SOCIALIZE STUDENT LIFE

Perhaps the most spirited students this year were Evan Wendt, Dorian Piman, Cameron Cross and Kevin Sheehan, otherwise known as this year's King of the Couch winners, The Scooby Dukes.

"It was very surreal. To know that we devoted so much time to this King of the Couch competition and we finally won. Sitting down there made us realize that our hard work paid off," said Cameron Cross, senior, who wore a Scooby Doo costume every Friday leading up to Homecoming. The group had attended different sporting events and show the sport spirit during the Homecoming spirit weeks in order to win the prestigious award.

"It's a great view of the game and it's much more comfortable than the bleachers," added Kevin Sheehan, senior, when talking about his experience while sitting on the couch at the Homecoming football game.

TRADITIONS

"I think everyone loves
being able to be apart of this school."

Maggie Regan, senior

Every year, the senior class organizes prefootball tailgates for everyone in the class to enjoy. "We give everyone we all have, and the excitement and togetherness that one night belongs to a great group of people," said Taylor Adams, senior.

A few seniors took it upon themselves to help organize the festivities, including Jeremiah Dickert. "I just put into action by reaching out to as many people as possible. We always been really into football so it was nice to share this love with my fellow one's celebrating with food, music and games."

It's things like this that really brought the senior class together as a community. "Our senior class has been the one giant family," added Dickert.

The Class of 2014 showed an immense amount of school spirit and pride. "This is our final year of high school and coming out an hour early to spend it with one another is really special," said Anna Talamo. The spirit the seniors showed was central to this tradition going, without the pride they felt none of this would have been possible. By Matthew Rodriguez

As a way to show spirit around the school, students have the opportunity to decorate the hallways with a sport, club, or any activity they have participated in during the year. For preparation, the students collaborate with one another to come up with a plan that goes along with the theme of Homecoming.

“We try to make our hallway different and stand out so every year. This year we put the varsity player’s faces on different bodies that go along with the theme. Every level of the program gets involved and inputs a certain element into the hallway,” shared Amy Novak, senior and an athlete on the Girls Volleyball team.

Not only do students love preparing, but the tradition that it happens every year is an important element.

“I really enjoy the tradition because you get to have fun and show off your school spirit,” shared Edgar Morfin, senior and member of the Italian Club. This tradition is certainly something for the students to look forward to each school year. By Carolyn White

The rivalry between junior and senior girls in the powder-puff game always heats up the passionate school spirit among students and faculty. “Pitting the juniors against seniors is always going to make things interesting,” said Gail Leek, senior.

Many other schools have powder-puff games paired with homecoming, but there is something unique about what happens on the football field on that cold Wednesday night in September. “From the students playing in the game, coaching the teams, to performing at half time, it is truly a community event. Student Council does a great job of promoting the event!” said Mr. Rob Wagner.

Kesley McManus, junior, added, “Our King of the Couch dances at half time and our school spirit make the game special for sure.” By Tommy Stotzer.

DUKE AND DUCHESS

Have you ever wondered what has kept teachers in one school for so long? Well this year, Mr. Dave Aggen and Ms. Kris Lundine know the answer, as they have been honored as the Duke and Duchess of York. The title is given to the two faculty members who have worked at York for the most consecutive years.

"When you've been here for so many years, you're bound to form friendships and a connection with the school itself. I love what I'm doing. The relationships that I've built and the students that I've met have made a huge impact on me. I'm just blessed that I've had the opportunity to work here," said Ms. Lundine.

Waking up and being excited to go to work is what everyone wants. "Every day is a new day," explained Mr. Aggen. "I wake up excited to go to work. It's nice to see the camaraderie amongst the staff and see the students interact and bleed green with school spirit."

With this year being the final year for Mr. Aggen, who has worked as a member of York's faculty for a consecutive 37 1/2 years, he will be cherishing every last moment at York. Ms. Kris Lundine will be retiring in 2016, but hopes to have her last few years to be as great as the years she's been here. By Carolyn White

GREEN BLOOD

Do you ever wonder what your parents were like in high school? How they acted?

What they wore?

For some students, they sometimes come face to face with this reality because their parents actually attended York including York senior Giavanna Kish. Angela Brenka, Giavanna's mom, was part of the Class of 1993. "The school is much bigger and offers a lot more," said Brenka when comparing her high school experience to Giavanna's.

"I think my mom was just like me," added Kish.

"I definitely think that York's programs have grown stronger since my father attended—from athletics to academics, and everything in between," said Mari Hinchley, senior. Her father, Daniel Hinchley, graduated from York in 1983.

"York offers much more opportunities to its students," added Hinchley when comparing the York he knows to the York Mari knows. "It's strange to think that students were allowed to smoke on school grounds when I attended."

Mindy Krissinger, class of '86, and mother of Emma, senior, and Bob, sophomore, was very involved during her time at York. She wrote for the newspaper, and played volleyball, basketball and softball. She also noted many huge differences, including the size of the school. "It's so much bigger now. The commons was actually a courtyard outside and we didn't have a pool. There was no field house, the Black Box Theater was called the 139 Girls Gym and the South Gym was simply the Boys Gym."

Some students followed in their parents' footsteps, including Nolan Spencer, junior. His father, Andy, who graduated in 1979, was a part of the Dukes baseball team, along with the football team. Nolan also plays baseball. "My most memorable moment at York would have to be winning the overall conference last year with the baseball team; my dad helps me with sports," said Nolan Spencer.

All York alumni seem to have the same advice for students. Brenka simply stated, "Enjoy your high school years," while Krissinger said "Do as much as you can and experience as many different things, people, places as possible."

York has transformed throughout the years, but one thing that hasn't left is the strong sense of community. "Dream big, set huge goals, and have relentless passion pursuing them," added Hinchley. By Matthew Rodriguez

LEGENDARY COACH

"It's nice to be great, but far greater to be nice." These are some of the wise words that have been heard at Cross Country practices over these past 53 years under Coach Newton's legendary leadership.

Tradition is a key component to Newton's success. The values that Coach Newton teaches to the team have created a fraternity of Duke Runners that never forget the values of hard work and what it means to be a Duke. Newton explained, "We're a team. We believe that the harder you work, the better you get."

With 47 trophies in 53 years, many other coaches have been left wondering what the secret workout could be. According to Coach Joe Newton, "There is no secret workout, it's all about the relationship with the team."

This great relationship is not easy to create. "You can't fool the kids. If the coach doesn't care about them, they will see right through their coach and will not listen to a word they say," said Coach Newton.

With this in mind, Coach Newton has proved that being a genuine caring coach will spark success. 53 years of quality coaching has given York a legendary name and changed the lives of countless people. By Tommy Stotzer

TWO WORLDS

York is fortunate enough to put on many different drama productions throughout the year. Perhaps the most anticipated of them all is the Spring Musical. Breaking records by selling out all four shows before opening night, Tarzan, based on the Disney Classic by the same name was a huge success.

"It's what I look forward to the most during the school year. The musicals are always fun, but especially Tarzan because the story is phenomenal and it's well known," said Madeline Meyer, senior, who played Jane, alongside Philip Corrado, graduate, who played the lead character, Tarzan. Alex Mimitz and Brianna Murray, graduates, were the second cast of Tarzan and Jane.

Auditions for Tarzan were held back in December, and ever since the cast list was posted, they have been hard at work. "At rehearsal, we usually take attendance then jump right into things," said Joseph Hansel, senior, who played the main antagonist, Clayton.

"Rehearsals take up a lot of time. It's hard to balance with other commitments once it gets close to production, but if you're willing to focus, it's possible," said Stage Manager, Kristen Delahanty, senior.

One might think that the transformation from human to gorilla is difficult, but the cast of Tarzan, under the direction of Mrs. Rebecca Marianetti worked very hard to make that transition very believable. "The most challenging part is definitely the movement we all much adopt in order to perform like the gorillas we are playing," said Helen Knudsen, graduate.

The gorilla costumes were hand made specifically for each actor on stage, and the cast went to multiple workshops hosted by the Actors Gymnasium in order to learn how to walk and have the mannerisms of a gorilla.

Though the plot of the show generally follows the movie, except for a few minor changes, Tarzan left the audience with so much more than just two hours of entertainment. It left them with an important life lesson: be accepting of everyone, even if they're different. "I think people will realize the power of friendship," said Michelina Boehmer, senior, who was Tarzan's best friend, Terk.

Knudsen, who played Kala, added, "Tarzan teaches us that family love can reconcile seemingly impossible divisions and transcend adversity." By Matthew Rodriguez and Bridget Dunne

PROMENADE

Whether Prom is the night of your nightmares or the night of your dreams, 2013's most anticipated dance was surely a night to remember.

On April 27th, hundreds of students dressed in matching attire of varied and vibrant colors mixed and mingled into the morning hours against the decadent background of Navy Pier's Crystal Gardens.

"My favorite part of Prom was the location because it was beautiful, and the balcony provided a great view of the lake," said Callahan Hennessy, senior. The skyline views from the venue's balconies allowed students to take a break from the chaos of the dance, but it seemed that the majority of attendees spent their time on the dance floor, answering the DJ's rhythmic call.

"The songs that they played were some of my favorites, like 'Wanted' by Hunter Hayes," said Emma Williams, senior.

Pop and electronic music were not the only trends at Prom. Senior Paul Salamanca noticed that "spray tans and high-low hemmed dresses" were prominently featured that night.

After a long night of jubilation, attendees were ushered onto The Odyssey liner for a post-prom celebration. "I absolutely loved post prom... it was nice to sit down after standing up for so long. Also, the boat's three levels made it less crowded," said Williams.

Students opted to spend their time on either the top floor of the boat, where the DJ played classic tunes—on the middle level where pop tunes prevailed, or on the bottom level, which belted techno beats.

From the Crystal Gardens' scenery to the day's most popular music, the "night of nights" certainly left a lasting impression. All those who attended know that 2013's Prom will be a night that they will never, ever forget.

DUKES FOREVER

High school may seem like a lifetime, but in reality is only four short years. Every year York loses another class of seniors. Many seniors look at Graduation as a sad farewell, but Ellen Dyra, graduate, had a refreshing view: "I'll miss the people I've met and friendships I've made, but I'm happy to start fresh and begin a new chapter of my life."

While high school could be stressful at times, it never fell short of opportunities. Whether they were in a club, a sport, or the classes they took, they were exposed to so much.

Alina Acosta, graduate and former student body president, looked back on her experiences and explained, "No matter what you were into, there was something, from student council to cross country, York offered it."

Not only did the graduating class receive their diplomas, they also were privileged to watch some of their fellow classmates perform musical numbers and speeches. The seniors of Concert Choir sang a rendition of "One Day More" from the musical, Les Misérables. Eric Helm, graduate spoke to the class about their journey and former President of the National Honor Society, Ushasi Naha, graduate, gave her final words to the class upon departure from York.

Graduation may seem to be an abrupt end to a memorable high school experience; the seniors are merely beginning a new journey. There will be first jobs, college, and much more.

Billi Alexandria Marquess, graduate, explains, "I'm so excited but also nervous to be completely on my own." The graduation ceremony gives the independent senior class a push into the rest of their lives.

ROARING SPIRIT

School spirit fills the air as students are greeted by the ecstatic pep band blasting the school fight song through the crisp fall air. It's that time of the year again: homecoming week. Homecoming week encompasses many different events that can be stressful, but also very exciting and much anticipated. "Although homecoming can cause stress, it is one of the most exciting things that this school has to offer. It's a time when there is a tremendous amount of school spirit and everyone is really involved. It is also always exciting to see the cute and unique ways that students are asked to the dance," said Lauren Giblisch, junior. The dance, the grand finale of the week, is only a small part of what homecoming week is all about.

During the school day, there are a variety of school activities that help create an exciting and fun atmosphere. As usual, the week is kicked off with Pajama Day, a great, relaxing way to kick off the week. "I would have to say my favorite decorations are the costumes that are on the students, faculty and administrators as they parade around in p.j.s, jerseys, and green and white. I can't think of anything that could make Homecoming week better," said Mrs. Patty Iverson, Social Studies teacher. Also, during the middle of the week, the traditional Powder Puff game between the juniors and seniors is held on the football field. This year, the junior girls proved themselves to the senior class beating them 22-7. "Being the quarterback for the juniors, I definitely felt the pressure. However, coming out with a victory was the most amazing feeling, and I couldn't have asked for a better group of people to win it with," said Alyssa Kovatchis, junior.

As the sun sets on Saturday evening, it is finally time for the main event: the dance. This year's theme was "The Roaring 20s". Student council spent all morning, making a blast to the past, decorating and prepping the commons, giving it a very speak-easy vibe. "Setting up for the dance takes months to plan for...we had to sit down and go through countless magazines and websites to find the best decorations and when they finally came it was like Christmas morning. Despite the day being super stressful, we pulled it off and it looked great," said Veronica Wegner, junior. By Emily Vierow.

HEAR ME ROAR

As the halls of York fill with students and staff, there is one event commonly looked forward to amidst the new schedules and overwhelming workload: Homecoming. The annual dance is held in the cafeteria as a climatic finale to the energetic Homecoming week of spirit days, hallway decorations, and sporting events.

