Vision Statement

We sell Fairbanks! While building a marketing machine that maximizes exposure of Fairbanks in existing markets and cultivates new markets, Explore Fairbanks is the number-one resource of visitor information for our destination. We bring people to Fairbanks with effective marketing based on reliable research data. We expand our marketing effectiveness to ensure the quality of our visitors' experience by cooperating with the state, other convention and visitor bureaus and non-traditional partners.

Because we simultaneously enjoy and enhance our natural resources, our destination provides authentic Alaska for everyone. In our vibrant community, we encourage new destination features and envision a convention center that is fully utilized year-round. Our neighbors and community leaders value a thriving visitor industry and provide broad-based, consistent and reliable financial support.

The quality of the services provided by Explore Fairbanks is second to none. Located in a world-class visitor center, we enjoy long-term commitments from staff and business partners who are very active in our operations.

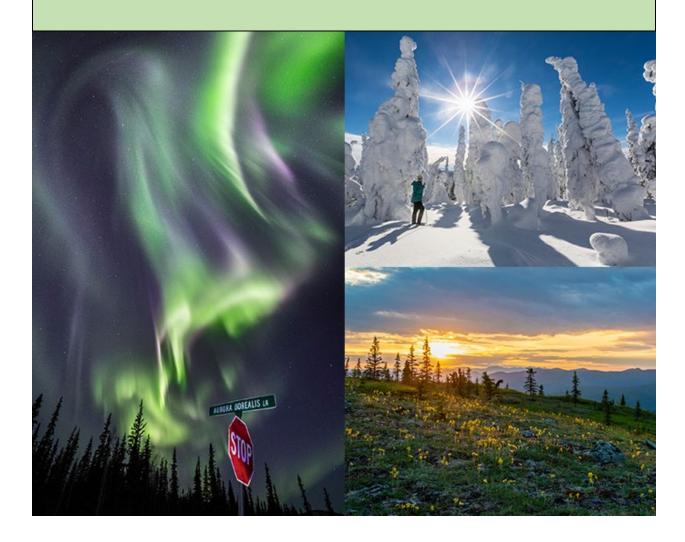

As a result of our strategic focus and hard work, Fairbanks is widely recognized by travelers as the ultimate Alaskan experience and the destination that most characterizes Alaska. Everybody who travels to Alaska believes they must visit us, and because there are two Fairbanks, midnight sun and northern lights, everybody wants to see us at least twice. Since we serve as a base destination for an Alaska visit, we attract increasing numbers of visitors from around the world to Fairbanks all year round. Therefore, our business partners enjoy consistently high levels of occupancy and we measurably contribute to the economic prosperity of our community.

Brand Pillars

The Fairbanks region is a year-round visitor destination with three distinguishing seasons

Heralding Fairbanks' location on the globe at the 65th parallel of latitude are three seasons that define Fairbanks' style:

- Midnight Sun Season April 22 through August 20. The midnight sun in the summer sky sets Fairbanks apart including 70 straight days of sunshine.
- Winter Season Fairbanks celebrates winter from late-October through the end of March.
- Aurora Season August 21 through April 21. This eight-month period offers some of the world's best northern lights viewing. This season encompasses all four seasons.

Brand Pillars

Fairbanks is the basecamp for Denali, Alaska's Interior and Arctic

Surrounded by wilderness, Fairbanks is just more than two hours from Denali National Park and serves as a leaping off point by air and road to the Arctic Circle, access to villages, towns and parks in Alaska's vast Interior and Arctic. The farthest north city in Alaska and the United States accessible by air, rail and road, Fairbanks' hub-and-spoke positioning is a win-win for the destination and neighboring communities.

Fairbanks is a wellspring for culture, arts and events

The often nature-inspired artistic spirit of the residents is expressed in all forms of performing and fine arts. And the energy of Fairbanks, North Pole and surrounding region is further manifested in the production of sporting and special events year-round, often through a labor of love by cadres of volunteers. Handcrafted food, drinks and gifts are created from locally-sourced produce and materials. Alaska Native artists contribute immensely to the fabric of the region's cultural depth.

