Executive Summary

Federal rule requires states to conduct a child care market rate survey every three years as a condition of receiving federal funding from the Child Care and Development Fund (CCDF). Market rate surveys help states establish child care subsidy rates that are high enough to allow low-income working families to enter the child care market and afford equal access to a range of care.

In Colorado, the Office of Early Childhood (OEC) in the Colorado Department of Human Services (CDHS) sets rates for child care subsidies paid out through the Colorado Child Care Assistance Program (CCCAP) across the state. This study identifies the prices charged in different communities for different types of care and age groups across Colorado. This effort to identify child care market prices has two primary goals.

The first goal is to inform the rates reimbursed for child care through the Colorado Child Care Assistance Program (CCCAP) and to provide a benchmark for setting current subsidy rates in order to meet the federal definition of equal access. State legislation enacted in 2018 (HB18-1335) further elevates the importance of the market rate study by requiring the allocation of CCCAP funds to be based on a formula which combines the estimated eligible population and appropriate reimbursement rates.

The second goal relates to the broader mission of the OEC. Families across the state depend on the availability of affordable child care every day, whether or not they qualify for CCCAP. The results of this study provide vital information on the affordability of child care as well as an indication of how well the markets for that care are functioning.

In contrast to the 2015 Colorado Child Care Market Rate Study, which utilized a complex stratified sampling methodology in an attempt to derive representative samples for each county and statewide that minimized collection activity, this study collected data in two phases. The first was a census - an attempt to collect responses from all providers. The second was a targeted follow-up in all areas that lacked sufficient representation after the initial census attempt. After validating the data, the study retained responses from 2,524 of 5,040 providers for an overall response rate of 50.1 percent of the total universe of providers. We found child care centers and family child care homes to be most the most responsive providers, with response rates of 61 percent and 56 percent, respectively. Meanwhile, school age child care and preschool providers had overall response rates below 30 percent.

While this response rate is lower than the 2015 Market Rate Survey (69%), it includes substantially more data – 2,524 responses in 2017 compared to the 1,536 collected in 2015. The difference in the rate is an artifact of the difference between a sample and a census (with additional targeted follow-up) where the number attempted to reach is greater in the census approach.

Statewide child care market rates have increased faster than the rate of inflation.

Between 2015 and 2017, the statewide average cost of living increased by 2.3 percent, equivalent to an annualized rate of inflation equal to 1.14 percent. The cost of living for some counties increased far above or far below this statewide average.

In all but one combination of provider type and age group, the increase to the price of child care has exceeded the statewide average cost of living.

Dealing with small markets and data gaps.

Many counties do not have enough providers in particular markets to generate a market distribution (defined here as at least five providers in each county/type/age combination) and some do not have enough responses. For these markets, generating a distribution requires a method to fill the gaps.

This study provides three such methods. The first follows the 2015 Market Rate Study by using broad cost of living clusters as a way to estimate missing data. This has technical limitations that result in estimates for some counties that may inaccurately portray the actual market conditions for child care.

The second retains the use of COLI, but attempts to address those shortcomings with micro-clusters. Finally, as recommended by the previous market rate study, the third approach considers proximity as measured by travel time. State-level prices at 75th percentile for fulltime daily care in 2017.*

Child Care Centers

		% Change
Age Group	Price	from 2015
0-18 months	$69.00	3.9%
18-36 months	$63.70	6.9%
36 months to 6 years	$54.00	5.4%
6-12 years	$49.00	2.2%

Family Child Care Homes

		% Change
Age Group	Price	from 2015
0-24 months	$46.15	13.4%
24 months to 6 years	$45.00	16.4%
6-12 years	$40.00	20.0%

School Age Child Care
Age Group Price from 2015
6-12 years	$45.00	7.1%
Prescho	Preschool (half-day)
Age Group Price from 2015
2 ½ - 7 years	$23.08	7.5%

*Full rate tables for each methodology are presented in the Appendix.

Each of these methods has strengths and weaknesses, though in the case of counties with a limited natural supply of child care services, the travel time methodology may more accurately reflect the reality of consumers within the market being forced to leave their county of residence to find care for their children. However, future efforts should continue to refine existing methods and consider the development of new methods to incrementally improve our description of market prices.

Introduction

Federal rule requires states conduct a child care market rate survey every three years as a condition of receiving federal funding from the Child Care and Development Fund (CCDF). Market rate surveys help states establish child care subsidy rates that are high enough to allow low-income working families to enter the child care market and afford equal access to a range of care.

In Colorado, the Office of Early Childhood (OEC) in the Colorado Department of Human Services (CDHS) establishes rates for child care subsidies across the state. This study identifies the prices charged in different places for different types of care and age groups across Colorado. This effort to identify child care market prices has two primary goals.

The first goal is to inform the rates reimbursed for child care through the Colorado Child Care Assistance Program (CCCAP) and to provide a benchmark against which to measure the extent current subsidy rates meet the federal definition of equal access. State legislation enacted in 2018 (HB18-1335) further elevates the importance of the market rate study by requiring the allocation of CCCAP funds to be based on a formula which combines the estimated eligible population and appropriate reimbursement rates.

The second goal relates to the broader mission of the OEC. Families across the state depend on the availability of affordable child care every day, whether or not they qualify for CCCAP. The results of this study provide vital information on the affordability of child care as well as an indication of how well the markets for that care are functioning.

This study presents finding from a statewide survey of Colorado licensed child care providers.

Federal Requirements

Federal regulations require lead agencies to provide reimbursement rates that provide family's equal access to child care comparable to the care available to the general population. Although equal access to child care is multi-faceted – such as transportation, geographic location, and quality – the federal definition of equal access relies heavily on payment rates. Payment rates are considered within the context of market conditions such that rates are set at a level sufficient to provide access to the full range of child care services, including high-quality child care. Specifically, federal guidance states that "[i]n establishing payment rates we suggest a benchmark for States to consider. Payments established at least at the 75th percentile of the market would be regarded as equal access."

Federal rule further requires states to consider: (1) choice of the full range of providers, including the extent to which child care providers participate in the CCDF subsidy system; (2) adequate payment rates, based on the most recent market rate survey or alternative methodology; (3) base payment rates that enable child care providers to meet the health, safety, quality, and staffing requirements in the rule; (4) the cost of higher-quality child care, including how payment rates for higher-quality care relate to the estimated cost of that care; (5) affordable co-payments, a rationale for the Lead Agency's policy on whether child care providers may charge additional amounts to families above the required family co-payment (informed by data collected by the State and with regard to a working family's ability to pay such mandatory fees without restricting access to care they would otherwise access taking into consideration the family co-payment, payment rate for the provider, and the cost of care), and the extent to which CCDF providers charge such amounts; (6) payment practices that support equal access to a range of providers; and (7) how and on what factors the Lead Agency differentiates payment rates<sup>1</sup>

Federal regulation also requires that states consider the cost of higher-quality child care when setting payment rates. In Colorado, tiered payment rates are used to address equal access to high quality care for families receiving subsidies. The State has adopted the federal benchmark of the 75th percentile to reimburse child care providers operating at the highest levels of quality, Levels 4 and 5 in the state's quality rating and improvement system (Colorado Shines), with lower percentile rates for less-highly-rated providers. This tiered rate structure is intended to incentivize quality child care providers to accept children receiving the CCCAP subsidy as well as encourage lower quality child care providers to improve their quality, thereby supporting equal access to high quality across the state.

CCCAP Legislation

Endorsed by the Joint Budget Committee and signed into law in June 2018, House Bill 18-1335 (HB18-1335) included many reforms to CCCAP, both in its funding model and in its administration. Regarding the ongoing effort to study child care market rates, this legislation includes two important components relevant to the Market Rate Study (MRS). First, HB18-1335 makes the MRS central to the CCCAP allocation model by requiring the allocation be based on the appropriate reimbursement rate as determined by the study and the estimated eligible population. Second, HB18-1335 requires the Department to conduct a market rate study every year that accounts for quality of care, age, and type of care for each county. Previously, this study was only required every two years.

Colorado Child Care Assistance Program (CCCAP)

The Colorado Child Care Assistance Program (CCCAP) provides child care assistance to families who are working, searching for employment, or are in training programs. Funding through CCCAP is intended to support low-income families' access to stable, high-quality child care while working to achieve self-sufficiency through these activities. Families should be free to choose the child care setting and schedule that is best for their child and their needs.

