity runners were seniors, and all of varsity runners had been to State previously, so they knew what was expected, and were prepared to improve from last year. The girls not only went to State but took home 12th and many of the runners beat their personal best. "Times were really fast at the state meet in comparison to past years, but it was really awesome to watch your teammates run well in the state meet," said Shannon Kwit, senior.

Although the team was always working hard, they also had a great time throughout the season. There were fun traditions such as having big and little sisters, giving each other funny gifts on the days of meets, and conference dinner. Underclassman asked the upperclassmen conference dinner as an end of the season celebration. The girls' cross-country team also asked the boys' cross-country team to sectionals dinner which fell on the weekend of Halloween, so they all wore costumes.

Making YORK HISTORY

With the last minute of the fourth quarter, fans rushed down the stands to gather around the fences of the football field. Students were pumping with adrenaline waiting for game to end and for Downers Grove North to leave the field. At the moment the game was over the student body stormed the field with pride after the first homecoming win since 2007. Captain Ryan Kent, running back and senior, said, "When the fans joined us on the field it couldn't have been any more exhilarating. It was something I will remember forever."

Mr. Bill Lech, head coach, led the team to create York history by achieving a record of 6-0. In order to make history the team dedicated their time to make sure they were ready for the season. Waking up at six in the morning for practice at football summer camp and lifting weights, demonstrated how they worked toward their goals for the season. The varsity captains hosted a conditioning and lifting camp between the summer camp practices and during the season.

Physical ability was only half the battle of creating an inspiring football team. Captain Robert Kleinhans, middle line backer and senior, said, "The most important skill to have is mental toughness. In football it is imperative that you do not break down mentally and do your job every play." This was just one of the many objectives they had as a team.

Even after losing the game against Glenbard West that ended their undefeated record, the team went on a winning streak all the way to playoffs. The team got the number one seed in the IHSA 8A Playoffs the first time in school history. They stayed strong throughout the season and made it to the second round of playoffs. Even though the team did not make it to State, Matthew Williams, line backer and senior, said, "We exceeded expectations." Their commitment to succeed created a brotherhood. The coaches, the players, the student body and the community were proud of what the team accomplished this year.

INTO THE GREEN!

The B[illegible] Golf team was a group of talented yo[illegible]dents who worked hard to accom[illegible] their goals for the season. These [illegible] did more than just hit a golf ball into multiple different holes on a course. Being successful took talent, hard work and the right fundamentals, as well as a good swing.

The Boys' Golf team was a determined bunch of boys who found fun and victory in a sport that most people do not understand. This year they went with a record of six wins and five losses. They placed fourth in the Hinsdale Central invite; Jonathan Gunst, senior, shot an even 70 par. The team also placed fifth in the Addison Trail invite.

The season this year had many high points. William Hoff, junior, shot 34 and helped the Dukes win over Downers Grove South. Gunst and Hoff shot 1 over 37's allowing the boys to win against Wheaton North. Joseph Wark, senior, shot 2 over 34 winning over Oak Park River Forest. Hoff, junior, shot 77 at Fenton for 9th place overall.

These boys played in rain or shine, and tried their best in any given situation. Mr. Jim Borel, coach, said, "We played in a driving rain storm at the Zion-Benton Invitational. The high temperature for the day was around 40 degrees." Even though they played in poor conditions, which made it hard to focus on the task at hand, the team finished in eleventh place. "Our team this year had stronger team chemistry," said Kyle O'Neil, senior and captain. This year's group of boys worked very well together, celebrated small victories, and gave constructive criticism after losses.

Although they did not meet their goal in making it to conference or advancing any boys to state, they advanced three boys to sectionals: Hoff, Gunst, and Tanner Obal, sophomore. All in all this year the Boys' Golf team tried their hardest and had a good season. -Courtney Moles

LADY DUKES
ON THE FAIRWAYS

The girls' golf team had a lot of fresh new talent this year. Nine freshmen joined the varsity team. The team placed in 7th at sectionals and one player, Linnea Wethekam, went to regionals. The courses get more difficult in the championships, so course for regionals was much more difficult than the course for sectionals. One memorable meet was against Downers Grove North where they only lost by two strokes.

Despite this year's record, the girls had a lot of fun. Ms. Barb Tilden, coach, felt that with all the new players this year, the team was a lot more energetic and fun. "We are very close," said Megan Scott, senior and captain. "We have pasta parties and play games. It was an exceptional group of girls." One fun tradition the team had was the scrimmage against the boys' golf team. On a Friday with 11 AM dismissal, the girls went out for lunch. Afterwards they went to the Sugar Creek golf course and played a game again the boys' golf team.

The team had a major setback this season. Linda Fredrick, captain and senior, broke her ankle halfway through the season. Her injuries affected the team's standings this year, because she was a leader and a strong player. However, she still dedicated her time to the team and went to every practice and game. Ms. Barb Tilden and Ms. Peggy Babyar, coaches, were very dedicated as well. Every time a girl didn't succeed, she was encouraged to keep trying and practicing. "All the girls are nice. All the other teams are nice. They just genuinely like golf," said Wethekam.

The girls have some goals set for future seasons. They hope to beat their main rivals, LaGrange and Hinsdale Central. By the time all those freshmen are seniors, they hope to take the team to the state championships. - Ellen Goese war is ours

"We work hard every day in practice and never back down from competition," said captain Eric Lund, senior. The boys' soccer team this year was forced to work twice as hard. The competition was much more intense compared to previous years. With great teams in the Western Suburban Conference and Morton ranked first in state, the boys were forced to step up their game.

"Every year brings in new leaders," said Mr. Markus Roy, coach. Each year about half of the boys graduate, changing the whole dynamic of the team. Roy explained that the changes allowed people to utilize their individual skills for the benefit of the team. "They have a very good work ethic. They are willing to give everything for their school and for their team," said Roy.

One could say they had made quite the impression in conference. "The seniors have a big impact. It's their last year, and their last time to play great." Competing for a conference championship, the boys' work transferred from practice, to game time. "We practiced just like we expected to play during games. It was tiring, and not an easy task, but was well worth the while," said Joshua Udelhofen, senior. The hard practice clearly paid off when the boys finished the season well, tying for fourth in conference. Playing three games into the playoffs, after two wins against Streamwood and Lake Park, the season came to an end with the defeat in the regional championship against Geneva. Although the season ended on a low note, the team worked well together throughout the season.

KICKIN' IT!
...with the Lady Dukes

There may not be a ball, but these girls sure know how to kick! This year's girls' swim team was no stranger to long, grueling practices and intense meets. All of their hard work and determination could be measured in the success of their season. "Our team has improved a lot, they make all of the hard work worth it," said Paula Arcaro, senior. She added, "the sport is challenging, but overall it's a blast."

The life of a swimmer was extremely demanding. However, spirit and energy was not something these girls lack. In fact, one of the more notable characteristics of the Lady Dukes was their commitment to being on the team and supporting each other. "I think people underestimate the amount of work each and every girl puts in to making this team better. It is definitely the hardest sport I've ever done at York, but also, some of the most fun. I really couldn't have asked for better teammates," said Samantha Ward, senior.

In addition to their hard work and determination, the swim team showed a lighter side through their much celebrated traditions. After homecoming, they all agreed to hold out on razor-to-hair action until the big conference meet, and some girls wore outrageous outfits, including boas and tie-dye, before an important meet. Kathryn McGirk, junior, said of the Lady Dukes, "I think the size of our team is equivalent to its level of enthusiam, meaning we have lots of it!" Another well known tradition was Denim Day, when the girls swam in their jeans for the entire practice as a way to raise money for breast cancer.

Most importantly, the Lady Dukes performed incredibly well in their season, sending five girls to State competitions and finishing in 18th overall with special mention to senior Victoria Larson, senior, who took home a 3rd place title.

DETERMINED

On the Court

"It's a lot harder than you think," said Lauren Jevaney, senior, about girls' tennis here at York. The team practiced every day for about two hours at Berens Park where they conditioned and worked on the necessary skills in order to effectively play the game. However, the most important skill for tennis goes beyond the physical capabilities. "The best players are the people who can control the match by staying focused and maintaining that positive mentality," said Dana Chamberlin, junior. Remaining focused during a meet was essential; the sport required a lot of self-discipline. Mr. Tres Heimann, coach, also described how important it was to have a strong mental attitude. "Obviously physical skills are important but you have to be mentally tough on court as well and stay confident and positive with yourself and your doubles partner."

The team lost five very talented seniors from their 2009 season so several teammates this year were required to step up into higher positions that they were in the previous year. According to Mr. Heimann, the team's difficult schedule put them into more competitive situations where they learned from the experience and they have become more "match tough." With 50 girls altogether (16 on varsity, 17 on junior varsity 1, and 17 on junior varsity 2), they had 27 dual matches during their season this year and came in 4th overall in conference. Barrington High School was always a top school in the state for tennis, but when York and Barrington played, York won the match 3-2. To end the season, varsity accumulated 13 points at the I.H.S.A. State Tournament and the team finished 16th place in the state, making this the fourth year in a row they have finished in the Top 20 in the state.

