YORK COMMUNITY HIGH SCHOOL 2011

YORK

This yearbook captures the events of the year: a dance, a class, a game, a competition, a meeting, a concert, a rehearsal. But high school memories go beyond these events; they are moments in time. It is the moments between friends, the ridiculous excuses for being late, the running from hall monitors. It is having moments of clarity in class, understanding teachers, and school spirit. It is feeling a part of something. These moments seem like seconds, but in reality they are part of many high school experiences combined. To look at them in that moment cannot do the memories justice. Experiences are much more than what is captured in words and pictures—they are Beyond Definition.

LOYALITY: A feeling of faithfulness or allegiance

YORK'S FINEST

ELEGANT: Splendid or luxiurious in dress, style, and design

When the word Prom comes to mind York students might think "classy," "excitement," or "phenomenal." Any combination of these adjectives could have been used to describe 2011Prom. This one dance can easily be considered an obsession for the students at York. Every year juniors and seniors count down the days until they get to put on their finest and enjoy a night of dancing and fun with their friends and dates.

Although both boys and girls look forward to this end-of-the-year tradition, the experience was different for both genders. "I just slept in, ate some breakfast, chilled, and then went to prom," said Adam Greer, senior. While the experience and getting ready for Prom for a girl was much different. "Girls have so many things to do. On the day of Prom you get your nails done, your hair done, and your makeup. It's a busy day," said Michelle Cernauske, senior.

Along with the fun that is Prom night, a lot of hard work goes into making all the fun happen. The people in charge of making the night run smoothly were the York Student Council. The committees for planning consisted of the junior members of Student council. There were many aspects to planning prom that one may not realize. "The hardest thing about planning Prom is fundraising. Prom is expensive and we had to raise a lot of money to make Prom affordable for all students," said Cori Duncan, senior. Student Council had to work to provide all the food and entertainment for the night. The results of the dance are always phenomenal, thanks to the hard work and time put in by the student council committees.

Prom remains the highlight of the dances at York for seniors and juniors every year. The effort of the planning committees and the staff into making this night special and memorable for the students always paid off in the end. York's obsession with Prom was justified by everything the spring's Prom offered. By Kathryn McGirk

SO-LONG, FAREWELL

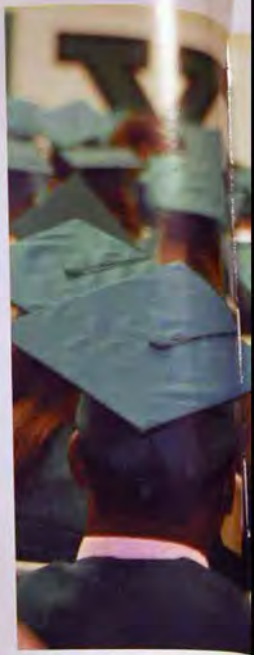

FINALE: the concluding part of any performance, course of proceedings, etc.; end

On May 22, 2011 the graduates of York High School sat in the fieldhouse for what would probably be the last time. Joined by family and friends, students gathered round to commemorate their four years at York. "I can't believe it's over. I've waited for this day for four years, and now that it is finally here I wish it wasn't," said Annalise Moll.

Anissa Calvin and Jerica Vaughn started the ceremony after being welcomed by Ms. Diana Smith, Principal. Calvin and Vaughn talked of the life lessons they learned in the past four years, and contemplated where it would take them. John Sullivan followed with a speech titled, "The Intelligent Person's Guide to Predicting the Future and Recognizing the Relative Nature of Exercises in Excess, Otherwise Known as 'A Graduation Speech,'" which satirized the average high school experience in a quirky, light-hearted way.

Ezequiel Reynaga performed a musical piece he wrote and composed, "Moments I Live For," followed by the final speech of the afternoon by Sara Mitchell. Her speech, "The Symphony," carried the analogy that high school was like a symphony in all of its characteristics, and the seniors were in the last movement.

Holly Hughes, who sang at the commencement ceremony, said, "Although it's the end of high school, life has only just begun. There is so much to do, who knows where we'll all end up." With endless possibilities, Ms. Smith expressed her high hopes of good things to come for the class of 2011. She voiced the opportunities that await each and every one, but also reflected on the preparation they received. Talking about college plans and what options were close at hand, Jorge Morales, said, "I'm uncertain of what I'll do, but I'm excited for the future to come." What is to come in life may be undefined, but the 2011 graduates of York High School were prepared for any challenge they may face. By Kailee Sweeney

SUMMER FUN

Summer is a [illegible] time where [illegible]

Students say [illegible] their early [illegible] tasking school work. For three whole months, students are given freedom to choose how they spend their time. Whether it is working, volunteering, or just hanging out with friends, students took advantage of many opportunities to make this summer unforgettable.

Many students went to foreign countries in various programs for something new to do in the summer. Rachael White, senior, decided to spend two weeks of her summer in Thailand. For half the time she was on an elephant conservation where she got to work with a Pang Wang Jaow—an elephant trainer—to learn how the animal works. The other half was spent in an orphanage, where she worked with a students on improving their English. "The English barrier was very difficult; you had to find different ways to communicate. But I still made friends while speaking different languages and having different cultural [illegible] Rachael White, senior, [illegible] John Hennessey, senior, [illegible] experienced a new culture when he went to the Galapagos Islands on a trip sponsored by National Geographic. He applied for the trip just to "try something entirely new." The trip had aspects of service; they got to help in the village preschool and participated in the reforestation project. Yet Hennessey's most memorable part was snorkeling at Kicker Rock. "I was surrounded with dozens of sea turtles, Galapagos sharks, and hammerheads. It's something I'll never forget," said Henessey.

Ann Fazzio, graduate, spent her summer in camp Tecumsah as a camp counselor. She spent seven weeks working with day campers, practicing archery, going fishing, and playing capture the flag. Fazzio expected it to be a challenge, but did not anticipate the effect the campers would leave at the end of the summer. "I didn't realize how big of an impact camp would have on my own, it was truly life changing," said Fazzio.

creating HOPE

HOPE: The feeling that what is wanted can be had

Relay for Life brings students together to accomplish three things: celebrate, remember, and fight back. "It makes everyone a significant equal part of the service as one unified people who all share a common cause – to benefit those in need," said Jay Adkins, senior. The goal of relay is to bring awareness to the school and community and raise money for cancer research.

Come together, students formed groups with their friends to raise as much money as possible. Groups did everything from an Easter egg hunt to singing at peoples' doorsteps to raise money. "Singing door to door was really awkward but it was worth it because the singing was for a good cause," said Alex Mimlitz, junior. The students raised just over $45,000.

Relay for Life started with a victory lap celebrating the people who have won the fight against cancer setting the mood for the night. The groups start the relay by having at least one person walking the track at all times throughout the night. The Luminaria Ceremony was in honor of those people who are fighting or who lost the battle against cancer. Lights were lit in bags spread around the track in remembrance of those who lost their lives. "The Luminaria Ceremony was the most moving part of the night. It reminded all of us of why we were there that night," said Scott Milling, junior.

At the end of the night, students left knowing that they made an impact in the fight against caner. "For the people that were there, they walked away more understanding and more united towards the fight against cancer," said Caroline Hogan, senior. Relay continues to provide hope and support for the many people fighting cancer. By Eric Glaubke

IMPOSSIBLE DREAMING

QUIXOTIC: To be extremely chivlarous or romantic while remaining an impratical visonary

There's something magical about being on stage that's hard to describe. The moment before you're whisked away into a land of music and acting, everything's silent and people are anxiously awaiting us to start. But in those moments before the lights hit and the music starts, that's when you feel it. That's when the magic begins," said Margaret Patchett, senior.

Last year's infamous spring musical production was the mystical tale, Man of La Mancha. This particular production explored the wild imagination of a prisoner known as Alonso Quijana, played by Brian Smith, graduate. In order to save himself from the Spanish Inquisition he put on a play and used his fellow prisoners as actors and became the lead role. This fantastical play brought the audience to an alternate world with an optimistic knight, Don Quixote. Quixote exposes the good in everyone and everything, including a morally unconcerned woman named Aldonza, played by both Kelsey Roberts, senior, and Geena Barry, graduate. Quixote ultimately teaches all that the impossible is only a barrier created to stop the achievment of one's dreams. However, Quixote is later faced with a challenge he cannot defeat and ultimately dies. Although the death remains a saddening scene, Quixote leaves people with a new and better outlook on life.

The rehearsal process for this musical production was rigorous. "We met a lot after school. You really worked up a sweat, but it was so worth it," said Kelsey Roberts, senior. The cast met nearly four times a week after school. After such tiring, yet necessary, rehearsals, Man of La Mancha premiered Thursday night, April 28th. "[opening night] went off without a hitch," said Ms. Rebecca Marianetti, director. Each performance met with boisterous standing ovations. "Man of La Mancha made you think of the kind of person you truly want to be and if you want to live your life to the fullest," said Annamarie Giordano, senior.

Although the musical itself passed, "Don Quixote" continues to live on in those that participated and those that viewed, reminding all that life is too short not to take chances and follow one's dreams. By Abby Rummage

SEEING STARS

STELLAR: like a star, as in brilliance, shape, etc.

Homecoming. This word makes people go frantic. Who will my date be? What dress will I wear? What group will I go in? The nervous excitement is all bottled up in the weeks leading up to the big dance, which is why many refer to Homecoming week as the most exciting part of the school year. "Dressing up for Homecoming week and then going all out for the homecoming football game really gets everyone in the spirit for the dance," said Liana Potoglou, junior. After a big win against the Oak Park River Forest football team at the homecoming game, the students were ready to dance.

This year's theme was Classic Hollywood. Student Council spent five hours at the school on the day of the dance to make sure the decorations, lighting, and music turned out perfectly. The photo booth was a new addition to this year's homecoming. Not only did it tie in well with the theme, but also served as a fun activity for students who needed a break from dancing. In order to make the photo booth free for students, Student Council had to capitalize on hand made decorations. This required help from other faculty members. "We borrowed palm trees from Ms. Marionetti, and film posters from Ms. Schackleton. Pulling everything together and seeing how successful the dance turned out was incredibly rewarding," said dance coordinator Jillian Hassler, senior.

The anxiety faded as students began to dance to the blasting music provided by BOOM! Entertainment. "The way BOOM! presented themselves was unique and fun, with an amazing light setup. You will never get all 2000 students pleased with the music choice, but I would say everyone seemed to enjoy themselves," said student council member Alexander Montesantos, junior. COME TOGETHER

Monday. Considered to be the worst day of the week, students wake up in the morning actively looking forward to it. Excited for what Homecoming Week had to offer, students and faculty alike started off the week with eagerness and energy. From Pajama Day on Monday, Class Color Day on Tuesday, Dress as Your Favorite Actor/Actress on Wednesday, Jersey Day on Thursday, and Green and White Day on Friday. Each day was met with whole-hearted participation despite the reduction in eagerness. "Well, like years past, the week was definitely tense in anticipation of the weekend to come, but this year there was significantly less electricity in the air about the York spirit, especially at the homecoming game (despite our crushing victory). The underclassmen this year will have big shoes to fill in order to keep that Duke Pride enthusiasm."

A process that began months prior, Student Council started the preparation for Homecoming Week at the end of [illegible] school term. "We use a voting system," explained Erin McHugh, senior. "After all the ideas are on the board, we discuss our options. Ultimately, the idea with the most votes is the next year's theme." Afterwards it was only a matter of bringing forth the decorations and then getting the students all riled up. Putting such dedication and hard work into the hopes of a good Homecoming Week and all that it had to offer, it all really paid off. Alexander Montesantos, junior, said, "There was so much energy and power. People responded really well to the spirit days."

At the end of the week, students and faculty gathered in the Green and White Gym. A huge roaring mass of school spirit and strength. Everyone who attended was pumped up to cheer on the football team that would later win that night. After an action-packed week, finishing with triumph, the school could celebrate with joy for the following night, the Homecoming Dance.

green SCENE

ZEALOUS: Enthusiam to the highest degree

If one were to step onto the polished floors of the Dick Campbell gym for the homecoming pep rally, one would find the color spectrum cease to exist. Vibrant shades of green dominate the cheering fans, creating a rowdy sea of team spirit. Freshmen new to the chaos scream in unison with veteran seniors creating an orchestra of sound, binding the student body as one.

Although the kelly green sported by students is a symbol of Duke Pride, the love felt for sporting events and club activities was displayed more adequately through dedication in attending such events. "No matter the weather, or if we're winning, our fans are there and that makes all the difference," said Jacob Rzeszutko, senior, safety for the varsity football team. From miles away on autumn Friday nights, raucous chants of "I believe that we will win" populate the darkened skies, exciting the community with a sense of Duke Pride.

Through tailgating, King of the Couch, and homecoming spirit week, students exemplified their true team spirit. The Mighty Dukes, made up of four senior boys, Brian Gleason, Jason Klappauf, Sean Kahovec, and Joshua Sutherland, were this year's King of the Couch winners. They succeeded in firing up the cheering fans and the players too. "They led our fans in crazy chants and got really excited whenever we made a good play. They really motivated us to do better in general, and in my opinion, had an overall impact on our win," said Kevin Szeluga, senior, middle linebacker for the varsity football team. The homecoming game resulted in a 35 to 7 win. Proud students stormed the field after the final whistle blew, creating an intoxicating air of excitement.

On game nights or in club meetings the power of the fans unleashed, not always loud, but forever present, the prominent idea and thought: this is York. By Abby Rummage

SWITCH UP

REVERSED: Opposite or contrary in order and character

Turnabout has always been a welcomed time for the boys of York High school, the stress of asking someone to the dance is reversed and laid upon the girls. For the girls, this time of year can become stressful amidst the excitement of the dance. "I love turnabout because it's a twist on the usual dance tradition but it can be hectic with all the work and planning that is expected of the girls," said Emily Vana, senior.

The Turnabout dance upheld its theme, "Just a dream" when the cafeteria and commons transformed into a room of sparkling lights and vivid colors. Excited students flooded the commons, walking in with bright colored dresses and ties. Students flocked to the dance floor and danced to the fresh jams the DJ was spinning. York Student Council provided the ever-exciting BOOM! Entertainment for this year's Turnabout.