In Colorado, the state oversees the counties, who administer the CCCAP program. Counties determine a family's eligibility based on their annual income as well as qualifying activities. Families may also be eligible if they are:

- a) Enrolled in the Colorado Works Program
- b) Eligible for Child Welfare Child Care
- c) Food Stamp recipient enrolled in Employment First Program

Eligibility for CCCAP is re-assessed annually and with any changes in gross income. Once in CCCAP, families remain eligible unless their household income exceeds 85% of the state median income or they are no longer in an eligible activity, such as work or school.

Survey Methodology

The survey methodology is presented with the following structure:

Survey Design: This section details the rationale for including certain features of interest the Department sought to measure through the 2017 survey, with emphasis placed on changes from the 2015 survey. Appendix A contains the final questionnaires used in the survey.

Survey Collection: The next section details the population of providers selected for inclusion in the survey and how the survey was administered. Additionally, we describe the process of cleaning of survey responses, and response rates are reported.

Survey Design

The survey was designed to capture data across three market attributes which combine to form distinct child care markets throughout Colorado: (1) geography, (2) provider type, and (3) child age. Additionally a fourth attribute, (4) when care is provided, was collected to aid in standardizing rates into a full-time daily rate. Each of these is addressed below.

Collection of prices by geography

Child care is a place-based service. That is, where a provider is located is essential to the nature of the service itself. Families generally prefer care near their home, their workplace, or another location they tend to frequent. Additionally, the price of care varies by location and is an important factor in the nature of child care markets. The market rate survey collected precise location data, which allows the data to be analyzed by a variety of geographies; however, the default geography is county because CCCAP is administered by counties.

Collection of prices by provider type

The price of child care varies by the type of provider, and as such the market rate survey collected data by type with one survey prepared for each of the four provider types covered by this study – Child Care Centers, Family Child Care Homes, Preschools, and School-Aged Care Centers (SACCs).

Collection of prices by age group

As recommended by the HB14-1317 task force, the 2017 market rate survey reduced the number of age groups to more closely align with the age ranges in classrooms allowed by Child Care Licensing. Table 1 illustrates the categories for data collection.

Child Care Centers	Family Child Care Homes	School Age Child Care	Preschools
0-18 months	0-24 months	6-12 years	30 months to 7 years
18-36 months	24 months to 6 years	Before School
36 months to 6 years	6-12 years	After School
6-12 years	Before School
Before School	After School
After School

Table 1. 2017 MRS Age Groups by Provider Type

To account for pricing schedules that still did not conform to these simplified categories, the survey allowed respondents to specify the maximum, minimum, and typical rates within each age group and to provide additional narrative for context.

Collection of full-time daily prices (when care is provided)

The 2017 Colorado Child Care Market Rate Study continued the practice from the 2015 study of requesting full-time rates from providers. Additionally, the survey allowed providers to report rates conforming to the frequency of charges a provider imposes (hourly, daily, weekly, monthly, or annually).

To address the comparability of this full-time rate across providers with similar charge frequencies (weekly, monthly, or annually), the survey also requested the number of days per week providers typically offered care and whether care was provided throughout the full year, the school year only, or the summer only. How these data were used to convert all rates to effective daily rates is covered in a further section of this report. The resulting full-time rates can then be converted to part-time equivalents using an accepted ratio.

Accounting for discounted rates

Rates often vary for particular providers even within age groups due to discounts provided for things such as sibling discounts, employee discounts, and tuition scholarships. To account for this, the survey requested minimum, maximum, and typical rates charged for each age group.

Survey Collection

Study Population

In contrast to the 2015 Colorado Child Care Market Rate Study, which utilized a stratified sampling methodology to derive representative samples for each county and statewide that minimized collection activity, this survey attempted a census followed by targeted outreach to fill the gaps where there was insufficient responses to be representative at the provider type/county level. As such, the sampling frame for the 2017 effort was the entire population, which consisted of the counts provided in Table 2 below.

Provider Type	Potential Providers
Child Care Center	1464
Family Child Care Home	2023
School Age Child Care	982
Preschool	571

Table 2. Provider Population by Type During Sample Period

Collection Methodology

The rate data derived from this study are based on respondent's self-reported rates via a survey made available to all licensed child care providers. This survey was administered via two modes:

- > Web-based Survey A web based survey was made available to all providers in three ways:
  - Static Links Made Available on Portals The survey was announced in several different online portals commonly accessed by providers (such as the Office of Early Childhood's website) along with links to the survey. This allowed providers engaged with the Office for other purposes to take the survey as part of that engagement.
  - Emailed Link All providers for whom OEC had an email address also received a customized email with a link to the appropriate survey type(s) based on their license. Providers who did not respond to the survey received up to two additional email solicitations, with additional emails only going to those who had not yet responded to the survey.
  - Self-Entry into Spreadsheet The survey allowed individual entities with multiple licenses to provide answers for each of their licenses separately, though for entities with many licenses this could be an administrative burden. As such, providers with multiple licenses under a single fiscal agent were given the opportunity to enter their data directly into a spreadsheet to ease that administrative burden.
- Live Phone Call All providers who did not answer the online survey received at least three phone calls from a contractor who entered these data into the same survey form available online. Providers who answered the phone, but were not able to respond to the survey at the time were given the opportunity to schedule a time that worked for them.

These data were collected in two phases:

- Phase I Census All providers for which the OEC has email address received at up to three emails with an invitation and link to the survey. Providers only received these emails if they had not yet responded to the survey through the static links or from prior email solicitations. Then all providers that had not answered the survey as part of this initial effort were called up-to three times by contracted staff. Providers were only called if they had not yet responded to the survey.
- Phase II Targeted Outreach At the end of Phase I, 246 providers operated by businesses holding a single license had not answered or opted out of the survey. Additional efforts were made to contact specific providers in county/type/age combinations that did not have enough responses to be representative. Further, batch responses were needed from 64 governing bodies – businesses or school districts operating with multiple licenses – comprising another 693 licenses. Additional efforts were also made to contact each of these 64 governing bodies.

Data Cleaning

Efforts to clean and format data from the collected responses into a consistent form generally fell into three categories: (1) validation of provider identity and characteristics; (2) analysis of outliers; and (3) conversion to daily rates.

Validation of Known Provider Identity and Characteristics

The first step in data cleaning involved matching responses to license records in the OEC file system, which is the source data for county location, licensed capacity, quality rating, and other provider characteristics. This survey design affords multiple criteria by which a response can be cross-referenced to a licensed provider, such as license number, business name, business address, telephone number, and email address.

Survey responses without a verifiable license record or from providers that were not in operation until sometime after the period of interest for the study were excluded from the study's results.

Outlier Analysis

After responses had been matched to an existing license, outliers in the data set were assessed for validity across the axes of provider type, age group, and charge frequency. Each outlier more than 50 percent outside the mean for the group was evaluated for potential miscoding of the rate or the charge frequency.

In this process, secondary verification of rates was occasionally necessary, predominantly by accessing publically-available documents through the provider website, to disambiguate responses and ensure accurate adjustment of rates and charge frequency.

The most frequent causes of outliers appeared to come from incorrect coding of the charge frequency (e.g. specifying "monthly" frequency but entering daily rates) or entering rates to the level of cents instead of the nearest dollar.<sup>2</sup> Results were modified when reasonable inferences could be made.

Rate Conversion

As mentioned previously, providers were allowed to report rates conforming to their preferred charge frequency. These rates were converted into daily rates as detailed in Table 3. In the case of hourly charge frequencies, rates were scaled up with uniform assumptions about the length of a full-time service day. With respect to weekly, monthly, and annual rates, uniform assumptions about the number of days in a service/charge period were combined with other self-reported data such as the number of days per week providers typically offered care, whether care extended into the summer months, and an open-ended response providing context on their schedules. The assumptions used for these calculations are detailed in Table 3.

&lt;sup>2</sup> The survey field for rates did not allow decimal entry. For example, if a respondent were to try to enter cents for a $48.50 daily rate, the response would display as $4850 instead.

Frequency	Conversion Method	Assumptions
Hourly	(Hourly Price) x (Daily Hours of Care)	Assume: - 9 hours per full-time day - 1.5 hours per Before School - 3 hours per After School
Daily	No conversion necessary.	None
Weekly	(Weekly Price) ÷ (Service Days per Week)	None
Monthly	[(Monthly Price) x (12 months)] ÷ [(52 weeks) * (Service Days per Week)]	None
Annual	[Annual Price] ÷ [(Weeks per Year) x (Service Days per Week)]	Assume 37-week school year*. Assume remainder of weeks for Summer Only schedules.