The team had a lot of fun, blasting music on the bus to meets or having their own Themed Fridays, whether it was gangster day or 80's workout-wear. Chamberlin said, "We always managed to have fun, whether it was spending time together on the courts, at pasta parties, or bus rides. The team created a lot of lasting friendships." In the words of the tennis girls: "Yeah York!"

Living the DREAM

The girls' volleyball team was very successful this fall. With an impressive record and positive team ethic, the girls were able to reach new heights. Their constant encouragement towards each other helped them to work through tough daily practices and weekend tournaments. Their season demanded endurance, continuing from the end of November. This meant that there was time for many leaders to emerge and gain experience to help them succeed on and off the court.

Morgan Semmelhack, captain and senior, was able to apply what she learned to any challenge presented. "Outside of playing on the court, I am able to take what I know on how to successfully communicate with people and use those skills in my everyday life." Ms. Patty Iverson, fifth-year head coach, made sure that all of the girls stay focused besides just being physically conditioned to perform well. "We talk a lot about techniques, but also about playing well no matter who's on the other side of the court, and keeping our dream of going to the State Championship alive." Sharing the common goal of making it to State inspired the girls to work together through the hard practices and playing well as a team no matter what.

Grace Dyra, senior, expressed the importance of teamwork: "If you're not playing as a team, you're not going to get anywhere." This group of girls was tightly knit from the start, so teamwork was second nature. Semmelhack described what the girls are doing this year to keep up their record. "This year we are more focused on what we want to achieve, and we have great team chemistry."

With the passionate crowd cheering on the Dukes from the bleachers, the girls got pumped up to overcome any obstacle that stood in their way of advancing to the next level of competition. Emily Iverson, captain and senior, knew that winning wasn't everything, but when the team came together, they achieved victory by giving it their all. "I love the competitiveness of the sport, and winning that close match against a tough team." And win was what they did, taking home the title of Super Sectional Champions for the first time in history. "SMOOTH

Like butta" -Joseph Martino

After an end to a great season in 2010, the coaching staff and the boys' varsity basketball players had great expectations for what was to come. However, with the departure of many graduated players as well as the head coach, the team faced a transition. Former sophomore coach, Mr. Dominic Cannon, then stepped up to the head coaching position with high hopes for the season.

The talent was not only experienced, but fresh in some cases. John Toohey, freshman, had not only height to him, but skill as well. Returning but young starter David Cohn, sophomore, also offered quickness and agility to the team. The outstanding William Sullivan, senior broke the time scoring record this year early in the season at a tournament in Galesburg. The record was previously set in 1965-1968 by Chris Schweer scoring 1431 points in his high school carrier. Sullivan not only matched, but exceeded the record in January, the beginning of the season with over two months to improve his already outstanding record.

With such great talent, it was all about putting it to good use. "We are the most prepared team in America" said Philip Ganser, senior. The boys really focused on not only the dynamics on the court, but also perfecting the basic skills of the game. "The rim don't lie," said Jacob Rzeszutko, junior. It was the points that were going to make them win games, but fundamentals were also a big focus. "Basic skills like ball handing and shooting are essential to the sport," said Mr. Dominic Cannon, coach. Although many changes were being made, the hard work and determination of the players made for a successful season. "The seniors did a great job of adjusting, making the transition easy for the team as a whole," said Cannon.

Not only did the team focus on basketball, but they also reached out to the community. The boys went to Misericordia, a community of care for those who are disabled. They played basketball with the members, stepping outside of the competition and pressures of high school basketball. Misericordia then attended the varsity basketball game against Proviso West. "That night was great as a whole," said Cannon. It was senior night which honored the hard work of the departing seniors. Get FIRED UP

"A rolling stone gathers no moss, but rather leaves a trail of busted stuff." Mr. Jason Reinecke, coach, used this phrase to motivate the Girls' Basketball team. It means that if they work together as a team, they will be successful. The seniors have been working hard over the past four years and now their hard work paid off.

The team was very successful this year. For the first time since 1994, the team won the conference title. The conference game was against Glenbard West and they were down by 16 points. In the fourth quarter, the Dukes made a big comeback and won the game.

One of the hardest parts was the practices. The girls had very intense practices every day that imitated the speed of the game. Each of the girls worked to develop their individual skills. Before each game, the team scouted their opponent and devised their plays based on that. However, according to Reinecke, the most important factor was that "every player must be committed to a common goal." Another obstacle ws balancing school and the team. Meryl Cripe, senior and captain, said, "Balancing practice with academics can be hard when you're tired and don't feel like doing your homework, but the result of all the hard work in practice is worth it."

The camaraderie on the team was great this year. Tawny Tucci, junior, said, "Everyone is very accepting. They don't get down on each other." Before games, the girls blasted music in the locker room and got in the zone. Basketball was a big part of their lives. Some have been playing for over ten years. The girls supported each other through everything and Alexandra Harrell, junior, said, "We're kind of like a family." -Ellen Goese

Rolling
with attitude

What comes to mind when thinking of bowling? A ball rolling down a lane? If you dumb it down to its most basic point, then yes, it is ball rolling down a lane. But there's more to this sport than that, especially if you're playing for the Girls' Bowling team.

What some people don't realize is that bowling is both a physical and mental game. Perfect form as well as a physically fit body are necessary to succeed. But it took more than brute strength to dominate the match. Bowling took strategy and attitude. These two ways of thinking were crucial to the outcome of a match. If a bowler doesn't know how to utilize these two pieces of truth, then the battle is already half lost.

That's what the Girls Bowling team is all about. Being able to strategize and holding a positive attitude even through shaky moments. Courtney Moles, junior, said "Even though we started the season off with a new coach, we eventually figured out how to work with each other." They were able to hold their own throughout and where still able to strategize victories in the season.

Though the team didn't have a perfect season, members felt that they did well considering that the team needed to adjust to a new method of coaching. With the new coach starting off the season, the bowling team's goals and expectations were changed according to the coach's plan. Genevieve Rizzo, junior, said, "Even though Coach Williams was gone this year, we still wanted to prove to ourselves and to him that we could take his advice and coaching and make it work with a new coach."

With that said and done, the Bowling Team continued on what they where best at, supporting each other as a team. During their wins and losses, during a match or in practice, these girls knew how to support each other with wholehearted devotion to their team. -Joachim Canete

Sticking the

PERFECT LANDING

For some, doing a cartwheel is a gymnastic achievement. For the Girls' Gymnastics team, however, it takes a lot more than cartwheels to make the cut. By performing their best on vault, uneven bars, beam, and floor, they excelled not only as individuals, but also as a united team.

The girls practiced daily. "Practice usually began with stretches and or a warm up. Then we split into our teams and went to a certain event and would switch one or two times depending on what the plan or goals were. It's important to be at practice since you can't otherwise improve on anything," said Victoria Maple, sophomore. By warming up and conditioning, the girls prepared for their routines and improved their skills. "A typical practice consists of going to each of my events and doing routine after routine, perfecting every skill. Practices are so important because they allow you to push yourself and become the best gymnast that you can be," said Peyton Cross, senior.

Gymnastics consists of a mental game, as well as physical abilities. "This sport isn't all just physical strength; it depends on a lot of mental strength, too. You just had to believe in yourself," said Hayley Cleeton, sophomore. The girls persevered with the support of family, friends, and teammates. "The most rewarding aspect of being a coach is seeing how the girls interact and support each other. When someone is nervous about a skill and the whole team stands behind her, it really gives me a sense of accomplishment," said Ms. Jessica Golden, head coach. Golden, along with Mr. Steven Geuss and Ms. Kristen Manetti, assistant coaches, not only encouraged the girls to do their best, but also gave the girls advice and guidance when it came to their performances .

In competitions the girls took their personal talents to the max, despite their levels, and bonded as a team. "The amount of support this team has is overwhelming. I have never been on a team that supports one another so much. We definitely are like a little family; we all love each other and have each other's backs no matter what," said Cross. "When I compete I get very nervous on most of the events because I just want to do my best and not mess up anything, but I also try to just have fun with it and enjoy what I do," Cleeton added.

The team achieved many of their goals. "The goals across the levels were for the gymnasts to take control of their routines. We wanted them to learn how scoring was done, what requirements they needed in their routines to get the highest start value, and to take ownership of their sport," said Golden. Scores are based on the difficulty and execution of each routine. The Lady Dukes set records and performed well in Regionals and Sectionals. Their overall record for the season was a 134.5, which surpassed their original goal of reaching a 132. The Lady Dukes knew how to stick the perfect landing. - By Genevieve

"Reason To Wear A Speedo"

The swim team is one of those intimidating sports that has morning practice. Few people will get up early to practice all morning, go to class, then jump in the pool after school to work more. Yet this is exactly what the swim team did. Adrian Guzman, senior, said that "the competition, and the win, makes the practice worth it. When you see your time shaved down you know it's worth it."

"Swimming isn't just a sport, it's a reason to wear a Speedo" joked Matthew Watkins, senior, "but really, there is a really strong camaraderie in the swim team." The team had this group mentality because of all their practice. They saw each other before and after school almost every day, in and out of the pool. Their camaraderie extended beyond the pool, and the swim kids even talked about swimming when they saw each other in class.