Student Council planned since last June of how to incorporate their "Roaring Twenties" theme into every aspect of the week and dance. "The theme was a constant consideration and we were always looking for creative ways to put our theme in", said StuCo member Keeley McManus, junior. Their hard work paid off and created the perfect atmosphere for a memorable night.

This year, DJ Sleepy served as a welcomed change from last year's DJ Alvarez. Student Council interviewed for the perfect company to add a wide variety of songs and new ways to energize to the dance. "I thought it was cool how they had projectors that showed music videos of the songs they were playing", said Amy Nosek, senior.

Homecoming is continually loved by freshmen to seniors as a celebration of York's spirit, pride, and enthusiasm. Its timing provides a great kick-off to the rest of the school year and a great ending to a memorable week. Megan Hull, senior, said, "The dance is a great way to finish the fun that the whole school has been having throughout Homecoming week." Homecoming is a high school experience everyone should experience and with York's traditions and spirit, it is definitely an event no student should miss. By Bridget Dunne

DRAGONFIGHT

This year, York's Drama Department kicked off their season with a huge hit; literally. Full of stage combat, dragons, and a few steamy romances, She Kills Monsters was a tremendous success for cast members and audiences alike.

The story followed Agnes after the death of her younger sister Tilly. Regretting not getting to Tilly while she was alive, Agnes gets to know her through a Dungeons and Dragons campaign. Agnes finds that there was much more to Tilly than she thought, and in the end, she found herself feeling much closer to her sister.

With this being one of the most flashy productions York has done, the overall message of this show was by no means shallow; but rather much deeper than one may think. "It highlights the importance of our words, our imaginations, and our empathy," said Delena Obermaier, senior, who played Agnes.

The cast hosted a post-show question and answer session and discussed what She Kills Monsters meant to them. Many cast members agreed with Obermaier saying that the theme is all about acceptance and loving what you have.

"Appreciate what you have in life because you might not have it tomorrow," added Jeffrey Wagner, senior, who played Orcus, the demon Overlord of the Underworld who had a strange addiction to cheese-wiz.

Showing for two weekends in a row, She Kills Monsters was a great opener for York Drama's 2013-2014 season. "The script was very interesting and highly thought provoking," added Jade Cerasoli, senior, who portrayed the sarcastic, fearless and strong Lillith. Audiences couldn't get enough of the crude and raunchy jokes made by the characters. The show had it all: fighting, romance, dragons, and of course, a fabulous dance off. By Matthew Rodriguez

BELIEVE TO ACHIEVE

The future of each student is filled with endless opportunities due to the experience each gains during their time at York. This past November, the York students, staff and community had the pleasure of inviting back a select few alumni that took their education and experience to a pristine level. This was a terrific opportunity to showcase the skills and dedication to their studies and potential of York graduates.

There was an evening welcoming of the prestigious alumni where they were able to talk about their experience and knowledge gained over their years since high school. Along with an evening ceremony, the next morning there was a breakfast held that certain clubs were able to attend and listen to the stories of the alumni. "The intriguing speeches made by the graduates really inspired me to go for my dreams and work hard now to be best prepared for my future," Caroline Brennan, junior.

From professional trumpet playing to working at the Mayo Clinic to being a head writer and editor of USA Today, York produced a variety of successful students that took their education to the next level. "Seeing all the opportunities and accomplishments of the speakers gives me encouragement to become successful in whatever I do," Daniel Reinke, junior. We hope to see our own students come back to York with their own accomplishments and to further support the growth of knowledge and success in our community. By Audrey Kosman

In the midst of the dreary February and never-ending winter weather, everyone could use a night of laughter courtesy of the amazing performances from York's drama department. This year's annual Winter Drama Festival celebrated the comical parts of life with two hilarious shows: Stephen Sondheim's Tony-award-winning musical, A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum, and William Shakespeare's classic play, The Comedy of Errors.

Preparation for the Winter Festival begins in November and the actors are hard at work until the curtain goes down on closing night in early February. For the cast of The Comedy of Errors, which tells the story of two sets of twin brothers separated at birth, memorizing the work of Shakespeare proved to be a very challenging task. "Memorization was difficult because we had to learn which lines were in prose and verse, but once we had them down, it was so accomplishing," said Laura Thoresen, senior.

The cast of A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum faced different challenges while telling the story of the slave Pseudolus, played by Joseph Hansel, senior, and his attempts to win his freedom from his young master. "Since every character was so over the top, the hardest part was channeling all your energy into every moment on stage. We all fed off of each other's energy, so it was important to give it your all so that the show could be the best it could be," said Anna Talamo, senior.

Under the direction of Mr. John Forsythe and Mrs. Rebecca Marianetti, each actor made their characters come alive with entertaining physical comedy and side-splitting sequences of mistaken identity and mishaps. "Being a part of such a funny show with a smaller cast was such a great experience because we had so many opportunities to develop each character and laugh at rehearsals," said Kerri Carlquist, senior.

Though the hilarious plots of both shows appear to lack seriousness, the actors understood that there were still many lessons to learn from their productions. Summing up what one can learn from this year's Winter Festival, Kayla Triska, senior, said simply, "Laugh as often as possible." Thoresen added, "Don't take life too seriously; there's always a reason to laugh and smile."

ARTISTIC AIMS

Every spring, one whole week is devoted to fine arts. Throughout the day, various musicians, dancers, artists, photographers, bands and more show off their niche in the art world. But Fine Arts Week wouldn't be possible without the people behind it. A committee of students and Mr. Christopher Gemkow choose the guest performers, organize the schedule and so much more.

Fine Arts Week Committee, which anyone can join, discusses which guest performers the student body would find the most interesting and fit into the budget. "We gather ideas. It's a group decision on who would be a great addition to the performers list. We listen to the members' opinions on their reasons they could benefit the audience," commented Monica Medina, senior.

Glenn Kotche, a percussionist who played for the band Wilco, gave a hit performance. Alyssa Manning, senior, watched him and said "It was awesome! Glenn played Monkey Chant on drum set, using all sorts of different sounds to tell a story with his music." Other guest performances included "The Unwritten Works of William Shakespeare", Patrick Gemkow, The Gretsch Electric Guitar Ensemble, Math Games, the College of Dupage Choir, Vanderbilt College Choir and Stoddard Blackall.

Fine Arts Week also shows off York students' talents, whether in the Talent Show or student groups. Speech Team, Super Sketch Suburbanites, Group Interpretation, the Majorettes, Poetry Slam, Urban Arts, Amateur Musicians Club, and the Advanced Dance classes all performed. Plus the art classes displayed their works in the commons for the annual spring Art Show.

During this week in the spring, the school comes together to enjoy fine arts. Medina mentioned, "Fine Arts Committee was one of my favorite parts of my York experience. It's a great way to get involved with school, especially if one loves the arts!" By Carley Clegg.

SNIPER, CELLY

Hockey is a difficult sport that requires a great deal of teamwork. "It would be very tough if we were out there on our own," said Andrew Vandyke, junior, "luckily, the York Hockey Club knows that we have to work as a team to win." The team had a strong season this year as they won some intense games against rivals. They wouldn't have been able to accomplish this goal if they didn't work together.

When the team steps out on the ice, they know what they are going to do. They know who their opponent is and how they function. But all of that doesn't matter if they don't know how to work together as a team. "We may know who we're up against, but the important part is that we know how we play as a team," said Matthew Dufort, junior.

The team has to know how each member plays individually. They know their teammates' strengths and weaknesses, as well as their own. "We all know how we play and how our teammates play," said Matthew Sabatini, junior, "We never hog the puck when we're on offense, and we never have one person taking over our entire defense."

The York hockey team is one that wins. "Some teams we see don't play like a team; they play as if they are a bunch of mismatched kids all on the rink at the same time," said Liam McFarlane, junior, "that's not York. The York Hockey team works as one, as a unit. We are never on our own on the rink." By John Vierling

RELAY FOR LIFE

With the student and fan section full, the Lady Dukies first take the floor in an exciting game against Downers Grove North. Even though the team wasn't victorious, it was indeed a victorious night. Paint the Gym Purple is an event that raises money for the American Cancer Society.

Shortly after the Ladies' game, the York Men's basketball team stormed onto the court with ambition to beat Immaculate Conception Catholic Prep, a town rival. After many changes in possession, the Dukies took home the win in the cross-town rivalry game.

Though the games were a main event of the night, fundraising was also a huge component to the successful night for the York community. "The best part about the event was that the entire school was able to unite for one common cause and raise a ton of money to help all the people in need," said Molly Schlecht, senior, who is a starting player on the Girls' Basketball team.

York always comes together in many ways to help those in need. The community in Elmhurst is so strong in that sense; there is always time to lend a helping hand to anyone who needs it. By Matthew Rodriguez Elmhurst's Relay for Life events. Relay is a community-based fundraising event run through the American Cancer Society.

"I decided to join a Relay team because my Papa died from cancer and it was a fun night with all my friends to support a good cause," said Katherine Sullivan, junior.

Members from all around the community take part in the festivities, students included. Each team has a different theme and they carry out that theme with their team name and attire.

Everyone comes together to support the cause, whether they've been directly affected by cancer or know someone who has every day and not just the actual people who have cancer but also their friends and family," said Audrey Barber, junior.

The Relay organizers planned many different events and activities, both fun and serious, for participants. "The most memorable thing about the night was the luminaria walk where people walked silently in memory of those who lost their lives to cancer," added Barber.

Everyone who participated in Relay learned a lot from the night. "Life shouldn't be taken for granted," Sullivan stated after the event. All in all, Relay is a great way to raise money for a great cause with the community. By Matthew Rodriguez

Once a year on Thanksgiving, the Elmhurst community rallies by the Prairie Path and goes on a collective run. The Turkey Trot is a 30 year community in Elmhurst. "The Turkey Trot is a tradition in Elmhurst because it has been here for so long," said Jarvis Hill, senior, Christian Henzel, junior added, "It really brings the town together."

At the Turkey Trot, all of the runners are surrounded by friends and family. George Baughman, junior, described his favorite part of the race as "sprinting out at the beginning with a big group of guys."

In addition, Matthew Niewiara, senior, had his own memorable parts of the race: "I ran it with my friends from the cross country team." The Turkey Trot is a community wide event that our school and town take pride in. Baughman added, "The Turkey Trot has been going on for 30 years and I don't see it stopping."

In its 30 year tradition, the Turkey Trot has a great foundation in Elmhurst. The idea for the race was thought up when Dan Gibbons and colleagues were talking about the hunger problem in Chicago the 1980's. Someone suggested that they should start a 5K to raise money for the hungry. Since Gibbons was able to devote the most time to organizing the race it was dubbed the "Dan Gibbons Turkey Trot" and still holds that dedication today.

From the first race, Gibbons and other founders raised $520 for the Good Neighbor Food Drive. Over the past 30 years, the Turkey Trot has grown from giving to one charity to a large amount of local charities: Dupage Pads, United Community Concerns Association, People's Resource Center, West Suburban Community Pantry, and many more. The Turkey Trot was founded on generous principles and has become a Thanksgiving tradition for the Elmhurst Community. By Tommy Stotzer.

The J. Kyle Braid Leadership Foundation selects students that show leadership, values, and compassion for others. Two boys and two girls that participate in a sport are chosen as new representatives during their sophomore year. They attend events and camps that promote positive attitudes, increase self esteem, and teach you how to make good decisions that can have a positive impact in the school and community.

For each participant, JKB produces many positive effects. Members welcome new friendships and positivity in their lives. "The JKB club is a very tight knit group. I have made amazing friendships that have positively influenced my life and have had many memorable experiences," added Kathryn Wheeler, junior, "they have increased my leadership skills and my confidence so I can make a positive impact in my school and community."

The goal of JKB is to teach young people skills to make them a better role model for others. "It really forced me out of my comfort zone and that has helped me step up and take initiative in situations that are not easy," said Bill Marquess, graduate. Not only that, but members take those skills they learned and use them throughout the rest of their lives.

"It has also helped me branch out in college in meeting people and taking leadership positions," added Marquess. Being involved in the J. Kyle Braid Leadership Foundation provides students with the competence to be a better role model for others and make wise decisions that they will use throughout the rest of their lives. HIT AND RUN

"It was difficult during conference games but overall, I think the season went really well."

-Taylor Pankau, senior

There is a wide variety of sports at York. Athletics can often be intense and push us to our limits, softball is no different. This year The Lady Dukes varsity Softball Team went to state and finished the season by bringing home the fourth place trophy for 2013.

It was a tremendous victory for the team but getting up to that point was not so easy as they had to overcome having a rather young varsity team. "This year we had the challenge of having a very young team, we only had two seniors and four returning varsity members. We had an almost entirely new infield, so we had to learn to win and work together as a new team," said Hannah Latimer, senior. Although the team was young, it didn't stop them from trying to reach the top.

Being on a team means having to learn how to work together and build up team chemistry. "The chemistry at first was okay, but after a couple games it clicked," said Taylor Pankau, senior.

The girls really developed a friendship throughout the season. "The cool thing about our team is that we're all different, so it's kind of like a second family," said Morgan Mehring, senior.

Like any team, their goal was to create an environment that encouraged healthy competition, but also to improve as a whole and as individuals.