 Table 3. Rate Conversion Assumptions

* based on NCES school-year estimates of an average of 171 instructional days for Colorado public schools with three weeks of breaks.

Irreconcilable Responses

Responses that could not be validated to specific provider or data that could not otherwise be reconciled were treated as non-responses and excluded from further analysis. After these exclusions, the study retained responses from 2,524 of 5,040 providers.

Response Rates

Of the 2,524 total responses, eighty reported not charging tuition. These programs largely consisted of preschools and child care centers offering Head Start services or other publicly subsidized care. Consistent with the 2015 study, these providers are not included in either the rate data or in calculating the response rates. Response rates by provider type and quality rating (QRIS) are included in Table 4, below.

Provider Type	QRIS Rating	Responses	Providers	Response Rate
Child Care Center	Overall	900	1464	61%
Child Care Center	Level 1	237	449	53%
Child Care Center	Level 2	249	409	61%
Child Care Center	Level 3	107	150	71%
Child Care Center	Level 4	287	430	67%
Child Care Center	Level 5	20	26	77%
Family Child Care Home	Overall	1134	2023	56%

Preschool	Level 1	32	214	15%
Preschool	Level 2	76	193	39%
Preschool	Level 3	5	16	31%
Preschool	Level 4	29	129	22%
Preschool	Level 5	2	19	11%

Table 4. Response Rates by Provider Type and Quality Rating

Of the remaining sample, we found child care centers and family child care homes to be most the most responsive providers, with overall response rates of 61 percent and 56 percent, respectively. Meanwhile, school age child care and preschool providers had overall response rates below 30 percent.

This response rate is lower than the 2015 Market Rate Survey (69%) but includes substantially more data – 2,524 responses in 2017 compared to the 1,536 collected in 2015 (out of the 2,723 in the 2015 sample). The difference in the rate is an artifact of the difference between a sample and a census (with additional targeted follow-up) where the number attempted to reach is greater in the census approach.

Notably, response rate appears to display positive correlation with quality rating indicating potential selection bias in the sample, with higher-rated providers responding at a higher rate than lower-rated providers. This correlation might be expected because quality rating could be considered a proxy for engagement in the state system; a provider that is more likely to be engaged would be more likely to respond to a survey.

One concern could be that selection bias in the responses toward higher-quality providers might bias the distribution of rates within a market. This concern depends on a relationship existing between quality ratings and market price, with the assumption being that a higher-quality rating is more costly. However, this first ignores the extent to which that cost, instead of being passed onto the consumer, might be borne by the business through some other mechanism, such as grant funding. Secondly, until the quality rating system matures, the relatively small number of highly-rated providers might not bias results to a substantial degree.

Survey Results

The survey results for the 2017 Colorado Child Care Market Rate Study are presented with the following structure:

Definition of the Market: Markets represent complex interactions between buyers and sellers of a good or service that can transcend commonly defined boundaries. That is, markets don't tend to respect county boundaries, zip codes, census blocks or any of the other geographic classifications available to us. This section explains the considerations when establishing a definition of the market and the rationale for presenting those market rates at the level of counties.

Cost of Living Index: The next section details the calculation and use of county-level cost of living estimates for 2017. To assess the results of the 2017 market rate survey, we will not only compare those results to the 2015 estimated market rates but also to the rate of change in county-level cost of living. This study will also use these cost of living index (COLI) estimates in some of the methods addressing gaps in data.

Market Prices: The final section of this chapter presents base market rates at the state and county levels differentiated by type of provider and the age group served.

Definition of the Market

Markets represent complex interactions between buyers and sellers and as such do not have universal definitions or boundaries. However, one of the primary uses of these data is to inform the State-determined rates set by the State for CCCAP, which is county administered. As such, this study is obligated to identify market rates at the county-level, even though these are political boundaries that do not neatly contain child care markets.

This study estimates market rates as a distribution of market prices. This is important for two reasons. First, the Federal requirement to demonstrate equal access relies on market price percentiles. Second, these estimates should reflect with reasonable probability the general state of the market.

Establishing a distribution of market rates depends upon having sufficient data points within each market. For the purposes of this study, five responses were considered the minimum sufficient level to estimate the shape of the distribution, and the county-level results presented in this section pertain only to those counties with five or more responses for the given combination of provider type and age group. In the next section, three methodologies are presented which estimate market rate distributions for counties with gaps in their data.

2017 Cost of Living Index

This study contextualizes the results of the 2017 market rate survey by comparing them to the 2015 estimated market rates and to the rate of change in county-level cost of living.

Calculation of COLI

Consistent with the 2015 Colorado Child Care Market Rate Study, this study considers COLI estimates based on the biennial study of school district cost of living published by the Legislative Council pursuant to statutory requirements.<sup>3</sup> In consultation with the State Demography Office, CDHS staff produced the composite COLI estimates used in this report using a similar methodology to the methodology used in the 2015 study though with more up-to-date data. The 2015 study used 2013 COLI estimates for its analysis, while this report uses cost of living data from the same year market prices were collected, 2017. A full methodology is detailed in Appendix C, Cost of Living Index Methodology.

Change in COLI from 2015

Unlike a traditional consumer price index (CPI) deflator, which references the price level in a given year relative to some other base year, the COLI for a given year is always indexed to the statewide average cost of living in that year, which has a value of 100. In other words, the statewide price level might have increased between 2015 and 2017, but the statewide COLI would still be 100 in both years.

Counties with costs of living more expensive than the state average will have COLIs greater than 100, and those with less expensive costs of living will have COLIs less than 100. However, change in a county's COLI between 2015 and 2017 can only tell us how a county's cost of living has changed relative to the change in the statewide cost of living. To describe the rate of change in each county's price level, then, we need more than the 2015 and 2017 COLIs; we need the price of the basket of goods used to calculate that COLI in each year.

Table 5 on the following page includes the composite price of the basket of goods for each year upon which the COLI is based, and an estimate of the two-year rate of inflation on those goods between 2015 and 2017.

Between 2015 and 2017, the statewide average cost of living increased by 2.3 percent, equivalent to an annualized rate of inflation equal to 1.14 percent. The five counties with the highest two-year percent change in their cost of living were San Juan (5.1%), Montezuma (4.6%), Phillips (4.5%), Denver (4.0%), and Summit (3.8%) counties. Mesa (-1.2%), Logan (-1.1%), Crowley (-0.4%), Otero (-0.2%), and Gilpin (-0.1%) comprised the five counties with the least growth in their cost of living. Deviation in the rate of change for cost of living from the statewide average does not appear to be correlated along any discernable geographic lines.

Market Prices

Statewide prices

Market prices for the state overall are discussed here, highlighting key findings. The market prices listed here are base full-time daily rates, not including discounts or fees. Comparisons are made between the prices for care at the 75th percentile using provider-level estimates. The 2017 results provided below compare the change within provider type between 2015<sup>4</sup> and 2017.

Child Care Centers

Full-time daily rates for child care centers exceeded the statewide two-year rate of inflation in almost all age categories, with only care for school-aged children increasing roughly at that mark (2.2%). We find the largest increases to child care center rates within the 18-36 month and the 36-month to 6 years age groups, 6.9 percent and 5.4 percent respectively.

Table 6. State-level prices for full-time daily care: Child Care Centers

Family Child Care Homes

Full-time daily rates for family child care homes increased substantially more than the statewide rate of inflation across all age categories. As noted in the 2015 study, prices between age groups for family child care homes were already less stratified by age than for child care centers, and the accelerated price growth over the past two years has compressed these age differentials even further, now with only a 15 percent difference between the daily rates for the youngest and oldest age groups.

The sharp decline in the number of family child care homes offers one potential explanation for the larger increases to prices within this provider type when compared to child care centers. From July 2015 to July 2017 the number of homes dropped by 12.7%, while the number of centers increased slightly (by 0.4%). This decrease is part of a long term downward trend in the number of licensed child care homes which have dropped by 45.1% from July 2010 to July 2018.

Although increases to child care center licensed capacity has more than kept pace with the capacity lost by family child care home closures,<sup>5</sup> the dynamics of supply within this provider type lend support to two possible hypotheses. First, prevailing cost structures might be unsustainable for providers charging low prices; through a combination of those providers either closing or raising their prices, the distribution of rates will shift upward more than proportionately. Another hypothesis follows from the degree of price-setting power family home providers could exercise with reduced competition; when their competitors close, remaining providers might be able to raise their rates without fear of losing clients.