Other than swimming, there was the smaller diving team that also was a part of the swim team. The diving team's goal was perfection. They tried to enter the pool with as little a splash as possible, so to them precision was key. They practiced diving over and over because their section of the meet was only a few seconds in the air. There was no making up for lost time.

"Few sports take so little time, so in swimming, a second could be a few percent of your entire time," said Timothy O'Malley, senior. Swimming is about excellence, where a fraction of a second can be the difference between first or second, or a perfect dive, or a botched entrance. That time constraint was also why the boys loved swimming. Every little bit they got better was a noticeable improvement. - Blake Harms

WRESTLE MANIA!

In today's day and age, wrestling has become a sport most people associate with theatrical athletes such as Hulk Hogan or The Rock. But leave it to York's wrestlers to give new meaning to the term "champion" and demonstrate the qualities that are necessary to be successful in this sport.

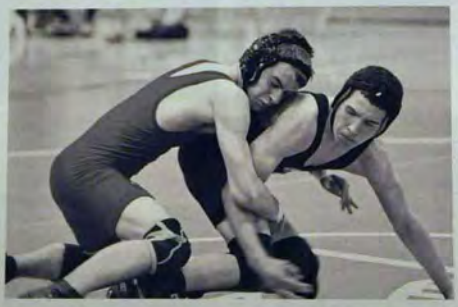

This year's varsity team lead by captains and seniors, Rudy Guthrie, Robert Kleinhans, Marcus Loffredo, Alexander Mortimer, and James Nudera, "have shown tremendous senior leadership, which in turn, has trickled down to the younger guys," said Mr. Terry Clarke, coach. This led the team to their 25-4 record which was unprecedented in York history, and brought an immense amount of pride to the players, coaches, and school.

In addition to this year's achievements, including a state rank in the top 10 and winning the DeKalb Tournament, Clarke added that the best part from a coaching point of view was "taking inexperienced, young freshmen and helping them to develop into champions on and off the mat." Off the mat, the Dukes did their fair share of volunteer work and supporting other sports at York, which in turn brought the team closer together.

The team was loaded with talent this year, giving York one of the best seasons it has ever seen. The boys put forth a tremendous amount of effort, and achieved great success as a result. Although they lack the theatrical antics of their more famous counterparts, the wrestling team is definitely worth all the hype. - Mollie O'Shea

PURSUING Perfection

"There's nothing better than the adrenaline rush you get when you take the floor when all eyes are on you," said Michelle Stefani, senior and varsity captain. The York winter cheerleading squad returned after a successful fall season ready to work hard. The strong dedication and passion that the team had this year allowed them to excel. Amanda Quarrie, sophomore, reflected on this year's season compared to previous years and said, "This year we are more of a team and we work together like a family." Captain Melissa Brunke, junior, also commented on this year's season and said, "This year's team has a lot more skill and determination and the coach has had a huge impact on our work ethic." Trying new things and not giving up until they accomplished them allowed the squad to be one of the best in a while. One of the main goals of the season was to earn the respect of others by showing off their incredible talent and believing in themselves. They knew what they were capable of and it was up to them to show the people what they could do.

Sticking together as a family and supporting each other was an important quality that the team developed during the season and has contributed to their success. "The most important skill is to be able to trust and love your teammates," said Koch. The flyers were always being thrown up in the air and it is very important that they could trust that their teammates would be there to catch them. The team admitted that they all got nervous when they attempted a new stunt because there was always a chance of getting an injury but they put that all aside and tried to be as safe as possible.

Competitions were very exciting and intimidating to the team. They had to rely on each other to know the routines and to put in their all. Preparation included giving 100% in practice every day. In order to make it to State the team had to do well at Sectionals and prove that they deserved to go. Stefani said, "We really know how to pull through in the end and make it our best performance."

Shake your

"POM PONS"

They performed at every home football and basketball game. They performed at every Homecoming pep rally while wearing the green and white of the Dukes. This is the Poms team. This team is unique from any other team at school. They don't focus on scoring goals or getting a certain number of runs to win the game. These girls choreograph their own routines every week, wear ankle weights to strengthen their kicks

This year was different from any other year on the Poms team. Seniors made up most of the team for the 09-10 season and after they graduated it was time to build a whole new team. At first the team for the 10-11 season struggled. Jennifer Dolson said, "In the beginning, we were really struggling with putting all the different levels of technique together, but everyone worked really hard and this is the best team we've had in years." They have become more like a family than ever before. The girls are more comfortable with each other and have more fun than ever before as a team.

Not only did the Poms team perform at the half time shows of football and basketball games, they also competed at competitions. Their first competition was at Wheaton North High School in which they performed a routine and received first place. Their second competition at Stevenson was anticipated to be the most difficult but the team scored well and took second place. Their third competition was at Providence Catholic and they received first place again with the highest score in Poms history. Then the state competition was in Peoria. The team placed fourth, the best in history.

These talented girls have given their all this year while performing in front of the student body and their families. Whether they competed on dance teams for 7 years, took random dance classes, or never danced before, the variety of experience on the team paid off well. Despite the stress the girls felt when Poms was considered for elimination due to budget cuts, the team has done the best they ever had in competitions and proved that they belong to be a part of the school's athletic program. - Liz Bullen

ORGANIZATIONS

"EXPRESSIVE NOT PROVOCATIVE"

The members of Urban Arts Club strive to be the dancers who inspire change and evoke hope in the hearts of all who watch them. Every form of art has the intention of making the viewer feel an emotion, see a possibility, or simply think differently. This feeling or emotion doesn't necessarily come instantly after seeing a performance, because it's the best performances that leave one feeling something long after. The Urban Arts team tries their best to instill this feeling in all who watch them perform.

"It is definitely my highlight of my time here at York," said Ms. Laine Pehta, the club's sponsor of two years. Although she does not have a background in dance, Pehta never stops encouraging the dancers to do their best during every practice. She had the energy to join her club in the moving and the shaking after school on Mondays and Tuesdays when they met for practice.

Urban Arts focuses on joining kids of all ages and all backgrounds with the common goal of learning about urban culture. During the Homecoming pep rally and game, the club performed an army themed hip hop routine that had the crowd on their feet. The new routines performed at the Diversity Day and the "Pack the House Night" basketball game included choreography that was a collaborative effort of the whole team. This club also learned about urban activities other than dancing by going to a poetry slam.

The club was led by, Matthew Echevarria, sophomore, and Jill Gentile, senior. They took pride in its ability to provide an environment free of judgment, where students could express themselves through the timeless art of dance. "That day when we played music and just danced like crazy, for over an hour was the best," said Diana Sanchez, junior.

The philosopher Epictetus said "If you want to improve, be content to be thought foolish and stupid." To achieve goals in dance, one has to push oneself to unknown limits, no matter how it looks to others. Through the hard work put in creating the opportunity to dance and promote multiculturalism, this co- ed club never failed to find the fun in all that they did. It was in those fun times the club created the motto, "expressive not provocative." - Jill Gentile

El Mundo por Espanol

"I think this club is important because everyone has a passion for Spanish," said Rebecca Medina, Spanish club president and senior. Spanish club met every two weeks to listen to presentations about Hispanic countries, eat tasty Hispanic food, and express their enjoyment of the Spanish language. A delicious dish that originated from that country would be served to the other members while they enjoyed videos of that country's traditional dancing and culture as well as interesting traditions they may have. The members of Spanish club enjoyed this because they got to learn about the cultures, food, and traditions of other countries. Rebecca Medina, Spanish club member since freshman year and senior at York, said "Spanish club's main goal was to explore Hispanic culture differences and similarities." Gloria Martinez, senior, said Spanish club "helps students learn and experience new cultures and it brings more diversity to York."

Spanish club participated in multiple activities during the year in order to help the community. This Christmas season they took part in Adopt a Family which is a program where gifts are bought for families that cannot afford to buy presents for their children. They had many successful Adopt a Family projects in the past, and always enjoyed giving their assistance to a new family each year. Spanish club also has a hand in international fest each year by setting up a booth and serving Hispanic food while sharing their knowledge of Hispanic countries with viewers. Mrs. Vicky Gomez, sponsor, said "It is important for students to understand different cultures and be open to new ideas and customs." When looking back after sponsoring the club for four years, Mrs. Gomez said her favorite part about the club was "Seeing the kids get excited about the Spanish speaking world outside the classroom." Anyone with a passion for the Spanish culture is encouraged to join this club to use as an extension to Spanish class. - Maggie Stotzer

People who talk to WALLS

Most people dislike or are even terrified of public speaking. Speech team members not only enjoy public speaking--reciting poetry, prose, humorous and dramatic interpretation, but they also do it with flair, style, and talent.

This year, more than fifty people tried out for Speech team, the largest group ever in Mr. Jacob Martin's four years of coaching. "It's exciting that there are more people getting involved and that word is getting out," said Martin. Students auditioned for one or more of the fourteen different events. Although Speech team was usually cut, this year there were so many strong performers that the coaches decided all of the students deserved a spot on the team. "What made this year's team unique was the enthusiasm and dedication that everyone had. Because everybody liked their events, everyone did well," said Elizabeth Diamond, junior.