Through many hours of practice and games, the Duke's Softball Team improved a tremendous amount and this showed when they competed for state. "We've really improved at the plate, we've all become smarter, stronger batters," said Kelly Mordini, senior. "We have improved on trusting each other during games, so that we can play well together and win," added Pankau. By Matt Rodriguez and Emily Kottwitz

ONEFORALL

The classic American sport, baseball starts with a man at bat and nine men getting ready as a team to defend their field. As a pitch comes wailing down the strike zone, the ball seems to come to a stop as everyone stares towards home awaiting the batters swing. This sight can only be found on the field of the boys' baseball team. The team this year had more than some remarkable plays on the field and some great at bats; they were very close as a team. "It takes teamwork to win. Everybody is a family and does everything together" explained Keon Hackney, graduate.

The players on this team had been playing their whole lives and were striving to do their best with the skill they acquired over their childhood. "I've been playing baseball my entire life, it is such a fun game" said Brandon Shephard, junior. Although one can acquire great skill from a childhood full of baseball, the coaches helped increase their important skills, as well. Shephard added, "We have definitely improved since last year". At one point in their season, the sophomore team had an 8 game winning streak. It just goes to show that this year's baseball players get out of a sport what they put in.

The baseball team is a group of guys that work together to achieve their best. The unique part about this team is that these guys can succeed and have fun at the same time. The girls' Lacrosse team focused on enthusiasm and teamwork. They were determined to finish the season together, happy of their accomplishments and memories.

"My favorite part of being on the lacrosse team is the camaraderie and spirit that results from seeing each other everyday and knowing that you're all striving towards a bigger goal as a team," stated Anna O'Donnell, senior.

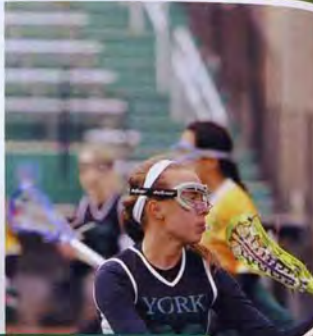

Together as a team, the ladies worked through hard practices and games, "the most difficult part about playing is having to push through the tiredness at the end of the game to make yourself and your team happy with the way you play your game", said Emma Baubly, sophomore.

They were determined to come off the bus prepared to win and have a powerful game. When they took the field, their teamwork really shined. "We could always pick each other up while we played and we're all really looking forward to a great season next year", added Hannah Fleckenstien, sophomore. By Audrey Kosman and Ainsley Damm

"This year, the girls' played so well together and it was so much fun. We actually ended up being a pretty big upset against most schools."

"This year we came in with a mission and a drive: a real hunger to win and be successful," said varsity lacrosse player, Aliekahider Montesantos, graduate. After coming in second place at the 2012 state championship, the team was determined to win state in their 2013 season. "There is a lot more stigma for us to be really good this year" added John Lesniewski, graduate. They hoped to take the first or second seed in playoffs and come home at the end of the season as champions.

To prepare for their fierce competition, the team simulated a variety of in-game situations during practice. "During practice we do drills which help better improve proficiency, quickness, and knowledge of the game," said

Lesniewski. At any point in the game it may be vital for the players to make a spot-on pass, score a goal, or play tight defense in order to win. "The great part is we always tailor our practices to what we need to focus on for games," said Montesantos.

Fighting the pain and fatigue associated with the game of lacrosse served as a great bonding tool for the team. "We can have a great time and make each other laugh non-stop, and at the same time can be serious and ready to play" said Montesantos. The boys' lacrosse team all enjoyed each other's company, and this ultimately lead to a successful season and everlasting memories. By Maggie Stotzer and John Vierling

SPLISH SPLASH

The atmosphere of a York team is welcoming and spirited. York is honored to have sports like water polo to provide their students with a chance to accomplish their goals, form long-lasting friendships, and to be successful. They were determined to reach their goals and succeed.

Nothing compares to the importance of communication when one is a part of a team. In order for all to be in sync, a team must express and connect to each other. "It is so important to communicate so you can be on the same page as your teammates, especially in a pool when all you can hear is splashing water," said Perri Brinkmeier, senior. Not only does a team member have to be able to communicate with ones teammates, but there are other vital skills needed to succeed in the water. "Being able to float and tread water are very critical components of a water polo player," said Madeline Kriebhan, junior. "To play water polo, you have to be a fast and aggressive swimmer."

Inspiration and determination are what makes this team successful. Major changes such as losing seniors and a new coach caused them to work harder. "Both of these changes have inspired our team to do well this year. We want to do our best and do well, especially with these changes," Brinkmeier added.

The team's inspiration and determination to improve took work hard, but they also felt rewarded after adding to the team's success. "After scoring a goal or making a successful pass, I get a rewarding feeling," Brinkmeier stated.

How did water polo challenge you?

"I love how, it being a team sport, everyone works toward a common goal. It's different than an individual sport because you have to work together. One person can't win against an opposing team. Water polo has taught me how to work with other people in an effective and successful way." Perri Brinkmeier, senior

"The sport challenging because the sport itself is so demanding. The team faced the challenge of having new coaches. We had to learn to play under new rules and new coaches." Carly Redmond, graduate

This year, the boys water polo team did an amazing job making it all the way to the semifinal sectional game. They could not have gotten there without hard work and teamwork. "We overcame our obstacles for practicing until we felt we could do something in the game," says William Delaney, senior.

While the team did give advice to each other throughout the season, the coaches also gave helpful tips and tricks to the team.

"They told us to never give up and that the game's not over until the end," said Patrick McKenna, graduate.

When the times got tough for the team, they never gave up until they knew they had reached the end.

The team was successful last season but will refuse to give up when they lose valuable seniors. The seniors were valuable assets to the team last year, as they led the team to a record over five-hundred.

Benjamin Howlett, junior, said "We have a lot of good players that will be playing their final year, but with more practice we can be just as good next year."

"We all became like sisters for five months out of the year. We have team breakfasts, random draw up days, or just hanging together all the time." Veronica Wiegman, junior.

"After practice on Saturday mornings, the team often goes out for breakfast together." Amanda McGowan, senior.

"The most memorable part of the season was achieving my goals and then watching my teammates achieve their goals as well." - Sondra Catalano, senior

The girls track team suffered from the loss of some key contributors this year. With a handful of underclassmen and highly experienced juniors stepping up, the team did not know what to expect for the spring season.

Track is a sport that requires effort and success from the individual and the team as a whole. The girls track team was not lacking the unity last season according to Katherine Schlemmel, graduate. "This year we showed a lot of improvements. The team has become more united as a whole." Everyone on the team has a role to play to help achieve success as a team. "Everyone has to focus on their events and help support one another", said Schlemmel, graduate. Expectations were also in place for the girls. Many hoped to go to state for their events and the team was hoping to send as many girls to state as possible.

Everyone did a great job playing their role on the team. Support was a huge component. "It's so important for everyone to cheer on their teammates while they're competing. To know that you have people supporting you can give you that extra push in the middle of an event or race", said Brailey Nudera, senior.

Although there were struggles for the team after losing seniors, they did a fantastic job of overcoming their weaknesses and figuring out their strengths.

But there was much improvement in the season, with a strong relay team and new enthusiasm, the girls track team got over all the hurdles they had in front of them.

RIGHT ON TRACK

"You're a winner when you run track." -Alec Bruns, senior.

The boys track team, coming off of their 2012 cross country state championship, eagerly proved their endurance, speed and agility. As for the field events, participants were ready to show their skills to both teammates and fans.

The coaches were the team's main motivators, helping them to push themselves to the limit. In order to keep up morale, Coach Stan Reddel said: "If you doubt yourself for one second, you've already lost." Not surprisingly, enthusiasm spread like wildfire.

Others were motivated by sheer willpower. Reid Smith, senior, aimed to beat York's high jump record of seven feet—which was previously held by his father.

Jarvis Hill, senior, focused his energies in order to relive past glory when he ran a 50.3 second split in a distance medley during one of the windiest meets of the year.

Achieving such feats requires some serious mental preparation: "I think about my race strategy and my competitor's tactics to figure out the most efficient way to win," said Alexander Bashqawi, senior. Despite their success in competition, the most impressive facet of the boy's team might very well be their perseverance.

The potent combination of talent and hard work really took off. "We are really blessed to have such a talented team this year," added Smith. This passion radiates through each and every member of the team, both on and off the track. By Gloria Frank and Sam Rivera

How did soccer challenge you?

"Soccer is both mental and physically challenging. It's a 90-minute game where you have to be ready to and maintain a focused mental state." Sarah Harriss, junior

"Physically, mentally, and emotionally. I am always being tested throughout each season. However, that hard work is all worth it when it makes you and your team better." Rene DeCario, senior

"It taught me that you can't rely on just one person. You have to always be ready to help the other person. The way it is, it is all about the team. I would give up for what you want and know, pushing yourself to be the best you can be." Anna Barron, senior

"York soccer has challenged me from the first time i set foot on the field. It has helped me become a stronger player as well as a stronger person." Judith Flores, graduate

Every player on the soccer field has a vital role in contributing to the team goal. Whether a girl plays goalie, mid-field, or is sitting on the bench cheering, they all are important to the success of the team.

Kicking off the season with a new group of girls on varsity, it was initially a little difficult to get back into the swing of things. "This year we picked up many new players, many of them being sophomores. In the past it has taken a while to get use to how everyone plays, but this year we were able to do it very quickly," said Angela Guerin, graduate.

On a daily basis, the girls worked on shooting and passing drills, set plays, and conditioning. "We work a lot on our first touches and using our inside mids to switch the field while attacking offensively and get a shot," said Madison Fafinski, senior.

The girls felt their preparation pay off after they beat last year's first seed. This was a huge accomplishment for the girls and boosted their confidence as a team. With the goal of making it far in the playoffs, the girls knew they needed to stay focused at all times and just take the season one game at a time.

The great team chemistry between the girls pushed them to be their best while having a great time doing it. "All the girls make the team fun, but we know when to take things seriously for a game," added Fafinski.

Sometimes it can seem like a gymnast can speak a different language: back handspring, tuck, layout, full. Practices start off with a warm up of stretching, conditioning, and basic skills development. "Typical practice consists of lots of hard work, a lot of learning and expansion of knowledge towards each event, and the expected jokes and memories that are made up in the gym," said Andrew Zamarripa, junior.

The team works together to push through injuries, conditioning, and changes in the coaching staff in order to succeed. "Each night as we walk out of the gym, bloody, bruised, and exhausted, we know that we need each other in order to overcome the following day," added Zamarripa. By the end of the season, Samuele Bode, junior, competed in the all-around at State Finals and earned personal best scores. He placed 9th on floor and 6th on vault. Bryce Simpson, senior, qualified on high bar and pommel horse and John DiCianni, graduate, also qualified for state.

Even though the boys compete individually during the events, they work together as a team. Vincent Genthe, senior, said that competitions are the most fun "because it's a time to show off what you got and what you're capable of." By Carley Clegg.

LIFTDROPSMASH

Badminton is not about strength, but tests a person's technique and precision. Although different from most sports, it is equally as intense. "We run different footwork drills, working every day after school, and on Saturday morning," said Jessica Hoeksema, junior.

Badminton also allows for the option of doubles. Some girls prefer doubles over singles, "I prefer working with another person. It's a lot less pressure and much easier to concentrate. Also, it's really fun having someone there to motivate you," said Megan Bogolia, senior. This way of playing really brings a team together, and it definitely affects their future performance.

Their hard work definitely paid off at the Glenbard East Badminton Invitational. "Most of the girls did really well, and York finished with 39 points in comparison to Glenbard's 29 points," said Gloria Frank, senior. This was the second invitational the York Badminton team has brought home.

The girls continued to show their dedication and strength throughout the season. Although they play differently compared to other sports, they play with as much intensity as anyone else. By Patrick Delgado

"My favorite part is definitely the people. My teammates are awesome and are some of my closest friends," Anna Wirth, senior.

"I love meeting new people. It's really fun and you get to know the girls really quickly. It's the best." Caitlin Creed, senior.

How was the chemistry and the connection within the team last season?

"The team chemistry was amazing. Everyone got along and had a ton of fun throughout the season. All the numbers would get together and hangout on the weekends and really bond with each other. It's wasn't for our chemistry, we would not have had as good of a season as we did." - John Szpach, junior

"The connection was great. For most of the team, it was their second year on the team, so everyone knew each other well. Everyone was ready to have fun and also work hard." - Luca Buzzoni, senior

"The best feature experienced in my athletic career, it was there. When you have a team, it was a team. Bullets through the gymnasium."

Volleyballs pound against the floor, shoes squeak, and music blasts in the Dick Campbell gym, these are the sounds that fill the gym when the boys volleyball team warms up before a game. The team goes through drills, sprints, and workouts during practice to be prepared for each game.

The energy that the boys volleyball team brought to their games was incredible. "I try to focus before hand and get pumped once I'm on the court", said Connor O'Ryan, graduate.

Staying positive and working as a team were keys to success for the team. However, this was not a problem for this tight knit team because of their close chemistry on and off the court. "We get along really well as a team. There's competitiveness and it helps us all work towards the same goal, winning", said Thomas Pennel, junior.