Preschools

Daily rates for preschools – which are by definition part-time based on state regulations – increased at more than three times the statewide two-year rate of inflation. Consistent with the 2015 study, providers having no established rates (i.e. Head Start programs, participants in DPP or CPP, grant recipients, etc.) were not included in establishing market rates. While these estimates reflect the full price of preschool services obtained by private-pay families, it remains important to recognize the expanded access many other families have through partially- or fully-subsidized programs.

Before and After School

Validation efforts suggest that the data for before and after school care collected by the 2017 Market Rate Study do not accurately reflect this particular market segment, which appears to be an artifact of the way the question was structured in the survey. Specifically the survey separately asked for before-school rates and after-school rates, without asking for combined before-and-after school rates; combined rates are typically discounted some level below the sum of the two individual rates. However, open-ended questions suggest that some providers used the maximum field in the minimum-maximum-typical range block to give a combined before-and-after school rate without apportioning between the morning or afternoon sessions. Additionally, based on some open-ended responses, it is also unclear the extent to which Center- and Home-licensed providers reported on the price of wraparound services provided to younger-than-school-aged children rather than the price of before- and after-school care for school-aged children. While the former is certainly important in deriving a true market rate for care, these prices might have diluted the accuracy of estimating the latter if the two were conflated in survey responses.

As such, rather than present data that appears to not reliably reflect these particular markets, this study provides estimated market prices for before and after school by applying the Cost of Living Index (COLI) for each county as an inflation metric to the 2015 Market Rate Survey data. These data are presented in Table 10 below.

		2017 R		2015 Market Rate Survey	2015 to 2017

* Due to the issues with the before and after school data collected in 2017 described above, these rates are generated by applying the Cost of Living Index (COLI) as an inflation metric to the 2015 rates. For the state as a whole, this metric is 2.3%.

Prices by County

Market prices for each county are presented in Appendix E. This appendix organizes its contents into individual tables for each provider type. Each table presents its data grouped first by county (alphabetically), then by age group, and finally by percentiles within each age group. The market rate estimates from the current survey are provided across those groupings.

The market prices listed are base prices, not including discounts or fees. As mentioned previously, prices in this appendix will be missing only when: (1) no licensed child care providers exist in the county; (2) no licensed child care providers are eligible for the study in the county; or (3) fewer than five licensed child care providers responded to the survey. Readers are encouraged to consult Appendix B provides insight into the sample size used to derive these estimates.

Interpolated prices for before and after school care are provided in Appendix H. These rates are by applying the Cost of Living Index (COLI) for each county as an inflation metric to the 2015 Market Rate Survey data.

Addressing Gaps in County-Level Data

This chapter of the 2017 Colorado Child Care Market Rate Study is presented with the following structure:

Understanding Response Gaps: This section discusses the two reasons particular markets have insufficient data at the county level and quantifies these gaps.

Cost of Living Clusters: This section details the methodology used by the 2015 Colorado Child Care Market Rate Study to derive estimates for market rates by clustering counties using the Cost of Living Index (COLI). Potential issues with the use of this methodology are then presented.

COLI Micro Clusters: Based on the technical issues presented in the previous section on the use of broad COLI clusters, this section presents an alternative methodology based on localized micro clusters defined by county cost of living. Limitations of the methodology are also discussed.

Travel Time: Recognizing that child care is a location-based service and travel time by a potential client to and from the location represents factor that helps to define the market area, this section explores a methodology based on travel time to care providers. Market rates are presented and limitations of the methodology are discussed.

Comparing Methodologies: This section proposes several ways through which these competing methodologies can be compared.

Lessons Learned: The final section of this chapter highlights various lessons learned through the 2017 survey process. These lessons include some suggestions for potentially improving the market rate survey in future years.

Understanding Response Gaps

Implications of Response Gaps

Establishing a distribution of market rates depends upon having sufficient data points, which we have defined as five or more responses, within each market. The two primary reasons a county might have fewer than five responses are important to understand when addressing potential deficiencies in the data as each holds different implications related to market definition.

First, a county might have more than five licensed providers of a certain type serving a certain age group, but an insufficient number of those providers responded to the survey. In this case, there is some number of providers we know to be active in the market for which we would like to accurately estimate their actual market prices. The market exists even if the data are incomplete.

The second case is that of counties with fewer than five licensed providers in the market. In these instances, we are not concerned with what actually exists because the samples are too small to generate a distribution. For these cases our concern is what could be supported by the small market conditions. Here we are asked to imagine a distribution of market prices that does not exist. In the extreme example of this case – where there are no providers at all – we should also contemplate how this hypothetical market would be shaped by the ways in which local demand is potentially being met in the absence of a local market.

Quantifying Response Gaps

We find that many markets (county/type/age combinations) do not have five or more providers from which a complete market distribution can be derived. Table 11 below shows the aggregate number of counties experiencing a response gap for each rate category<sup>6</sup> (county/type/age combination) and whether that gap is driven by a natural lack of providers (fewer than five exist) or insufficient responses.

		Reason for	Missing Data	# of Counties
Provider Type	Age Group	Fewer than Five Exist	Not Enough Responses	Missing Data Either Type
CENTER	0-18 months	26	20	46
CENTER	18-36 months	26	19	45
CENTER	NTER 36 months to 6 years		13	39
CENTER	6-12 years	26	25	51
HOME	0-24 months	26	8	34
HOME	24 months to 6 years	26	7	33
HOME	6-12 years	26	12	38
SCHOOL	6-12 years	45	8	53
PRESCHOOL	Preschool	51	4	55

Table 11. Number of Counties with Fewer than Five Responses by Provider Type & Age

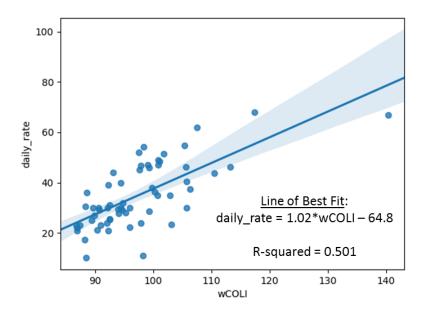

Though both circumstances occur, the latter is more common as many small counties simply do not have enough providers to establish a distribution for particular markets. Within individual provider type categories, we find that family child care homes had the most coverage of responses across all age groups overall. On the opposite end of the spectrum, only 14 percent of counties have sufficient responses from the preschool provider type. Additionally, school-aged age groups from both child care centers and SACCs also have very little coverage.

Cost of Living Clusters

Following the recommendation of the 2008 Performance Audit of the Colorado Child Care Assistance Program conducted by the State Auditor, the 2015 study introduced a simple and transparent method of clustering based on cost of living. In support of this choice, the 2015 study also presented findings of "significant positive correlation between COLI and 1) full-time prices for child care centers [...], 2) full-time prices for family home providers [...], and 3) full-time prices for preschools [...]."

In confirmation of those earlier findings, this study also finds support for the relationship between median market price and county COLI as illustrated in Figure 1.

In practice, COLI clusters attempt to leverage this relationship using the following logic: if provider rates are correlated with the COLI, results from a group of counties with similar COLIs can be used to estimate the rates of a county with insufficient survey responses within the group. Though there is some merit in this logic, there are some weaknesses to this approach, which is discussed later.

Defining COLI Clusters

The 2017 Colorado Child Care Market Rate Study employs the same methodology as the 2015 study in defining COLI clusters. That methodology, which was developed by the Colorado State Demography Office, categorizes county-level COLI values into the following intervals above and below the statewide average COLI of 100:

- Very High: County COLI greater than 110.
- High: County COLI between 105 and 110.
- Mid-Range: County COLI between 95 and 105.
- Low: County COLI between 90 and 95.
- Very Low: County COLI less than 90.

Change in Cluster Assignment from 2015

The distribution of counties by cluster based on their 2017 COLI is presented in Table 12. This table illustrates some notable trends in county-level prices between cluster assignment in the 2015 study (based on 2013 COLIs) and this study (based on 2017 COLIs).