Preparing for weekend competitions took a lot of practice both in and out of school. "We talk to walls. You walk into a tournament and you think everyone's crazy because they're all talking to the lockers, practicing their speeches," said Brittany Busleta, sophomore. Members met every Monday after school, and the meetings were set up like a workshop, with each different event group meeting with their coaches to practice and improve in their areas of performance. Meeting as an event group, students received feedback from the peer-to-peer help. Members also met with their event groups outside of school on their own time. "The research and practice is more individual work," said Martin. "The more these students prepare, the better they will do."

Because the turnout for this year's team was so massive, members also met with their event coaches to conference and improve in their events. The team was coached by Martin, head coach; Mr. John Forsythe, drama coach; and Ms. Sarah Gorsky. Student captains Margaret Patchett, Caitlin McManus, juniors, and Jack McFarlane, senior, set an example by doing their best and performing strongly in tournaments.

Every team member sacrificed sleep on Saturday mornings to be at tournaments by 7:00am. "The willingness to show up on a Saturday morning and support our teammates really helped us succeed this year," said Diamond. This dedication allowed the team to be successful. When asked what the best part of coaching was, Martin responded, "My favorite part is seeing students have success. It's amazing to watch one student progress and to see the individual growth." It is undeniable that the team's talent and dedication was something to truly marvel at. - Genevieve Rizzo

WELCOME TO... OUR TOWN

Traditionally, York Drama adopts considerably more serious selection for their winter plays. This year's pick was certainly up to standards. Thornton Wilder's "Our Town," which is often described as an American classic. It is especially known for its "Deconstructed Theatre" meaning the sets look stark and empty, and the costumes are nothing more than the actors' own wardrobe. Blake Harms, senior, said, "It was a foray into the depths of character." Geena Barry, senior, described that "cast members were house crew. We created the world of the play." In this way, she adds that the crew was "given more freedom in terms of creative decision making."

"Our Town" was set in small-town America and focuses on the everyday lives of its citizens. The play observes major themes while guiding its audience through three acts of life, love and death. Nothing happened in the play that was not natural, and ordinary. As Jack Sullivan described, "The play is really a microcosm of the world and the naturalistic performances reveal societal truths." In this way, the characters were able to connect with the audience through understated honesty.

Although, the winter play may be known for its tendency to be more introspective in terms of content, the experience is just as lively. With rehearsals almost every day of the week, pressure built until the final performance. Members of drama note that it was imperative that each cast member put in the extra time outside of rehearsals to make the play a success, specifically, knowing their lines inside and out. Mr. John Forsythe, director, was known to pay special attention to character development by working closely with individual actors. In contrast, Ms. Rebecca Marianetti, was"production oriented," according to Jack McFarlane, senior, "and able to bring out the best in everyone, no matter how small the part." Despite these different directing styles, the two leaders knew which shows to pick, those which centralize on a main theme. "This year's have been a lot of storytelling, which audiences have seemed to really enjoy," added McFarlane.

Despite rigorous schedules and demanding performances, the experience of drama at York was certainly one that cannot compare with anything else. They were a family, and at the end of the day, they all appreciated what each and every member contributed to the overall success of the play. With excellent leadership, and committed actors and crew members, drama was outstanding in their production of "Our Town." - Mollie O'Shea

Saving the WORLD

The Model UN team was composed of some of York's greatest debaters. These students competed with other schools by discussing world issues and finding solutions for them. They went to conferences at other schools, colleges and this year, they went to Lansing, Michigan.

The skills learned on the team were very beneficial to the students. Margaret Quigley, senior, said, "It's a great way to learn about world topics and perfect the art of debating." These students were also very well informed about current events, which helped them in school as well. Students divided into councils representing different countries and were given a world issue. Then they negotiated with other countries to find solutions for the issue.

However, these conferences weren't all work and no play. Eric Patterson, freshman, said, "After the conference is over, people do crazy things. They run around to other groups to take over other countries."

"Many skills were required for the students. They had to think on their feet and be prepared for any question. Mr. Adam Gearing, advisor, said, "The skill set this requires includes negotiation, public speaking, writing, researching, and diplomacy. It also helps with interpersonal relations. They have to represent different countries with varying interests." Some of these debates even motivated the actual United Nations to confront the issues and find solutions for them.

Awards were given out to students who showed exemplary skills in debating. The ranking of the awards were honorable mention, outstanding delegate, and highest honors, which was awarded to Quigley and John Howard, junior. Howard explained his favorite part of Model UN and said, "Model United Nations is more than a chance to practice public speaking and writing. It allows club members to think on their feet in the mock UN. The skill of negotiating compromise with people with different interests is something school should teach. However, Model UN makes up for this along with the fun of overnight conferences." - Ellen Goese

is as easy as pi

Algebra, geometry, and calculus. These math terms make some people shudder. For members of the Math team, however, these categories present intriguing challenges as they compete against other schools. Excitement fills the air as the Dukes think on their feet and solve equations in time to lead York's Math Team to victory.

Math Team was led by Mr. Max Schoenberg, a math teacher here at York with the assistance of Ms. Linda Lahti, another math teacher. This past year was Mr. Schoenberg's tenth year coaching this team of determined students. However, the experience students had on math team was different from the experience they would have in math class. According to Schoenberg, "The students experience a level of problem solving more advanced than in any math class. There is a beauty to solving a problem that seems complicated at first but which has a wonderfully simple answer."

Team members met every Tuesday morning before school to do practice problems in preparation for competitions against other schools. Students of all grades and math levels met to discuss problem-solving strategies and methods of approaching difficult problems. "At our practices, students work together and develop new strategies for solving problems. We study numerical patterns, the rules of chance, unusual graph behavior, and many practical applications," said Schoenberg.

Joining Math team also benefitted students by improving their overall mathematical abilities and helping them understand concepts they may not have understood more thoroughly. "Because of Math team, I learned how to approach problems in different ways," said Paige Kaliski, junior. The students were able to improve their reasoning skills and trim down the time it took them to do math problems in the past. "Math team helped me to see that math can be applicable in other ways besides school, and that there is a faster, more clever shortcut solution to everything," said Ushasi Naha, sophomore. Frequent practices helped students not only in their other math classes, but in competitions as well.

Competitions were very exciting for the Dukes. Math Team members worked in teams of ten students, and combined their brainpower to arrive at the right solution before their opponents. Competitions consisted of five schools, with each school represented by ten students per grade level. Team members took thirty minute tests comprised of five questions, worth different points depending on the difficulty of the problem. Each test was out of twenty-five points and the school with the most points in each grade level received points overall. "Competitions can be challenging, but they are rewarding. You learn a lot of different math concepts you wouldn't normally learn in school," said Alexander DeVries, senior. Students sometimes received certificates, ribbons, and even candy as awards for their hard work. It is clear, however, that their hard work was rewarded not only in competitions, but aided their mathematical abilities overall.

The Real SUPERHEROES

The goal of the Kiwanis organization's Key Club is serving the community through service projects and activities. This year the Key club members worked on projects such as the annual Special Kids Day car wash, fall yard clean up for senior citizens, a shoe drive for kids in Africa, and the Tickled Pink fundraiser for breast cancer. The president of Key club, Nicole Carey, senior, said, "Key Club provides the community with a service outlet, it helps connect the school with the community."

The community as well has benefited greatly from the hard work and ambition of these York students. The sponsor of the club this year, Ms. Brianne Kennedy-Brooks was new to the club this year working as a facilitator. Kennedy-Brooks said, "I love seeing the kids take leadership and look beyond themselves in order to help others. The experiences give everyone that warm fuzzy feeling." The club is entirely student-run when it comes to making decisions about activities that students are passionate about.The board members of Key club inspired and motivated the members of the club to continue to work hard.

Co-vice president of the club, Amy Costello, senior, said, "As a board member we get to organize and lead most of the events, run the meetings, and come up with ways to make the meetings more fun." All students can enjoy the oppotunity to help others. Co-vice president of the club, Megan Scott, senior, also helped lead the club during meetings. Scott shared the most difficult part about leading was that "It can sometimes be difficult to plan events that interest everyone. There are many hard working students in the club so we always have students who are excited to participate."

Not only did members of the club gain service hours with the projects but they also made new friends. The club had nearly 100 participating members this year, more than years past. The success of Key club has improved the community as well as the students of York. - Luisa Castellanos

Recyling, Hiking and Climbing Oh My!

Finding ways to get teenagers to be passionate about learning or about anything, may be frustrating at times for educators. Learning how to ignite the inquisitive spark barely still lit inside of students isn't hard when you add discovery and interaction to the educational fire. Eco club provided an educational but fun experience.

"Canoe trips, biking and hiking expeditions and high ropes courses are my favorite part," said Kristen Borel, junior, but they are also a way to teach students about the basics of ecology and why it's important without being in a stiff chair surrounded by white walls.

The basics of ecology included the basic survival skills, practiced while on the canoe trip in the summer. For example, students "learned how to pitch a tent, start a fire from almost nothing and bathe in a river," said Annie King, senior. "It was the most fun I had all summer,"King added.

In the past year the club volunteered their time at the Northern Illinois Food Bank, held an effective water bottle campaign, donated to a local electronic fair, went through the halls the last day of school collecting books in good condition to recycle, and held their own book sale at school.