In addition to focusing on improvement, The Dukes also focused on giving back to their school and community. The Varsity hosts the annual "VolleyBald For the Cure" to play their part in the fight against cancer. The event raises a lot of money for cancer research and it is a fun, great cause.

Overall, the Dukes changed for the better this past season. They continuously worked to better themselves and their school and by doing so, they created lifelong friendships with one another. By Emily Vierow and Sam Rivera

MATCHPOINT

The York Varsity boy's tennis team had many returning members going into the 2012-13 season, with lots of goals, lots of matches, a lot to look forward to. The boy's tennis conference is one of the hardest out of all of the sports at York and it includes many big-name tennis schools like Hindsdale Central and Oak Park River Forest. Facing this harsh conference, the team set out to train hard and achieve new goals last season.

The state tournament is obviously a big tournament of the season and the team planned to qualify as many of their players as they could. There needs to be a lot of hard work put in before one could achieve their goal to qualify for state. Brendan Peterson, junior, put in the time outside of the courts to achieve that goal. "I did off-court training along with many USTA tournaments to prepare me for it and it paid off in the end. I qualified and went 1-2 in the tournament." Said Peterson, junior. The state tournament wasn't the only goal for the tennis team.

The tennis team planned on doing well in the conference tournament and ranking high. The team clinched an astounding fourth place in conference among many teams who typically finish in the top ten at state.

The chemistry and support the boys tennis team gave each was great. "We had pasta parties, and always stand on the sidelines to cheer on our guys", recalls Anthony Todd, junior, of the boys JV tennis team. LOVE OF THE GAME

As you hear the smash the players' rackets hitting the tennis balls to the opponent's court, the Girls' Tennis team took over the court and proved themselves as a force to be reckoned with. Not only were their skills admired, but the teamwork and love of the game and each other shined through. "We were all different, but by the end of the season we all got along really well and became really close," said Alexa Chmura, junior.

The highlights of the season were outstanding. Each match the girls came out with a fire in their hearts and a drive for the win at the end. Each game and match they played, they played with a purpose.

Throughout the entire season, they were a hardworking group of girls. "We got a lot more confident in our abilities. With that, our attitudes got a lot more positive too," said Kathryn Riek, junior.

Their extensive practices were Monday through Friday for about 2 hours. Due to their hard work, they were well prepared for their matches.

Those practices paid off early on in the season. "Our first doubles won against Hinsdale, which is amazing because they're a very competitive team," said Caroline Elsey, junior. This team performed well and earned 9th place in state, which was a huge success for the Lady Dukes. By Audrey Kosman

CLOSING THE GAP

Most complain when gym teachers announce that their classes are running the mile that day, but imagine running multiple miles, every day, twice a day. "Practices are tough," comments Kyle Mattes, senior.

The top thirty runners or so are considered "first shift", and start practice after seventh period so Coach Joe Newton can focus in on coaching them to be best they can be. Coach Joe Newton says that "the worst freshman are sometimes your best seniors."

The team of over one hundred and fifty runners has an atmosphere of camaraderie. "Everyone gets along so well and you make a lot of friends. They become your brothers after a while," noted sophomore Matthew Dejesus.

The young men on York's cross country team strive to live up to their famous coach's expectations and bring home another state championship first place trophy.

"Mr. Newton demands total commitment from his athletes. Many of us feel the need to bring back a victory for him," commented senior Jeffrey Nosek. Nosek ran with six others to bring home fifth place at state this year. By Carley Clegg

How do you bond with the team?

"Before every meet, we have pasta parties, and at then we bond and eat lots of food," said Caitlin Blum, senior.

"There is something about sharing work and pain that unites people. Running in heat, rain, or snow, forms a connection between teammates that cannot be beat," said Madeline Fabry, junior.

"I bond with the team by going out and getting breakfast after Saturday practices," said Kaitlyn Hagstrom, senior.

DRAWBLOOD

"Favorite part of Cross Country? Getting to be with the team every day," said Allison Smith, senior.

Girls' Cross Country is well known for their long list of traditions, memories with the girls, and taking care of one another. During their season, they do their best to cheer on their teammates. "We all cheer each person on no matter if it's our number one runner or our last runner," said Caitlin Blum, senior.

They make sure everyone is included in both the running aspect, and their social groups. Every year the introduce "Cross country sisters" in which "We pair an upperclassman with an underclassman, and they are 'sisters' for the rest of the season. They give each other gifts and support before races. It is a fun tradition and creates a strong team bond," said Kathryn Hagstrom, senior. They do a great job in including those new to the team and those returning for another season.

The girls of cross country make the environment so welcoming, and their friendships definitely last. "Being apart of York cross country has been one of the best parts of my high school career. ONTO THE GREEN

One of the only games played today by men and women involving respect, honesty, excellence and good sportsmanship, is golf. Hosting a full team of boys who are willing to put in the hard work and hours to be successful in the sport, the York boy's golf team proved their determination and excellence as a strong team last season.

Among many fantastic golf teams in the toughest conference in the state, the boy's golf team had a tough season ahead of them, looking forward to facing many conference rivals.

With new seasons comes new team members and chemistry. The team was not lacking strong chemistry last season. "The chemistry was a little different last season since our team was made up of many young players including four underclassmen. Yet we were accepted onto the team by the senior captain Max Holmes who made us feel welcome", said Jordan Less, sophomore.

Supporting each other as teammates was key last season for the boys. Many of the experienced varsity players expressed support for the newer members on the team by giving them advice and constant motivation.

All of the hard work paid off for the team when they clinched a great win against a longtime rival. "We upset Wheaton North which is one of the best teams in the state, so that was huge for us", said Christopher Geib, junior.

Although the team did not qualify for state, they did beat many outstanding teams and moved onto sectionals. The boys worked hard together to

As the sun rose over the bright greens, Girls Golf was ready to tee off to a great season. With their hard work and determination, they accomplished goals both individually and as a team.

"My number one goal was to grow as a team, both on the course and off," said Kerri Carlquist, senior. The team bases much of their success on their group dynamic and made team bonding an essential aspect of their season.

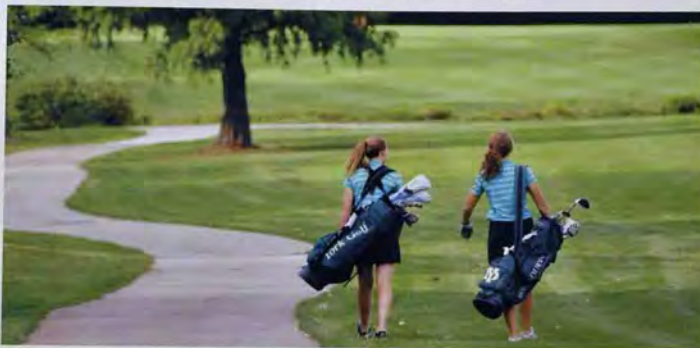

"I'm very proud that we got to know everyone on the team. We're such a diverse group of people, but all have so much fun together", stated Carlquist.

The golf team's expectations were much higher considering their hard work during practices every day. "It's always difficult to come back from a bad swing or hole, but if we have a bad meet, we yell, 'Conference Champs!' and move on", said Elise Rantis, junior.

With such a supportive team, the girls were able to improve their confidence along with their skills throughout the year.

STAYING STRONG

"It's not always about winning, it's how hard you played the game"-Charles Rose, senior.

This year the football team came out with a strong start and had their game faces on. They showed up to their first game ready to rumble and ready to show the York fans their improvements. The team worked together to have a strong season and united as a whole to defeat their opponents.

Motivation is a big part of the game. "I was usually very quiet right before we went to the field then I would tell everybody to go all out, but play our game," said Charles Rose, senior.

Before games the team would come together and motivate one another. Being united as a team is necessary in order to play good on the field and dominate the other team.

The team had to work together in order to accomplish their goals. Improving throughout the year was very important to the players and their coaches. "During the summer, we were disorganized. Although as the season progressed, we came together and were competitive in every game," said Liam Gaughan, senior.

SERVING THE HEAT

All sports teams have a goal for the year and this year the girls volleyball team came up with a motto to show it. "Our goal for the season was to put our team before ourselves. We developed a motto of 'Team First' so that we always remember that above all else, you are playing for your team and not yourself," said Molly Schlecht.

Like most sports, volleyball involves a lot of teamwork and dedication. One person can't carry the whole team.

"Team chemistry is always a really important part of the game. Players have to trust each other to get the balls they're supposed to, but we also have to work together to create a specific atmosphere, whether it's staying positive in a slump, or really focusing during the end of a Friday practice," said Rachel Iverson, senior.

Although the team lost their last match of the season against St. Charles East, they still played their hearts out all the way to the end.

"It was a really tough loss for us since we have a lot of history with them but it was also the best game we've ever played. Every single player played their best game that night and really left it all on the court. It was a great way to go out," said Amy Nosek, senior. By Emily Kottwitz

KICKOFF

For a sport watched all around the world, soccer is a game where it's so physically draining that you must be on your toes every second. Every one of these players must work as a well-oiled machine to get the job done. "Without working together as a team you won't get very far," said Matthew Kleinhaus, junior, explaining his thoughts on aspects to working together as a team; which may be one of the most important tool of any sport.

With such a massive field, the team must know how to work together in a smart way. The way they got this done was working hard day by day at practice. "This season we were brought together as a team and worked hard for each other," said Brian Wise, junior, explaining the closeness of the team at the time of the season. One thing that all team sports see, including such a aerobic sport as soccer, is that the more you work as a team during practice, the more success you will achieve in games. In practice, soccer players work on an assortment of skills, such as: conditioning, agility, trapping, passing, ball control, and shooting the ball.

From the basics of shooting to some of the complexities of the strategies, one can see soccer can be a very draining sport only some can do. But these strong athletes kept their eyes focused to win, and fought strong through this season. Mark Jacobo, senior, speaks on his thoughts and hopes for next year, "this was a good year and I hope we can carry over the hard work until next year." By Victor Shollenberger.

MAKING WAVES

"There is nothing I enjoy more than swimming." -Perri Brinkmeier, senior

Through the summer and early fall, the girls swimming and diving teams have had to wake up early every day to go to practice. "One of the hardest parts of the season was waking up at 5:30AM and then having to swim up to seven thousand yards a day," said Perri Brinkmeier, senior. Swimming and dive takes a lot of dedication and hard work, but they always tried to do the best they could.

Being on a team means you must be able to get along and support your teammates. The girls swimming and diving members are all very close and are always able to get along and support each other. "Since we practiced with each other day in and day out, we all became really close friends and are constantly laughing and having fun," said Brinkmeier.

"We are all so open with each other, we can literally tell each other anything," added Brianna Dolan, senior.

Through many hours of practice and hard work, the girls swimming and diving teams have improved a tremendous amount and hope to keep improving over the years. "Our times have gotten faster and our team is looking at becoming very successful in the next few years," added Brinkmeier.

They pushed each other to keep trying and in return got positive results. "Our team has improved a lot because we kept pushing each other to try new dives. As a result we all beat our highest scores," said Leah Young. By Emily Kottwitz

QUICKSWIM

To be a swimmer you have to love swimming. A swimmer must want to work hard to achieve their team and personal goals. The Swim team dives into their sport and shows initiative when it comes to working hard. From practicing in the morning and after school to gliding through their competitions swimmers are always working very hard.

"Our team is about effort, try your best in everything and greatness will," said Benjamin Howlett junior. York swimmers use this effort working for state; though they are in a harder conference. Every practice, each swimmer works to push each other even harder and harder. When you spend every morning with the same people you learn to make a splash in every relationship you form. Most swimmers push each other to break a five minute time on the 500 freestyle. The 500 freestyle consists of 10 laps back and forth in the pool.

"I play basketball because I love being a part of a team, and the sport itself is really intense and fast pace."- Molly Schlecht, senior.

Starting off the season, the York Girls Basketball team came out strong and ready to go. With several seniors on the team this year, the girls know how to work with each other and use the power of teamwork in order to succeed in everything they do. "We are all so close and just enjoy being together which makes practices doable and games more fun," said Sarah Mikowski, junior.

Basketball is a team sport, and everyone needs to do their part and everyone contributes in some way or another. "We like to play at our highest ability in practices to challenge each other and make each other better. It's not worth it to just go through the motions during practice," said Alyssa Kovatchis, junior. In order to work together, the girls motivate each other and inspire each other to work hard.

The power of teamwork definitely showed throughout the season. HAMBONE

As the York bowling team started its season, they created a plan and set goals to meet by their final game. Each player hoped to improve their skills and to become a better bowler. As a team, they hoped to succeed and win. The team always hoped they had the ability to make it down state.

Starting the season, the team prepared and worked hard for a good season. "Some of our goals this season were to just learn to be a team and to fight as a team. We all had individual goals, which were to increase our averages. In the end our goals was to make it to state as a team and we did!" stated Ashley Newman, junior.

To get to the skill level that the bowling team was at this year, it took hard work and dedication. "It was important to keep our energy levels up and to stay positive while bowling. It is such a mental sport. It's easy to get discouraged after one or two bad throws, but keeping the energy levels up makes it easier to shake of the bad throws," stated Hannah Small, junior.