	2015 Assignments		2017 Assignments
COLI Cluster	N %		Ν	%
Very Low	18	28.1%	10	15.6%
Low	16	25.0%	18	28.1%
Mid-Range	22	34.4%	24	37.5%
High	4	6.3%	7	10.9%
Very High	4	6.3%	5	7.8%

Table 12: Number of Counties by Cluster, 2015 to 2017

While the 2015 assignment was characterized by heavy concentration of counties within the "Low" and "Very Low" cost of living categories, there appears to have been a moderate migration of counties to higher cost of living clusters. Approximately 44 percent fewer counties fell within the "Very Low" cost of living category compared to 2015. Meanwhile, the number of counties within "Low", "Mid-Range", and "High" cost of living clusters has increased.

		2017 COLI Cluster
		Very Low	Low	Mid-range	High	Very High

	Very High				1	3

Table 13: Cluster Migration between 2015 and 2017

The change in COLI cluster assignment between 2015 and 2017 by county can be found in a table within Appendix F.

Limitations of COLI Clusters

Grouping counties into COLI clusters may provide an accurate account of the cluster, but the cluster does not necessarily provide an accurate account of the individual counties contained within it.<sup>7</sup> Figure 2

&lt;sup>7</sup> With this approach we arrive at the joint distribution of the COLI cluster through an additive process of the individual county-level distributions, which has implications to the characteristics of the joint distribution related to its coefficient of variation. Coefficient of variation is a measure of relative variability expressed as the ratio of the standard deviation of a distribution to its mean. Among other uses, the coefficient of variation can describe how far away each percentile of a distribution is from the 50th percentile. When we add together many individual distributions, each centered on a median that is strongly correlated to some other variable (i.e. COLI) that varies below illustrates this problem. Suppose that County A, County B, and County C are all grouped together into a common COLI cluster with other counties not pictured, but each county has its own distribution of prices. If the set of county COLI values within a cluster is normally distributed<sup>8</sup>, the joint cluster distribution of market prices might look like the orange curve below.

We can then ask ourselves, if the survey responses were missing for any one of the component counties above, how well they are represented by the distribution of the cluster. In this illustration, the answer is almost never. Indeed, even when a county median falls exactly at the median of the cluster distribution, the non-median percentiles would not be accurately reflected in the cluster distribution. In the example above, we see this illustrated by the tails of the cluster extending well beyond the tails of County B.

As another way to consider this issue, recall that in Figure 1, the market rates above the median for the center-based care of 3-5 year olds increase about $1 for each one point rise in a county's COLI. Consider too that the COLI intervals for three of the five cluster definitions have ranges of 10 points or greater (Very Low, Mid-Range, Very High). Together, these features imply a potential spread of $10 or more in median market price between counties at opposite extremes within the same COLI cluster. In other words, counties that differ by relatively large amounts may end up with the same cluster rate – the rates are accurate for the cluster, but do not necessarily represent individual counties within the cluster well.

COLI Micro Clusters

With consideration to the limitations of large COLI cluster groups, this study considered an alternative methodology utilizing the same data and following the same logic (if provider rates are correlated with between the individual components, the joint distribution will likely exhibit a larger coefficient of variation than its component distributions.

&lt;sup>8</sup> County COLI values within clusters, except for the "Very High" cluster, actually display something closer to a uniform distribution, not a normal distribution. However, the core principle demonstrated through this illustrative example still holds true albeit with a more plateau-shaped (i.e. flatter top) joint distribution.

the COLI, results from counties with similar COLIs can be used to estimate the rates of a county with insufficient survey responses), but without the limitations associated with large COLI cluster groups. Instead of several large clusters, this approach develops many "micro-clusters" by borrowing the set of counties with fully-formed market rate distributions and COLIs nearest to the low-response county.

Figure 3 above illustrates this approach. Consider the distribution of market prices for County A, County B, and County C, where the COLI for County B is somewhere between the COLI for County A and County C. Now, suppose County B had insufficient responses for an estimate of its market prices, but County A and County C had sufficient data. County B's market prices are then estimated by taking a weighted average of County A and County C distributions. This is done for all county/type/age combinations with insufficient data. It's important to note that the comparison counties used will change depending on the particular combination of data being imputed.

Methodology

While the methodology for calculating micro cluster estimates is explained in more detail in Appendix F, the calculation involves the following general steps for each combination of provider type and age group:

- 1) Calculate market rate distributions for all counties with more than five survey responses.
- 2) Assign the corresponding COLI value of each county to these distributions.
- 3) For each low-response county, identify:
  - a. The distribution with the nearest COLI greater than the low-response COLI; and
  - b. The distribution with the nearest COLI less than the low-response COLI.
- 4) The market rate distribution is defined as the weighted average across each percentile level of the neighboring distributions that is inversely proportionate to the difference between the low-response COLI and its COLI neighbors.

Limitations of Micro Clusters

Though COLI micro clusters resolve some of the problems with the use of large COLI cluster groups, this alternative introduces a new limitation. Five responses may provide a sufficient minimum sample to estimate the distribution of rates within a market, but more samples paint a more complete picture. Because of this, neighboring market rate distributions for some counties might not be considered as robust as others based on the number of responses that define the neighboring distributions.

Additionally, while this approach reduces the distance between the counties with data and the counties being estimated from those data, it does not eliminate that distance. In some cases, the nearest full distribution of market prices may be closer than it would have been in a cluster, but ultimately not all that close. This methodology attempts to address this issue through its weighted average adjustment, but edge cases for counties with the absolute highest or lowest COLI are still problematic.

Future market rate studies may wish to explore these limitations. A possible refinement might:

- 1) Assign a COLI value to individual survey responses corresponding to the county in which the provider is located.
- 2) For any county with fewer than five responses:
  - a. Consider all survey responses with COLIs that fall within a uniform range around the low-response county (potentially plus or minus 2-3 COLI points) as being within sample.
  - b. Apply an adjustment factor to in-sample responses reflecting empirically-defined relationships between COLI and market prices.
  - c. Estimate the distribution for the resulting adjusted market rates.

Such a refinement would maximize the existing data points that could be used by reducing the reliance on full distributions while also ensuring that neighboring points have more similar COLIs.

Travel Time

The 2015 Colorado Child Care Market Rate Study suggested that "[i]n future market rate studies, the state may wish to explore other geographic units – such as zip code and physical proximity – to explore alternative child care submarkets," and this study provides one such alternative. However, given the unique geographic characteristics of Colorado – with its mountainous landscape posing natural barriers between locations that would seem nearby when only considering straight-line distance – this study used estimated travel time between child care providers and a representative point within a county instead of focusing on physical proximity.

Consulting the literature review and summary of the Design Phase: National Study of Child Care Supply and Demand – 2010, a document prepared for the federal Administration for Children and Families,<sup>9</sup> points to academic literature that support the concept that transportation in child care markets acts as both a barrier and a facilitator on the provision of child care services. The literature review cites estimates suggesting that nationwide, parents of young children under the age of five travel an additional 5-6 miles each day – equivalent to an average of 65 minutes commuting for the child – to transport their children to and from child care.<sup>10</sup> The role of time and distance in accessing markets generally is also broadly documented in economic literature on markets and prices with distance as measured through travel time being applied in numerous contexts (such as hedonic pricing and non-market valuation of public goods).

Methodology

While the methodology for calculating travel time-based estimates is explained in more detail at the start of Appendix G, the calculation involves the following general steps for each combination of provider type and age group:

- 1) Define a representative point within a county based on the known location of licensed child care providers.
- 2) Using a distance-matrix service, estimate travel time from this representative point to the location of all providers that responded with rates to the survey
- 3) For each low-response county:
  - a. begin with any responses from within the county;
  - b. add the survey response from the next nearest provider to the sample; and
  - c. repeat step 3(b) until the sample contains five providers.
- 4) Calculate the market rate distribution using this synthetic sample.

External Validation of Travel Time Methodology

Among the many other factors considered, working parents place importance on the location of potential care providers. In fact, a 2008 survey of parents in California by LINCC Partners<sup>11</sup>, cited by the literature review mentioned previously, found that over a quarter of parents of young children reported that having center care that was near work was an important factor in their decision to use a particular center and 19 percent reported that having care near their home was important.

In addition to parent's self-reported perception of this preference, data on commute times provides a proxy for how far families may be willing to travel to their child care provider. The American Community Survey (ACS), administered by the United States Census Bureau, includes questions related to average travel time spent commuting to work. These data are summarized at various geographic levels, including by county.<sup>12</sup> Using these data, this study examined how closely travel times to responding out-of-county providers align with the distribution of average commute times within a county, a comparison which may also hint at the extent to which labor markets are integrated across county boundaries. Appendix G, Travel Time Methodology is supplemented by a table containing this comparison.