Student Council, once again took on the tedious task of planning Turnabout, letting the sophomores take the lead in organizing the night of fun. "The hardest part of planning Turnabout is mainly publicity. We try to get all the students pumped up as much as we can for the dance, by having a "Snowcoming" week with spirit days, and have BOOM! Entertainment DJ our dance," said Anna Pankau, junior. Student Council put in many long hours to make the dance memorable for everyone. Their work did not go unnoticed this year; with a large attendance and a great DJ many students will remember Turnabout fondly. "The best part of planning Turnabout is defiantly seeing the results in the end. As a member of Student Council, it's rewarding to see everybody at the dance having a great time and to see all of our hard work paying off," added Pankau.

Turnabout was a time of role reversal for York High school; while it may have pushed some out of their comfort zone, overall the dance was a success as usual. With a phenomenal DJ, school spirit, and a lot of effort from the Student Council, Turnabout was truly a "dream" come true.

STRANGE TALES

MAGICAL: mysteriously enchanting; exciting

"The Secret in the Wings" is a collection of scary fairytales which opens with a little girl exploring her attic. Her parents go out and leave her with her neighbor—an ogre. The ogre then tries to get Heidi to marry him. When she refuses, he tells her fairytales, which come to life on the stage. The many weeks of hard work leading up to the play left the students with a sense of family and accomplishment.

During the six weeks of rehearsal, the cast worked on memorization and blocking, working late into the night perfecting their lines and characters. "You spend about three months with the same people; you can't help but form extremely close bonds," said Rhiannon Damm, senior. "It's a huge sense of family." Being a part of the play develops a very unique friendship. "It's a really great experience to share the same passion with your friends," said Annamarie Giordano, senior.

The play had many lasting effects other than the friendships made off stage. The drama department chose many different kinds of plays to expose young actors, audiences, and community members to a variety of dramatic experiences. "What affected me the most were all the different kinds of plays we do at York," said Giordano. "The Secret in the Wings" was such a powerful play because it had such a unique message. "The theme was the most appealing part of the play, which was to be who you are and life will be better, that you should be who you are and not be afraid of it," said Michael Dreger, senior.

Because of the large number of seniors in drama who graduated last year, the members of the fall play had to step up and take leadership roles. "People who you didn't expect to become stronger actors actually did become more passionate towards acting, and more dedicated," said Dreger. But the actors were not the only people who made the production a success. "Without the production staff and the crew, none of the shows can happen. Our tech director, Adam Liston, and our lighting director Kurt make the shows magical because of their crazy talent. There were many dedicated students on crew who did so much to support us and make sure the show would go on" added Giordano.

CHAIN REACTION

Snowball is a student-run retreat coordinated by student leaders and assisted by several teachers and staff members. The event consisted of a two-night retreat at Camp Wonderland in Wisconsin. Approximately 150 students, teachers, and mentors alike attended the event, which had a strong central message about having fun without the use of alcohol or drugs. "It's about being a leader and a good friend, and how you can really have fun without partying or being reckless," said student leader Sarah Dantino, senior. Dantino, along with the many other student leaders, planned schedules, organized groups, bought supplies and crafts, led discussions, and made sure students were safe. The head supervising teacher was Ms. Rachel Riley, who entrusted these responsibilities with the student leaders. "It's a great opportunity for students to step up and assume leadership roles; that's the best thing about Snowball," said Riley.

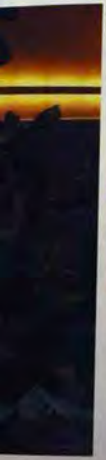

Snowball had a lot of first-time attendees at the event. There were students from all grade levels, and the groups mixed grade levels so everyone met someone new. "Snowball is a great way to meet new people, especially if you're unused to getting out of your comfort zone," said first-time attendee Kyle Heraty, senior. The groups were classified by different movie genres, with one group being "Sci-Fi," another "Comedy," and so on. "The themes are important because it gives a slightly competitive atmosphere between teams, sort of like a friendly competition between the groups," said Heraty. A typical day at the camp began with each group congregating and visiting several stations and activities throughout the day. Team-building activities consisted of scavenger hunts, discussions, and an all-time favorite, the warm fuzzy activity.

The Snowball staff was grateful to have their inspiring speakers at the event, including York's very own Mr. Charlie Kerr, who spoke about his book and his philosophy on life. Another speaker put on quite a memorable performance. He came in dressed in rugged clothing, walked hunched over, and talked very slowly with a rough voice. As his speech went on, he removed the rugged clothing, stood up straighter, and talked in a clear voice. He then continued his speech and talked about how people make presumptions based on the appearance of others, and how false these normally are. "His message really stuck because it is something that many people do, and he went into detail on the effects that presumptions have on people. It really made you think again about judging others before meeting them," said student leader Kristen Gorecki, senior. Messages about appreciating life and not judging others showed in every activity at Snowball.

Snowball provided a temporary escape from York's social circles in favor of a close-knit gathering. The students enjoyed having the event held outside of York because it provided a physical distance from the cliques and social pretenses sometimes present at school. "I think having Snowball away from school helps lift some of the social pressures kids sometimes feel at school to act a certain way or be a certain type of person. When we're not at school, I think it kind of helps kids relax, because it's not the high-stress environment that school can be sometimes," said Jennifer DeVries, sophomore. Snowball was a unique event that offered a new kind of social experience for the students who attended, and certainly exemplified the Snowball Effect.

BREAKAWAY: when a player has sole possession of the puck, and no defenders stand between him and the opponent's goal besides the other team's goalie; he makes a clean break for the goal

With their skates laced and their uniforms on, the Dukes skate onto the ice, ready for action. The whistle is blown, the puck is hit, and the powerplay of York Dukes Hockey begins.

With a relatively young team this year, adjusting to playing at the varsity level was a challenge, although their inexperience was overshadowed by improvement as the season progressed. The coaches stressed the importance of their practices because games were always more intense than practices. Hockey is a fast-paced game, and there is no doubt that strong mentality is necessary for success. "There is a mental toughness to this game; it is the fastest game played, so the boys need to be mentally ready to react quickly to what happens, and deal with the ups and downs of a game and a season," said Phil Gabrielsen, head varsity coach. The players certainly felt the stresses and pressures of game play and understood that they could not let losing get to them; if they were struggling, they focused on the raw power of the game in order to win. "Hockey tests the body and the mind. Someone may be able to shoot and skate, but without the mental component of hockey, that person won't be able to contribute to the team," said Justin Schwarz, senior.

With an overall record of 11-31-7, the Dukes had a challenging season; however, they hope to reach their full potential with more varsity players returning for next year. The team took on their opponents one at a time. "The main idea we took on the ice was to try our hardest, game after game, no matter who the opponent may be," said Schwarz. The boys cooperated well, truly working as one powerful unit on the ice.

By the close of the season, the York Hockey Club had achieved a spot in the top bracket of the state tournament, a goal they were thrilled to have accomplished. The players grew not only in the rink, but off the ice as well. Their talent shined through, and the boys always worked hard to take their coaches' advice and put it into play. "It is great to teach a player something and then see it happen on the ice," said Gabrielsen. Their subsequent season will indubitably be stronger than ever, due to the leaps and bounds they made as a team this season. By Genevieve Rizzo

STEPPING UP

BIRDIE: high- drag projectile used in the sport of badminton

When people think of badminton, they don't automatically consider it to be an intense sport. But in reality a lot of hard work goes into perfecting the game. Each practice involves sprinting drills, footwork drills, and lots of core work. This sport involves dedication; the girls must attend morning practices starting at six. It was this dedication and hard work that resulted in a successful trip to State.

This year's team was a different dynamic from the last. Varsity was made up of a lot of underclassmen. Despite having only two returning varsity members, lack of experience was not a problem. But Varsity were not the only players who stepped up. On the Junior Varsity level, there were many returning members who, throughout the season, led the team to success, winning first in conference. And both the Varsity and Junior Varsity players helped get the underclassman accustomed to the rigor of York Badminton through unique team traditions. "I love that we do big sister little sister because it helps to unify the three levels as one, and you know you will always have someone there cheering you on," said Laurel Miner, senior.

Badminton is not only physical, there is also a mental aspect to it as well. Both singles and doubles present challenges. For singles, speed is a necessity because one person covers twice the amount of court. For doubles, two people are sharing the same space, and rotations are key. But there are completely different mindsets to the different types of matches. "Communications and rotation is key in doubles, and in singles if you don't get to the bird, you lose the point, and there is no back-up from a teammate," said Kristen Borel, senior. But with either singles or doubles, players stay mentally strong and are not discouraged by mistakes.

It was a combination of physical work and a strong mindset that propelled players to State. The players worked hard to get to State, winning dual meets and Conference in order to qualify. "There are almost two hundred players who go to State, and it's very competitive. But going to State is fantastic and so much fun," said Victoria Graham, senior. By achieving these goals with a young upper level team, next year's season is sure to be a success.

COMPETITIVE: having a strong desire to compete or to succeed

During the spring of 2011, it rained much more than usual. All of this rain made the baseball fields very muddy making it difficult for players to run and field. However, rained out games didn't stop the baseball team from completing the season on time and winning many games. Some memorable games included defeating Lyons Township 14-3, who went on to win State. They also shut out Oak Park River Forest in all three games with scores of 14-0, 9-0, and 4-0.

Most of the seniors on the team played together for years and ended their careers on a high note with a record of 23-13. "This year's team has better leadership and everyone on the team is good friends with each other," said Jake Rzezutko, senior. "The team has a [strong] bond. They enjoy each other more and there isn't as much separation between classes," Mr. Bob Dietz, coach, added. The seniors were determined to win and confident that they would. "We were inspired to leave a legacy and beat last year's record," said Joseph Boozell, graduate.

The team worked together to also improve their skills like fielding and defense. "My favorite part of the game is working to improve our skill sets as a group with the people we've been competing with for such a long time that we know we'll always have each other's backs," said Boozell. Not only did the players have to improve their physical skill, but also be mentally prepared to win. "The most important skill to have is confidence. It reflects on how you play in the game," said Joshua LoCicero, senior. If this confidence faltered, a player couldn't play well for the rest of the game. "The hardest part is the mental battle. When you do something bad, you have to get over it and move on," said Michael Trumbull, senior. Clearly the team didn't have this problem because they had a fantastic season. By Ellen Goese

It takes a group of committed Dukes to create a gymnast. These gymnasts dedicated their time and strength to bring the mighty Dukes the victories they deserved. "Every moment we had on and off the mat showed the world who we were and will remain to be: Dukes," said Mr. Larry Ohannes, head coach.

The coaching methods pushed the athletes farther each day. The gymnasts had vigorous workouts which were essential to success on competition day. "Gymnastics is a hard sport to be a part of-it takes self-determination and superb focus," said Matthew Flynn, junior. The hard work of the athletes drove them to come together and become stronger outside competition as well. "Everyone tries to support the team and everyone always pushes each other as well," said Kurt Reisnbuckler, junior.

The support of the team shined through when it mattered. All of the events were preformed individually such as the horse, bars and ring, but the team had to work together to achieve their victory. They strived for the goal at hand. "The hard work among teammates makes the victories on the mat so much sweeter," said Jacob Dulak, sophomore. "Every practice is measured on how we do, at the rate we're going, this year State should be fair [game]," said Paul Rafac, sophomore.

Despite the strengths on and off the mat, every team faces challenges. The boys faced the challenge of filling the large shoes of those who graduated. "Losing valuable players now opens up a new era," said Dulack. This year's team continued the legacy of the gymnastics program by setting high goals. "The year's expectations were to hit hard every day and consistently keep raising our scores," added Flynn. With this in mind the team was able to collect victories.

DYNAMIC: vigorously active or forceful; energetic or characterized by or producing change or progression

The Boys' Lacrosse team had an exciting first season as they made the transition from a club to a sport. Although this is a big move for the team, "it doesn't affect our playing," said James Kliebhan, junior. The team stuck to their game and showed great sportsmanship. Challenging opponents from the West Suburban Conference and the Chicagoland area, the players held their own and brought home eight wins. Although there were many successful games, "the most memorable game was against West Chicago. In the third overtime, Zachary Craggs, senior, put one in for the win. It was a reflection of how this team battled all year; the boys never gave up," said Mr. Don Canfield, varsity coach. With only six seniors on the roster, underclassmen stepped up and worked even harder for the win. "Many of the players on Varsity had only one or two years of experience playing lacrosse," said Canfield; "It was a very young team." However, the underclassmen had the opportunity to improve their skills and techniques along the way.

Juniors made up the majority of the team, and Varsity definitely showed progress throughout the season in both game play and teamwork. "The biggest reward we will receive at the end of the season is knowing the great amount of improvement we have made as individual players and as a team," said Andrew Gotsch, graduate. "Each player really showed a positive attitude about the game throughout the season," said Steven Radke, senior. "We come together and play a great game. The relationship between the players on the team helps with the overall outcome of the game; we're all close and everyone gets along really well."

Progress showed through the aggressiveness of the team as well. They especially had to bring a great amount of force to their most challenging rematch versus Glenbard West. "During our first game against Glenbard West, we were not aggressive enough for the ball," added Gotsch, "our offense must maintain the ball, and our defense must stay organized." Boys Varsity lacrosse was strong the remainder of the season, and showed signs of a promising future. By Hannah Kopach

STARTING STRONG

VIGOROUS: strong or active, energetic, foreful, powerful in action or effect

Lacrosse is a sport requiring a precarious balance of speed, stamina, and skill. This past season girls lacrosse portrayed all these things and more. Still a newer York sport—this year was their third year in the program—but they fought for their appropriate reputation. The girls came off the previous season with high hopes and a new coach. "We got a new coach with new ideas to bring to the game, we all get along with him as well as we get along with each other," said Victoria Norris, senior. Mr. Kirk Laminate, head coach, brought new training and ideas to the season. "This year we had a lot of different plays and we began to work together better and really work to learn the game," said Isabella Reinhofer, captain and senior. Higher intensity practices and higher expectations came with new coaching. The hard workouts were new to the team, yet their biggest challenge of the season lay with new competition.

As they began their first season as a varsity sport, the competition suddenly became more advanced and required more speed. "Playing at a varsity level helps us as a team, we have more challenges with schools that have equal or better playing [illegible], and higher competition is not necessarily a bad thing," added Reinhofer. The girls persevered through the tough games by sticking together and learning to play as a unit. "The playing level is better and the style of game has brought us together over this new challenge," said Laurel Bradbury, captain and graduate. Though the team faced a tough season, they did not falter in camaraderie. "We have a smaller group and we work well together and we all get along perfectly," said Katherine Boggess, senior. The team remained very close, in part because they were the first girls' lacrosse team to grace York. "I feel like we pioneered the sport for the school; we're very proud and excited for the upcoming teams," added Bradbury.