The bowling team finished their season strong. They made it to state while building as a team. "I made a lot of friends in the process and love to have fun after school bowling with them. My favorite part of bowling is that it is a very close knit group and everyone encourages each other," concluded Kristen Smaga, junior.

PINNED DOWN

The majority of York High-school sports are played with a team; football, soccer, lacrosse, etcetera. Most York sports are like this, with the exception of just a few. One of those few happens to be wrestling. Even though they wrestle their opponent one at a time, it's still called the York Wrestling Team. "People think that wrestling isn't a team sport," said varsity wrestler Joseph Helton, senior, "when in fact, I think it's just as much of a team sport as any other."

Wrestling isn't an easy sport by any means. It takes a lot of physical and mental training, and when you get tired and beat, who's going to be there to help? "If we ever see a kid sitting there on a bench in the weight room saying he can't lift anymore, we don't just let him be," said Helton. "There is no can't in wrestling." The team doesn't let individuals give up on themselves, and in return, they don't give up on each other. They are always there for each other to help them with their technique, or spot them while they lift. "We all care about each other," said varsity wrestler Joseph Dunn, junior, "because if one of us isn't ready for a meet, we aren't ready for the meet."

Wrestling is a team sport, despite what other people say. They lift together, they train together, and they fight together. "We might go out on the mat to wrestle one at a time," said Dunn, "But we're all there in spirit, wrestling together as a team." By John Vierling,

What do you like most about Gymnastics?

JUMPING FOR JOY

"What I like most about gymnastics is that feeling of achievement you get when you finally land something you have been working on for a long time." -Molly Hogan, junior

Gymnastics is not an easy sport. It involves patience, determination, focus and a lot of practice to get all their moves to perfection but it's also about having fun trying your best. "Our goal this year was to do the best we can but also have fun in the process," said Jenn Gentle, senior.

Being on a team means you have to be able to get along and support your teammates. The girls' gymnastics team members were all very close. "Since we spend so much time together, we have grown to become a big family," said Maggie Thoele, junior. "We all got along really well and always had a lot of fun during practice and meets," added Jenn Gentle.

Through a lot of hard work and dedication, the girls' gymnastics team was able to improve tremendously throughout the season. "At the beginning of the season we were all a little sloppy but with each practice, difficult tricks were becoming easier and easier. Eventually we were able to do a lot more than we thought we ever could," said Molly Hogan, junior.

"Every day we were learning and trying new tricks so for each meet we were adding more difficult skills to our routines," added Maggie Thoele. By Emily Kottwitz

GET UP AND DANCE

For every performance, York Poms team shows their dedication to the dance. They shine through every routine and use teamwork and time every move so it falls together perfectly.

These routines can only come together as long as the team works hard at the practices. "Practices are run by starting with a thorough warm up, and if it is a day we are learning routines, choreographers of the routine teach for the entire practice," said Ms. Michelle Rodriguez, coach.

This June to March season is to ensure the best dances are being performed and that the girls are in top condition. All of this time spent together is the direct cause of all of the improvement with the dancers. They build and work together as one team but varsity is lead by their captains Nicole Kubiesa and Madeline Peterson.

"The main focus of this year was having us choreograph the dances we do so they reflect all of us, not just the coaches," said Teagan Barnes, junior.

Even though they choreograph some of their own dances, they are always constructively criticized and encouraged by their coaches Ms. Michelle Rodriguez and Ms. Ashley McDonough.

This new season is also happy to add a JV team to the Poms family this year. By Audrey Kosman

"Performing at pep rallies is one of the best experiences on Poms, but I love dancing knowing that competition season is coming up," said Abbygale Wright, junior.

How do you prepare for games and competitions?

"We practice three to four times a week to prepare for games and competitions. On game days, we have team dinners and all get ready for the game together."
Elison Bonner, junior.

"We practice and prepare hard the week of, then we make sure we have a good night's sleep. The day of we stretch and get ready together and give each other pep talks."
Nicole Kubiena, senior.

"We all have a really close bond with each other so we all get ready together and make sure we all do our bests when we perform."
Celina Granger, junior.

What was your favorite part of the season so far?

"My favorite part so far would have to be senior night. It really put the last four years into perspective and made me realize this is my last season as a cheerleader. It was emotional but great to reminisce on the past." Elizabeth Larson, senior

"My favorite part is when we compete against other schools cheer teams. The adrenaline rush you get from winning gets it in the air and doing flips is insane." Kaiti Starr, senior

"Competition season, because everything gets more challenging, but with the dedication and support from my team, it really helps us become better." Libani Pelaez, junior

STICK AND STAND

"I always look forward to going to cheer and I love spending my time working toward a sport I love. It teaches me to trust people and helps gain my confidence. It also challenges me physically and mentally," Rebecca Squier, freshman.

Whether you are coming to cheer on the dukes or just socializing with friends, there is one thing that captures the attention of fans: the York Duke cheerleading squad.

With a new varsity coach, the girls all have one goal in mind: to qualify for state. "Our main goal is to go to state! Our team this year has the most talent the York Cheerleading program has ever seen. We definitely have the potential to be the first York Cheer squad to make it to state," said senior captain Kallie Starr.

Not only is the team focused and dedicated, but they also have a variety of ages providing new and exciting talent to the team.

With this, however, comes patience and sportsmanship among all members, which doesn't seem to be a problem for this close knit team. "I think it's good to have younger members on the team. A lot of them are really nice and it's fulfilling to see them learn new skills and accomplish different goals," said Annalise Haastad, junior.

Overall, whether it's performing at a football game or just walking the hallway in their uniforms, the York Cheer squad provides an extraordinary amount of school spirit and energy back to the school, really proving York's slogan: This is York. By Emily Wierow

ASSEMBLE INVOLVMENT

High school is a crazy place for everyone. Here for Africa was brought to the community by Elizabeth Kwanza (senior), Keri Rubenberg (a few years ago), and when Aena Talang and Kelley May, seniors, entered the school. 25% estimate they took over the service project as co-chairs. After their first year, they doubled the amount of goods used from closets and had them sent off to children in Kenya, Tanzania and the South reservation in the Okavango.

"Volunteering really helps you prioritize your values. Seeing these people's lives change over a pair of shoes is humbling. Doing jobs for Africa has reminded me to never take anything for granted, no matter how seemingly insignificant it may appear," said Talang. The project has helped over 400 children worldwide, and it's only expanding. Each year, an additional 500 pairs of shoes is added to the yearly collection.

"The project has changed our lives," Miss Unci stated. "Doing service projects makes you appreciate everything you have. We all don't understand our luck; we are living in a town like few others and go to a school like few others. These projects help high school students grow into kinder, more, and successful human beings." By Matthew Rodriguez

BLOOD DRIVE

This year, the Blood Drive, sponsored by Student Council and Life Source, was very successful with its one hundred and twenty donors. "Usually we shoot for one hundred units of blood, but we actually had to turn away about twenty donors due to the higher than expected participation," explained Brody Wilson, junior Student Council member.

Since one unit of blood can save up to three people's lives, it is all the better when more students donate their blood, Wilson added. "The success of the blood drive demonstrates how responsible and thoughtful our student body is."

Although needles and blood may not seem appealing, donating blood is very rewarding in sentimental ways.

"Donating blood really is a way to help people around you even if you think you don't have much to offer," said Carisma Lopez, junior.

Donating blood is a rewarding process that helps others in need. Henry Roth, senior, said, "Right after donating I felt a bit loopy, but I was very glad I did it. It is totally worth the time."

Donating blood may temporarily seem daunting, but it is a selfless act that is very self-filling in the long run. By Tommy Stotzer

McTEACHER NIGHT

On March 4th, the Autism Society participated in McTeacher Night at one of McDonald's Elmhurst locations. Fifteen percent of each purchase that was made would be donated to the Autism Society, who then takes that money and distributes it to families with Autistic members in need of help. The Autism Society here at York managed to raise a total of $500, but with the help of many others.

Teachers, students, parents, and family members came out and supported the great cause. "Next year, we want to encourage more York students to go though, because that would really make a big difference," said Emma Krissinger, senior.

Not only did McTeacher Night provide food, but it also provided much entertainment. "The band 'We Found Us' played and it was really cool to showcase York's talent while raising money for a great cause," said Emma Krissinger, senior. Everyone who walked in was very cheerful and happy to be donating. "The teachers were so enthusiastic, people would just keep putting change in the tip box so they could hear the teachers sing!"

Though this was the first year York participated in McTeacher Night, the Autism Society hopes to continue in the future. "It was cool to be laying the foundation for a new tradition," said Krissinger. By Carolyn White.

KEY CLUB

Helping Elmhurst not only through the school, but also through events in the community is the main goal of York's Key Club. With 250 members, this over-sized group is full of students who are dedicated to making their surrounding area a better place. "We provide a place for students to come together and help out our community. By providing a variety of volunteer opportunities, kids are able to explore the different events and truly find what they enjoy," Kelly Premo, senior.

This year club has participated in numerous events, ranging from community events to school events. The club has participated in outings, such as the Pink 5K cancer walk, Soles for Africa, and the Fight for Air Climb, along with volunteering at School Carnivals, Bell ringing for the Salvation Army, special kids day car washes and many more.

Why should one join Key Club? Simply put, Key Club offers an outstanding environment where students can meet a wide variety of people and also help out others. "My favorite part of Key Club is getting to meet the people in the community who plan the events we volunteer at because they're always so nice and appreciative of our help," said Kiara Koepen, senior. Along with this idea, Key Club also provides a great opportunity to meet new friends within the school environment.

"I have met so many new people after joining the club, and it is so cool because we all have the same mindset and attitude," said Andrea Zurlo, junior. From working within the community, to just making signs for the school, Key Club rises above and beyond to create a wonderful sense of community in and out of York. By Emily Vierow.

CONSERVE OUR WORLD

Ecology is the scientific study of organisms and their relationship with the environment. Eco club takes a hands-on learning approach for students who are interested in the environment. "My favorite thing about Eco is that in addition to doing activities that help out the environment, we also get to go on trips to actually experience things rather than sit in a classroom like we do for the majority of the school day and for many other clubs," said Katie Iacobellis, junior.

These students care about the environment and are always looking for ways to help conserve it. "I love the overall energy and enthusiasm that is put into helping the environment. At meetings we normally talk about upcoming events and discuss ideas to make York more eco-friendly," said Emily Mueller, junior.

One goal the club has is to make York a greener place and more environmentally friendly. Every week during the lunch periods, members go around the school and collect recyclables from each classroom; thus showing how much these students care.

One event that stands out amongst members is the canoe trip over the summer; it's one of the most anticipated trips of the year. They all travel together, relax in the beauty of nature and have a great time. "I love being outdoors and I wanted to join a club that would foster my passion for the environment while making a difference (if small) in the grand scheme of things," added Iacobellis.

Even though members of Eco aren't all going to be ecologists, they all share a common interest: making the world a better place, one water bottle at a time.

Science Olympiad gives students an opportunity to compete in science activities, and to push themselves to the limit of their academics.

This club stands for learning and practicing genuine activities which consist of 23 events. "They can work in teams of two. The students mainly prepare themselves, and receive some mentoring from Mr. Jeffery Drach, Mrs. Cynthia Zentner, or myself," said Mr. Jeremy Paschke, sponsor.

While prepping for competitions, these future scientists also have the main goal of winning state at the University of Illinois Science Olympiad Competition which is an overnight trip in April. In order to be productive in competitions they need to be dedicated.

"We work as a team to do our best in different events and hopefully qualify for state," said John Kopach, junior.

PERSUASIVEPOINTS

Despite their short season, York's Speech team works long and hard, proving their wide variety of skills and abilities. Speech Team allows students to learn how to talk and present themselves in front of many different groups of people, ultimately building up confidence and composure of the members. "It's always good to be more articulate and comfortable with public speaking. It gives people more opportunities to practice and feel more comfortable," said Connor Lockie, junior.

This year's team proved their true talent by articulating multiple different scenarios, as well as using hand gestures and performance in order to get their point across. The team focuses on presenting thirteen different events involving speaking, preparation, writing, and performing. "We will be sending four events down to the state competition, the most in York's history. Looking back we have had a very successful season," said Katie Diamond, junior.

All the members dedicated their time creating new scripts and assigning different events. The students themselves effectively casted different types of people for certain skits, ultimately in order to portray and deliver a strong message. "Everyone works together and because we spend so much time together we really are a family," Anna Talamo, senior. Overall, the team worked to perform their skills and keep their audience on their feet and anxiously wanting more. By Emily Vierow.

"I love speech because there is something for everyone. There is nothing more rewarding than working hard and seeing results," Anna Talamo, senior.

DROPTHE TRUTH

Last year, the freshest style of rhythm and rhyme made its way to the halls of York as a welcomed addition to clubs encouraging writing, language, and literature.

Poetry Slam Club studies and celebrates the practice of contemporary-styled poetry, which varies in rhyme scheme, performance, and technique. Under the creative vision of Mr. Aakash Shah, students meet each week to discuss, write, and share their original work in preparation for competitions in the Chicagoland area.

"A 'meeting' wouldn't be the right word to describe a day in Poetry Slam between all the food, conversing, and laughing, but it's really about the positive atmosphere that inspires us to be poetic," said Samuel Rafac, sophomore.