Market Prices

Market prices for each low-response county using the travel time methodology are presented in Appendix G. This appendix organizes its contents into individual tables for each provider type. Each table presents its data grouped first by COLI cluster (from highest to lowest), then by age group, and finally by percentiles within each age group. The market rate estimates under this methodology are provided across those groupings.

Limitations of Travel Time Methodology

A key limitation of this approach arises from the geographic concentration of responses for certain types of providers. Not only are there relatively few SACC and preschool providers across the state relative to center- and home-based care, responses from those types of providers appear to be more concentrated near population centers. The implications of this limitation are that, when the methodology is applied to those provider types, average travel times approach a questionably high level, and the resulting market rate distributions for low-response counties across the state might over-represent the price structure of a single, centralized geography.

The final limitation we consider relates to the choice to apply this methodology only to counties with fewer than five responses. If travel time and employment location play a role in defining market areas, this methodology should be applicable to counties regardless of size, especially those exhibiting a high degree of interconnectedness such as metropolitan areas. This is a real concern, and we encourage future studies to explore how this might be accomplished given the problem of identifying how many out-of-county providers to assign to each county – a task made quite simple by the choice utilized by this study to limit the approach only to where it was necessary to reach a minimum sample size of five.

Comparing Methodologies

While we can evaluate each methodology relative to the others, or even itself in a previous year, we don't know which is "right." Indeed, we are only engaged in this effort because we do not have data on what the distribution of prices actually is in these markets, aside from what was collected. Without a single objective source of truth, this study cannot definitely identify the most accurate method.

However, the distinction drawn earlier between the two types of data gaps and their implications does offer a framework through which to choose one methodology over another. For example, in the case of counties with a limited natural supply of child care services, the travel time methodology may more accurately reflect the reality of consumers within the market being forced to leave their county of residence to find care for their children. This method, if extended as proposed when discussing its limitations, might also be useful when accounting for counties' ability to establish fiscal agreements with providers outside their geographic boundaries.

Lessons Learned

Alignment of Provider Perceptions versus Regulatory Definitions

Providers responding to the survey from a direct outreach (either an email or a call) were presented with a survey matching their license type. However, providers responding with a static link were asked to choose which reflected the services they provided (because their license type was unknown in this mode). This self-identification provides an interesting window into how regulatory definitions of provider type might not always reflect what is meaningful in a market context for child care, particularly as it relates to preschools and school age care.

While a separate survey was provided for license-holders of the "Preschool" type,<sup>13</sup> many providers who held a "Center" type license responded through the preschool survey. This also occurred for providers self-identifying as SACCs but with "Center" type licenses because they provided only school-aged child care. This suggests providers are more inclined to identify their services with the age of children they serve than with the type of license they hold. In other words, distinctions made in regulation may not always reflect distinctions made by providers themselves. However, a major use of these data is to inform the systems that are defined by regulation and so there are clear advantages to retaining those distinctions in data collection.

Future studies may wish to consider how regulatory distinctions overlap with the on the ground experience in the provider-client relationships that define child care markets and consider the relative advantages and disadvantages of aligning with regulation or markets.

Interpretation of Ranges for Rates

The survey requested the minimum, maximum, and typical full-time rates charged for each age group by providers to ascertain the effect of discounts. However, open-ended responses suggested that the minimum rate was interpreted differently by different respondents. Some providers indicated the rate ranges they provided represented differences in rates for age group rate structures that differed from the survey's age group assumptions, and other providers indicated that the minimum rate represented a part-time rate. Because of this variance, only the maximum rates, which generally reflect a non-discounted, full-time rate, were used to provide a uniform metric for comparison of rates.

Future studies may wish to consider asking for full-time base rates and tuition discounts separately to avoid confusion in survey responses, which would allow for more detailed comparative analysis of discount structures while ensuring comparability of base rate estimates.

Before School and After School Rates

Two issues presented themselves through data validation of responses from survey questions related to the rate for before- and after-school care that could potentially be addressed in the future.

First, the survey questionnaire separately asked for before-school rates and after-school rates, without asking for combined before-and-after school rates; combined rates are typically discounted some level below the sum of the two individual rates. However, open-ended questions suggest that some providers used the maximum field in the minimum-maximum-typical range block to give a combined before-and-after school rate without apportioning between the morning or afternoon sessions.

Second, based on some open-ended responses, it is also unclear the extent to which Center- and Homelicensed providers reported on the price of wraparound services provided to younger-than-school-aged children rather than the price of before- and after-school care for school-aged children. While the former is certainly important in deriving a true market rate for care, these prices might have diluted the accuracy of estimating the latter if the two were conflated in survey responses.

Future studies may wish to consider clarifying more explicitly that the before- and after-school rates being requested apply only to school-aged children, not to wraparound care for younger children.

&lt;sup>13</sup> The designation of a "preschool" license type comes from a regulatory definition of preschools as "part-day child care program[s] for five (5) or more children between the ages of two and one-half (2-1/2) and seven (7) years of age which operate less than five (5) hours per day."

Surveys Introduce Error through the Limitations of Self-report and Interpretation

The previous lessons learned all relate to how, despite our best efforts, surveys introduce a level of variation or bias simply based on how questions are posed by the interviewer and how they can be reasonably interpreted by the respondent. However, surveys are not the only methods available to collect rate data and there may be alternatives that reduce this bias and/or are less resource intensive.

Future studies may wish to explore options for collecting rate data that are less resource-intensive while providing greater consistency in the interpretation of collected data than telephone or online surveys. However, this will need to be balanced with the need for comparability year-to-year.

Survey Overview

This is the Market Rate Survey that was mentioned in the email and postcard we sent to you earlier this month. The survey should take no longer than about 10 minutes to complete. While you are not required to provide the state with this information, the information you provide will be instrumental in accurately portraying the various child care markets throughout Colorado.

As required by the Child Care Development Fund (CCDF), this survey will provide the state with information on the rates your facility charges for child care. The State will use this information to identify the market prices of child care provided in communities across the state. These prices will be used to guide state recommendations for the rates paid through the Colorado Child Care Assistance Program (CCCAP) subsidies, AND will be used to inform the formula used to allocate CCCAP funds to counties. Additionally, the State will use these data to inform parents/guardians through our facility search functions, providing the rates you give us whenever available.

Thank you for taking the time to complete this survey. Your responses will help families find child care services like yours that meet their needs, and will go a long way in informing State and Federal services related to child care.

Appendix B: Survey Response Rates

How do I find the response rate for a certain age group within a type of care?

Appendix B presents the following tables with response rates broken out by provider type and age group for three geographical levels: county, cost of living index (COLI) cluster, and statewide.

Table B-1. Statewide Response Rates by Provider Type and Age Group

Table B-2. Response Rates by County: Child Care Centers
Table B-3. Response Rates by County: Family Child Care Homes
Table B-4. Response Rates by County: School Age Child Care
Table B-5. Response Rates by County: Preschools
Table B-6. Response Rates by COLI Cluster: Child Care Centers
Table B-7. Response Rates by COLI Cluster: Family Child Care Homes
Table B-8. Response Rates by COLI Cluster: School Age Child Care
Table B-9. Response Rates by COLI Cluster: Preschools

How do I read the tables?

All response rate tables in this appendix follow the same structure, with columns for provider type, age group, number of responses, number of potential providers, and response rate.

The number of responses corresponds to responses containing usable rates for the purposes of estimating child care market rates. Responses indicating a $0 price (i.e. free or fully-subsidized program) or that the provider did not offer services to a specific age group were excluded from this tally.

The number of potential providers corresponds to the number of licensed child care providers active within a particular geographic unit that were engaged to respond to the survey. Current regulations directly define the age groups a child care provider may serve based on the license type; however, license information does not capture when providers may choose to only serve select age groups than the full spectrum permitted by regulations. As a result, the number of potential providers presented in these tables will be the same for all age groups within a given provider type.

Response rates are calculated as the number of responses divided by the number of potential providers. Based on the definition of "potential provider" previously discussed, the response rates presented may underestimate the true level of response within an age group.

The following legend should be used when reading all the tables contained in this appendix:

* Response rate cannot be calculated because no potential providers existed.

Appendix C: Cost of Living Index Methodology

To assess the results of the 2017 market rate survey, we will not only compare those results to the 2015 estimated market rates but also to the rate of change in county-level cost of living. This study will also use these cost of living index (COLI) estimates when addressing gaps in data.