The most recognized accomplishment of the year, any eco member would tell you, was raising fourteen hundred dollars with the help of Jewel Osco donating five cents for every paper bag used. The money was put towards a water machine the automatically filled a water bottle with the correct amount of chilled and filtered water. "Even with all the efforts to get kids to use reusable water bottles, they still say their water bottles have better taste," explained Sarah King, junior. With a new eco friendly way to drink water the club was on its way of making York a greener school. -Jill Gentile

I OBJECT!

Law team is a group of students whose goals this year were to become immersed in law and all its aspects. These dedicated individuals worked diligently to learn their case well enough to get their evaluators attention and win the meets. Cases not only helped each member of the team familiarize themselves with law procedures, but helped them gain life skills. "Law team gives students the opportunity to gain the ability to think on their feet when speaking publically. As well as learn to take constructive criticism and learn to respect others," said Emily King, junior. One of the many other skills picked up this year was to think both logically and critically in order to better understand their case.

The mock trials were an important for practicing how to handle today's legal system, and helped to prepare the lawyers of tomorrow. "One of the best feelings is familiarizing new members with law procedures," said Abigail Mazzocco, junior. The members of Law team were a tightly knit group of people who enjoyed the justice system and learning from their mistakes. According to Amanda Brain and John Hennessy, juniors, the team gave the students a lens into the complexities and rules of the legal system.

Competitions this year were nerve racking, with the feeling of an actual trial, with witnesses and cross examinations. Law team took real cases and held mock trials based off of the basic case information they were given. They would hold every mock trial in a real local court house. "People should join law team because it gives you an opportunity to improve critical thinking and speaking, and besides, going to court houses is fun," said Amber Virdi, junior.

Similar to real court cases, the best part for the team was recieving the verdict, especially when it happened to be in the desired outcome. The sense of pride and accomplishment of winning a mock trial was the same. Through the use of logic and evidence, or lack thereof, the members of Law team have managed to make the best of it. - Courtney Moles

Buzzing In

What is the symbol of the element with the shortest name? If you knew the answer to this question was "Sn" for tin, then Scholastic Bowl is the club for you. Scholastic Bowl focuses on learning new facts about all sorts of topics and putting all the facts they know to use. "To be on Scholastic Bowl you need to be very smart and very quick. You need to know very random obscure facts and respond to the question very quickly," said Ellen Goese, junior. Members learned about all the several different areas of knowledge such as music, science, and government and many other categories. Kira Tebbe, junior, and member since freshman year, said, "You feel a lot more educated after being in this club." It also gave members the opportunity to impress people when they could answer questions no one else had a clue about. Erik Nerison, senior, said with great pride, "I now feel like a human 'Stumbleupon.'"

The members said Scholastic Bowl taught and encouraged competitiveness as well as the fundamentals of good sportsmanship. The group established strong comradery with each other. Teammates form close "family-like" bonds with one another after getting to know everyone during the monthly meets. They also made it a tradition to go to a convenience store and stock up on food before every meet. As much as the team enjoyed winning, they made it a bigger priority to increase their knowledge and work together.

Jacob Smith, sophomore, said, "Everyone gets a chance" referring to contributions in meets. Being divided into two different teams, junior varsity and varsity, helped newcomers get used to competing and gave them a chance to compete against other first-year members from different schools. All the new members who joined were placed on the junior varsity team and eventually earned a position on varsity. Kira Tebbe, junior, described Scholastic bowl as "Jeopardy for high school with buzzers." Newcomers were always welcomed and encouraged to join this educational club. – Maggie Stotzer

York Auto Club Gets it in GEAR

Auto club was more than brakes, engines, and mufflers. It was a way of life. "Our club is misunderstood, because students aren't familiar with what we do," said Mr. Ron Robak, the Auto club advisor. "Students here are learning a valuable skill that will be used in everyday life." Every Tuesday, after school the members of the Auto club met to work together on their own personal vehicles and a club project. This year's club project was turning a gas powered 1978 Triumph into an electric car. "Yeah, the Triumph is a cool project and a pretty sweet car," said Anthony Johns, junior. By taking on this project, York Auto club made history. "We're making York one of the first schools in the nation to convert a car to an electric car," said Mitch Alimorong, senior."Yeah. The Triumph is a cool project, it's the wave of the future... all eco and whatnot," agreed Andrew Bles, junior. However, the triumph wasn't the only thing they were work on down there. They put in a lot of hard work on their own cars and the cars of people in the community. They helped to keep the teachers cars in shape.

"Cars are America's passion and if you like cars and working with your hands this is the club for you and I mean everybody likes cool cars. Boys like cool cars, girls like cool cars. If you're riding around in a cool car you feel cool," said Robak. This sentiment was echoed and embodied by all of the members of this club. "It's a hands-on type of learning and we work together like a family," said Chris Taylor, sophomore, "We even compete and get the chance to meet people who like the same things as us." Competition was also a main focus of the members of the club. The 350 rebuild team, one of the teams that was sent to competition, worked almost every day after school to perfect their skills. They disassembled the engine and laid out all the parts. With tools laid out and organized, they set the timer and tried to reassemble it with few faults and as quickly and efficiently as possible. The members of auto club had fun, worked hard, and stood by each other and their work. They are the few, the proud, the auto club. - Alexandra Stupka

YORK BROUGHT TOGETHER

With the amount of students at York, it is hard to bring together the many groups of students. Circle of Friends managed to do so every year. Circle of Friends was a group that let students work with other students from different backgrounds and abilities. The group met twice a month to plan events with all the students.

Mr. Andrew Bendelow created a very relaxed enviroment and Circle of Friends was very easy to be involved in. All one had to do was come to a meeting and leadership positions were easily filled.

The group plans event such as: holiday parties, trips to the zoo, a dance party, a shopping trip, dinner parties, and attending sporting events like a York basketball game. Mr. Andrew Benedolw, advisor of the group said, "the mission of our group is too keep the circle of friends wide." And indeed they achieved that. At each meeting they would have around twenty to thirty members and they all had a good time.

The group has no officers or levels of leadership among members becuase Mr. Bendelow believes that everyone should be able to help out in planning and working on events. When asked about the basketball game they planned to attend Bendelow added, "We plan to have dinner before hand and we will teach the kids some cheers and make posters then go to the game."

Although the students of York were diverse, with different hobbbies and interests, Circle of Friends brought students together in a common goal to widen the circle of communication, friendship, and acceptance around York. The group brings together York by opening the minds of students to new friends and everyone they meet. - Kathryn McGirk

SKILLS FOR LIFE

Everyone knows the major clubs and their associations, the world language department has their clubs, there are the Math team and Science Olympiad. But there is also Skills USA, which is part of the Industrial Tech Department. Anyone who wanted to further their industrial arts skills, or wished to compete against kids from others schools could join and go down to their competitions. Skills even helped prepare students for future careers in the various specialties. "I wanted to be an engineer and Skills is really helping me get to that career" said Anthony Cano, sophomore, who did Computer-aided design in Skills.

Each area of Skills prepared for the competition differently. Woods worked on building and Auto studies worked on cars. Graphic Arts practiced working on their shirts and CAD practiced their projects on the computers. Principles of Physics worked on problems and wrote essays to be presented at the competition.

Skills USA was only open to people in an industrial technology class. This included autoshop, CAD, woodshop, principles of physics and graphic arts. "It prepares you for the world by teaching you the skills you'll need when you're older in a way you understand," said Gina Bonafiglio, junior, "I'm really glad I took a Tech class and joined the club."

"Skills is about content, academic excellence, leadership, participation in a group, community service and competition" said Mr. Kenneth Ross, sponsor, who many students affectionately call "Ross Boss." This club seeked to help prepare the club members for life outside of schools, teaching them about leadership and hands-on work. Ross took the club to work at a food bank, as well as having the woodshop kids build chairs which they donated to people who need furniture. - Blake Harms

Ready
FOR THE REAL WORLD

Positive Role Models Inspiring Direction to Excellence. This phrase, otherwise known to York students as PRIDE, recognizes a group of students who understand that teens can have fun without using drugs and alcohol. This organization is open to all York students who are interested in meeting new people and learning drug and alcohol free. Catherine Knopf, senior, explained why PRIDE is important to York. "We provide a support system for students to encourage them to make good choices."

PRIDE provides a safe and fun environment in which every student shares the same beliefs regarding drugs and alcohol. Kerry Robbins, senior, gives a positive message to those who are interested in joining the fun: "You don't have to participate in every activity we hold, the most important thing is that you sign the pledge, encourage others to do the same, and uphold your promise to restrain from drugs and alcohol." PRIDE offers students the opportunity to participate in an activity once a month where they can escape from the pressures of high school.