Although this past season girls lacrosse faced challenges, they tackled the first year as a varsity sport together and made the team even stronger for York. They were the first to bring girls lacrosse to York, and represented the sport with style and skill. "I've really enjoyed seeing the team grow into what it has become and leaving a good sport behind. I hope that they can continue this tradition, we've all enjoyed it." added Reinhofer. By Abby White

PUMPED-UP KICKS

UNITY: a whole or totality as combining all its parts into one

Cooperation was the key factor that allowed the girls' soccer team to advance the farthest in York history. Starting the season with new coach, Mr. Krzysztof Halupka, the team was unsure of how the season would turn out. "We started the season not knowing a lot. Not all of us knew each other and we had to get used to how everyone played on the field," said Angela Guerino, junior. The season was deemed a success after pulling off conference, regional, and sectional championships. Even after losing in the super sectionals, the team was satisfied with an excellent season, finishing with a record of 21 wins, 5 losses, and 1 tie.

This record did not come from luck; the girls put in a tremendous amount of effort every day in order to accomplish this. Halupka said it was "absolutely necessary for the players to be focused and truly thinking of the game at all times." He added that "the girls had to earn every single win," and couldn't expect to win unless they were willing to put in their all. "We were determined as a team, and no one played for their own individual glory" Elisa Ordonez, junior, stated. Everyone was motivated by the senior leadership that showed the younger girls on the team the importance of hard work and combined team effort. "The seniors provided a lot of experience," said Halupka, "and the experience came through and didn't allow the girls to give up."

The team had two major policies: no selfishness, and have fun. Victories could not have been attained unless the girls were willing to sacrifice for each other. "When we would get scored on first by other teams we had to stay positive, and we would work much harder the second half which resulted in a win almost every time we started from behind," said Christina Ordonez, senior. Enjoying themselves when they played was important, otherwise there would be no incentive for the girls. "They could be somewhere else, but they choose to come out because of their pure love for the sport," said Halupka about the team members. With their love of the sport, as well as all their hard work kept in mind; the team plans to come out strong again next year now that they know what it takes to be victorious. By Margaret Stotzer

HEY, BATTER!

York Softball is all about working hard to earn the wins. One of the team's shining moments this past season was a game against Morton Grove. When asked about the West Suburban Conference game against Morton, Mr. Tom Babyar, coach, said, "We hit the heck out of the ball." The girls gained this important win with Danielle Morency, senior, hitting a three-run homer which made the game truly heart racing. "The kids have played well," said Babyar.

After the game, the team debriefed, discussing outcome and individual plays. "We look back on the game and find all the good things we did that helped us win, then we look at the negatives so we can try and work on them," said Ms. Jennifer Bode, coach.

The York softball team was not only strong on the field, but off as well. "The girls are always getting together after practices to hang out," added Bode. These long bus ride chats were part of what brought the team together.

"The bus rides are always loud," added Bode.

Practices for the team consisted of working on fielding, including ground balls and fly balls. They also worked on situational plays, along with hitting and pitching. This year the girls developed new skills and perfected old ones. It was great team building and allowed the girls to help each other and work together.

"My favorite part is hitting," said Liana Potoglou, junior, "you get to show off all the hard work you have put in and all eyes are on you." The girls encouraged each other and boosted their confidence one game at a time. "We can compete with any team," said a very enthusiastic Mary Carol Sullivan, graduate. By Jazzmin Calhoun

get SERVED

SWEET SPOT: the central area of the racquet which is the desired location for making contact with the ball

Sweat drips off his brow in the blinding heat. He wipes his forehead and adjusts his grip on the racquet. He shifts his weight anxiously from foot to foot, his body slightly crouched as he awaits the serve. The score is advantage deuce, him; it's close, but he's determined to win. His opponent sends the serve racing over the net, a speeding blur almost impossible to return. He swings with all the force he has, gritting his teeth as he hits the ball back, hard. This final, strategically placed shot is just out of his competitor's reach, and the match is his. One victory down, five more to go.

The tennis team had a 16-10-1 record this past season. Although the boys had a competitive season, this record was achieved because of the team's commitment and dedication not only to the sport, but to the team as well. Playing in unpredictable springtime weather, the Dukes were at the mercy of Mother Nature, yet committed to the sport nonetheless. The boys practiced every day at Berens Park, commuting by bus after school. Once they arrived, the players warmed up with agility drills, and practiced volleying. After splitting up into their respective groups of singles and doubles players, they would practice within their groups and play sets against one another. Sets consisted of myriad games, where singles players played one-on-one and doubles players worked in teams of two-on-two. "Singles is more of a mental game; you're by yourself and you have to stay stoic," said Lucas Rebers, graduate. "Doubles is entirely team based and all about communication. You win as a team, you lose as a team." Regardless of whether they played singles or doubles, the boys worked together to help the team improve during practices.

When the time came to truly compete, the Dukes were prepared. Led by Mr. Tres Heimann, head varsity coach, the boys huddled up before their matches, and Heimann analyzed the strengths and weaknesses of the opposing team's returning players. Heimann's advice to the boys was always, "Play your best, play smart, play to your strengths, and let the results take care of themselves."

The season wasn't all work and no fun, though. "We always have a green and white game. It's a match against all the players, from varsity down to freshmen, and we see if the green team or the white team wins," said Bret Skeel, sophomore. Although the season involved a lot of hard work, the Boys' Tennis team rose to the challenge and came out on top.

TRACK ATTACK

DEVOTION: earnest attatchment to a cause, person, etc.

The Boys' Track team has a legacy that it manages to uphold each year. No matter what competition, green and white was always the target to beat. With success in the previous years, the boys had high expectations for the upcoming season. "We all want to win State, especially after being second last year and coming off a state championship in the fall of cross country," said Hans-Martin Ishida, graduate. The hype was up and the team was ready to take home a trophy. Maurice Watkins, graduate, said, "The goal for this season is simple… to win State."

Knowing what they had to do, the hard work began. Mr. Mariner, coach, emphasized to the team the importance of the five bio-meter elements of training that the sprinters needed to focus on: strength, speed, flexibility, endurance, and technique, and how they needed to be well rounded in all aspects. Excelling in one area wasn't going to be enough; they needed to be great in all events. With such expectations to meet in each event, the team had to tie in all the aspects to be the best. Talking about the pressures, Watkins, said, "To run York track, you need to be able to run through any type of pain, weather, or other circumstances. No excuses."

The track team may not have taken home the state title, but they did take home a second-place trophy. The season was still a success. "When your times are getting faster, you know you're getting faster and that in itself is a win on its own,"said Paul Mason, graduate. But the benefits of running go far beyond high school athletics. "You get out of it what you put into it. This can be carried over not just into running, but all aspects of life making us not only better athletes, but better people," said Jack Driggs, graduate By Kailee Sweeney

WITHOUT LIMITS

GRIT: the strength of mind that enables one to endure obstacles with courage

The gun's ready, the girls are frozen. The shot sounds, the runners take off with one goal in mind- to be the first across the finish line. Their feet pound, their hearts beat, there is no room left for error. "Mr. Ware likes to say that we have one shot and one kill," said Natalie Gonzalez, junior. Having only one chance to get it right, the Girls' Track team took this philosophy to heart. "Everything we do is preparation for State," added Gonzalez. With rigorous training the team worked to "be better, faster, and stronger every day," said Julie Sulkin, senior. The intensity increased as the season progressed. "This year, being happy for qualifying isn't going to cut it. We want to make it to finals and score," said Mr. Clyde Ware, coach. Countless hours of training and enormous effort put in by the runners, throwers, and jumpers alike lead the team to an impressive record.

The mentally demanding aspect was just as important as the physical. The mindset, added Ware, was "to believe that you are the best the fastest, and uphold the expectation that everyone is going to be chasing you," which helped the girls connect to their running and created the drive to win. "Physically, we are prepared. We have to make the connection mentally. If we know we're ready, we are ready" said Michaela Nelson, senior. With the mental mindset and drive to win, the girls led their team to a successful season.

Yet, amidst the exhausting workouts and competition, the team remained united. Every day, the track team worked to exceed the limit. By looking "at every practice as a day to PR [personal record], times have been significantly dropping from previous years," said Alexandra Harrell, senior. The girls' team had a different take- they wanted "to stray away from the shadow of the boys and make our own legacy," said Ware. This legacy, driven by the girls, relied on the true grit the team portrayed. "I have to make sure I leave it all out on that track so that there's nothing more I could have done to do better," said Nelson. By Ellen Dyra

DIG IT

Boys' Volleyball [illegible] about having fun on the beach, chilling in the sand, laughing as friends tossed the ball around. Boys' Volleyball was everything but that. "It's a non-contact sport, but the game is still very intense and fiery," explained Jacob Ruprecht, senior. It took daily training, conditioning, and practice to become a successful athlete for the team.

On the court, things were no different. The blocking, hitting, and strategizing learned during practice, they utilized during game time. The team had to be consistent with every skill to succeed competetively. But all teammates skills are needed for the win. Every member needed to be linked with all the other members, both players and coaches. "As a coach, I have to keep an eye on all things throughout the game and then communicate it to the athletes," said Mr. Kenneth Dowdy, varsity head coach. Each member of the team is just important as the other, because if there is just one "weak-link" the whole team could be compromised.

However, for the Boys' Volleyball team, "weak-links" were not a problem. Though they started off slowly with a record of 3-7 in the beginning of the season, the boys pulled themselves together and proved their team's skills with an end-season record of 17-19. Taking a step into the play-offs, they made it 1-1, finalizing their season. The highlight of the season for the team was being tournament champions of the Fremd Invite. "Winning the Fremd Invite was definitely our biggest Achievement," said Christopher Swchass, senior.

Through highs and lows, ups and downs, and wins and losses, the Boys' Volleyball team held on together in solid sync. They practiced together, persevered together, and at the end of the season, they finished strong together. Because that's what boys' volleyball is about, not just to reach for victory, but to achieve it.

man UP

EXHILARATE: to make one cheerful or merry; to invigorate, enliven

Last season's Boys' Water Polo was an admired team by all for their teamwork and technique. A common play used in the game is known as, "Man-up" (when a team member is ejected for playing too roughly on the opposing team, the offensive team is expected to run a play with an extra player). This act of teamwork is demonstrated not only during this play, but always. This phrase means so much to these boys, they spent all season improving their technique and teamwork, in and outside of the pool.

Water Polo consists of many positions, each requiring different skills. When asked the most important skill, Tyler Stone, graduate, said, "it is probably knowing how to tread water because it makes up 90% of the game." Others would say speed is most important. While the boys gained speed while conditioning with heavy swimming they also improved the basics. "We are continuing to work on the basics, and especially the defense which this team takes pride in," said, Mr. Mark Forde, head coach. This gave the team a strong base in the pool.

Outside of the pool they also worked on improving their ability to work together. "This year's goal is to become a complete team," said Forde. The boys really took this goal to heart and dedicated themselves to team traditions. The team traditions carried over to contribute to the team dynamic. "It's great, everyone gets along well and has a great time," said, manager Amy Costello, graduate. Even though the boy's had a tough season playing against hard conference teams, they are excited for the coming year. "I'm optimistic about the outlook of our team, we are in a position to turn some heads next season!" said Alex Waldherr, junior. By Billi Alexandria Marquess

ENDURANCE: the ability or strength to continue or last, especially despite fatigue, stress, or other adverse conditions

Running ninety miles a week may sound like an impossible task for most, but in the life of a boy cross country runner, this is just the typical routine. With 27 state titles under their belt, the team never fails to hold their own. Their ambitious goals for each season generate the perseverance and dedication that allow them to rise to the top. "The thing that separates the great from the average is the want to be great. Without the heart and determination, it's impossible to be successful," said Alexander Mimlitz, junior. The boys come to practice every day knowing it would be excruciating, but their extreme desire to succeed overruled the pain even in the toughest of workouts. Michael Shannon, junior, said, "Everybody wants everybody else to succeed and we push each other every day."

"The mind is four times more powerful than the body when it comes to the big race," remarked Mr. Joe Newton, coach. This explains why the boys come out of cross country with not only strong legs, but a strong mental attitude. "Cross country teaches you to respect and care for your teammates while still competing for a top position," said Patrick Crowley, junior. The coaches provided the runners with a ton of motivation so that they believed in themselves and could achieve the incredible. John Libert, junior, said, "I think cross country teaches you that you get out of life what you put into it." Shannon also added, "Many people who have gone through the program at York will come back and they all say one thing in particular. They say I wouldn't be the person I am today without York Cross Country and Mr. Newton." -Margaret Stotzer

TRUE ENDURANCE

PERSISTENCE: lasting or enduring tenaciously

For cross country runners, the season starts in early June. The warm summer sun eventually turns to a cold fall day by the end of the season. The lady dukes went through five months of training with no days off because they wanted to win. "The team worked all day, every day. We had practices twice a day and run about 40-50 miles a week," said Sharise Lund, senior. The practices were rain or shine and upwards to eight miles a day. "Practice is the hardest part of cross country. But my fast times pay off," said Michelle Frigo, senior. The hard work and miles of running were led with experience of the previous year. The team had high hopes because of the four veteran State runners, and they finished twelfth the year before.

As soon as September started, all the training from the summer became evident at the meets. They competed and won many meets throughout the season on all three levels. However, for the team this year, it was not about winning dual meets and invites. The main focus was on winning State but the team planned "to take [it] one step at a time," said Emma Fisher, junior. "It is important to focus on the upcoming meet and produce a good race on the day."

One theme always present on the team was the feeling of family. Each girl on the team either had a big sister or a little sister depending on grade. "I love the feeling of family I get from the team. The girls are my friends inside and outside of school. Running is a bonding experience and I grow closer to them everyday," said Caroline Hogan, senior. The girls had such a strong bond that allowed them to push each other to run faster times.