The open and accepting atmosphere of Poetry Slam was essential for the team's inspirational dynamic. "The team eventually transforms into a family all of its own. The people are so incredibly dedicated to poetry, the environment becomes home", said Jessica Yacko, senior.

Throughout the year, each member relished in the power that writing holds over others. Yacko continued, "The poetry not only made me aspire to write more, but developed me as a human being." By Bridget Dunne

"The words come and go, but the poetry always remains a glimmer of hope."

BOOKENDS

While York's English department offers a variety of excellent book recommendations and analysis of classical novels, the Book Club dedicates extracurricular time to discussing the generation's most popular books.

As the newest English club, Book Club members were eager to join and converse about their favorite things to read. "I thought it'd be interesting for people to get together and share about books they love," said club founder, Lorena Sadiku, freshman.

The club members all vote on books they want to read together and then share their opinions on the novel's themes, characters, and plot devices. "Book Club is great for exposing you to new genres," said Kelsey Gronewald, freshman.

The club also finds different ways to incorporate their books into each meeting. "It's not just about reading and talking about the book. We do a lot of fun things, like watching the movies," said Ayşe İzci, freshman. "Everyone makes suggestions and it introduces all of us to new books that we wouldn't choose our own." OBJECTION!

Most people would be worried and probably a little confused to see a group of kids in a courtroom, but a closer look would reveal that it is only the lawyer-aspiring, justice-defending members of the Law Team holding a mock trial.

With the supervision of a teacher and former attorney, students in the club learn how to prepare an argument based on cases that are given to them. They present both sides of the case. Then, they travel to mock trials in actual courtrooms to compete against other schools.

The students on the Law Team present a case for both the plaintiff (prosecution) and for the defense, giving them the full experience of being an attorney in a case.

"Each team participates in two trials at each competition. They take place in real courtrooms.

"Real attorneys act as judges, jury members, and evaluators," said Daria Cahill, senior.

The Law Team is clearly a great program for aspiring attorneys or anyone interested in Law in general. "Law Team isn't all about being a lawyer; it's much more about forming arguments, thinking on your feet, and speaking skills," said Alexis Fidone, senior.

The team aims to develop not only strong students of law, but also students with greater overall skills dealing with critical thinking, speaking, and preparing themselves with knowledge on a subject or problem.

"It has helped me to write better papers, speak more confidently in front of groups, get out of a ticket, and has made me more prepared for life beyond high school," said Annie Nyberg, junior.

ACTIVIST MOVEMENT

Violence against women has been an issue for a long time and the problem continues to grow. Empower is not exclusive to women, it is open to anyone who strives to end violence.

"We are a group focused on learning and teaching each other what we care about. Anyone is welcome to join, we are all inclusive. This is not a man-bashing group, it's a women empowerment group," said Rachel Meadors, senior.

Empower does its best to spread the word about empowering women around the school. There is a school-wide event known as V-day, a movement on Valentine's Day that is used to promote awareness about preventing domestic violence.

"We pass our felt V's in the morning and everyone wears them at school to show support. I think it is the most influential event that we put on because it brings a great cause into the school," said Sarah Morrissey, senior. They spend days after school to trace and cut these V's. It is one step towards ending violence.

LEAD THE WAY

Future Diplomats of America, or FDA, is one of many great ways to learn about our nation's government and the governments of other countries.

Students involved in this club are able to attend many field trips which help further their understanding. "It was a good way for us to experience diplomacy firsthand, to hear from people who are making history," said Callahan Hennessy, senior.

The members of FDA really enjoy the experience and it helps their sponsor is just as involved. "The club's leaders are very organized and Ms. Carlson is very passionate about the subject," said Celine Taylor, senior.

This club makes learning outside the classroom interesting, and students wish to continue developing their knowledge. FDA is a good way for students to learn more about the government in the United States as well as governments around the world.

BOPTOTHEBEAT

The tight knit dance group, Urban Arts, meets almost every Tuesday and Thursday in the Black Box Theater. Ms. Michelle Rodriguez supervises the performers, but they choreograph their own routines.

Together the team members learn the counts, what time to hit their moves, for their dances at practices. Samantha Castillo, sophomore, says that at practices "everyone is always in a good, upbeat mood."

Sometimes learning and teaching the dances can be rushed if a performance is coming up fast. Castillo comments that "learning a big dance in a short period of time" is the hardest thing that the club has to work together to do.

The crowd cheers during pep rallies for the talented members of this club. Urban Arts also performs during Fine Arts week and visits other schools.

Each foreign language club has its own fun and unique activities it does that are related to that country's culture.

For example, Italian Club decorates the hallway for Homecoming Week. This year they won the contest and had a pizza party during one of their meetings.

During the week of Day of the Dead, Spanish club members make sugar skulls and discuss what people do to celebrate Day of the Dead in Spanish cultures.

"We decorate for Homecoming, celebrate Hispanic holidays, watch movies, and do projects. This year we are also going to have pen pals!" said Ariana Solis, junior.

For the first time, Spanish club is hosting a banquet with many other Spanish clubs around Elmhurst.

Along with learning about the French culture by watching movies and having discussions, the members in French club also indulge in many different foods. "My favorite thing about French club is probably the delicious food we get to eat," said Samantha Mariot, junior.

Language clubs at York are a great way to learn about other cultures and languages from all around the world. There are four language clubs that are students can join here at York: Italian, French, Chinese, and Spanish.

During club meetings members often do fun activities that relate to that club's specific language. Language clubs are all about enjoying yourself while learning at the same time.

FAST & FURIOUS

With over one billion cars being driven worldwide, it is crucial that our world has knowledgeable mechanics that understand the inner workings of vehicles. Auto club strives to teach students these valuable skills every week. These students are willing to fix anything with a motor.

Whether it's a club car, a customer car, or any other personal vehicle, the young mechanics in auto club will be working out the kinks. Thomas Fischer, senior, said, "Auto club taught me more about vehicles and I made a lot of friends."

The students in auto club benefit from working on cars so often. In fact, Michael Marino, senior, actually fixed and obtained his personal car from auto club. Working on the engines every day gives the students hands-on experience and allows them to better understand how the cars actually work. Marino explained, "My favorite thing to do in auto club is to expand my knowledge to the underclassmen and teach them how to use miscellaneous tools."

Auto club teaches the kids valuable skills. Steven Knopf, junior, said "Day-to-day it helps me with time management. You have to work hard to get stuff done." The skills that the students in auto club learned will help them in the future.

Several of the kids in auto club also have plans to work in the automotive field someday. Whether they want to work on cars, motorcycles, tractors, or even start their own vehicle company, the information the students are learning in auto club will serve as a very valuable tool for them in their future career. GETCULTURE

Every Tuesday in room A354, students gather after school "to study, investigate, explore and enjoy everything about Asian culture and Japanese Animation," said teacher Mr. Timothy Albert.

Japanese culture and animation club's main goal is to teach people about Japanese culture. In meetings of J/CAC one can see students watching an episode of their favorite anime series or just kicking back and having an extensively long Super Smash Brothers tournament that keeps everyone together in a fun environment.

"An insight into how the Japanese live their lives is what we have to offer," said Nicholas Braun, junior, one of the presidents of the club. This club is a place for those who love a playing around, laughing, and learning environment.

"This club lets other kids see a culture they won't experience on a normal day to day basis" said Matthew Stott, junior. Before you leave York high school add the experience of Japanese culture and animation club to your club palette. By Victor Shollenberger

PLAYON

From Dungeons and Dragons to Magic, Gamers' Guild is all about table top games that require creativity and imagination.

One main game played is Magic. To get into the head of a Magic player you need to know how the games work. Each game represents a battle between mighty wizards, known as "planes walkers", who employ spells, items, and creatures depicted on individual Magic cards to defeat their opponents.

There is little similarity between Dungeons and Dragons and Magic. In Dungeons and Dragons, the players have more cards and the rules are far more complex than many other games.

Both games are very fun and members of the club look forward meeting every week. So now that you know what it's like to be a plane walker, let your mind run wild in Gamers' Guild. By Victor Shollenberger

OLDSCHOOL

Vintage is a term that is often misunderstood, or not even known at all. The word "vintage" is used with instruments, clothes, and furniture. The Vintage Club deals with retro-style clothing and accessories. The club focuses on taking weekend field trips to stores that sell vintage clothing.

Another misconception about vintage clothing is that it is very, very old clothing. Antique clothing is from more than one hundred years ago, while vintage clothing usually originates from times before the nineteen-eighties or nineteen-nineties.

The club members as a whole hope to build up the club so that other students can participate in opportunities to learn more about vintage material and have fun.

Vintage Club is truly one of a kind, it offers a place for students to get involved with finding vintage clothing and having fun on field trips. "Weekend fieldtrips are my favorite. We go to various vintage markets in Chicago such as the Randolph Street Market, Vintage Garage and local thrift stores," said Caroline Stascia, sophomore. By Sam Rivera.

BEST PRACTICES

"The most memorable part of DECA this year was winning a medal at sectionals and going to state."

- Ryan Gilmartin, junior.

DECA stands for Distributive Education Clubs of America. Essentially, DECA is a business based club that focuses on marketing. Throughout the year, DECA went on business field trips such as a Bulls game and a DECA career day.

However, the team went to sectional and state competitions in the winter and spring, too. The team was successful at the West Suburban DECA Sectional Competition by qualifying 8 students for state. "Hopefully they represent us well so we can bring back some gold," said Christian Klos, senior.

Ryan Gilmartin, junior, added, "The most memorable part this year was winning a medal for sectionals and going to state."

DECA has more depth than just medals, though.

"The events that the DECA attends have a professional atmosphere," explained Mr. Jim Borel, club sponsor.

DECA prepares students for futures in all types of business: Accounting, finance, marketing, human resources, management, and more. With so many events, the students are bound to develop valuable business skills. "DECA gave me a general feel for how to act in the business world," said Gilmartin.

The members of DECA share an appreciation for business. "I joined DECA to meet and work with students who are as passionate about business as me," said Klos.

FASTHANDS

Handball, with its unique and separate traits, makes it a sport of its own. The distinctiveness of the sport is what draws fascinated pursuers to take it up. It is played in a small indoor court and players must use their hand to hit the ball back against the wall. As for any other sport or skill, practice makes perfect in this handy activity.

The York Handball team held practices on open racquetball courts at the Courts Plus fitness club and in the basements of willing team members. The team plays pickup games against each other and sometimes they play against other schools.

They rarely play in official tournaments with the exception of one savvy handballer, "We don't really go to many competitions, I am currently the only one that has ever played in a tournament and it was a lot of fun to meet and play against new people" said Matthew Penning, senior.

DISCUP

Ultimate Frisbee is a sport that requires intense focus, everlasting stamina, and flawless technique.

The York Ultimate Frisbee team holds all of these traits to be true. In order to prepare for a rigorous spring season, if the weather permits, the team practices outdoors at Wilder Park, otherwise inside the York field house.

Ultimate is not just tossing a colorful disc between team members. It involves various types of offensive and defensive sets that need to be run during games and all with a goal in mind: to score.

"Most games are played to 15 points or for an hour and a half; whichever one comes first" said Colin MacGregor, junior.

It is vital for a team of Ultimate players to work together; it can be tough playing a sport all alone that demands such high physical and mental conditioning.

The York team is looking to make an appearance in its first State Tournament and placed as one of the top five teams in state. By Sam Rivera.

BRAINSTORMACADEMICS

Students at York are always looking for ways to help out others, whether it being through service, fundraising, or tutoring. Every day, there are students sitting at tables willing to help anyone who needs help with their academics. These student tutors are very resourceful and are willing to help anyone in need.

"I always appreciated it when fellow classmates helped me with my work so I thought I would return the favor," said Hannah Lashmer, senior, when talking about why she decided to become a tutor.

"I became a tutor because I feel that it's my responsibility to help out underclassmen who are in classes that I've taken," said Anna Talamo, senior.

Helping out in the school environment is another important part of high school. It gives students the opportunities to make a difference in someone's life, even if that change is something small like solving an equation. "It still makes a difference. It's all about being able to read the situation and act accordingly," added Talamo. By Matthew Rodriguez

The transition to high school can be difficult for some, but York's Freshman Mentoring program helps freshmen make the transition as smooth as possible. Monday-Thursday of their first semester of high school, the freshmen meet with their mentors for half of their lunch. "My favorite part of the program is to see the freshmen transition from uneasy about high school, and by the end of the semester, much more confident in their high school futures," said mentor Sam Lee, junior.

Current mentor, Brody Wilson, junior, was inspired by his mentor, his freshman year, which is why he decided to become one. The mentors are in a constant leadership position and set a good example for all students.

"I believe that mentoring gives incoming freshmen a place to get to know their peers, become more familiar with our school, and it allows them to start their high school careers on the right foot," added Wilson. This program has been very successful since it was started and will continue to expand and inspire future freshmen. By Matthew Rodriguez

The Learning Commons is a place where not only a student can find a quiet place to finish homework, but also collaborate with teachers and peers. "The Learning Commons has a more relaxed college campus atmosphere," explained Mrs. Julie Kirus, librarian.