Brand Pillars

Fairbanks offers iconic Alaskan experiences

Who gets to claim Alaska's most quintessential experience? Destinations throughout Alaska assert authenticity but Fairbanks with its "last frontier" feel, reputation for resourcefulness and pioneer spirit makes it the ultimate Alaskan locale. Fairbanks has an isolated location with proximity to remote villages, a large population of log cabin dwellers and cold, snowy winters that allow for distinctive sports and events like dog mushing. Fairbanks also has plenty of "Sourdoughs" and gold rush history that contribute to the Alaskan mythos.

Fairbanks is renowned as Alaska's Golden Heart

Fairbanks is known throughout the state and beyond as Alaska's Golden Heart. The triple meaning refers to its gold rush history, the city's location in the center or "heart" of Alaska, and more importantly, to the friendliness of its inhabitants. Hospitality programs such as the Golden Heart Greeter volunteers and the Golden Heart Meeting Ambassadors capitalize on this golden reputation to offer one of the most Authentic Alaskan experiences and visitors often remark about helpful locals.

Headwinds, Tailwinds and Tacking

Explore Fairbanks' provided the below assessments of forecasted travel trends in order to position marketing activities in the context of upcoming challenges.

International Travel

Headwind:

According to the U.S. Travel Association, international travel to the United States is not expected to return to pre-pandemic levels until 2024. It is anticipated to reach just 67% of 2019 levels in 2022 and 87% in 2023. Bordering countries such as Canada and Mexico are anticipated to return quicker than others, while markets such as China (which emerged as a core market for Fairbanks and Alaska pre-pandemic) might take longer to recover due to other challenges such as trade tensions and visa issues. Key to international return will be the availability of vaccines in those outbound markets, since their ability to travel to the United States will require full vaccination.

Tailwind:

The recent announcement by the Biden administration to ease restrictions on international travel gives reason to be optimistic looking ahead and will help inspire confidence in future bookings. Condor Airlines, after cancelling its Frankfurt-Fairbanks service in summer 2020 and 2021, is planning to return in 2022 with 14-weekly flights. Similar to domestic travelers, international travelers have pentup demand and are eager to travel again; Alaska remains a desirable destination in those core markets we have been present in for years.

Tacking:

Explore Fairbanks maintained its presence in German-speaking Europe and China with our contractors throughout the pandemic, though in a greatly diminished capacity. This presence has kept Fairbanks in the minds of prospective visitors from those markets when the opportunity to travel here is once again possible. Marketing efforts in German-speaking and Northern Europe have increased as of late thanks to the return of trade and consumer shows in those regions, and we have been able to reach hundreds of tour operators and travel agents through virtual forums. We will continue to monitor the headwinds and industry forecasts to determine when to increase our marketing efforts in other core and secondary international markets.

Domestic Travel

Headwind:

The pandemic is still with us, and concerns remain over the emergence of new strains and the potential impact on the ongoing return to travel. Alaska has unfortunately received some national headlines as of late due to our number of cases, but it has not seemed to have impacted fall travel and we are hopeful the situation will improve going into 2022. The main headwind facing 2022 is not so much concern over visitation numbers but more so due to the economic impacts of the pandemic as it relates to a shortage of employees in the leisure and hospitality industry and supply chain issues which has impacted areas such as rental car shortages. Both of these were factors in 2021 and could be a significant obstacle in 2022 if recovery (visitor volume) occurs as predicted. It's also uncertain what next summer's airlift will look like for Fairbanks, as some of the new carriers and routes that emerged for summer 2021 were not satisfied with their overall performance and have expressed some hesitation on resuming next year.

Tailwind:

The latest forecast from the U.S. Travel Association is that domestic leisure travel will be 99% recovered in 2022 and 102% in 2023. Here in Fairbanks, 2021 has performed much better than anticipated with the domestic leisure market, and the 2022 outlook is looking very positive, thanks in part to return of cruises. According to the 2016 Alaska Visitor Statistics Program, 41% of visitors to Fairbanks in the summer come by way of Cross Gulf of Alaska cruise/land tours. For summer 2022, Alaska is expected to see 440,000 passengers arrive by way of Cross Gulf of Alaska cruises, though not all of those passengers translate to a land tour customer. The reopening of the Canadian/US border will help bring back the highway traffic from the U.S., which typically accounts for 10% of our summer visitation.