The lady dukes finished strong at State. Emma Fisher led the team to an 8th place finish and finished 12th overall individually. Kayla Spencer was also All-State with a 20th place finish. By Eric Glaubke

INVIGORATING: to give vigor to; fill with life and energy; energize

With a second-place standing in the West Suburban Conference, Dukes Football powered through a great season. The first week they "lost a heart breaker to Rolling Meadows," said Mr. Bill Lech, coach. "But we improved defensively in weeks two and three." The team's new offensive philosophy changed from a run oriented offense to a spread passing game. This new philosophy was used throughout the rest of the season and proved to be positive to the team's overall record. "I think the new philosophy is definitely different, but beneficial because it is more current to today's game. It's harder to practice against, though it makes our team better," said John Shipman, junior. After an intense season, Dukes Football ended with an overall record of six wins and three losses, allowing them to advance to the playoffs.

Along with implementing a new offensive philosophy, the team also dealt with replacing eight players on the defensive side. "Everyone had a good attitude and felt they had a responsibility to help the team however they could and jumped at the chance to replace those starters and play their position to the best of their ability," said Paul Golen, senior. The team is also "very physical upfront. We have three receivers that do a great job of getting the ball down the field. We focus on putting the players in positions that they succeed in which is showing during the games. Although our size in the offensive line is average, athleticism up front is better," said Lech.

Not only did the team have to adjust to the new defensive line, they had to transition from a talkative group last year to a more quiet group this year: "Last year I feel like the team had a lot of outgoing kids, while this year we are a pretty quiet bunch," said Golen. "But I think we are similar in that both years the kids on the team were hard workers and hated losing." The team both last season and this season had a winning mindset and were determined to bring home many wins for York. By Hannah Kopach

DAPPER: Neat and trim in appearance; lively and alert in manners

The boys' golf team teed-off strong this year, moving three players, Tanner Obal, Kyle Kopinski, and Joseph Wark, juniors, to regionals, with Wark advancing to the state finals. "We started the season with three goals: win the conference, advance to the sectional, and get to the state golf meet as a team," said Mr. Jim Borel, coach. The Dukes hit the fairways with determination. The team beat Lyons Township, who was ranked second in the state by the Chicago Tribune, led by Tanner Obal's par round of 34.

With every swing, the boys worked to improve their game. Practicing every day, the boys strived to acheive their goal. "There is a lot of competition between not only the team you're playing against, but yourself and your teammates," added Samuel Kociak, senior. The competition challenged the team to be the best. There was no putting around when it came to the competitions. "You have to have the idea that you are playing for the team, and not yourself. It is imperative to keep in mind that the team is counting on you, individually, to score to your best ability," said Kyle Kopinski, junior.

Although a very individualistic sport, the team had to come together to secure any wins. Teamwork was vital to this season's team. "We got along quite well and I see the varsity kids helping the frosh-soph team. It's crucial to have such chemistry in order for the team to advance," added Kopinski.

Golf poses as a mentally challenging as well as a character building sport. "Golf is a sport where you call rule infractions on yourself, so it is very important for golfers to have integrity while representing York High School," added Borel. The boys maintained a very classy demeanor, upholding York's tradition of excellence. Even if they didn't always play as well as they hoped, "at least we looked good while doing it," added Kopinski. BOGEY: A golf score of one stroke over par on a hole

For this year girls golf team, it was all about the balance of refined talent and new skill. The girls had a lot of welcomed new comers on the team. "This season was different because we had a lot of talented new freshman trying out, and they made a big difference on our team; we even had a freshman come to conference with us this year," said Corinne D'Onofrio, junior. The girls embraced this new talent and used it as a tool to come closer to their goals. "We wanted to be better than last year and to also improve as players," said Linnea Wethekam, junior. With their new talent and their goals in mind, the girls employed hard work in order to achieve success.

Through this work the girls had to put in, they managed to have time to grow as a team. "Our team is not just any other team; we are really close, and we can joke around and hang out with each other outside of golf. It's a really nice environment to be around," added D'Onofrio. The team's close knit nature was largely due to their bus rides to the greens, as well as bus rides to and from the meets. This quality time combined with the thrill of great rounds helped the team learn to work together. "As a team we worked well with each other, and we all got along really well," added Wethekam.

The girls' golf team was able to pull off a successful season. The girls worked hard to advance into Conference and even took two players to the sectional meet. Every end of season yields great accomplishment, but also bitter sweet endings. "I'm going to miss [golf] so much because it's something I've done all four years at York. I'm going to miss my amazing coaches, the fun bus rides to meets, and I'll miss all the girls so much," said Samantha Schreiber, senior. THE CHARGE

Not every student is cut out for playing one of the most stamina-draining sports around. Soccer is an intense sport that requires both skill and speed. This year's team strived to achieve a strong record, and stepped up to the challange. "Our team performed well under pressure by stepping up our intensity and playing solid defense," said Joseph Gaudio, senior. Although the varsity team did not achieve the record they had hoped for, they still worked together. "We were not ones to give up on the field and our team showed a lot of heart even when faced with many losses," said Thomas Madden, captain and senior.

This team practiced hard every day during their season. "Hard working players mixed with long-term dedication goes into what makes a champion's practice," said Mr. Markus Roy, coach. During practices they work on footwork technique and run drills to prepare for games. From practices, the players were prepped and ready to thrive when it came to those Tuesday and Thursday night games, and these practices really paid off. "Someone might not be the most talented player there is, but with a hard working attitude, they can accomplish as many goals as they want," added Madden.

In the playoff game they were matched up to play Lyons Township, seeded in the top ten of the rankings, and York almost came out with an underdog win. Although the team had a challenging year, they stayed competitive throughout the season.

"We had a tough year record-wise, but with a good group of young men, we're hoping to bring it back next year," said Mr. Mike Hanley, coach. The boys kept their minds focused and stayed strong through the season. By Ron Hernandez

VITALITY: exuberant physical or mental vigor

Splashing into the cold water at a 6 AM practice takes a great amount of dedication, but the girls' swim team had no hesitations. "We're hard-working people who think it's fun, or rather, are willing to swim at six in the morning," said Cara LoPiano, junior. The girls dove right in to their season, proving that they were indeed the team to beat. With every kick and every stroke, the girls worked to be the best. "We're doing a lot more 'Dry Land' than usual," said Mr. Dave Davis, coach. Dry Land is a workout designed to strengthen vital muscles used in swimming. The workout contains core work, leg work, and benching. "We even had Saturday practices before meets," added Davis. The improved workouts and dedication strengthened the team.

Intense practice routines specialized for each type of swimmer, sprinter or distance, propelled the team through competition. The sprinters' work outs included sprint sets on vigorous intervals to increase stamina and speed. Distance swimmers focused on special breathing techniques, along with increased yardage and lengthened sprint sets to increase endurance and reduce fatigue. Their dedication and hard work paid off, ending with an 11-4 record.

Throughout the strenuous practices and the extra work-outs, the team remained close. "The atmosphere is a great place to be. Everyone is happy even though it's the most hardworking team I've ever been on. We all have respect for each other; it's so nice having so many people on the team," said Isabella Reinhofer, senior. The team gave it their all, challenging each other to be their best. "We have training partners, [and] they really push you to swim better and faster," added LoPiano. Even though the team had over 70 girls, they all worked together to create a family-like and yet competitive environment. "My coach recently said that everyone brings a different piece of the puzzle- it just works," added Reinhofer. By Ellen Dyra

Tennis is a sport where love means nothing, or zero points on the scoreboard. This season's Girls' Tennis team started out the season strong and served up competition by keeping love out of sight. Tennis is an extremely challenging sport and only gets harder based on playing conditions. As an outdoor sport, the weather is always a factor. The team practices in all types of weather, making them prepared for competition regardless of conditions. They had sixteen wins in the regular season, took third place in the Western Suburban Conference, were the champions of Sectionals, and placed eighth in the state. The girls had big challenges to overcome this season, which led to a very successful and accomplished season.

When asked to define their hardest part of the season, Maria Avgerinos, junior, said, "the competition against myself, even though we are all there together the only thing we fight against is ourselves and our personal best." Whereas, Kelsie Travers, junior, said, "My biggest challenge is playing all angles of the court and hitting the ball where my opponent can't get it." In tennis, the ball must be hit diagonally across the opposing court making it really hard for the opponent to return the hit. The girls pushed the limit for themselves and their opponents, and because of this they received many titles for their accomplishments.

However, the team lightened the mood by having themed practices, which helped unify the team and relieve stress. Many players described this as the best part of the season. "I really love the theme days because it brings us all together," said, Maria Avgerinos, junior. These themes included decades, colors, and crazy outfits. Others had many favorite parts of tennis. "My favorite part is slamming the ball in my opponent's faces," said Lillie Haggard, sophomore. Tennis is a strong fight against oneself for the better of the team. REFINED TALENT

EXPERIENCED: wise and skillfull in a particular field; a practical wisdom

The Girls' Volleyball team was more excited than ever to get the season rolling. After placing fourth in State in the past year, they were ready to come back stronger than ever. "We want to be able to have the same success that we did in the previous year so we want to win the conference title and make it back to the State tournament," said Caroline Rose, senior and captain.

There were a good amount of seniors who graduated, but the underclassmen stepped up to have another great season. "We have a great combination of seniors, juniors, and sophomores that gave us a lot of depth," said Kathryn Gallagher, senior and captain. When asked about the leadership of the upperclassman, Ms. Patricia Iverson, coach, said, "All the seniors were already leaders and our junior Melissa Deatsch saw a lot of playing time; she learned how to be a responsible player."

In prepping for the game, the team starts their warm up with some running. "Before the game we go over things that are necessary to the specific team we are playing, we also work on the drills we need to improve on," added Iverson. The team then celebrates with some singing. "It's always been a tradition that we sing together before games, it gets everyone pumped up and ready to play," said Morgan Semmelhack, senior and captain.

Volleyball is such a fast paced sport, therefore communication was essential on and off the court. "We all communicate really well together. During games we are able to talk a lot to one another; its one of our biggest successes as a strong team," added Rose. "The biggest strength was experience without a doubt. Some seniors have been on Varsity for three to four years," added Iverson.

After taking the conference champions' title finishing their season undefeated, the team moved on to Regionals. Facing Elk Grove and Wheaton Warrenville South, the Dukes won both games and moved on to Sectionals where they beat West Chicago, but lost in the finals against St. Charles East. "It's disappointing to make it so far and fall just short of State, but we really did have a great season," said Rachel Ogdon, junior. By Kathryn McGirk

HIGH VELOCITY

Every winter, York looks forward to seeing the boys' Basketball team take to the courts; this past year, the varsity team finished their season with a record of 22-9. With a new coaching staff, there also came a new strategy. Practices included playing with uneven numbers to add pressure on the defense to overcome the offense more effectively. Regardless of a win or a loss, the boys "kept their heads up and worked harder to improve York's basketball legacy," said David Cohn, junior. With the team motivated to succeed, the boys pulled off a thirteen-game win streak.

The incentive for success first began at practice; with hours of training each weekday and games throughout the week, the boys improved as the season evolved. In order to better prepare for the grueling season, the boys knew things had to change and Mr. Kleinschmidt, coach, stepped up. "He really was a player's coach; he understood the game from a player's perspective, and yet still had all the knowledge that a head coach needs to have. You can count on the fact that he will be pushing for even more next year," said Trevor Jordan, senior. The new coaching staff brought the boys closer to their goal of taking home a state title, and their triumphs consequently brought them closer together as a team. "We stuck together and picked each other up when the going got tough; we stuck together because we're a family," said Sean Kahovec, senior.

The team as a whole was much like a family when it came to working together. "We all have each others' backs," added Cohn.

It was their determination to build upon the basketball legacy, coupled with the camaraderie of the team which made the season twice as worthwhile. All in all, this past season of York Dukes' basketball was about teamwork and the ability to come through under pressure. With the huge progress that the team made, the team has a bright future ahead of them. "I believe there is no reason to compete if you are not willing to play your heart out," said Jordan. And the players did just that. By Ron Hernandez

IMPULSE: the influence of a particular feeling; mental state

Basketball takes a lot of determination, teamwork and focus. This group of girls had it all. They used this determination to strive to achieve their ultimate goal: winning conference. "The most important skill to have for being a successful team player is to have determination. Without it, you can't set goals for yourself and the team to reach a certain potential," said Nicole Kosanovich, senior.

Because of their hard workouts and their coaches challenging them, the team won conference during a home game against Lyons Township. It was a Paint the Gym Purple game, which is a fundraiser sponsored by Relay for Life. It helped raise money for cancer reasearch to find a cure, and it really helped bring energy to the team. "The game that stood out the most was the LT Paint the gym purple game, because we won conference, and everyone really contributed to the team," said Alexandra Harrel, senior. The win reassured all the girls dedication to the sport and the team.

One of the core reasons the team succeeded this year was because they became very close throughout the season. "I love working together with my team because when we do that, we excel as a team," said Molly Holmes, senior. But more than close friendships within the team, the girls have a true love for the sport itself. Basketball requires many versatile skills—just shooting the ball doesn't cut it. "It's a fast moving pace and always keeps me on my toes," said Jessica Bianchi, freshman, "Anyone can make a shot, but not everyone can be aggressive and anticipate passes." Overall, the team had a great season succeeding at winning conference, and it is with this momentum that they will continue to reach towards higher goals next year. By Katie VanZanderbergen

GOING BROOKLYN

SEVEN TEN SPLIT: a situation in which the ball knocks down the headpin but leaves the 7 and 10 pins standing; nearly impossible to complete this spare

Bowling is a test of precision, prediction, and a lot of patience. In the history of bowling at York, there has never been an entire team advanced to State. By practicing every weekday, the girls prepped for the ultimate goal of conquering their opponents and going to State. With the support of Ms. Kelly Cassidy, coach, and the camaraderie of the team, the girls thrived. Catherine Lawrence and Marisa Stallmann, seniors and captains, helped lead the Varsity team to victory, along with several other returning bowlers. "My teammates always know how to get me out of slumps, and we all just get along really well," said Lawrence. "We support and cheer each other on, especially when one of us is bowling poorly." The team stayed energized, and it was this enthusiasm, along with their hard work, that spurred their success during tournaments.

Last year, only one bowler made it to State; this year, for the first time, the entire varsity team qualified for State. At the sectional meet that determined which schools would qualify, the team took second place, which put all of their bowler's positions in the state competition in Rockford this past February. At the sectional meet, the girls perservered through six games, and maintained their energy and skill as the day progressed. This determination and refusal to give up gave the York bowling team the drive they needed to earn all of their players' spots at State.

After the long awaited trip to state, the girls finally achieved their goal. "Going down to State was so much fun. We knew what competition would be like so we were able to relax and have a good time. It was the perfect way to end my bowling career at York," said Stallmann. Although the team did not place high in state, the success of this season created a momentum to be carried through next year.