Current members always welcome new students to join them in all of their out-of-school activities. This year's group has participated in Field house Nights, Dinner and a Play, and Feed My Starving Children. Each of these events was open to whomever was interested in serving the community, as well as getting to know other students in a relaxed environment. Knopf also added, "PRIDE exposes members to different leadership techniques that they can use in the community." Kira Tebbe, junior, has been an active member of PRIDE since freshman year and shares the importance of the club's status here at York. "It's the only club at York [whose sole purpose is to advocate] against drinking and drugs. The community needs to know that not all high students do drugs, and PRIDE is a great way to communicate that." This organization reached out to hundreds of York students and planned to continue spreading the positive message to the entire community. - Carla Pakenas

OUR HISTORY IS OUR STRENGTH

"What does a feminist look like?" This was the question posed to the student body by Empower, a club dedicated to bringing women's issues to light. Geena Barry, senior, said, "Empower increases awareness about women's issues so a future generation can continue to strive for equality." During meetings, members discussed current events, from abortion to the portrayal of women in the media. All members' voices and opinions were heard while these important issues were touched upon.

Empower was a major advocate for V-Day, a global activist movement to end violence against women of all ages. Posters were put on bulletin boards throughout the school, and students were encouraged to sign a petition in the Commons. Red Vs were also passed around by Empower members to gather support from their peers. In March, Empower teamed up with Ms. Lindsey DiTomasso's Women's Studies class, making it their mission to educate the York community on the achievements of women during Women's History Month. MISSING posters donned the walls, displaying advances women have made in the fields of science, math, athletics, journalism, politics, etc. Students also participated in The Clothesline Project. They read t-shirts created by survivors of sexual, physical, and verbal assault while various sounds in the background reminded them of how frequently abuse occurs. Sophia Kelly, senior, said, "It not only draws awareness to the issue, but allows viewers to gain a deeper understanding of how life changing assault can be. From this experience I learned to be more aware and sensitive of others because there are always people around you that have been affected."

Empower's efforts were successful this year. Students became informed on issues affecting women and were encouraged to make changes in their own lives. Kelly added, "As a society we need to lift up survivors of assault and stop the insensitive comments about rape or any other form of abuse." Everyone can do their part to educate themselves and bring about a new generation of empowered individuals. - Shannon Kwit

TIMES are Changing

Amnesty International is a club driven to promote equality, sympathy, and knowledge. They organized events to bring attention to various events occurring to educate the student body and protest against injustice. This year was a successful one, but brought about many uncertainties for the future.

This year, Amnesty International educated students on important civil rights issues. They started the year with a concert, with the proceeds going to buy nets to prevent malaria. Concerts were a great way for the club to get students involved in helping with different issues, but also took a significant amount of planning from the club. As Analiese Dorff, freshman, said, "It feels really good when you bring everything together and it is successful." Additionally, they introduced the petitions in the commons during lunch, which focused a lot on revoking the death penalty. They hosted V-Day, on February 14 where they passed out red velvet V's to students to bring awareness and protest violence against women. They focused on preventing rape in the Congo, and had petitions for students to sign during lunches as well. All of these events were designed to get as much student involvement as possible. "We want people to get involved in resolving issues, and making the world a better place," said Dorff.

The club will be experiencing a bit of a change next year, with the retiring of Ms. Joan Davis. She was the sponsor for 20 years, and felt the main goal was to combine education with activism. "It is critically important to practice good citizenship, not just learn about it," said Davis. She was an open-minded teacher, who was respected by her students. "Ms. Davis is a teacher that genuinely cares about students' interests rather than what she wants to accomplish. She trusts us to make the decisions," said Margaret Quigley, senior. However, the club is hopeful that a strong leader can come in and direct the very active group of students. Amnesty International has greatly benefited the students at York, and is imperative that the club continues to do so, even with the change in leadership. – Abigail White

ACADEMICS

One Word, BEEF

Band. Marching, Pep, Symphonic, Cadet, Concert, and Jazz band. All of these groups combine every year to form one super group, York band. "I don't think there is any other community like it at York," said Shelby Kost, senior. That is exactly what the band members pride themselves on; their intense sense of family and their great camaraderie made the York band so unique. How did this come about? No one really knew, but they were incredibly thankful for it. "It's just organic. They just come together in this community with this great feeling of oneness, which makes everything better," said Mr. Michael Pavlik, band director. "Having 130 people march, move, and play at the same time is an extremely difficult task, and the family that emerges from succeeding makes marching band amazing," said Kevin Birchok, senior. The band family that emerged required devotion; it was what caused the members to go above and beyond, to meet at McDonalds after games and to have barbecues and dance parties over the summer. "In short, band is the biggest family I have, and that's pretty cool," said Birchok.

York band students showed incredible dedication to the program by going after school to prepare in sectional practices, where smaller groups of students who play the same or similar instruments can practice. They also chose to show up in various costumes to support the basketball team as part of the pep band. Various theme nights included, zombie night, black tie night, and beach night. "Band is the one thing I look forward to in my day" said Claire Grabinski, senior.

WRITING

For a Reason

With news breaking all the time, globally and locally, the members of York-hi were quick to pick up the stories and shed light on them for the rest of York. They described themselves as having a family feel, but each article was usually done independently and required students to do their own research outside of class. Ms. Kimberly Lampa, advisor of the newspaper, said "As deadline approaches, the atmosphere becomes more intense and hectic at times. But, regardless of what stage we're in, we always manage to maintain a sense of humor." With annual end-of-the-year parties, a week of Secret Santa gifts, a holiday dinner, and getting together after school to organize and finish everything for their deadlines, the members of York-hi certainly bonded and had a lot of fun together. Patrick McKenna, sophomore, said "We have a good time in class every day. There's something new to learn each time you come to class."

However, the newspaper was not just fun and games. With a little over 20 members, writers and designers were always busy working hard to make the next newspaper even better than the last. A typical day in the York-hi room consisted of writers working on their next articles or researching and interviewing and artists discussing their assignments with the writers, sketching drafts or photographers taking photos. The editorial staff would hold meetings to discuss the direction of the current issue.

The staff was focused on getting the readers' attention and writing about what York really wanted to hear - interesting and new stories. "Readers like articles to which they can relate. Our newspaper serves a specific community, so when we can bring their ideas, concerns, and culture to print, readers will be able to find something relatable," said Sarah Mitchell, editor and senior.

The newspaper always managed to bring something new to the table each time an issue was published. This was a goal that the staff kept in mind throughout the year because according to McKenna, "an article needs to be entertaining, interesting, insightful, and teach the reader something new while reading it." The members of York-hi consistently were able to bring successful newspapers to our school and were proud of the finished product, especially after having put in so much time and effort. - Julia Cahill

"Have a great day YORK!"

"And those were your YTV Daily Announcements!" This phrase has been heard every day in the beginning of second period for years. The hardworking group of students that work on the announcements were split into two periods of the day. The two periods alternated between who did the announcements and who made other small videos to put into the announcements. They dedicated the whole period and after the bell to perfecting the announcements that were viewed by the student body. At the beginning of each week, each student chose what he or she would wanted to do and everyone got a chance to do every job. There were two anchors, an editor, a main director, a teleprompter, a switcher and a back ground. Each person handled their own tasks and helped each other out. Ms. Carly Croll and Mr. Brendan Chambers, advisors, led this group of students in completing the tasks that were at hand.

When spending every day working together to complete the tasks at hand, the YTV crew grew as a family. They liked to share a few laughs with each other as they worked but they also kept it professional. They came together as a group to complete the tasks and created an atmosphere that made them look forward to this class. Shawn Goetz, senior, said, "We all spend so much time together making videos or filming the announcements you really feel comfortable with the people you work with. Everyone is always happy, it's the best part of the day." This was a class where you can be yourself, do what you love and make people laugh.

This year the YTV crew had an unfortunate loss of a staff member with the death of Michael Lerud, senior, who was an important part of YTV. It hurt the staff greatly, but they coped with trying to make the best videos and announcements because filming and editing was what Lerud loved. They also made three twenty-minute long tribute videos for him, led mostly by his friend Leland Tellefsen, senior. Karl Grant, senior, said, "He spent countless weeks filming all of the footage of Mike and making some really moving videos filled with interviews with all YTV students speaking out about what Mike meant to them." Despite the loss they encountered, YTV made outstanding announcements and fulfilled the goals of making the best videos and annoucements. - Liz Bullen

CONQUERING the cha

Welcome to "Grand Central Station." Affectionately nicknamed by the editors, the Y's Tales lab was always busy with staff members rushing about to complete various tasks. This year, the editors took a new approach in creating the yearbook. For the first time the theme, "Something to Marvel At," was established by the entire staff. Abby White, junior, said, "In previous years there was less collaboration with the theme, but I'm happy we listened to everyone's ideas. I think the book accurately represents the student body because of it." Staff members were also adamant about having a large number of photos in the book in order to include as many students as possible.

Unlike some other academic classes, where students might have nightly homework assignments, Y's Tales doled out assignments about every two weeks. Staff members received a topic and were expected to interview subjects, write a focus piece, take photos, and then compile all the components onto a spread. During the first few weeks of school, the editors gave advice to new staff on how to approach students and teachers for interviews. Courtney Moles, junior, said, "the editors gave me the confidence to be able to go out and talk to people I didn't know." Once the basics were addressed, the staff quickly went to work. With 127 spreads in the book to complete, there was no time to waste.

The editors and staff were constantly under pressure to complete spreads by deadlines. Ms. Isadora Parrini, advisor, said, "The staff does a great job of getting their work done and maintaining a sense of humor." Editors handed back spreads and copy to be corrected at warp speed. Genevieve Rizzo, junior, said, "There's a lot of pressure to complete spreads on time. You don't want to disappoint anyone and everyone is counting on you."

