

Made in the mountains

Keepsakes crafted with care

It doesn't take long to notice that Gatlinburg locals aren't just hospitable; they're handy, too. Whether you're in the market for jewelry, vases, woodcrafts, or woven goods, if it can be made here, odds are that it is—and it's largely in part due to the Great Smoky Arts and Crafts Community. Established in 1937, the Community is the largest independent organization of artisans in the country, and many of the creators that are members today work in trades that have been passed down through their families for generations.

ARTS & CRAFTS

Jim Gray Gallery

Ceramicists, glassblowers, and painters of all kinds, you'll find a maker for every type of medium along the community's eight-mile loop of studios, shops, and galleries. If you're lucky, you'll even get to witness one of them in action, creating their next masterpiece or demonstrating the techniques they've been honing their whole lives. It's a truly remarkable sight, so be sure to stop by!