STICKING STRONG

APTITUDE: innate ability; talent; readiness and quickness

Girls gymnastics has always proved to be a demanding sport, and this year's season was of no exception. New recruits and coaches needed all members of the team to collaborate to achieve strong teamwork. This is a striking challenge for any team, but if there's one thing the Girls' Gymnastics team can do, it's overcome challenges.

Practices were six days a week, with the occasional dual meet or invite, where the team assessed their skill on form and flexibility. Practice involved running, stretching, and then practice on the actual events: vault, uneven bars, balance beam, and floor exercise. "It's really hard. You have to work hard to get a trick down." said Caitlin Yamanaka, junior. Emily Flynn, junior, added, "There's a lot of stress to practice, perform, and perfect. But it only gets easier once you land the tricks." These girls are proof that practice provides a solid road to success on the floor.

Each meet is composed of two or more schools, and each school has a junior varsity and a varsity team. Of the four events, each girl performs individually, their routine and performance determining their score. At the end of the meet, all the girls' scores are pooled togethe to form a composite team score. Out of all the schools, the team with the highest team score wins the meet. The girls focused in order to perform their best on meet days. "It's not chill. Warm-ups are really jittery so you lose focus," clarified Flynn. Stress, frustration, and nervous energy thickened the atmosphere as the they prepared themselves for their routines. An uplifting pep-talk from the coaches for motivation, then a team chant calmed the girls before the meet. "We give each other support, cheer for each other no matter what, and wish for each other to do their best," explained Brianna Stubbs, junior.

The team ended their season strong with a 129.15, placing 4th in their conference division. The season's hard work paid off; the team placed second in regionals with a team score of 130.775, and Meghan Davidson, sophomore, scored a 9.3 in State for her balance beam routine. This was a hard earned place that came with its own fair share of challenges along the way. The team pulled through overcoming those challenges by sticking it strong. By Joachim Canete

SPLISH SPLASH

This year's boys' swim team dove into their training strong. The boys' had one goal in mind: to advance as many swimmers as possible to State. They started working toward their goals by beginning the season with vigorous workouts twice a day. These intensive workout schedules led the boys to becoming stronger swimmers in the pool and taught them important lessons about commitment. "In order to succeed you must be completely confident in your own ability to accomplish the seemingly impossible tasks you are given," said Colin Belifore, senior.

The boy's hard work really paid off when it came down to competition. "We pushed ourselves to our limits every day at practice in order to improve individually, but also as a team," added Belifore. The workouts for swimming consisted of a diverse type and amount of drills. They did long winded drills with large yardage and they worked on fast paced sprints in order to be conscious of times. The boys also put in a lot of time outside of the pool doing workouts called "dry-land." The hard work and dedication of the team paid off. When they faced tough challenges, the boys were able to rack up a large number of wins. "The main goal of the team this year is to out work other teams. If there was a 'most improved' award, we want to be the team to earn it," said Nick Barbolock, senior.

Amidst the wins the boys formed a tight family-like environment around their team. "One of the strengths of the team is that the chemistry is very good. This is important because it creates a positive environment at practices and meets, which allows the athletes to become motivated about the hard work they are doing and to achieve their goals," added Barbolock. The boys were able to show improvement in and out of the pool due to great work and perseverance. By Kathryn McGirk

power UP

AGGRESSIVE: making an all-out effort to win or succeed

As he walks onto the mat, the wrestler sizes up his opponent and displays his most intimidating look. After he respectfully shakes his competitor's hand, the referee blows the whistle and the match is live. All of the nervousness and excitement fuels the determination necessary to be successful in this sport. "You have to always be pushing yourself because you have to believe that someone out there is outworking you, and to be the best you have to train harder than the rest," said Sergio Lopez, senior. The wrestlers this year had to put a tremendous amount of effort in every day to achieve their goals. "We start preparing for Friday meets by working hard in the wrestling room, and watching films on our opponents' tendencies, but in the end it comes down to working our butts off during practice to get ready for the meet," said Joseph Giordano, captain and senior.

The team had to rely on each and every wrestler to put all their effort into practice so that the team could be successful. Although matches were individual, the overall score added up and determinded the team's outcome. Sometimes it came down to two members' matches to determine the whole team's outcome in the tournament.

It was also essential that all wrestlers were aware of their weight at all times. In order to wrestle in a certain weight class, the wrestlers couldn't be above a specific weight. Giordano acknowledged that "the most difficult part in wrestling had to be cutting weight." Times like these required the boys to have a strong mental attitude and desire to excel in this difficult sport. "A wrestler should have the mindset of confidence and fearlessness" said Joseph Biggins, freshman. Ultimately, positive thinking, persistence, and pushing their physical limits was what allowed the wrestling team to excel this past season. By Margaret Stotzer

GOT SPIRIT?

ENLIVEN: to make lively or spirited

Whether standing in the green, gleaming bleachers or on the polished wood floors of the gymnasium, there's one thing to rile up the crowd: the chants of the cheerleaders echo across the court and field, leading the fans in school spirit. This season, the girls' spirit and talent shone through. "We have mainly upperclassmen this year, so we have a more experienced team. We started off with a lot more talent, so we can do more difficult stunts," said Ms. Dena Poulos, coach.

Not only talent allowed the squad to be at its best, but also the respect and dedication that the girls possessed for their teammates boosted the team to the top. "Cheerleading is such a team sport. You have to be able to work with each other; you can't have a problem with someone else, it just doesn't work. One bad connection can ruin a whole performance," added Brailey Nudera, junior and captain. This season, the team had great chemistry, allowing the girls to have a successful season. "We all got along really well. Everyone is friends with each other. We all clicked," said Ellen Bichl, junior.

With all eyes on the team, performance had to be perfect. "At practice you must have everything perfect in order to perform," said Nudera. The girls practiced nearly every day, working on stunts, tumbling, and those notorious cheers. "Practices are hard, you have to master new stunts while keeping the old stunts," said Keely Resing, junior. The girls had conditioning days often, working on core and strength.

Despite the demanding physical aspects, when the big moment comes, it all pays off. "The crowd's reaction is exhilarating, there's nothing like it," added Resing. The much-anticipated pep rally and half-time shows kept the crowd excited. "Performing is awesome. It's when we can show everyone what we can do," added Bichl, junior. It's safe to say that the cheerleaders create an atmosphere filled with spirit, unlike any other. By Ellen Dyra

DANCE PARTY

PIROUETTE: a whirling about on one foot or on the points of the toes

Whether it be cheering or dancing, the Poms squad can do it all. The Poms team is comprised of sixteen elite dancers. There is no season that lasts as long as Poms. The season starts in early June and ends in early April. Not only does the Poms team practice every day, but they also learned a new dance that they had to performe flawlessly in front of hundreds of people. "It's hard work," said Anastasia Gliatis, senior, "The new dances each week make it challenging and dancing never gets old." The Poms team worked hard to go down state and compete to beat the competition.

The Poms squad performed at all the football and basketball games at halftime as well as during the games. They helped raise York spirit on game day to get the school excited for the Homecoming game later in the day. Poms' first opportunity to perform for the school was during the pep rally. They practiced countless hours perfecting the complex routine, and it showed. The dance went flawlessly and the students erupted in applause afterwards. "The Poms really brought the pep rally together. The girls looked poised while they performed for the school," said Christopher Matsas, senior.

The York Poms are conditioned athletes. Their practices started with stretching, sit-ups, push-ups, and core before they started to dance. Their routines were complex and physically demanding. One of the routines required doing 80 high kicks in one minute, which is no easy task. "The routines that we perform are challenging. We dance many different kinds of dances that push us to perform our very best," said Madeline Peterson, sophomore.

The York Poms had three main competitions throughout the season before State. The Dukes had high hopes for the season since they finished fourth the year before. State was always the goal in the season the past six years and the team wanted to go home with a trophy. "Our goal is to do our very best at State. We're going to have some tough competition but with hard work, we can end up on top," said Ms. Dawin Wu, coach. By Eric Glaubke

LIVING GREEN

RECYCLE: to treat or process (used or waste materials) so as to make suitable for reuse

Most people don't realize the effect that littering and not recycling has on the planet. "Eco Club sets out to raise awareness about recycling and energy conservation in our community," said Margaret Grubbs, junior. Working to build a greener community is no easy task though. The club attempted to improve and maintain a green school. The first step Eco took to accomplish this was to cut down on the school's waste, paper, and electrical usage. They worked to spread awareness of efficient energy use throughout the school. Many didn't realize that Eco was also responsible for collecting all the recycling in the entire school. "We meet weekly in alternating lunch periods and take out the recycling. This makes the maintenance staff's jobs much easier as it is a huge load lifted off their shoulders," said Kristen Borel, senior.

Eco focuses a lot of service and participation in the community. After purchasing three Filtered Surface water bottle fillers for the school last year, they greatly reduced the amount of plastic water bottle waste and increased the use of non-disposable bottles.

They also went on many different field trips that were both fun and beneficial to the community. Some of the projects included: touring the Northern Illinois Food Bank, the yearly Friday night camping trip over Halloween weekend, a trip to an indoor rock climbing facility, and much more. "There are so many exciting activities and it is great that we can have fun with the other members and help out the community at the same time," said Della Wiener, junior. Melanie Biegler, club leader and senior, said she most enjoyed that, "You get to help out other people and make a difference in our world." Alone Eco cannot solve the planet's environmental issues, but their efforts contributed to creating a greener world and a brighter future. By Margaret Stotzer

ROCK ON

AMNESTY: a general pardon for offenses, especially political offenses, against a government, often granted before any trial or conviction

Amnesty International is a global organization with members working to protect human rights. Here at York, the club focuses on scheduling events that raise awareness, raise funds, and affect change.

This year, after the retiring of Ms. Joan Davis, new sponsors Ms. Erica Lindberg and Ms. Rebecca McKinney expressed excitement, and concern for the upcoming year. "My main concern was harnessing the positive energy of the students. Members of this club want to save the world- it's our job to help break that down into manageable steps," said Ms. McKinney.

McKinney and Lindberg wanted to use the compassion that the club members have to continue what Ms. Davis had started. "Ms. Davis was a fearless sponsor for many years," said McKinney. "We want to serve the students who love Amnesty and to do so we want to learn about the club and them," added McKinney.

The club held the Youth in Revolt concert which raised money for UNICEF, and organization that helps governments improve the health and education of children in less fortunate environments. "It was a lot of fun to perform at the concert," said Matthew Parks, junior. "There are not a lot of opportunities as a high school student to perform for a live audience, so I think it's awesome when Amnesty puts on these concerts that give us the chance to play and also support a good cause," added Parks.

Throughout the year, the club continued organizing different events and activities supporting various topics, such as V-Day which brings awareness of violence towards women. These events encourage students to look beyond their problems to see how they can make the world a better place. "Amnesty strives to broaden students' world view, to remind them that the world does not stop with York's walls," said McKinney. By Kailee Sweeney

SPEAK NOW

INNVOATIVE: to be inventive or to begin to apply creative ideas

Creativity is a word used to describe one who develops original and unique creations, making the world a more interesting place. Speech team captured the essence of this word. Speech team is an interscholastic competitive performance team which participates in thirteen different events that utilize writing, preparation, speaking, and acting skills. Rather than having moderators or teachers decide what the students are to perform, they themselves either chose which performance they were going to use or elected to write a new script entirely.

With this freedom, however, came a lot of hard work and diligence. Team members met every Monday for general team meetings and workshopped particular trouble spots with their coaches. On nearly every Saturday, speech team would attend various competitions that lasted up to twelve hours. "It can get really tiring, but seeing your name on the finals posters is such a rewarding and exciting feeling," said Margaret Homeier, senior. Don't be fooled though, these students knew how to have fun. "We all want to work hard but we know how to play hard. We make sure practices are never boring and always inclusive with Friday Night Speechapaloozas, which is like a pizza party where everyone does their pieces for their teammates," said Joseph Hansel, sophomore.

These students worked together to entertain their audience no matter what fear or doubt they may have held. "When you're up to perform, you're not given the option of stage fright. It's do or die. And there's no better feeling than nailing a performance in spite of nerves. It's what performing is all about," said Caitlin McManus, senior. By Abby Rummage

FANTASTIC FOUR

PASSIONATE: having, compelled by, or ruled by intense emotion or strong feeling

"Acting isn't just playing an imaginary character, it's existing in imaginary circumstances" said senior, Caitlin McManus. This proved no simple task though; the cast had to put in a tremendous amount of hours into practices and rehearsals every day. Some weekends they were even at the school for up to nine hours straight trying to perfect their performances. With four different productions this year, the Drama department had their hands full. This provided a lot of opportunity for the less experienced members. "Since there were so many shows, the casts for each was really small, it really gave each actor the chance to focus on the way his or her specific character influenced the show," said Eva Hughes, senior. Rhiannon Damm, senior, added, "Just like any sport team, every member is so vital to the production and working as a group is something that is essential for the Winter Festival."

Waiting for Godot, Fissures Lost and Found, and The Real Me were the three plays, and Songs for a New World was the winter musical. Waiting for Godot was an absurdist play about two men contemplating their existence while waiting for their friend Godot to show up. Fissures: Lost and Found had four main characters whose lives seemed unconnected but strangely similar. The characters discussed the significance of memories, and how the past affects the future. The Real Me was a play within a play about a girl narrarating her life. Songs for a New World was a collection of pieces by Jason Robert Brown all addressing themes defining who we are and our life choices.

The plays never could have been such successes without the casts' great chemistry. Damm, a lead character in Waiting for Godot, reflected, "It's such a challenging show and to be able to struggle and eventually succeed with the people I care about most was something extraordinary." This mutual care between everyone created the energy and hard work ethic to put on many spectacular shows. By Margaret Stotzer

behind SCENES

FUNDAMENTAL: being an essential part of a foundation; the groundwork of a system

While watching any drama production put on by talented students, one is bound to notice the detailed, hand-crafted sets that allow the actors to sweep their audience into an alternate world. Behind each different set is a dedicated group of students who commit themselves to designing the perfect sets for each show. Stage crew is able to enjoy the plays with a sense of pride at the creation of art they spent hours working on. "My favorite part of being in stage crew is getting to see the play at the end. It's nice to see that the piece of wood you spent an hour yelling at and readjusting actually is serving a purpose in the world other than to give you splinters," says Claire Cornell, junior.