In keeping with the 2015 Colorado Child Care Market Rate Study, this study considers COLI estimates based on the biennial study of school district cost of living published by the Legislative Council pursuant to statutory requirements. However, while the 2015 study utilized composite COLI estimates prepared by the State Demography Office, updated estimates had not yet been released at the time this report was prepared.

As a result, CDHS staff developed a similar methodology after consultation with the State Demography Office to produce the composite COLI estimates used in this report. Additionally, although the 2015 study used 2013 COLI estimates for its analysis, this report endeavors to use cost of living data from the same year as market prices were collected, 2017. A full methodology is detailed below.

Detailed Methodology

- 1) Data were loaded from the 2017 TIGER/Line shapefiles into a geospatial database (PostGIS on PostgreSQL) for the following geographies:
  - a. Unified School Districts (Colorado); and
  - b. Census Block Groups (Colorado)
- 2) A spatial join of the two geographies was used to find areas of intersection.
- 3) Individual Census Block Group population<sup>14</sup> was apportioned to school districts based on their land area of intersection within the block group.
- 4) Apportioned block group populations were aggregated by summing to the county-level, grouping by school district.
- 5) County cost of living was calculated as the sum across all districts within the county of the product of each school district cost of living to the proportion of county population living within the given school district.
- 6) County COLI was calculated as the county composite cost of living divided by the statewide average cost of living multiplied by 100.

The calculations involved in Step 5 of this methodology are provided in detail within:

Appendix D: Statewide Market Prices

How do I find the market prices for a certain type of care?

Appendix D contains state-level tables displaying prices for different types of care as follows:

 Table D-1. Statewide Prices for Full-time Daily Care: Child Care Centers

Table D-2. Statewide Prices for Full-time Daily Care: Family Child Care Homes

Table D-3. Statewide Prices for Full-time Daily Care: School Age Child Care

Table D-4. Statewide Prices for Part-time Daily Care: Preschools

How do I read the tables?

The market prices listed here are base prices, not including discounts or fees. Prices in this appendix will be missing only when 1) no licensed child care providers exist in the state, 2) no licensed child care providers are eligible for the study in the state, or 3) fewer than two licensed child care providers responded to the survey. Please note that it is not possible to calculate reliable estimates based on fewer than two providers. The tables will list only the 50th and 75th percentile when fewer than five prices are reported within a category. Estimates based on fewer than five prices should be treated with caution. All percentiles are listed if at least five providers reported rates within a category.

The following legend should be used when reading all the tables contained in this appendix:

- * Fewer than two eligible providers responded or no licensed providers exist in the state
- ** Between two and four eligible providers within the county responded to the survey

Do the prices account for child enrollment?

While the survey requested total enrollment by the provider, it did not request enrollment disaggregated by age group. Moreover, initial data validation seemed to suggest that respondents may have reported their licensed capacity, not enrollment. Licensed capacity describes the maximum number of children that may be receiving services within the facility at any one time. Based on the share of students receiving part-time care relative to full-time care, actual enrollment may exceed licensed capacity; this is especially true for preschools, which are completely part-time programs.

To the extent that enrollment encompasses a population (part-time care recipients) that is not the primary focus of this study (the price of full-time care), child-level estimates might be unintentionally biased unless enrollment figures can be differentiated between full- and part-time program participants. Based on these factors, this study presents provider-level estimates, which do not account for child enrollment.

How confident should I be in the state-level market prices?

Many steps were taken during data collection and analysis to ensure the validity of the rates collected. In designing the survey, a number of factors were considered, including the construction of the 2015 market rate survey. Additionally, systematic procedures were followed in collecting data, and efforts were made to confirm prices when needed.

How can I explain the variability in market prices?

When looking across age groups within a certain type of care or vice versa, prices may not always follow an expected pattern. Every market segment potentially comprises different sets of providers, and these providers might differ with respect to the age groups to which they offer services. The prices are a reflection of the providers that offer care for that specific market segment.

Can I compare state-level prices to county-level prices for my county?

In general, it is not recommended to use the full spectrum of state-level prices as a point of comparison for county-level prices. Percentile-based estimates describe the distribution of prices within a prescribed market. As mentioned in the section on cost of living clusters, combining market rates that are correlated with cost of living across multiple geographies can result in estimates of non-median percentiles (e.g. 10th, 25th, 75th, or 90th percentiles) that are more dispersed from the median than component distributions.

The median 50th percentile might offer the best point of comparison between state- and county-level prices. However, county-level estimates based on fewer than five prices should be treated with caution. When county-level prices in Appendix E are missing or based on few providers, estimates may be found in the tables under:

Appendix E: County-level Market Prices

How do I find my county market prices?

Appendix E contains county-level tables displaying prices for different types of care as follows:

Table E-1. Prices for Full-time Daily Care by County: Child Care Centers Table E-2. Prices for Full-time Daily Care by County: Family Child Care Homes Table E-3. Prices for Full-time Daily Care by County: School Age Child Care Table E-4. Prices for Part-time Daily Care by County: Preschools

How do I read the tables?

The market prices listed here are base prices, not including discounts or fees. Prices in this appendix will be missing only when 1) no licensed child care providers exist in the county, 2) no licensed child care providers are eligible for the study in the county, or 3) fewer than two licensed child care providers responded to the survey. Please note that it is not possible to calculate reliable estimates based on fewer than two providers. The tables will list only the 50th and 75th percentile when fewer than five prices are reported within a category. Estimates based on fewer than five prices should be treated with caution. All percentiles are listed if at least five providers reported rates within a category.

When county-level prices are missing in the county-level tables, readers are encouraged to look to the tables under:

Appendix G: Travel Time Methodology

The following legend should be used when reading all the tables contained in this appendix:

- * Fewer than two eligible providers responded or no licensed providers exist in the county
- ** Between two and four eligible providers within the county responded to the survey

Do the prices account for child enrollment?

While the survey requested total enrollment by the provider, it did not request enrollment disaggregated by age group. Moreover, initial data validation seemed to suggest that respondents may have reported their licensed capacity, not enrollment. Licensed capacity describes the maximum number of children that may be receiving services within the facility at any one time. Based on the share of students receiving part-time care relative to full-time care, actual enrollment may exceed licensed capacity; this is especially true for preschools, which are completely part-time programs.

To the extent that enrollment encompasses a population (part-time care recipients) that is not the primary focus of this study (the price of full-time care), child-level estimates might be unintentionally biased unless enrollment figures can be differentiated between full- and part-time program participants. Based on these factors, this study presents provider-level estimates, which do not account for child enrollment.

How confident should I be in my county market prices?

Many steps were taken during data collection and analysis to ensure the validity of the rates collected. In designing the survey, a number of factors were considered, including the construction of the 2015 market rate survey. Additionally, systematic procedures were followed in collecting data, and efforts were made to confirm prices when needed.

Because many counties have few providers by type of care and age group, it is important to note that estimates based on fewer than five prices should be treated with caution. When county-level prices are missing or based on few providers, readers are encouraged to look to the tables under:

Appendix G: Travel Time Methodology

How can I explain the variability in my county market prices?

When looking across age groups within a certain type of care or vice versa, prices may not always follow an expected pattern. Every market segment potentially comprises different sets of providers, and these providers might differ with respect to the age groups to which they offer services. The prices are a reflection of the providers that offer care for that specific market segment.

Can I compare the prices for my county to state-level prices?

In general, it is not recommended to use the full spectrum of state-level prices as a point of comparison for county-level prices. Percentile-based estimates describe the distribution of prices within a prescribed market. As mentioned in the section on cost of living clusters, combining market rates that are correlated with cost of living across multiple geographies can result in estimates of non-median percentiles (e.g. 10th, 25th, 75th, or 90th percentiles) that are more dispersed from the median than component distributions. The median 50th percentile might offer the best point of comparison between state- and county-level prices.

Appendix F: COLI-based Methodologies

Cost of Living Cluster Methodology

Following the recommendation of the 2008 Performance Audit of the Colorado Child Care Assistance Program conducted by the State Auditor, the 2015 study introduced a simple and transparent method of clustering based on cost of living. In support of this choice, the 2015 study also presented findings of "significant positive correlation between COLI and 1) full-time prices for child care centers [...], 2) full-time prices for family home providers [...], and 3) full-time prices for preschools [...]."

In practice, COLI clusters attempt to leverage this relationship using the following logic: if provider rates are correlated with the COLI, results from a group of counties with similar COLIs can be used to estimate the rates of a county with insufficient survey responses within the group. Though there is some merit in this logic, there are some weaknesses to this approach.

