Why NO Dogs in Wilderness Parks?

- Dogs are predators. Wildlife becomes stressed when they smell an intruding dog. It has been shown that, in the wild, bobcats, deer and other animals will avoid places that a dog has marked. This makes it harder for wildlife to find food.
- Domestic dog scent disrupts the lives of gray foxes and coyotes, who also mark their territories.
- Dogs scare native birds, like the California Quail, from their nests. This can cause the death of their young.
- Dogs can pick up ticks in the park. Western black-legged ticks can give you and your dog Lyme disease. Ticks may carry other diseases, like Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever.
- Dogs can pick up poison oak and transfer the toxic oil to you and your family.
- The park is home to rattlesnakes. Dogs are susceptible to rattlesnake bites.
- Most of Orange County has been developed. Only a few places remain as home for our wildlife. Domestic dogs have a home and many places to go. Help us keep Wilderness Parks wild.