Almost every Thursday and Saturday, stage crew meets for hours, building, painting, and hammering away, readying the stage for the upcoming play. Although prepping for each show takes a lot of hard work, stage crew finds time for fun. "When we've been working particularly hard on a set, we take breaks and have nerf gun wars and play zombie games to lessen some of the stress," said Daniel Mueller, senior. Needless to say, these students know how to mix business and fun.

Stage Crew is a unique group of students who are able to rely on one another. Together, these students create the sets that hundreds enjoy. Without them, the actors in the stage productions wouldn't be nearly as successful. Although completely invisible to the audience, these students remain present in their creation, making for a beautiful and memorable experience. "It's nice to have something you can point to and say 'that's me, and I built that," said Camilla Best, junior. By Abby Rummage

KEEPING CURRENT

Model United Nations is composed of some of York's most enthuastic orators. These students worked together and attended conferences with other schools to strive to find solutions to world problems. By participating in the club, the members learned life skills such as the ability to research, write an expository paper, debate, and most importantly to gain a true understanding of how the world is run. "It's important to be in Model UN to have an understanding of what goes on in the world we are living in," said Mary Margaret Koch, leader and sophomore.

The members used these skills throughout the year during meetings, while preparing for conferences. Each student is a delegate for a given country in the United Nations committee, and they represent that nation's views and interests on a given topic or conflict. The goal of a conference is to peacefully pass a resolution that addresses a current world problem. "My favorite part of MUN is the sense of achievement that comes from passing a resolution that peacefully solves a world problem," added Koch.

The club participated in five conferences, including the Canadian-American Security Council, which required the team to travel to Lansing, Michigan.

Jack Howard, senior, Alex Montasantoes, junior, and Mary Margaret Koch, sophomore, were awarded the Best Delegate Award, which is the highest award a student can achieve at a conference. There was also a trivia contest with political questions along with some pop culture questions, which the team won. "This year's CASC conference was by far the most fun and successful conference we have ever had because we won the trivia contest…pretty proud of that," said John Howard, senior. By Abby White

INTELLECT: The faculty of reasoing and understanding objectively with regard to abstract or academic matters

Mathematics is the abstract science of numbers, quantity, and space. To members of Math Team, or better known as "Mathletes", mathematics is much more than that. It was a demanding competition that required its members to have a dedication to learning and understanding of mathematics in a way unlike many other students can. Kira Tebbe, senior, explained, "You have to love math and be dedicated to want to learn how to approach problems in a different light." They fine tuned their creative approaches to difficult problems this year in practices and competitions.

Like any competitive organization, practice was always a priority. "We have a general meeting Thursday mornings," clarified Tebbe. These meetings are meant for practice for the math team members for upcoming competitions. "And then each grade meets separately throughout the week to study their specific grade topics," said Hari Sreedhar, senior.

Competitions took place every month at different schools. Multiple schools came and tested their mathematical prowess in varying events. As the school year progressed, the events differed from individual challenges to group efforts, to even time trials on problem solving. Much unlike school work, Math Team competitions were about finding efficient "short-cuts" to reach the answer. "Math Team competitions are not about well done work," added Sreedhar, "But rather finding an effectively short route to the answer." Be it ACT preperation or career work, there's nothing better than fun and competitive learning experiences that any individual in Math Team can appreciate and apply outside of the classroom. GIVING BACK

DEVOTED: zealous or ardent in loyalty or affection

Based on a foundation of community service and volunteering, Key Club was a huge hit in the past year. This club tried "to reach out to and help as many people as possible," said Abigail Mazzocco, senior and president. Members, freshman through seniors, reached out to the community and partook in as many events as they could, including the annual Christmas tree lighting in Wilder Park and coat, shoe, school supply, and food drives.

Every year, elections take place for the roles of President, Vice President, Secretary, Publicist, Treasurer, and Historian. These leaders were the heads of the club and made sure everything was in order. "Every board member has a specific job other than being on time and at every meeting. We also have to be leaders of every event which means remind the volunteers and attend the event. We take turns leading events. We also have to attend board meetings every other week. In the meetings we discuss which events we want to help out at," said Emma Stuefen, senior and secretary. By having each leader hold a specific role, the club was able to be fully organized and maintain order throughout the year.

Almost doubling their membership this past school year, "Key Club strives to develop leadership through community service," said club sponsor, Ms. Kennedy-Brooks. Key Club participated in multiple events, their most popular being the annual Christmas tree lighting at Wilder Park. "We got to pass out free cookies to all the little kids who attended the event. It was great to see all their smiling faces and how excited they were for Christmas! The event is for anyone who buys a tree and decorates it (mainly elementary schools and boy scouts take part). They then have a specific day where elves, reindeer and Santa come to help celebrate the lighting of the trees," added Stuefen. They also worked with local charities and non-profit organizations to provide activities at fundraisers for attendees. "Serving your community is a responsibility each of us has to be a good citizen. It is such a great experience to be part of something bigger than yourself. Seeing kids discover that is honestly one of my biggest joys. Key Club provides a place for kids to learn about themselves and what they can accomplish when they put their mind to it," added Kennedy-Brooks. By Hannah Kopach

Urban Arts was a club founded three years ago, and led by Ms. Laine Pehta. The club is composed of students looking to express themselves through dance, incorporating many styles but focusing specifically on hip-hop. The club prides itself on being inclusive to many different races, personalities, and styles of dance. "I remember my sophomore year wanting to join a club I felt comfortable in, a club where I can truly be myself—Urban Arts is just that. I can honestly say being in this club has made me see who I truly am," said Leslie Mota, senior. The diverse make up of the organization only improves the club's overall performance. "We are all unique, we aren't the same people and having different ideas, different style of dance makes our choreography better," said Luis Diego-Barrera, sophomore.

The club practices all year for competitions and performances. The dances at the Homecoming Pep Rally and the half-time show at the Homecoming football game are some of the most anticipated shows. The team practices twice a week, but leading up to a big event they stay well after school perfecting their choreography. The group's hard work paid off when they performed many successful shows.Pehta played a big role in shaping the atmosphere of the club, and she made it a place where dancers can succeed. "Ms. Pehta is the kind of person that can relate to us kids on our own level. I'm really thankful for the time that she has spent on the club," added Mota. Ultimately the dedication and the love for dance paid off during performances. "I love the adrenaline rush. It's an awesome feeling once we go out there and the crowd is cheering us on," said Angelica Ramirez-Nunez, freshman.

The club's style is unique; their motto is expressive not provocative. The choreography was done by Matthew Echevarria, junior, and Diana Sanchez, senior, but all the dancers translated the moves into a cohesive piece. The students were draws to the club because of the "dancing and vibe," said Amy Nikitas, sophomore, "Urban arts welcomed me with opened arms. Everyone there is different and they are there for one thing—they love dancing." By Abby White and Katie VanZandbergen

ALL RISE

Objection! This year's law team broke the status quo through their love of understanding the law. The team is composed of a group of students who are passionate about justice and learning more about the courtroom environment. The team met every week to compose their parts, practice, and compete after school. The parts had to be perfect for competition day because even a minor slip-up could be detrimental to the team.

The case this year was about an estate that was left to the pets. The children of the deceased owners wanted the estate so they brought it to the court. "The case this year is a tough one," said John Hennessy, senior. "Each side of the case has its strengths and weaknesses. We have been working hard to be prepared no matter what side we are given."

Mock trial is run like a real courtroom case. The case was given at the beginning of the winter and the team had to prepare the case for the prosecution and defense. Once at competition, the team was assigned a side and the goal was to argue the case so they could persuade the judge to rule in their favor. Testimonies, cross-examinations, and objections, are what brought the case to life. At the end of the trial, the judge decided who the winner was. "After the closing statements, the suspense is almost unbearable. All you can do is hope for the judge to rule in your favor," said Amanda Brain, senior.

The countless hours they spent practicing together made them a strong team in position to win. A high level of commitment was needed because every part impacted the judge's decision. "Law team provides me with the opportunity to be a part of a team. On the day of the trial, everyone performs to the best to their ability and we hope to come away with the win," said Anthony DiGregorio, senior.

CARNAVAL: festival that occurs immediately before Lent in Latino cultures

Spanish Club provided a great opportunity for a large variety of students to explore the customs and culture of Spanish speaking countries. There were many varieties of students in this club, "Anyone can join, we even have French speaking members. You don't have to know how to speak Spanish to participate," said, Ms. Kelley Westerberg, sponsor. The main goal of this club was to provide students with the experience of a different culture and display what they learned to each other and the school in general.

In order to provide a glimpse of Latino culture the group also enjoyed guest speakers, arts and crafts, games, films, music, and many different types of Latino and Spanish foods. "It is nice to step out of [American] culture for a bit and into something different," said Ashley Vazquez, club president and senior. During the holidays the club also studied how different countries celebrate coinciding holidays within their culture. This year the club made masks for a Latino four day celebration, Rio Carnaval, honoring the week before Lent. "It is like a Mardi Gras for Latinos," said, Mariana Ortega, junior.

Spanish club also gets a chance to display what they have learned, not only to each other during their many presentations, but to the entire school during the annual International Festival, held in the commons. They represent many different Latino countries with samples of food, music, and usually a game. This club provided members with a chance to learn more about Latino countries, and also to display their newly sought knowledge to each other and their community. By Billi Alexandria Marquess

LIBERATING: Freeing from constrains or barriers

Expressing one's musical talents at York was easier due to Amateur Musicians' Club. Each member had the chance to perform their talent, both on and off campus. Amateur Musicians' Club made it possible for students to showcase their work even outside of York. "AMC has tried performing off-campus at Fitz's Spare Keys. I could tell that this was something that we needed to continue doing on a regular basis," said Mr. Christopher Gemkow, sponsor. Performing at the venue was exciting, since most of the members never performed outside of school. "I was pretty nervous doing shows and playing in front of large crowds, but when you get into the groove of your performance, you don't have a care in the world," said Jack Cronin, sophomore.

Besides the opportunity to perform, the club offered feedback from fellow musicians. "It's pretty hard to be a successful one-man band, that's why there will always be people willing to help each other out in AMC, because everyone wants each other to succeed, and they'll give you the means to do so," added Cronin. Amateur Musicians' Club lets students experience different music styles and techniques. "We have such a wide array of musical styles in AMC that there's really a place for everybody. Students also offer each other an opportunity to learn about a style of music that they've never heard before," added Gemkow.

Fostering musical talent is no small feat, but with Amateur Musicians' Club, it was attainable. AMC offered a creative atmosphere for each member. "There's a place for everyone here. And everyone is welcomed no matter how much experience they have. The love for music and the need to express it is all someone needs to join," said Roy Potter, sophomore. Members of AMC all brought different musical aspects to the club, such as contemporary, jazz, and even pop, making it a success. "It's really cool to see how everyone brings something new to the club: a voice, an instrument, their own sound, it all contributes to making AMC work," said Leah Gortowski, junior. By Ellen Dyra

FRIEND: a person attached to another by feelings of affection or personal regard

There was no place at York that was more welcoming than Circle of Friends. In this club, students of all backgrounds came together to do all sorts of entertaining activities. The purpose was to simply make new friends and experience high school to the fullest. "I've always enjoyed helping and interacting with others. It's a good opportunity to meet new people," said Kristin Truesdale, senior.

One was never bored at a Circle of Friends event. Most students looked forward to the frequent parties throughout the year. "My favorite part was the parties because a bunch of people would show up and it was always fun," said Samantha Slocum, senior. These parties were usually around the winter holidays or Halloween. The club took trips outside of school as well. Some events included holiday shopping at Yorktown mall, bowling, and visiting the Brookfield zoo. They also introduced new events this year like the Thanksgiving party, where everyone did the Turkey Dance and enjoyed some karaoke. One unique thing about Circle of Friends was that everyone in the club voted on these events. There was no steering committee to decide what would be done each year. This was done to ensure that everyone in the club had a say in everything. All students could contribute ideas, which went with the club's philosophy of inclusion and acceptance.

No matter what, the students were always happy. "The best part is that [the students] are so pure in their emotions, so there is no confusion," said Mr. Andrew Bendelow, sponsor. This sort of happiness was contagious among the students. "Seeing [someone else] smile just makes me smile. It just seemed like a natural fit for me," said Amanda Tumbarello, senior. By Ellen Goese

MAD SKILLS

PASSION: compelling emotion; strong amorous feeling

Skills USA is a partnership of students, teachers and industry working together to ensure America has a skilled workforce. Students were able to participate in a variety of competitions ranging from cosmetology to fire fighting. Although there are many different fields of work, York's chapter mainly focused on the industrial sides of the program. Different areas of industry include Adobe Photoshop, Graphic Communications, Screen Printing, CAD, and even Auto Maintenance. "Skills USA teaches students who are in the industrial arts how to use their skills in a work-place environment and how to better prepare and execute their abilities professionally," said Trevor Gulley, senior.

To further their abilities, students involved competed at the Regional and State level. Regional tests are given in February and if placed in the top ten in their specific competition, the students' advancement to State continues in April. For Illinois, the State competition is held in Springfield. Students stay three days and two nights at the State Conference and participate in group socials and the Awards Ceremony. "The competition really shows the knowledge and dedication that students have in their chosen areas of study," said Joseph Stolz, graphic arts teacher. After a long day of competition, students anticipate finding out the results for their chosen field in the competition. Last year, four students placed at State including Trevor Gulley, senior, for Adobe Photoshop, Santiago Ortega, graduate, for Principles of Technology, Nicholas Freitag, graduate, for Principles of Technology, and Zane Johns, senior, for Full Service Auto. "If students want to excel further in their hands-on abilities, they join Skills to test themselves and prove to others that they have what it takes to be successful in their field of interest," said Trevor Gulley, senior. role MODELS

PRIDE: self-respect; self-esteem. a feeling of gratification arising from association with something good or laudable

PRIDE was a club that spread messages of making good decisions by not drinking or doing drugs. "The goal of PRIDE is to encourage kids to be leaders in school and help them to make good choices," said Emily Knopf, junior. They did this through various activities and events to give students healthier and more positive alternatives.

