Rising Media Use by Travelers 2008 - 2018

hyper-informed traveler marketing tips:

Consider using these four fundamental marketing strategies to support marketing efforts directed at today's hyper-informed traveler:

Targeting and Personalization

Now more important than ever, content delivered to the hyper-informed traveler should be optimized, relevant and specific to their individual interests and needs.

Multimedia

Messages, content and campaigns to the hyper-informed traveler need to be delivered across a complex range of media and online and offline. Work with advertising and distribution partners who can assist with this as well as agencies with the skills to plan and manage multimedia campaigns.

Integrated & Complementary Campaigns

In this multimedia environment, creative, content and campaigns need to be planned from the start to be effective across different media and channels. Content should utilize the unique characteristics of each platform to add to the overall success of a campaign.

Quality vs. Quantity

Focus on metrics that matter. Measuring which channels, media and creative drive real engagement, interest and active travel planning has never been more important. Create precise goals (called Signals of Intent to Travel or SITs) against which to measure success.
