

Robert Daverschot is a seasoned event moderator, online host and speaker coach based in Amsterdam, the Netherlands. Since 2017, he has been working full-time in these roles, bringing a wealth of experience to each event he facilitates.

Robert's academic background includes a Master's degree in Hospitality Management from Hotelschool The Hague and Erasmus University Rotterdam.

His professional journey encompasses roles such as managing guest relations for the Dutch Royal House via the Protocolbureau, serving as Business Developer at an international meeting formula, called Seats2meet and working as a Hotel Manager at citizenM Amsterdam Airport.

Transitioning to freelance work, Robert has moderated corporate events both domestically and internationally, engaging with industry leaders, ministers and experts. Notably, he has interviewed prominent figures, including His Holiness the Dalai Lama. Next to that he has worked at the editorial board of a Dutch TV talkshow and currently also works as an event producer at one of the Netherlands' largest corporate event agencies.

In addition to his moderation and event design work, Robert offers speaker coaching, training individuals, duo's and teams to deliver compelling presentations. He has recently done so for Google, the Ministry of Domestic Affairs and JDE Peet's. He is fluent in both English and Dutch, enabling him to connect with a diverse range of audiences. In his work he likes to engage with the audience as much as possible, knowing that their knowledge and experience helps to bring the message from the stage come to life even more.

In his free time Robert likes to travel, visit the theatre and make walks in the Amsterdam Vondelpark with his dog Bruce.

For more information - please visit: www.robertdaverschot.nl