Despite the hectic atmosphere, the chaos came to an end after the final deadline was met. The most rewarding part of the year came as staff members passed out yearbooks to their peers. White said, "Being able to compile the pieces of the book all year long and then finally see it at the end of the year as a finished product makes all the craziness worth it."

Can't Take the Heat

GET OUT OF THE KITCHEN

One of the best aspects of York is the diverse nature of the talents of its students. FCCLA is a perfect example of that attribute. FCCLA is a national career and technical student organization, and it is open to all York students who are enrolled in a Family and Consumer Science class. Although many different categories, such as Cake Decorating, Interior Design, Sportswear, and Pre-School Storytelling, exist in FCCLA, the same principle, excellence in career and technical fields, was promoted throughout the year.

York's members in FCCLA experienced unprecedented levels of success in their competitions this past year. At the competitive regional competition, York students earned twenty five first-place ribbons, fifteen second-place ribbons, and three third-place ribbons. In addition, eighteen students either qualified for the State competition or won the distinction of the most outstanding project in their category. "With all the hard work that the students put into the competition, I knew that York would take it to the top," said Brittany Biggs, graduate. York certainly continued their success at the state competition, where they earned thirty three medals. Also, Kody Glover, graduate, Rita Wirth and Christina O'Connor, juniors, earned the "most outstanding" distinction in their category, and Alex Tondu, graduate, and Jennifer Egert, senior, qualified for the national level. "We are very proud of all of our student's accomplishments in their individual events," said Ms. Albert.

A great deal of this success can be attributed to the FCCLA advisors Ms. Albert, Ms. Egley, Ms. Ibrahim, Ms. Kania, Ms. Miller, and Ms. Weatherford. Melissa Cozzi, graduate, praised Ms. Albert for her confidence in the group members and her ability to help the students. Cozzi also said, "Ms. Albert is probably the most wonderful and helpful teacher I've ever had." It was the guidance of all FCCLA's sponsors that enabled the group to have such a wonderfully successful year. -Mark Nosek

the love of arts

A student does not need to be the next Michelangelo or Van Gogh to enjoy taking the art classes at York High School. Students of all skill levels are accepted in this department of the school and can discover inner creative talents.

One of the art teachers, Ms. Amanda Claus teaches drawing classes, and the ceramics classes. Claus also started the very first mural painting club at York in the fall. Mural club has done commission murals as well as murals in around the building. Claus said, "Helping each student find their individual artistic voice is my favorite part of teaching. Sometimes students must let go of the fear of ruining something; once you let go you can enjoy the artistic process." Claus is one of four art teachers at York including Mr. Rich Edgley, Ms. Kelsey Manning, and the department chair, Tom Wolf who has seen every type of student and all their variety of talents and has had the pleasure of teaching many different types of art. Wolfe said, "My favorite part of teaching art is getting to know the kids and sharing the excitement of creating art and the discovery of one's self by the end. I love that."

There is a wide variety of courses available to the students including: drawing, different types of painting, ceramics, jewelry and photography. Among the students who were a part of the art classes provided in this department was Margret Quigley, senior. Quigley said, "The thing I enjoy the most about being in an art class is that you can get nothing wrong! My favorite class was watercolors with Mr. Wolfe. At first it was difficult but I discovered how versatile it was." Art is a freedom of expression and there is no right or wrong answer. To students considering art classes, Mollie O'shea, senior said, "Art classes allow you to think more creatively than many other classes."

LEADING THE WAY

York has a wide variety of students who all need to be represented. Student council was the group that led and represented the student body. This year's student council was a great example of a group of excellent students looking to make York a better place for their peers, whether it was working on ideas for the canteen or planning fundraisers such as the blood drive and food drive. They took an important role in not only helping York but helping the community. Erik Nerison, junior, said, "Every semester we have course, said, "Every semester we have to think of individual and class service projects, to keep us busy and spread our help throughout the community."

The members of student council gave up their lunch periods to work on their events. The students met in Ms. Shelia Felming's room as a group and after they took attendance and talked over York news, they broke into small groups for each event to help the flow of ideas. They definitely created some great events and fundraisers for York over the years including all the dance projects, and the multi-annual blood drive.

The Student Council also provided a much needed spirit boost to the halls of York. They allowed everyone to get involved by making decisions about Homecoming week, and the all-school dances. This year student council planned Homecoming and had the largest turn out of all time. Eric Glaubke, junior, said, "We are really trying to make dances bigger and better and we're trying to increase dance attendance by bringing in new things such as Boom! Entertainment"

Student Council takes an active role in the community by letting each member do service projects Glaubke recalled " I have worked on individual service projects such as working as a Salvation Army bell ringer and going to Feed My Starving Children and working Northern Illinois Food Bank." Overall, student council allows students to get a fulfilling experience out of high school by taking a part in not only in York, but taking part in their community as well. - Kathryn McGirk

THE REAL DEAL

Medical Careers is an exciting, challenging, and eye-opening course. Taking up two periods during the day, students in medical careers were able to devote a lot of time and attention to the class.

First semester consisted of memorization of the anatomy, lectures, research and dissections. Second semester was when the exciting part came in. Students took part in clinical rotations, most of which were at Elmhurst Memorial Hospital. However, some students did their rotations at DeVries Animal Hospital, Elmhurst Dental Care, and the rehabilitation services at the Courts Plus and at the Center for Health. In all, students participated in 27 different areas of the hospital and various other facilities. With exciting rotations ranging from shadowing nurses and doctors in the emergency room, to the family birthing center, watching surgeries, students were always occupied with something new and interesting. Ms. Catie Feigh said, "It is taking what you have learned in a classroom and applying it in a real life setting. It is putting all this information you have stored in your brain to use in a real clinical setting. It is listening to a medical professional and actually understanding what they are saying and then having the opportunity to learn more."

The experience helped students realize that the medical field really was the place they wanted to continue on to. Peyton Cross, senior, said, "I feel so lucky to have the opportunity to get up close and personal with the doctors and patients. It has helped me realize how passionate I am about entering this field." Although first semester may have been difficult and required a lot of hard studying, second semester made it all worth it. Cross said, "second semester was a great break from class as well as an amazing experience." High school is a place to start thinking about where you want to go in life and where you're going to take yourself next. Medical careers was a great course to get that hands-on experience and the opportunities that most high school students do not have. -Julia Cahill

Where the music takes you

THAT'S WHERE YOU'LL BE...

Are you in the mood for beautiful harmonies? Elegant syncopations? Melodious voices from talented young men and women? Well then look no further than York's very own choir. A group of classes devoted to learning the fundamentals of vocal music performance, it has three divisions. Cadet Chorus, Choraliers, and Concert Choir, all of which participated in annual choral concerts. Led by Ms. Rebecca Marianetti, Choir offerd an excellent way to improve creative and vocal abilities and provided exposure to genres such as classical, contemporary, folk, barbershop, and Broadway.

"Ms. Marianetti is a fantastic director," said Margaret Lippert, senior. "She helps us learn and grow into musicians. In addition, the overall atmosphere is one thing students love about the class. "Choir is a place where you can be yourself. Everyone is there to sing, and it brings out the best in you," said Brett Bandy, senior.

One of the notable highlights included the annual concerts throughout the year. Specifically the holiday concert, which was a "smash hit!" according to Amy Costello, senior. "We spent a lot of time on Mozart's Mass in C Major. It was such hard work, but the final product came out wonderfully. We sounded truly amazing!"

Choir students were incredibly dedicated to developing themselves both as musicians and people. "It has really helped me in a lot of ways. Besides the chance to learn music, I've also made friends and had a lot of fun doing it," said Phoenix Melvin, senior. "Most of us have taken the class all four years, and it shows how committed we are to Ms. Marianetti and our love of vocal performance." - Mollie O'Shea

The Academic

EXPERIENCE

Academics are the backbone of the high school experience. Students attended classes to develop critical thinking skills, gain new perspectives, and challenge ideas. York provided a multitude of resources for students to reach their full potential, from aspiring artists and chefs, to future chemists and teachers. Places such as the Math Lab, Writing Center, and Science Resource Center became a place of refuge when students found themselves facing challenging material. Katherine Nelson, junior, praised the Math Lab, saying, "You can come in knowing you'll receive help." Teachers also created a positive learning environment. Michael Kirby, sophomore, said, "I feel like the teachers at York have showed me how I need to work hard and persevere through tough subjects to keep succeeding in school."

From creating class presentations to writing essays, students were always working. In the morning, students of all grades crowded the halls, the Caf, and the Commons to finish their homework. Even though there was much work to be done, students understood its importance. Samantha Ward, senior, said, "You are only going to get out of a class what you were willing to put in, regardless of the workload."

Students also took an active role in their education when over 500 students participated in the National Student Walkout to show their support for teacher unions in Wisconsin. John Sullivan, senior, said, "We talk a lot in school about getting involved [in the democratic process], but when given the opportunity to do so I was glad to see kids actually took the chance." With students showing a vested interest in their education, York continues to thrive as an academic institution.