PRIDE hosted all sorts of events throughout the school year. They started off with smoothie sales that were sponsored by Jamba Juice. They also did a project with the organization, Feed My Starving Children, in which they helped package food to be sent to impoverished areas around the world. They went to events at York such as the homecoming game, the fall play, and had a holiday party. At meetings, members would plan events and play team-building and ice-breaker games. These activities culminated in a trip to Navy Pier at the end of the year. These sorts of events were what keep students coming back to the meetings. "It's great to see new members join and realize [PRIDE] is a positive place to be. Everyone is very welcoming," said Ms. Rebecca Marianetti, sponsor.

PRIDE taught many lessons to the students involved. "As a senior, I have more responsibilities in being a role model for the younger kids," said Laurel Miner, senior. PRIDE provided an environment for students who shared the same beliefs. "I joined because the views and goals of PRIDE are my personal views and it looked like a lot of fun," added Knopf. The message of PRIDE left a lasting impact the students. "PRIDE reminded me that I'm making the right choices and stick with what I believe in," said Alexandra Nugent, senior. By Ellen Goese

HER STORY

EQUALITY: the state or quality of being equal; correspondence in quantity, degree, rank, value, or ability

Throughout York there are few clubs that focus on equal opportunity, but Empower strives to help women and men alike to understand the importance of equality. Run my Ms. Lindsey DiTomasso, the club organizes many different activities and themed days throughout the year to bring the issue of women's rights to the forefront of student's attention.

This year, the club organized a Love Your Body Day, where students posted statistics on mirrors and in bathroom stalls. They compared things like the cost of plastic surgeries to amazing opportunities, like traveling in Europe, or paying for college to show the chances people are missing when sacrificing their time worrying about their appearance. "The purpose of Love Your Body Day is to encourage both boys and girls to love themselves for who they are and embrace their natural beauty," said Ellen Goese, senior. They also organized V-Day, a day to raise awareness about violence against women. During the day, students wore red V's to display support of women, while Empower members tried to educate students and redefine what is considered abuse. They choose to hosted it on Valentines day to raise awareness about abusive or harmful relationships. They also host an unequal bake sale, where girls paid slightly less than boys to represent the salary gap between men and women. All of their activities strived to show the student body that women and men are equals, but not always treated so in society.

Overall the many events empower organized throughout the year were to help students understand the many issues behind women's rights. "I am in Empower because I believe that women should be respected as equal human beings," said Joseph Lesus, junior. Violence against women does not stop with teaching women how to defend themselves, but by teaching both men and women respect and equality, and Empower takes this message to heart. By Abby White

OPEN MIC

ORIGINALITY: ability to think or express oneself in an independent and individual manner; creative ability

Finding an outlet for creativity and artistry is not a challenge for York students, thanks to York's own Mirrors. Mirrors is a student-published magazine which comprised the photography, short stories, and poetry submitted by students and which is distributed at the end of the year. "Mirrors provides a forum for students to share their work, whether students submit writing, photography, artwork to the magazine, or perform at Java Live," said Ms. Jennifer Shackleton, sponsor. Java Live, sponsored by Mirrors, is a night when any type of performance is welcomed in a coffee-house style atmosphere that gives students the opportunity to perform and express themselves.

This year, the Mirrors staff focused to encourage students to really expose their talent; "We want to bring more attention to our literary group, since kids our age feel like writing can be their voice and all they need is someone to listen," said Camilla Best, junior.

Mirrors lets students channel their artistic ability by allowing them to publish their work. "We provide an outlet for artists, writers and performers to share their talent with the rest of York," said Ellen Goese, senior. Originality, encouragement, and having an open mind are the values that were emphasized in the club. "At Mirrors, we encourage others to write, draw, or delve into their creative outlet—whatever it is. We're more than willing to help someone else if they want us to critique their work," added Best.

Students brought in their experience and feedback that allowed the club to be successful. Each student, whether in contribution, performance, or part of the club, fostered a creative atmosphere. "No artistic talent should be hidden from the world. Anyone who is an artist, writer, or performer should join Mirrors so that they can share their talent," added Goese. By Ellen Dyra

Leading EXAMPLE

PROACTIVE: acting in advance to deal with an expected difficulty

A leader inspires someone else to dream more, learn more, do more, and become more. The student leaders in the J. Kyle Braid Foundation (JKB) do just that. This is a group of students who are leaders in the classroom and on the field. The members bring awareness to the community about the dangers of alcohol and drugs, ultimately encouraging good decision making. "I enjoy helping other students to become leaders by influencing their peers to make the right decisions," said Alex Mimlitz, junior.

JKB was started by Mr. and Mrs. Braid after their son tragically took his own life. Kyle Braid was a starter on the football team and was told by his coach to become better by any means necessary. After several months of secretly using anabolic steroids, Kyle took his own life. His parents started the foundation in Kyle's name to help students become better leaders. Every year York picks four students to go and learn to be better leaders at the ranch in Colorado. "The ranch was a life changing experience that let us bond with other leaders in our area, learn skill sets that we will continue to utilize, and it also helped us see the effect we can have on others," said Matthew Parks, junior.

They took the experience back to York to spread their message. JKB sponsored a pledging during homecoming week for students to stay drug and alcohol free. Students used paint to make a hand print on a piece of paper to put a stop to underage drinking. Hands off the Bottle had hundreds of students participate. "The student response was great to Hands off the Bottle," said Kenneth Boesenberg, senior. JKB also hosted the York Dukes' Trash for Cash yard sale and "Pink out the Pool" breast cancer water polo game. They were able to promote good decisions and fundraise for the new members to go to the ranch and the events.

The leadership learned from JKB students' experiences at the ranch translated and showed in every activity they sponsored. The new members every year continue to show leadership on and off the field. By Eric Glaubke

PERFECT SYNC

Music wasn't all fun and games. Students here took their involvement in the organization very seriously and expected nothing less from themselves as well as their peers. Constructive criticism and constant practice were the foundations to success.

It was this dedication and studiousness that bound the band together. "We have to work together every day to get where we want: our goals," explains Garrett Stevenson, junior. "Everyone must contribute to get perfect sound, clarity, and musicianship out of any piece. We have to like each other and connect as one 'machine' to be a successful band like we are now."

In each level and branch of band, Cadet, Concert, and Symphonic, Jazz, Pep, and Marching Band, excellence and brilliance shined throughout.

Cadet, Concert, and Symphonic are academic classes. Cadet Band was strictly for freshmen, Concert and Symphonic Bands, respectively, were open to all grades, if the student's skill and experience were adequate. There are also the non-academic activities connected with band that are open to all band students: Marching Band, Pep-Band, and Jazz Band.

Despite the daily dedication put into being in the band, the students made time for each other to bond as one huge family. From the daily stress and practice to the late night games that Marching and Pep-Band perform, the band drew closer together. "We have become a family due to our triumphs-going to New Orleans, Carl Sandburg Festival-and our lowest of lows-Michael Lerud passing away," said Shane Dickinson, senior, "We live together, we love together, and we grow together." It was binding and bonding experiences that made band the great family that it was.

NUT GRAPH: the paragraph in a news piece that gives the essence of the featured story "in a nutshell"

The majority of York's student body has laid hands on an issue of York-Hi at least once in their high school career. With a new issue released monthly, avid readers are kept up-to-date on the local and global issues. What often goes unrecognized is the hard work put into the publication; it's time to acknowledge how much dedication and commitment goes into making York's student-run newspaper. This week's feature: the York-Hi.

Comprised of twenty-four members, the staff met every day to collaborate and create, guided by Ms. Kim Lampa, sponsor. A typical day in the York-Hi lab involved writers conferring with artists and photographers, and aligning the pieces necessary for a spread in the next publication. Each staff member had specific responsibilities as well. Led by Editor-in-Chief John Howard, senior, the staff stayed on task and got down to business every day. "I think developing great reporters is the most important part of being Editor. Also, it's just exciting to report on a story or help another do so," said Howard.

The deadline crunches were undoubtedly difficult; myriad late nights were spent holed up in the York-Hi lab, as writers scrambled to get everything in perfect order to be shipped to the printer. Although being on staff was stressful sometimes, the reward greatly outweighed it. "The pride I feel when I walk into our computer lab and see the paper fresh from the printer is immeasurable. Seeing my labor realized in print form makes it worth the effort," said Rachel Nugent, senior. The amount of work that went into making each issue was tremendous, but the staff members found ways to make the deadline crunches fun nonetheless. "In between making sure headlines aren't misspelled and all the articles are put in the paper, we eat pizza or tacos and listen to jazz," said Howard.

The York-Hi celebrated several traditions throughout the year as well. For Thanksgiving, the York-Hi "family" congregated at different members' homes to share in a progressive holiday dinner, which involves numerous courses and dishes served at different staff members' homes; during the holidays, the staff participated in a "Secret Santa" gift exchange, giving one another quirky, funny gifts. In May, the staff hosted a tea party to say goodbye to the seniors, a nostalgic York-Hi tradition. "Being on staff is like having a family. Not all of us always get along, but we try to have fun and work hard—although sometimes we get a little distracted. Our traditions are sacred," said Ruth Ronnau, senior.

York-Hi is a unique collection of talented writers and artists; each staff member brought something different to the York-Hi family, and their creativity was boundless. The legacy of intriguing articles and interesting designs will continue to be carried out by the future staff members. By Genevieve Rizzo

MAKING MEMORIES

REMINISCENT: awaking memories of something similar; stimulating memories

This year, as usual Yearbook had its hands full; with deadlines, interviews, identifications, and pictures to be taken they dove into the year with a full plate. The most stressful times for the Yearbook staff were deadlines. "Deadlines are always hard to make," says Ellen Goese, senior, For each deadline staff members were assigned one two-page spread (two facing pages) to complete and make "book ready." Perfecting their spreads required taking or reviewing their pictures, conducting interviews with students and teachers, and writing copy.

The Yearbook staff has expectations to meet every year, and this year was no different. The yearbook staff had to satisfy the student population by producing a book that summarizes the year in a defined and appropriate way. "We always take what the students want into consideration when we're looking at design and content," said Abigail White, senior and Editor-in-Chief. The yearbook staff members have to make decisions on the design, color, and theme of the book. "The theme is always hard to decide upon but it's critical to tie together the entire book," said Margaret Stotzer, junior and editor.

The Yearbook provides a chance for students to come together in a mostly student run environment and create something that they can have pride in. "The yearbook is something archival and over 2,000 people read it every year; it is an important publication," said Kailee Sweeny, senior and editor. Most importantly, the yearbook staff dedicated themselves to making a book that can capture the essence of a high school experience. "We really look to make this book something that the students will be proud to look back on and will give them the proper memories of York," said Kathryn McGirk, senior and editor. AND ACTION!

CREATIVE: Having the quality or power of creating, resulting from originlaity of thought; imaginative

The bell rings, cameras roll, and the announcements start. Thanks to YTV, daily school-related news is projected in every classroom throughout the building. Not many people realize how much work production takes, though. YTV met every day for two periods: 7th and 8th. Each period consisted of groups that switched off filming the announcements. During this designated time, students met in their groups to create videos related to topics assigned by Mr. Brendan Chambers. Assignments ranged from daily broadcasts and features to the beloved Friday Features that all students anticipated. Once given their projects, students had two weeks to gather interviews and edit videos in preparation for the green screen.

Although YTV seems like only fun and games, it required a lot of work to produce the videos. It was time consuming, but worthwhile. "You learn basic movie making skills like writing, filming, and editing, and you can expand these abilities to help you in the future," said Miles Kalchik, junior. When the projects were finished, the student body viewed them on the announcements and saw how much time and effort was really put in to making the announcements.

YTV also let students use their creativity. "Friday Features are the best part about YTV. The Homecoming Feature was definitely my favorite one to shoot. We had so much fun with it and really put our thoughts together to create a great video," said Daniel Sonenberg, junior. With this imagination, the YTV crew came together to film a one-shot video that featured a variety of clubs at York. Each club decorated a hallway and the students dressed up in their craziest Christmas outfits for the video. YTV members then walked around the hallways lip-synching to "All I Want for Christmas" by Mariah Carey. The video really brought the school together and showed the originality and skill YTV had to offer. By Hannah Kopach

CAKEWALK

For students who spent most of their time in the Family and Consumer Sciences (FCS) classes, they were likely to be in the club for Family Career & Community Leaders of America (FCCLA). Catherine Lawrence, senior, joined FCCLA because she "want[s] to open a bakery and do cake competitions like on Cake Boss."

The club was divided into chapters for each event. Invite-To-Teach students competed in events such as pre-school lesson planning and storytelling and were judged based on their ability to perform their stories with the use of costumes and props. Cooking students competed in many events such as cake decorating, relish tray, salad display, and catering. Interior design students put together a room and displayed their designs for judges while fashion students created clothing and were judged on the display of their pieces. FCCLA provided opportunities for FCS students to use the skills they learned in class to compete with other schools.

Students prepared for competitions at meetings by working on their projects and doing mock interviews like those conducted by judges at competition. Students also graded each others' projects and helped each other to improve prior to presenting at competition.

"My favorite part is working on the project because it's difficult but rewarding to see it completed," said Katherine Kampwirth, senior. These students worked hard to put together presentations that would be competition worthy.

Along with the competition, students participated in a service project called Kaps for Kendall in which they made fleece hats for cancer patients. "We thought it would be a nice way to use our talents to give back to the community," said Kampwirth. Competition judging was based on a point system and students earned points based on creativity and meeting competition requirements.

Students had to have a lot of stage confidence to do well. "The hardest part is making sure I'm ready because I can get nervous," said Rita Wirth, senior. The judges awarded gold, silver, bronze, or most outstanding awards and those who won most outstanding and a few gold winners went on to State; this year, nine students went to state proving that all the hard work truly paid off.

Finer THINGS

NOVELTY: The state and quality of being novel; new or unique

Art classes at York are designed to encourage anyone who is interested to join, regardless of previous experience. At the end of the class, the teachers' goals were to help students discover their creativity in a new way. "It's fun to see a kid come in saying they can't do this, and by the end of the year, they've created something not even they can believe," said Mr. Tom Wolf, teacher.

The inspiration for art is different for everyone who creates art. "I'm inspired by anything. I'm a photographer, so I keep a camera with me at all times so I can capture every moment," said Jillian Mastropolo, junior. The type of art that students created was varied due to the many courses available. Students interested can explore their own understanding of art through different types of painting, drawing, ceramics and sculpting, jewelry, and photography classes. For many people, art classes at York were a stress relief. "I can have a though day and relax and paint; it's a good way to communicate through an image," added Wolf.