The staff really tries to create a relaxed feel for students to be stress free for a while. Anne Vicia, junior, added "I come to the Learning Commons because teachers don't bother you when you work."

Besides from the Learning Commons being a place where students can drink a smoother and hang out with friends, it is also a very resourceful and helpful place to study. There are three sections where there is always a teacher available to help students: The Social Studies Section, the Science Section, and the English Section. There is literary resources and teachers available. "ask Viola, The Learning Commons is open from 6:35 AM to 6:30 PM and truly maximizes the resources available to students. By: Anthony Stuber"

Arriving to a new school may seem daunting, but with the help of York Ambassadors, it helps students acclimate in a warm, welcoming way. Though it can be very intimidating, it can also showcase what York has to offer. "The main goal of the program is to show all the opportunities York offers to potential students," said Meghan Flynn, JHOP.

Taking time out of their day to help students log on classes or alleviate any nervousness about their first days at York is what Ambassadors is all about, Flynn also added, "It serves as a dual purpose for both allowing new kids to learn about the school and also meeting someone new." Helping students feel welcomed and comfortable is York Ambassadors main purpose. By Carolyn White

ART SURVEY

Survey classes are set for students from the general roster and students from the special education roster to interact with one another. They meet every day during a regular period and engage in projects and hands-on activities that help them boost their confidence and social skills while meeting new friends.

"Our job is to not so much be a teacher figure helping them, but more a peer working in a project with them. It helps desegregate the special education classes from the general education classes," said Emily Potvin, senior. Working together on projects and assisting in activities helps the special education students improve with their social skills, while also being able to relate and get to know the other student as well.

When working with peers their own age, it helps them to become more comfortable in their environment. Being able to relate to another student provides a spurt in their confidence while having fun. Potvin said, "It's an amazing class and you learn a lot from the other students." By Carolyn White

CIRCLE OF FRIENDS

"Circle of friends is a social club where students of all abilities and backgrounds can just hang out," said Ms. Anne Lepore, co-sponsor. Every month, the Circle of Friends meets to plan a fun event for the whole club. These events include participating in activities at York and throughout the community. In the past year, they have participated in Turnabout, plays, and Homecoming. Activities around the community included tree decorating, bowling, going out to dinner, and many other events.

The students in Circle of Friends work together to help everyone in the club have a fun outlet for social activities. Ms. Denise Hagels, co-sponsor, explained, "I like that the students can have the most positive high school experience." Circle of friends has succeeded in giving students with all abilities the chance to be social. The community within Circle of friends is certainly a strong one that has continued to positively affect everyone with all abilities. By Tommy Stotzer.

AUTISM SOCIETY

Every other Thursday, Mrs. Elizabeth Gallivan and the members of York's Chapter of the Autism Society of America join together in Room A290. These students are very dedicated to helping children and adults with autism; autism is a general term for a group of complex disorders of brain development. "I joined because I wanted to be a voice for children with autism who need our help," said Alexandra Dourlain, senior.

The rate of children being diagnosed with autism is growing rapidly and the members of the club raise money for the children and adults living with it. "My favorite part of this club is all the people you get to meet and the ability to help those in need," said William Delaney, senior.

Educating the student body and community about autism is another goal of this club. "A typical meeting usually involves brainstorming new ways to raise funds throughout the school and community, as well as educating ourselves about the autism spectrum," added Dourlain. A growing club, the Autism Society's main goal is to raise awareness and help people. These students are committed to changing the lives of many individuals and their families; the smallest difference can mean the world to the ones they are helping. By Matthew Rodriguez.

HARMONY

Practice makes perfect, and the members of choir know how hard it is to work together to sound fabulous.

Throughout the day they sing with Choral teacher Ms. Rebecca Marianetti and have a good time. With three different levels of choir, the Choir room is always abuzz.

The Cadet Choir is the first level which consists of the newcomers and is the level that one would take in order to move up to a higher level choir. The Choralists makes up the second level and this consists of only girls. The highest level of choir is the Concert Choir and mainly consists of boys and girls usually junior and seniors.

The choir members commit one period a day to sing with Ms. Rebecca Marianetti. "It's nice to get a break from the rest of the day and get to do something you love," said Delena Obemaier, senior.

There are four concerts throughout the year: Collage Concert, Winter Concert, Holiday Concert, and the Spring Concert. They sing genres like gospel, holiday pieces, contemporary, folk, traditional, pop, musical theater, jazz and many others.

The members of choir all join for the love of music and the passion to sing. Along with singing, students also create a lot of fun memories.

"At the Christmas concert, the piano player messed up and we had to wing it," said Graciela Hernandez, sophomore. "It was a funny moment and the members had to think fast and continue with the concert. The show must go on."

ACA-AWESOME

Anyone who has attended the York Talent Show and has seen the Madrigals perform has surely been entranced by their haunting harmonies, captivating cadences, and mesmerizing melodies.

Given the recent prominence of singing in the media—The Voice, American Idol, Glee, and Pitch Perfect come to mind—America's avid appreciation for vocal talent remains rampant. And yet, no one works harder to achieve choral excellence than York's singing elite: the Madrigals.

The group starts out as a madrigal choir during the holiday season, but moves on to a cappella pop and jazz music in the spring. "In all of this, our purpose is to bring joy to people who hear us," said Madeline Meyer, senior. But the reach of the Madrigal goes beyond mere entertainment; rather, their joyous vibe extends to the entire community.

"We caroled at the hospital, which was great because we got to bring joy to others by doing what we love to do!" exclaimed Alexandra Wheatland, senior.

The Madrigals meets every Monday night at 6:30 for long nights of intense practice. The club's sponsor, Mrs. Rebecca Marianetti, is the one who makes everything happen. "Mrs. Marianetti is always positive during rehearsals and performances. She has made my high school choir experience unforgettable," said Wheatland. "She is also an expert driver of the Activity Bus when we go out to sing in the community," added Meyer.

After all of their investment of time and talent, the Madrigals pays off in a multitude of ways for all those involved. "I have become a better musician because of this group," states Meyer.

With this advanced musicianship comes valuable skills: "my ability to read music has sight-reading skills have improved immensely," said Wheatland. Sight-reading is the skill of reading, and then performing a piece on its first run-through.

Although the group does not participate in choral exercises such as "horizontal running," as popularized by Pitch Perfect, practicing is a formidable and admirable commitment made by all Madrigal members.

All in all, the Madrigals are a vibrant group of dedicated and talented individuals, and this attitude shows no sign of stopping. As for the students involved, it seems that this group's influence will linger for a long time. "I've had such a great experience in high school; I intend to sing in an a cappella group in college because of this," said Wheatland. Meyer added: "I will hopefully continue singing for the rest of my life."

Being in orchestra allows students a time in the school day to unwind and lose themselves in their music. For an hour a day, the class gets together, plays music and of course has fun. "Orchestra is a lot of fun! What I like most about it, is being able to take a well known piece and make it my own by using dynamics and putting emphasis on different phrases," said Lauren Irby, junior.

Like all other musical groups, Orchestra performs many styles of music. "We mostly play classical music, but every now and then we play more modern or jazz music," said Jake Pulver, senior. Each student has their favorite piece of music they have played so far.

"My favorite piece is 'Jupiter' because it's such a well known and beautiful piece that it was fun to make my own interpretation of it," said Irby.

Orchestra performs many different concerts throughout the year. "We play about six concerts a year: the annual Performing Arts Collage Concert, one in the fall, one for holidays, one in the winter and in the spring, and then one at the Graduation ceremony. Sometimes orchestra pairs with the choir or dance and we perform then too," said Irby.

Preparing for a concert involves a lot of practicing but at the end it's all worth it. "All the practicing may be hard work but when it gets close to a concert and we are able to play the music really well, you get this feeling of accomplishment," said Maddie Walenga, junior.

Lead by drum majors Jenna DeVries, senior, Rachel Iverson, senior, and Celine Taylor, senior, the band works all throughout the day to pull together songs for The Dukes. "All that time in practice becomes a combination of fun, loud, and wonderful experience," said Jenna DeVries, senior.

Fans can see their hard work through the Grammy they were awarded for hard work in a competitive race to keep band program thriving, but even with the praise of the Grammy the band still works every day trying to shoot for perfection.

Instruments can be hard to use in little ways from practice to concerts, but "if you work out all the tiny problems it will lead to it sounding amazing," said Leah Young, junior.

In band to help get rid of these "tiny problems," band students practice a lot: "We have small ensembles Monday & Tuesday and full band Wednesday through Friday, and there are sectionals after school Mondays, Tuesdays, and Wednesday," said Thomas Pennel, junior.

Band students find practice very important. "The time you put in is worth it for the music you produce later, I wouldn't want to spend my time any other way," said Nick Tolar, junior.

The band takes this time to improve themselves musically and rhythmically. They do it for the fans at York games, from marching band to pep rallies, to six concerts throughout the year including: the three major seasonal concerts, the collage concert, solo night, and the district band festival.

These students truly have a passion for music to work so hard for that perfection this much. Their hard work pays off when the audience is left with an experience worth remembering.

DARE TO DESIGN

Family Career and Community Leaders of America, or FCCLA, is a series of competitions hosted by York's Family and Consumer Science department. The competition consists of cooking, interior design, child development, and clothing assembly.

The child development competition is very similar to class here at York. "I prepare a story as if I were going to present it to a class of preschoolers, then present the story to a group of judges. They respond with their feedback, such as how it can be perceived by children, and if they would be able to learn from it," said Kelsey Mills, senior.

While most competitions are performed by a single person, everyone is there to support each other and cheer them on. "It is an individual competition, but all the girls that do it, do their best to encourage one another. It's a great experience," said

Emma Williams, a senior who competed in the sewing challenge.

Other people compete with a partner or two, which can be very helpful. "I love competing with a partner. You get to bounce ideas off each other and share the experience together. They can also save you if you mess up," added Mills.

As a result of excellent teamwork and cooperation, Kelsey Mills and Caitlyn McNally, seniors, received an award for most outstanding. Another couplet, Jenitha Jom and Heena Mohammed, seniors, received the honor of a gold medal for their pre-school competition.

Some students were even able to use their finished projects in their real life. "It was such a fun experience, and the formal dress I made for competition, it ended up being my prom dress," said Emma Williams, senior. By Patrick Delgado

"My favorite part of FCCLA was spending time with my friends. It gave me an opportunity to do what I love, while still socializing with people", said Emma Williams, senior.

MOLDING MINDS

"Creating a lesson plan is so much more work than I had expected, but in the end watching how the kids react is so worth it."

-Abigail Kayman, junior

Every Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday Room A133 becomes brighter with the presence of the Little Dukes Preschool. About 20 high schoolers participate during 2nd, 3rd, or 4th period. The preschool is directed by alternating groups of 4 to 5 high schoolers, who will spend their assigned week planning and executing engaging lessons for the preschoolers. These themed lessons range from the different types of animals to modes of transportation to the weather and seasons.

While children learn about the environment and weather patterns, the class is always forecast to have sunshine and smiles. "The atmosphere in the classroom is really upbeat and positive. If you are excited to learn, so will the preschoolers," said Paige Wrasse, senior. "The atmosphere is pretty chill," added Abigail Kayman, junior. "It's a ton of fun and super beneficial if you plan on being a teacher."

Indeed, it seems that the planning portions of the class are challenging, yet immensely rewarding. "Before I took this class I never realized how much work goes into planning a lesson to teach. You have to be very organized, create visuals, and have flexibility," said Wrasse.

The classroom can also offer complex challenges based on the needs of the children: "I learned that different kids learn in different ways," said Kayman. "The best part is when the children open up to you. They're so giving," said senior Krisna Morales.

By Gloria Frank

In the classroom, preschoolers can behave slightly less perfect than their impeccably matched outfits would have one believe. "The hardest part of this class is keeping every child's attention during a lesson," said Natalie Nelson, senior.

Abigail Kayman agrees with this sentiment: "I often have to tell the preschoolers to turn their 'listening ears' on," she said with a smile. "But it's so hard to have to teach them to wait for things: I'm such a pushover."

While planning and controlling the classroom may be demanding, the chance to interact with miniature scholars makes it all worthwhile for the resilient Child-Development students. "The best part is when the children open up to you. They're so giving," said senior Krisna Morales.

DOCTORWHO

By the time they reach high school, most teenagers are discovering their interests and determining their possible plans for the future. Students are testing their abilities and uncovering talents and aspirations. For students, high school is a time for soul-searching and "finding yourself." While some are deciding their future, others have it all figured out. York's Medical Career students are getting a head start in knowing what they want for their future and they have taken step to ensure it.

"I've always wanted to be a doctor and help people so when I heard about this class I knew it gave me an inside look about what working in the hospital is all about," stated Emma Trapani, senior.

First semester medical career students spend a double period learning terms and skills needed for next semester, when they go into the hospital experience.

"We did a lot of dissections. We also got to go to the Cadaver lab and see actual human bodies," said Neha Handas, senior.

Second semester the class heads to the hospital where they are mentored by doctors and nurses throughout their daily tasks. The students learn the ropes of the hospital and get hands on knowledge about what it takes to work in a hospital.

"My favorite part about med careers is being exposed to all of the cool things at the hospital that you would never get to see if you weren't in the class. You get to see all of the behind the scenes stuff," said Hannah Latimer, senior.