Tacking:

The 2022 Explore Fairbanks Strategic Marketing Plan outlines several strategic objectives and programs to maintain and grow our presence in the domestic market through a number of well-researched and proven channels and tactics, for both the Communications and the Tourism and Meeting Sales departments. Our ongoing marketing efforts throughout the pandemic kept Fairbanks in the minds of prospective visitors, and we were fortunate enough in 2021 to expand our advertising dramatically thanks to grant funding. We will continue to work with the Fairbanks International Airport and their consultant to try and maintain existing air service and pursue new ones.

Business, Meetings and Conventions Travel

Headwind:

According to the U.S. Travel Association, business travel is still lagging far behind leisure and is expected to reach 71% of 2019 levels in 2022 before fully recovering in 2024. Corporate travel policies are expected to continue to prevent non-essential trips, whether it be due to financial constraints or simply because technology has proven to be able to play a very effective role in facilitating meetings and communication since the start of the pandemic. Fairbanks remains at a disadvantage in the meetings and conventions marketing by lacking a proper convention facility to lure many conferences to the region. The new business model of the Carlson Center now that it is under borough management could create some obstacles for bringing back larger events such as the Alaska Federation of Natives. The leisure and hospitality labor shortage also has the possibility of impacting hotel properties from hosting events if they don't have the employees available.

Tailwind:

Despite the above forecast, there is evidence and studies that show that business travelers are eager to return to inperson meetings and conferences. It also has been proven that such events can happen safely with proper mitigation measures in place and utilizing a hybrid approach for those who are not comfortable attending in-person or are unable to attend because of financial reasons. While Fairbanks does have some disadvantages regarding meeting space, the destination itself has proven over the years to be a desirable one for hosting meetings and events. The organization has longstanding positive relationships with entities such as the University of Alaska Fairbanks, Alaska Federation of Natives, and the Alaska School Activities Association that bring events to Fairbanks. As Alaska continues to be more important for the U.S. role in the Arctic, there is tremendous potential for Fairbanks being the place for meetings and conferences pertaining to the Arctic.

Tacking:

The Tourism and Meeting Sales department will continue to monitor the local, state and national meeting landscape and pursue opportunities to bid on events that Fairbanks has the ability to host. We will continue to build upon our relationships with the aforementioned entities. The 2022 Strategic Marketing Plan outlines a number of objectives and programs to help achieve those goals moving forward. The department will also work closely with the Carlson Center to make sure they are aware of what the needs are to host larger events as has been done in the past.

Visitor Industry Workforce

Headwind:

The leisure and hospitality sector was the hardest hit industry in 2020, accounting for 40% of all the job losses in Fairbanks. Additionally, Fairbanks lost about 300 transportation jobs last year, mainly linked to the tourism industry. Workforce recovery has been exceptionally challenging, with numerous factors attributing to the reason(s) why our industry, as well as many others, are having such a difficult time filling vacant positions. This summer, some Explore Fairbanks partners stated they had to turn away business because they didn't have the labor pool to meet the demand. Looking ahead to 2022, this is one of the more significant issues that could impact full recovery.

Tailwind:

One of the factors for summer 2021 was the almost nonexistent J1 student Visa program, which is a significant provider of leisure and hospitality workers for Alaska. With international border restrictions being eased, the program could see a stronger return in 2022. There is also a unified effort on this issue across the entire statewide visitor industry, which is leading to new efforts to recruit employees through new channels and outreach methods.

Tacking:

Explore Fairbanks will do its part to aid the industry in rebuilding its workforce by connecting partners with the resources and agencies to help them find employment, hosting job fairs, and providing marketing materials that tout the benefits of working in the visitor industry.

Explore Fairbanks Partnership

Headwind:

The pandemic has had a significant impact on Explore Fairbanks partnership numbers, with the current membership at a 10-year low of 320 partners. A fair number of partners that we lost were smaller companies that went out of business, while others cited financial hardships, and some stated that they did not see the return on investment. The Explore Fairbanks staff shortage throughout most of 2021 has also reduced our ability to proactively seek out new partners as we have in the past.

Tailwind:

With 2021 performing much better than anticipated, and 2022 projections looking so positive, businesses citing financial reasons for dropping their partnership should be able to rejoin. We also have better staffing capacity to dedicate to targeting prospects and bringing new partners into the mix.

Tacking:

A priority for 2022 as outlined in the strategic marketing plan is to develop new marketing materials touting the benefits of partnership and to prove our relevancy to businesses. We will utilize best practices as outlined by organizations such as Destinations International and Destination Marketing Association of the West for partnership recruitment and retention.