Striving for EXCELLENCE

With every club at York having something different to offer to the community, the members of National Honor Society have gone above and beyond what is expected of them while in high school. Even though members only become eligible for induction starting junior year, this year the club had just about 300 members. In addition to the large size of the group, the senior board also decided to make changes that would benefit the new members and future members as well. Gloria Martinez, president, explained, "The service hours were increased, more juniors were inducted, the board members changed, and Ms. Stein is a new sponsor." With all of these positive additions, the members were challenged to seek out service opportunities individually to complete their increased amount of hours. Jenna Landenberger, historian on this year's board, expressed the qualifications. "Our sponsors look for members that are involved in the school and community, and that take on leadership roles".

Along with leadership, members also demonstrated scholarship, character, and service. Each member was required to submit an application that displayed each of these traits that they will continue to show all through high school and life after high school as well. National Honor Society believed that these were qualities that not only members should exemplify, but everyone at York as well. Secretary Adrian Guzman, senior, explained the qualities further. "One thing that is required is for each member to know the importance of giving back." York's National Honor Society participated in several group service projects this year, including Adopt- A- Family, Salvation Army Bell Ringing, November Toiletry Drive, and Adopt- A- Park at Butterfield. These projects gave members the opportunity to get to know other National Honor Society members and give back to the community in a fun and relaxed atmosphere.

This year the board also decided to reach out to York's Java Live to collaborate on a fundraiser. Landenberger explained, "All year we've been working on creating and selling orange wristbands in honor of Mike Lerud. It's a way to remember him as well as raise money for cancer." York's chapter was prominent in the community because they worked hard to make a difference and impact everyone around them. - Carla Pakenas

THE SWEET sound of music

The York Orchestra practice room was filled with the faint sound of music that lingered throughout. Every day during 2nd, 3rd, and 5th periods, from after school sectionals, to rehearsals and performances, the York orchestra students worked hard to sound perfect. "Orchestra is composed of many different students with a variety of interests and personalities, but we are all united through music," said Mr. Ray Ostwald, director.

All of the continuous hard work kept everyone playing their best at all times. With different rankings based on skill level, along with specialized practices known as sectionals, the students were able to base their goals and see their progression as the year went on. Developing musically is sometimes overlooked, but the value was seen in the personalities and dedication of the orchestra students. Seen as a nice break from the pressures of achieving academic excellence, orchestra was a time to unwind and focus energy into something other than school. "It's not only a hobby, but it is also a bit of a priority. It's nice to practice and work towards something as enjoyable as music," said Duffy Pitlock, junior.

It became a rewarding success when students set goals and achieved them. Being able to play advanced and challenging compositions or other exciting abilities like composing original music gave so many areas for kids to succeed, no matter what level they were at. "It's really cool when you look back to how much progress you have made since freshmen year," said Katherine Kirby, senior. Cadet Orchestra is geared towards incoming freshmen. Although they were freshmen and some were beginners, they by no means lacked talent. With great progress and development, Concert Orchestra was the next level. Concert Orchestra focused on furthering skills in preparation for Symphonic Orchestra. Symphonic Orchestra consists of the most developed musicians who posses not only skill and talent, but dedication and commitment for the love of music.

At the end of the year, Ostwald expressed that all the hard work had noticeably paid off. "At times there was a lot of practicing and work to be done, but looking back on it, it was all worth it," said Natalie Mordini, senior. A sense of pride could be found in the progress made. "It's really rewarding when the seniors recognize how much they've grown over the four years they've played," said Ostwald. The devotion and love for the music along with a studious work ethic granted many students with success. - Kailee Sweeney

In Loving Memory of Michael Lerud

We Remember Them

At the rising of the sun and at its going down
We remember them.
At the blowing of the wind and in the chill of winter
We remember them.
At the opening of the buds and in the rebirth of spring
We remember them.
At the blueness of the skies and in the warmth of summer
We remember them.
At the rustling of the leaves and in the beauty of autumn
We remember them.
At the beginning of the year and when it ends
We remember them.
As long as we live, they too will live, for they are now a part of us as
We remember them.
When we are weary and in need of strength
We remember them.
When we are lost and sick at heart
We remember them.
When we have joy we crave to share
We remember them.
When we have decisions that are difficult to make
We remember them.
When we have achievements that are based on theirs
We remember them.
So long as we live, they too shall live, for they are now a part of us as
We remember them.

From Roland B. Gittelsohn

EAT, DANCE

AND BE MERRY

The first semester finals are finished, and some seniors are done with high school permanently. Other seniors are relieved that there is just one more semester left of high school. This called for a celebration to take place. Senior Soiree is a social event in which only seniors were allowed to participate. This was a night for them to reflect on memories and create new ones. It was held at the Diplomat West on January 13. None of this could have happened without Biatriz Rivera, senior class president. She dedicated her time to organizing the event. Rivera started to plan this event a month after school started and took the whole semester to figure out the decorations, meals served, and place of the event. Rivera said, "All of the hard work and tedious planning was definitely worth it!"

The most anticipated moment of this social event was the Mr. Duke Contest. The competitors, Iavor Entchev and Kyle Leone, seniors, participated in a number of events to win the crowds' votes. Entchev and Leone strutted their stuff down the "runway" in their beachwear with accessories. Then the talent portion came up and Entchev gave a hip-hop dance where he did impressive toe touches. Leone had a stand-up comedy act for which he got laughs and cheers from the crowd. Overall it was a close competition but in the end only one could stand tall with the free prom tickets. When asked who the lucky lady would be, Entchev responded, "Prom is still a few months away so I'm not sure who I'll ask, but I will have to find someone because I don't want to waste the free tickets."

After the full course meal and the Mr. Duke Contest there was a live DJ that brought everyone to the dance floor. Nina Vujasinovic, senior, said, "It was a great new experience with the food and dancing. It was a chance for all of us to hang out." People danced the night away. At the end of the night the seniors dispersed with joy of just having one semester left of high school. Seniors 11' will remember this night forever. - Liz Bullen

Thank You...

Liz- For always finishing what we gave you and always taking on extra work. The extra spread, the last minute spread, correcting senior names- none of this would have happened without you.
Brittany- For taking intiative and asking for help when you needed to. You always had plenty of pictures, and were always willing to take more. You were always so sweet.
Joachim- For your creative headlines, volunteering to do extra work, and cranking out namelists. Your constant optimism and coming in on weekends helped more than you know.
Luisa- For being such a helpful photographer, and always completing your work on time. We are thankful for your upbeat attitude, and crafty photoshop work.
Ellen- For your help in taking pictures at the football games and other school events. We truly appreciate your willingness to help others.
Blake- For introducing the staff to your gaming and hacking ways. Your laid-back attitude helped when we were really stressed out.
Erik- For your sunny disposition and adding a certain suave to the staff that is simply irreplacable. P.S. We like both watches.
Kathryn-For giving your lunch periods to the infamous yearbook lab. We could always count on you to help with spreads, namelists, or anything else we needed when we were down to the wire.
Courtney- For your help, hard work, and taking on namelists at the last minute. We couldn't have done this without you.
Mollie- For taking on extra spreads and your ability to keep the class entertained and full of fun. Without you, there would be no photos from the photo company.
Carla-For always turning in your work on time. You were always so nice when we gave you extra work. Namelists, namelists, namelists.
Genie- For putting so much time and effort into perfecting your body copies. You did your work with such a positive attitude.
Eric- For providing quotes and triple checking layouts and pictures to catch things we wouldn't have during the craziness. The microwave has never been so spotless.
Maggie-For always getting your work done and always being ready to take on fun, neverending namelists. Your luck was terrible, but you always seemed to overcome it. Way to keep the family tradition alive.
Julia- For doing every job we stuck you with, and always doing it with a smile on your face. Your willingness to run crazy errands was such a big help!
Alex- For your creative and witty recruitment posters and ideas in general; your dedication was much appriciated. You are the Yin to Blake's Yang.
Kailee- For your ability to instantly silence the class with your laugh. You really stepped up this year: coming in on weekends, chasing people down, identifying photos, and organizing the index. No Climbing.
Jill- For bringing your unique sense of style to the book, from headlines to divider pictures. You have such a creative eye and always encouraged us to think outside the box. We were so glad to see you at the dreaded weekend morning meetings. Next time there'll be a sleepover.
Abby-For your dedication. You were the heart and soul of this book. In the midst of all the chaos you never hesitated to jump right in. You led the staff by example: from cranking out spreads, to creating layouts, to organizing and checking every name list in the book. Your never-ending enthusiasm and sense of humor got us through those long weekends and late nights. Your passion and drive made all of this possible. Next year's book is in good hands.
Shannon- Thank you for your never-ending commitment and positive outlook on the chaos that was this yearbook. Your devotion went beyond meticulously correcting spreads, editing body copies, perfecting the opening, creating layouts, and completing spreads in record time. You brought a new significance to the book, and you will be sadly missed next year. I hope your dorm room looks nothing like A311.
Ms. P- For always influencing our lives in a positive way; we never left the class without a life lesson. You helped us create more than a yearbook; you helped us grow as students and as people. The endless hours you dedicated and your patience with three neurotic editors made this book possible. We are truly grateful. The words "thank you" just don't seem to suffice.