Medical Careers is a fast paced class and a vigorous workload, but is very rewarding. The students are able to apply the knowledge from class into real life experiences.

"The best part about med careers is being able to learn all about anatomy and physiology but then being able to go out and actually practice in the hospital what we've learned," said Kylie Fuller, senior.

Medical Careers provides an opportunity for new experiences and exposes the students to possible future careers.

"This class is different from other York classes because you aren't in the classroom learning; you actually get the hands on experience which is really cool," said Teagan Fuller, senior.

Even though Medical Careers is a demanding class, the class is fulfilling and worthwhile. "Be prepared for a lot of hard work. It's not easy, but it'll be worth it," said Sabrina Bath, senior.

TRAINING FOR SUCCESS

Having a job in the medical field means you have to be prepared for anything. In this new class, athletic training, you learn about the aspects of being an athletic trainer and what they need to know to prepare themselves for a real life situation.

"This class has taught me how to respond to numerous injuries that may happen during sports from life threatening head injuries to small cuts and bruises," said Alec Kramer, junior.

In addition to treating injuries, this class also teaches you facts about the human body and how it works. "We have learned many facts about the human body such as how the body can pump blood from the heart through the entire body in only 8 seconds," said Michael Mirretti, junior.

Athletic training is different compared to other PE classes because they spend most of their time in a classroom.

"Athletic training is a mixture of an academic class and a PE class. Some days we are in the gym with the other PE classes and then other days we are in the classroom," said Christina Cepero, senior.

Also the students get to do these activities that let them experience what they just learned the previous day. "Every Tuesday and Thursday we go into the fitness center and I have the students perform these tests or activities about the topic of fitness they learned the previous day," said Mr. Donald Kasper.

Because of this class, the students will have a better understanding of what it's like being an athletic trainer and other possible medical careers as well.

This class was added to the curriculum this year and it helped these students

TAKING THE LEAD

"Most people do not know this, but Student Council meets every day attempting to cultivate school spirit, bring fresh ideas to the table, and maximize the potential that the school offers," said Sarah Morrissey, senior.

It is certainly true that many York students are unaware of the myriad things that Student Council—or "StuCo" as it is affectionately called by its members—does for our school.

"We set out to create unique moments and events for the entire student body," said Heather George, senior.

But that's not all: Morrissey adds: "we focus a lot on service to the community through countless drives and service projects."

It takes the entire Student Council team in large-scale projects. Members often take time out of their out of their weekends in order to make sure that their projects run smoothly at school.

Chief among these accomplishments is the annual Homecoming Dance. "There is so much to do in a small amount of time," said Morrissey. Not only is Student Council in charge of hiring a DJ, and decorating the Commons, but they also take charge of Homecoming spirit days and officiate the "King of the Couch" competition.

Morrissey remarks that the contest is "very entertaining ... there is lots of awful singing and ridiculous behavior."

The amount of milestones that StuCo achieves in one year may seem daunting, but to its members, StuCo can be immensely rewarding. "Student Council has provided me with an opportunity to take a leadership role in my school, and a fun caring group of friends to help me achieve my goals," concludes George.

EXTRA EXTRA!

Journalism is a career that takes lots of teamwork and cooperation. This is something that the staff of York-hi newspaper has.

"Honestly, York-hi is like a family. We encourage each other and complement when another's work is quality. We help when someone needs it, and support each other's ideas. There's never a dull moment," says Mari Hinchley, senior.

All of the York-hi students agree that everyone in the class forms more than just friendships. "My favorite part of the class is the relationships you develop with your peers," says Nicholas Todd, junior.

The team works together to make articles, surveys, reviews and much more to bring light to different situations happening inside and outside the York campus. "I have worked together on multiple articles so far," says Todd, "It's fun working together with others who enjoy journalism."

Although the York-hi staff will always continue to write quality papers, some of the current staff are worried about how the staff will function when the seniors leave next year. "With all the seniors that are leaving The York-hi staff, the staff will be cut into less than a third of what it is this year," says Todd.

The York-hi staff is in need of more reporters for next year that want to be part of the York-hi family. "If you like to write or take pictures—join York-hi," says Hinchley, "Expect to work hard and give it your all. After all, you are sharing your work with the entire school. Be ready to have a year with people who will turn into your family—enjoy it!" By John Vierling

"York-hi would be impossible without collaboration. Reporters artists, photographers and editors all have to work together."

GREENSCREEN MACHINE

As the morning bell rings at 8:41, all of York settles down in their second period class and turns their attention to the illuminated projector showcasing York's very own morning announcements. The students' conversations simmer down and all their attention is turned towards the board.

"Aside from delivering news, YTV is that small break from class for those groggy mornings—whether it be the music that plays before the announcements that gets you going, or the (approved) jokes that Chambers lets us air, or the Friday Features that I know many people look forward to—YTV hopes to keep the school in a good mood and informed of everything that York has to offer," reflected Mari Hinchley, senior.

The student body listens intently until the projector turns off and the teacher flips the switch of the lights and the dull class begins.

Raising the abilities and standards of a high school broadcasting class, YTV delivers the school with updates of club meetings and upcoming events, while providing giggles and corny puns daily.

"Scripting, preparing, and producing the Friday Features are what makes YTV so exciting to me. We usually take about two weeks to script, film, and edit most Friday Features and we usually have a big deadline because our features are specific to events going around so it is awesome to have to work under such pressure," stated Colin Hohman, senior.

Behind the camera, YTV is innovative and exciting. "Basically every single day in YTV, a new good memory is made. You can be creative as you want and you can make a video about anything that interests you," continued Jillian Maher, senior. "YTV lets the whole school hear your voice."

YTV excels at informing the student body and providing brief moments from the mundane school day. The significance of YTV is evident in the hard work and dedication YTV puts into every daily announcement and every Friday Feature.

"YTV is important because we do our best to give students information about activities and clubs at York with our announcements, we try to entertain student's every day with our videos, and most importantly we really try to show students and staff how awesome York is," said Hohman.

Maher concluded, "In YTV the possibilities are endless; you can be creative as you want and can make people excited to watch our video." By Ansley Danim

"Our goal is to deliver York's news with professionalism, enthusiasm, and fun. We want you to be as interested and excited for the announcements as much as we are!" Mari Hinchley, senior.

While most people doodle in class, these talented students use a class period everyday to create amazing works of art. AP Art students construct their art work over the summer and the whole school year.

Students must have taken at least four art classes and apply to get into the class. Drawing, 2-D Design, and 3-D Design are the three aspects that make up AP Art. Dylan Williams Rutz, senior, is a 2-D Design student because, as she says, "I love developing photos. You would actually have to think about what you wanted to take pictures of beforehand because you couldn't see the pictures right away."

Every winter and spring, the art department puts on an art show in the commons. The AP Art students get their own display to decorate and show off their art work.

"It was really cool to just have a whole section to show off your work," commented Rutz. The artists also leave AP Art Awards on their favorite works from the other art classes.

Emily Fry, senior, mentioned "It was a lot of fun and it's a great experience. I always have so much fun looking at other people's art."

The students also decorate display cases around the school and have special projects like the annual senior citizen luncheon. Fry explained that designing a display case was "amazing to show off our stuff and express ourselves."

The supportive atmosphere creates the perfect place to be more creative. Allison Smith, senior, said "You get to come to a class where you can sit down and create pieces that no one else is working on."

"If you're a bad artist, don't give up- you'd be surprised at how far you could come."

THANKYOU

Mrs. Walsh (aka Ms. Powell): For being a great adviser and friend. For staying with us when we had to stay after school and always remaining calm when we got worked up (mostly Matt). There probably would have been an injury or two if you weren't within 10 feet, so thanks for indirectly saving us some trips to the doctor. Thank you for letting us make decisions and letting us be creative with the book. Your advice was always so relatable and you always encouraged us to do our best. This book wouldn't have been finished in time if you weren't as dedicated as you were and we greatly appreciate that. Thank you for not only being an adviser, but also being a great friend and someone to look up to. You are fab and we love you!

Matt: Also known as Lady Gaga, you can for sure belt out a ballad. For bringing the sass to the class while being productive. It was a different approach, but by the grace of Cher, Miley, Lana Del Rey, and Gaga, it was super successful. We loved how you brought back the Miley look with the bleached hair, that was definitely a bonus to us staff members. You were a really effective leader, better than we could have asked for. For showing hard work and determination, you handled the stress really well. Thank you for a year full of funny memories, we're going to miss you next year. We hope you enjoy your next adventure in life at the University of Dayton!

Carolyn: For letting us call you Carol. You were a very reliable editor along with a great personality to top it all off. For listening to Matt rant about a lot of things and coming back as Carol 2.0 after winter break with that fabulous new hair-do. You did so much for this book and your creative ideas really helped the book evolve into what it is. You remained calm throughout the process (except for the notorious Apples to Apples incident, "DON'T LOOK AT IT"). You were a great leader, especially your ability to motivate everyone and spell correctly. Can't wait to see what next year has in store for you and the book.

Tommy: Thomas. What a wonderful name. For always looking after the staff members and keeping your cool (because you're cool). #NeverForget when you desperately reached for the camera and didn't realize it was plugged into the computer, what fun. Your ideas were always so insightful and really worked for this unity-themed book. Your dedication to yearbook was apparent (it must run in the family). For dealing with a lot of pressure and keeping Matt in his place, mostly. We anticipate next year will be even better with you on staff. Gooo JNHR!!!

Gloria: For your punny attitude, you never failed to make us laugh with all your witty remarks in your body copies. Because of you, we found out that fantasy is more favored in York than Sci-Fi. We love that survey almost as much as you love "Bohemian Rhapsody". You were always a positive person and cheered up everyone. To be Frank, we're going to miss you next year and hope you have a Glorious time at U of I.

Bridge: BRIDGE!!!!!! For your great attitude and being Ainsley's wingwoman. Your spreads were fabulous and had great headlines, including the notorious "Fairway to Heaven". Your singing to the class was absolutely beautiful and you definitely brought the fun with Heads Up. For soliciting math advice from anyone who would help. Your work ethic was awesome to have on staff and we wish you the best of luck next year in college.

Carley: For being so helpful with your great photography and photoshop skills. It was awesome having someone as talented as you to help us when we needed it. For your willingness to go to events and take photos whenever anyone couldn't. For being the best skier on staff, we're sure you'll be successful in Colorado next year. You were an absolute joy to have on staff and we hope you have a great time at Western State Colorado University.

Patrick: For never being afraid to speak your mind in class, it was very refreshing to have a strong opinion like yours. For being eager to start the year and joining us at yearbook camp. We loved your sass and personality, it will most definitely be missed next year. Your ability to put together a spread improved throughout the year and we thank you for all the hard work you did for us.

Ainsley: For your contagious laugh and bubbly personality, you never failed to make anyone smile. We especially enjoyed that you kept your countdown tradition and your beautiful snowflake making skills were highly appreciated. For your outstanding spreads and your willingness to help anyone out. We loved seeing your baby picture every day as we walked into the room. We hope to see you shine next year, dillydoggammm.

Audrey: For your outstanding spreads and professional attitude, you were always on top of things and very respectful to the class. Your humor and laugh were literally amazing and we hope your beta fish lives for many years to come. You always volunteered to help Mrs. Walsh with various tasks and your positive personality radiated throughout the year. We hope that you enjoyed your year and you're always welcome back in the yearbook lab.

Emily V: For always going the extra mile and making your spreads flawless. We're super jealous that you get to go to some pretty cool concerts throughout the year. Your hair skills are top notch and so are your outfits, you fashionista. Good luck with the book next year and we can't wait to see your ideas shine!

Sam: For being a good example for the new staff members, you showed great leadership skills and you made great improvement throughout the year. You and Jack were a dynamic duo and the music was a plus. Your taste in music is stellar. Your baking skills made some beautiful creations that we all loved. You one of the friendliest kids in the class, seriously your secret handshakes were a great contribution to the YBK room. We are super excited about what next year will bring for you.

Jack: For raising the roof with your sublime music. If a staff member didn't know the lyrics to "Bohemian Rhapsody", they sure do now. For always getting your spreads completed and putting your full effort in all your work. Your final product was always impressive. For being respectful to everyone and showing kindness in all that you do. We can't wait for you to come back next year and keep spinning some sick tracks.

Victor: For being the class clown; there never was a day that went by without you doing something outrageous. Whether it being you bringing a fish for Audrey's secret santa gift or you army crawling on the floor, there was never a dull moment. We are most definitely going to miss your fun and outgoing personality next year.

Emily K: Birthday Emily! Next year, we will bring treats for you. For always getting your spreads done on time and your dedication to the book. For always being friendly to everyone in class and always being courteous to everyone. We are ecstatic that you will be joining again next year and can't wait to see the great additions that you will bring.

Anne: For being the only underclassman on staff, but taking on the most work. For being such a help with naming all the sophomores, we couldn't have done it without you. We knew that we could trust you to perfect a page and you did just that. You were always positive and happy to help anyone out when needed. We are so lucky to have a great addition to the staff in the coming years.

Our unity will serve as a symbol
Of the distinct togetherness we have at this school.
Even though we will be separated one day,
We will never forget the place that brought us together—York.