Although the art classes teach technique, art is mostly independent work and the process of creating art says a lot about an individual. Wolf describes the process as "a struggle. It's about coming up with an idea and working from that idea." But Mr. Tom Edgley, drawing and oil painting teacher, said art is "an adventure…Every decision and every little thing you do to your art takes you in a whole new direction, and gives you so many possibilities to choose from." Through the medium, technique, inspiration and process, art classes proved an opportunity to show individuality and talent. "There is so much that you can take from a person, and portray into art," said Cooper Alimorong, sophomore, "You let all of your emotions empty out and work it into the brush. When you pull away and are finished, it turns out to be your best work." By Abby White

FUTURE LEADERS

DEVOTED: Committed to ardent work

Every year, students wait in anticipation to hear the theme for the infamous Homecoming week days. Who decides what the student body will be wearing for that exciting week in September? Twelve students from each grade known as Student Council. These students met four times a week during the second half of fifth period to discuss ideas for upcoming events such as dances, blood drives, and trivia nights. A committee was assigned for each event and was led by one student in particular. These students were responsible for planning and organizing these events and making sure they ran smoothly.

Student council had BOOM! Entertainment make an appearance at this year's homecoming dance. "Homecoming this year was so awesome. Not only was BOOM! great yet again, but the decorations and everything was really top of the line," said Samantha Slocum, senior. The hard work Student Council put into the dance itself really showed in the students' and staff's reactions. "Yeah it was hard work, but it was also really fun. I love working on homecoming because it's really great to see everyone's reactions when it's done," said Haley Halak, senior.

Responsible and dedicated students work together as a team, making a better school environment. "These events, I think, make York better because they allow opportunities for students to participate in activities other than academics and sports. Students just want to be a part of something, especially with volunteering," said Kelsey Cadigan, senior. Giving up half their lunch period, Student Council worked to ensure events go smoothly and were fun for those that participated. "I love being a part of Student Council. It truly makes you feel like you are part of the fabric of York High School and that's simply the best," said Jack Hennessey, senior. By Abby Rummage

FOUNDATION: the basis and groundwork of anything

Students oftentimes find themselves wondering how to take the first steps into pursuing their future careers and passions yet some come up short; the Medical Careers class at York provided those crucial first steps to helping students find their niche. The Medical Careers program was one of the many innovative programs York offerd to the junior and senior classes. Students enrolled in the class after they were reviewed by the teachers through interviews, then the students prepared for the medical field by diving into the course work. The class started with one semester in the classroom learning about anatomy and important medical studies then they transitioned into real-world situations by taking opportunities to work in labs and clinics with practitioners and patients.

"I have known that I've wanted to be a nurse for a while so I thought that taking this class would allow me to explore different jobs within the medical field," said Natalie Heinle, senior. The students were allowed to follow any path they felt drawn to, with students going into veterinary medicine all the way to anesthesiology; the students were given a wide variety of options. "The benefits of this class are that it gives you an introduction to what you will learn in college and it allows you see so many different medical professions," added Heinle. The students not only get a taste of what they will find in future careers they get to experience what they like and don't like. "Med Careers was the perfect way to help solidify what area of medicine I would be most interested in since it's something I get to experience firsthand," said Danielle Morency, senior.

The students emerge from this class having a better understanding of what they would like to pursue in the medical field. York lets the students shine through this program and further prepares students for what they will find the real world. "I don't think I ever knew what it mean to study until Med Careers. This class is only the beginning, but with Ms. Feigh's help I learned the discipline and importance of real-life studying," said Jacqueline Nikoleit, senior. By Kathryn McGirk

SING IT

When walking by the music department throughout the day, one hears the harmonious sounds of the many choirs. The singers of York met one class period every day to rehearse for concerts and learn the dynamics of music: they sang songs like "Daniel Servant of the Lord" for the Collage concert, "Schubert Mass in G," Christmas carols in the winter, and show tunes in the spring. "To let students make music on a daily basis is imperative to their education," said Ms. Rebecca Marianetti, choral director. Ms. Marianetti's mindset gave students an education as well as a sense of community.

Beginners learned music theory, vocal production, and how to read music in cadet choir. Girls moved up to choraliers to improve breath support, pronunciations, and harmonies. Concert choir used all the skills they learned to perform more complex pieces. The most complex music of all was the mass they sang accompanied by the orchestra. This year, they performed "Schubert Mass in G," a twenty-minute long piece they memorized. "We're supposed to be an example and show younger kids how to carry themselves onstage," said Rhiannon Damm, senior. "We're seniors now and it's different to be the older ones when we used to look up to the seniors," added Michael St. Peter, senior.

Madrigals, an extracurricular choir performed other genres of music. They sang Renaissance music in fall, a cappella pop songs in winter, and jazz songs in spring. In addition to rehearsing for concerts, they prepared pieces for the Illinois Music Educators Association competition. Each student prepared five pieces to perform for two judges and the judges chose excerpts from two pieces for the students to perform. Judges also tested them on scales and triads. Many students received the IMEA award and performed in a concert with winners from other schools

Because they spent four years together, choir students became close friends. "I love to sing and I want to enhance my vocal ability and all of my friends are choir kids," said Kellagh McFarlane, senior. This sense of community encouraged people to join choir. "I joined choir because it's a good way to start off high school with a great group of people," said Julie Lindberg, senior. It also gave students a nice change. "You get to be yourself for one hour and be with all of your friends doing what you love," said Kelsey Roberts, senior. By Ellen Goese

get SMART

COMPREHEND: to understand the meaning of something; grasp with the mind.

Many students spend a great deal of time within the infamous Math Lab, Library, and the Writing Center, making up tests and quizzes, and working together to reach an understanding. This year the Academic Resource Center (ARC) was added to the list, bringing a new academic strategy to the table.

Students filed into the newly added ARC to better their education by getting help from teachers from all subjects, every period of the day. This was the goal, said Ms. Mary Armstrong, ARC director, "We want students to come in and get the help whenever they need it." When asked to define the best part of the ARC, Megan Maher, junior replied, "It's great opportunity to get a tutor...and tutor others who need help." Other students, like Spencer Wegner, junior, compared this help center to the Math Lab, "You can get the help you need in any subject, all day! It's pretty awesome, I come in here two periods a day to finish my homework and get the help I need."

Next to taking advantage of the resources available, other students find importance in taking inspirational classes. "Education is the most important aspect in a successful future," said Shawn John, junior. York has a wide variety of classes accessible to students in order to develop a clear path for their lives ahead.

When asked to name his most important class, Jack Hayes, sophomore, said, "English is the most important because you will always need to know how to read and write." Other students believe math is the most important, like Connor Lockie, freshman, "Math will come in handy when counting money, and in case I need to graph a function." Life is not limited to just math and English, and with all of these resources available, students have the ability to develop a great education in every subject and in turn lead an admirable future. SERVICE ORIENTED

INTEGRITY: soundness of and adherence to moral principle and character; uprightness; honesty

The National Honor Society (NHS) is an organization created to recognize high school students who have demonstrated excellence in the areas of Scholarship, Leadership, Service, and Character. These characteristics have been associated with membership in the organization.

Every year, students in the current junior class who are eligible for NHS are sent a letter in September. From there, students are asked to fill out an application that highlights the four areas of excellence along with teacher recommendations and signatures to enhance their application.

To be accepted into NHS, along with demonstrating Scholarship, Leadership, Service, and Character, students must also have a GPA of at least 3.5, have at least 10 hours of service, "and have a record of leadership skills either indirectly or directly," said Ann Fazzio, officer and senior.

Not only is NHS focused on Scholarship, Leadership, Service, and Character, but the organization is a strong supporter of community service. The application process asks students to demonstrate as many hours of community service they have been involved in, and is a big factor in the acceptance into the program. "Community service is the most important function of NHS," said John Hennessey, President of NHS and senior. NHS is in charge of many community-building events, such as peer tutoring, bell ringing, collections for hospitals, adopt-a-family, and much more. "We serve an important purpose in that respect," said Hennessey.

Not only is NHS a great organization to be a part of, but it is also very prestigious when applying for college. "NHS is beneficial in the college application process because the organization is highly recognized, and in being a part of the York chapter of NHS dignifies one as an individual with strong moral character who would be a positive addition to any college," added Fazzio. BRINGIN'-IT BACH

Da CAPO: The instruction to repeat a musical composition from the beginning.

Everyone is important in the process of music, and dedication is the key because without one person on the right note, the entire piece is ruined. This year's orchestra program proved their ultimate togetherness and dedication. Each branch of Orchestra practices for an entire period each day, and they rely on eachother to do their best. This is possible through the atmosphere within the whole group and the desire to be great.

"Everyone has something special to offer. Everyone is valued, and we all take something away from every rehearsal," said Mr. Ray Ostwald, director, when describing his multi-level group of musicians. Orchestra isn't all about reading notes off of a page, but the combinations of rhythms, sounds, and articulation of the music. Everyone has their own part within a piece, and it is extremely important that each person nails it for the music to sound flawless. They need to be dedicated in order to exceed expectations. They practice every day for a period, and some even use practice rooms in the music department and take their instruments home. "I practiced all the time in order to reach the Symphony Orchestra, the highest orchestra, so I could have the opportunity to play with the best," said, Michael Kirby, junior. The dedication and drive to succeed allows this group to flourish in their musical talent.

The atmosphere in Orchestra has been described as suportive from many members. "The music encourages us all through the creative process and the powerful effect it has on us, and our audiences," added Ostwald. The goal is to satisfy the audience by delivering magical music, but also learning new music and over-looking the difficult harmonies and Da Capo in order to make it the best it can be. Many described the song, "Les Préludes" by Franz Liszt to be the most memorable. "We played it with the Illinois State Orchestra, which was very exciting," said Kirby. When asked about this piece, Alison Brodt, freshman, said, "There was a silent rest in the piece, and everyone was quiet in the audience... there were no babies crying or anything, only pure silence. You could really feel the respect they had for your art, your music, and your contribution to the piece as a whole." These are the results that this group received from all their dedication and hard work. By Billi Alexandria Marquess

Thank You...

Abby W.-This yearbook would be a pile of post-it notes and computer paper if it wasn't for you telling us literally how to do everything. You made these past 3 books possible and you did an amazing job and became a phenomenal leader. We are all eternally grateful. P.S. You are the prettiest giraffe I've ever seen.

Kathryn- For bringing a sense of calm to the editors. When things got hectic you were always able to organize the chaos. You did a great job this year, and all your hard work was not forgotten. Also thanks for forgiving us for hiding Abe, because that's what friends are for.

Kailee- For stepping up to the plate this year as an editor. You tackled many headache inducing tasks with grace and patience, and for that we thank you. P.S. Don't bite your friends, because there is always money in the banana stand.

Eric- For your general understanding of technology. Anytime a computer froze we screamed "Glaubke!" so thanks for putting up with that. Oh and for letting us frost your tips. Much appreciated, friend.

Genie- For doing double the amounts of spreads everyone else had to do. You really brought this book together, and we couldn't have done it without you. You are a talented writer and next year's staff has big shoes to fill.

Abby R- For being allergic to everything, your innumerable accents, constant scolding from Ms. P for your saucy comments, and proclaiming your Spanish ancestry. You brought such a unique personality to the staff and some much needed comic relief. Thanks!

Ellen G.- For your music ability, beautiful hair, attempts to keep Ron on task, and capability to name just about every person in a name list. Having you on staff the past two years has helped this book in countless ways. You brought much creativity and skill to the book, thanks for always making it work.

Joachim- For keeping at least one foot on the ground the majority of the time, poetic and philosophic insight, failing to share your puppy chow stash with the staff (sometimes), and presenting your wonderful music taste to the playlist during deadline. You always stepped up to the plate when we needed you most, and you will be greatly missed next year.

Ali- We dumped a lot of work on you and you took it all perfectly. We enjoyed watching you learn the ways of the book and we know you will continue to be a powerhouse next year. We also always counted on you to provide a needed laugh and gossip session. Thanks Billi.

Maggie- For creating a Celine-like atmosphere, assorted rubber bands stationed throughout the room, and the failure to wear actual pants- jeggings don't count. We wish you the best of luck taking on the book next year—although we don't' think you need it. If anyone is capable of doing this it's you.

Ellen D.- For introducing an array of vocabulary words (i.e Raunchy), being mistaken for the sibling of Kailee multiple times, making EVERYONE's titles, and being a key contributor to the Frost Glaubke's Tips Foundation. Your body copy puns always made us giggle, and your bubbly personality made deadlines less stressful.

Hannah- For constantly making excessively loud noises and obnoxious faces, your Photoshop skills, enjoying cafeteria delights, having your name be a palindrome, and spamming Abby R's Facebook wall. You were a diligent worker and always stayed on task, thank you for pulling it all together.

Jazzmin- For making ponies for everyone, rocking your sick anime skills, keeping it fresh, and always getting your spreads done on time. Your creativity did not go unnoticed.

Katie- For your contributions to the corkboard, partnering with Ellen G to keep Ron in line, and presenting your ever willingness to take pictures. Thanks for all your hard work.

Ron- For constantly getting grilled by almost every lady in the room, making fun of Kathryn's boots every day, owning a light up shirt, and presenting your DJ Skillz at Turnabout twenty-twelve. WE realize that sometimes we gave you a hard time, but you were always a good sport. Thanks for all your time and effort. P.S. I thought you were sick?

Ms. Parrini- For everything. Without you, our staff would not have functioned. You sacrificed nights and weekends to make this book possible and we could never thank you enough. Thanks for being understanding to the chaotic personalities this year (convincing Joachim to keep his feet on the floor, and scolding the girls for all of our general conversations). We couldn't show enough gratitude for making this happen, and keeping your cool. You've done so much for every book through the many years you've been the advisor. You've made an impact on not only the book, but also each and every staff member, and that is something we will always remember.

High school does not define you. Your time at York is an experiment of interests. Whether you join the math team, are a three-sport athlete, sing in the musical, or simply enjoy your time in classes, you begin to transform your character. If you are aware of it or not, your choices made here at York will affect who you are and who you will become. The freedom found in the multitude of classes, the numerous organizations, and the various sports will lead you to understand your strengths and passions as a person. You now have the freedom to begin to choose who you want to be. Moving forward from this year, whether you are graduating or just starting off, you have many more experiences ahead of you to continually grow. High school is just a stepping stone, a drawing one third of the way finished. You have all your life to figure out the rest.

Continuing AHEAD