Detailed Methodology

1) Assign each county into a COLI cluster based on its COLI value.

To estimate prices for counties based on COLI cluster, counties are assigned to clusters based on their COLI and all counties within a cluster share the same rate, or the rate of the cluster. COLI cluster assignments for 2013 and 2017 are presented below:

Table F-1. COLI Cluster Assignments, 2013 to 2017

- 2) Pool all responses into markets based on COLI cluster.
- 3) Calculate market rate distribution for each COLI cluster.

COLI Micro Cluster Methodology

This methodology eschews the formation of several large clusters. Instead, we form many "microclusters" by borrowing the set of counties with fully-formed market rate distributions and COLIs nearest to the low-response county. This refinement still adheres to the 2018 recommendation of the State Auditor to cluster based on COLI.

While the methodology for calculating micro cluster estimates is explained in more detail below, the calculation involves the following general steps for each combination of provider type and age group:

- 1) Calculate market rate distributions for all counties with more than five survey responses.
- 2) Assign the corresponding COLI value of each county to these distributions.
- 3) For each low-response county, identify:
  - a. The distribution with the nearest COLI greater than the low-response COLI; and
  - b. The distribution with the nearest COLI less than the low-response COLI.
- 4) The market rate distribution is defined as the weighted average across each percentile level of the neighboring distributions that is inversely proportionate to the difference between the low-response COLI and its COLI neighbors.

Detailed Methodology

1) Calculate market rate distributions for all counties with more than five survey responses. Estimated county-level market rates previously reported by provider type and age group formed the basis for this sample. Estimates reported for counties based on between two and four survey responses were then excluded from the set of distributions. All remaining county distributions were used in the next steps.

2) Assign the corresponding COLI value of each county to these distributions.

The county-level COLI data for 2017 presented in Table F-1 were joined to the set of county-level market rate distributions by category arrived at through Step 1.

3) For each low-response county, identify the neighboring market rate distributions using COLI.

Iterating over the set of all combinations of county, provider type, and age group that had fewer than five responses, we bifurcated the set of county-level market rate distributions for each applicable category arrived at through Step 1 into two groups based on their COLI values relative to the low-response county.

The subset of market rate distributions with COLI greater than the low-response county were ranked in ascending order and the first record was extracted as the nearest neighbor from above. The subset of market rate distributions with COLI less than the low-response county were ranked in descending order, and the first record was extracted as the nearest neighbor from below.

4) Weighted average of neighboring distributions.

The market rate distribution for the low-response county was calculated as the weighted average across each percentile level of the neighboring distributions that is inversely proportionate to the difference between the low-response COLI and its COLI neighbors as described in the following equations:

In the case that one of the full neighboring distributions did not exist, either from nearest COLI values above or below, no estimate was attempted.

Appendix G: Travel Time Methodology

As the 2015 Colorado Child Care Market Rate Study suggested that "[i]n future market rate studies, the state may wish to explore other geographic units – such as zip code and physical proximity – to explore alternative child care submarkets," this study seeks to lay the foundation for one such alternative. Instead of focusing on physical proximity, however, the unique geographic characteristics of Colorado – with its mountainous landscape posing immense natural barriers between locations that would seem nearby when only considering straight-line distance – demands some other metric. We propose that estimated travel time to child care providers from a representative point within a county would form the nearest reliable analog to proximity.

While the methodology for calculating travel time-based estimates is explained in more detail below, the calculation involves the following general steps for each combination of provider type and age group:

- 1) Define a representative point within a county based on the known location of licensed child care providers.
- 2) Using a distance-matrix service, estimate travel time from this representative point to the location of all providers that responded with rates to the survey
- 3) For each low-response county:
  - a. begin with any responses from within the county;
  - b. add the survey response from the next nearest provider to the sample; and
  - c. repeat step 3(b) until the sample contains five providers.
- 4) Calculate the market rate distribution using this synthetic sample.

Detailed Methodology

The source of geographic coordinates used in the following steps was the bi-monthly licensed child care provider report published by the Office of Early Childhood on the Colorado Information Market place. The business location of each provider is geocoded for each provider; in the case of metro area providers, these point coordinates are highly precise due to their use by emergency services.

1) Define a representative point within a county based on the known location of licensed child care providers.

Coordinate point sets of all licensed facilities active during 2017, including camps and neighborhood youth organizations that were not surveyed, were grouped by county. The "representative_point" method from the GeoPandas library of the Python programming language was used to calculate a representative point within each county based on those coordinate point sets.

2) Estimate travel time from this representative point to the location of all providers that responded with rates to the survey.

With the set of county representative points and the geocoded location of all providers responding to the survey, the Google Distance-Matrix API service was used to obtain estimated travel times for each of the 156,735 potential trips from each representative point to all responding providers under average travel conditions. Responses from the API included both distance and duration (in seconds) of the trip.

3) For each low-response county, add up to five survey responses from the next nearest providers to the county's sample.

Iterating over the set of all combinations of county, provider type, and age group that had fewer than five responses, we began with the records from applicable providers within the county. Additional out-of-county records were then added to the county-level sample until the county had five responses.

Prior to the addition of these synthetic county-level records, the initial data set contained 7,942 records corresponding to a single license number, provider type and age group combination. The expanded sample contained 10,638 records, representing 2,696 duplicate records assigned to a different county.

4) Calculate the market rate distribution using this synthetic sample.

Estimated county-level market rates were calculated in the same manner as the results presented in Appendix E, except using the expanded data set instead of the unaltered data set.

How do I find my county market prices?

Appendix G contains county-level tables displaying prices for different types of care estimated through the travel time methodology as follows:

- Table G-1. Prices for Full-time Daily Care by County Using Travel Time Methodology: Child Care Centers
- Table G-2. Prices for Full-time Daily Care by County Using Travel Time Methodology: Family Child Care Homes
- Table G-3. Prices for Full-time Daily Care by County Using Travel Time Methodology: School Age Child Care
- Table G-4. Prices for Part-time Daily Care by County Using Travel Time Methodology: Preschools

How do I read the tables?

The market prices listed here are base prices, not including discounts or fees. Prices will appear in this appendix only if complete estimates were not provided in Appendix E because: 1) no licensed child care providers exist in the county, 2) no licensed child care providers are eligible for the study in the county, or 3) fewer than two licensed child care providers responded to the survey.

How confident should I be in my county market prices?

Using data from the American Community Survey (ACS), we can examine how closely travel times to responding out-of-county providers align with the distribution of average commute times within a county, a comparison which may also hint at the extent to which labor markets are integrated across county boundaries. Through this validation, we might conclude the estimates for some counties are more credible than others. This appendix is supplemented by the following table containing this comparison:

Appendix H: Before and After School

How do I find my county market prices?

Appendix H contains county-level tables displaying prices for before and after school care as follows:

Table H-1. Prices for Before and After School Care by County: Child Care Centers Table H-2. Prices for Before and After School Care by County: Family Child Care Homes Table H-3. Prices for Before and After School Care by County: School Age Child Care

How do I read the tables?

The rates listed here are estimates based the 2015 before and after School cluster rates with an inflation adjustment based on individual counties' change in cost of living over time. Because the 2015 Survey did not have rates for the "Very High" cluster, these counties used the values of the "High" cluster. For each county these tables show the 2015 cluster rate, the appropriate COLI growth and the resulting 2017 estimate.

How confident should I be in my county market prices?

These before and after school rates rely on the 2015 rates and thus replicate all of the weaknesses associated with the COLI cluster method described throughout this study. On top of those it then applies an inflation metric that relies on the correlation between COLI and market prices, which is relatively strong but not one-to-one.

How can I explain the variability in my county market prices?

When looking across age groups within a certain type of care or vice versa, prices may not always follow an expected pattern. Every market segment potentially comprises different sets of providers, and the prices are a reflection of the providers that offer care for that specific market segment.

Can I compare the prices for my county to state-level prices?

In general, it is not recommended to use the full spectrum of state-level prices as a point of comparison for county-level prices. Percentile-based estimates describe the distribution of prices within a prescribed market. As mentioned in the section on cost of living clusters, combining market rates that are correlated with cost of living across multiple geographies can result in estimates of non-median percentiles (e.g. 10th, 25th, 75th, or 90th percentiles) that are more dispersed from the median than component distributions. The median 50th percentile might offer the best point of comparison between state- and county-level prices.
