Beijing UNESCO Central Axis (Full day, 8 hours service maximum)

Beijing's Central Axis, a UNESCO World Heritage Site since 2024, is a 7.8-kilometer-long imperial route connecting some of the city's most significant landmarks, including the Forbidden City, Tiananmen Square, and the Temple of Heaven. This experience showcases the essence of imperial Beijing in just half a day. Along the way, discover the ancient Chinese concept of the "Dragon Vein", a mystical energy believed to flow through the city's central axis, and learn about the intricate rituals of the imperial court.

Ping Pong with a Professional Coach

In China, ping pong isn't just a pastime, it's a passion. Partake in this noble tradition the same way millions of locals do: by playing in a bustling park where the game thrives. The difference is that the teacher and opponent will be none other than a professional coach. Learning from and competing against someone who has mastered the sport at the highest level creates an exhilarating and unforgettable encounter with this beloved game.
