

A Little History

It is thought that the Kalapuyan name for the

With Euro-American settlement of the area.

area is "Champ-a-te," or Rattlesnake Mountain.

the Butte became a popular peak to climb, and major portion of Spencer Butte was purchased in 1938 through a grassroots campaign that collected contributions no larger than $5, in During the campaign, 90-year old former mayor and chairman of the Eugene Park order to let everyone "buy a piece" of the Butte.

Commission, F.M. Wilkins, said, "And remember, Eugene boys and girls will be climbing a campaign to preserve it from development began in the 1930s. In true Eugene style, a

D 4

The Ridgeline Trail System—A National Recreation Trail

Willamette Valley from its summit.

Trail Safety and Courtesy

- Stay on official, signed trails
- Keep right and pass on the left
- Keep dogs on leash
- Leave no trace—please pick up and pack out your litter
- Leave plants and animals where you find them for others to enjoy
- Mountain bikes:

The 19-mile Ridgeline Trail System provides community access to one

Trail by the National Park Service in 2006, the trail winds through the visitors can enjoy magnificent vistas of Eugene, the Coburg Hills, the jewel in Eugene's "Emerald Necklace" is the 2,054-foot high Spencer the very foot of the Butte."

state and federal grants.

Coast Range, and even a few peaks in the Cascade Mountains. The Butte, which offers a panoramic view of Eugene and the southern of Eugene's natural treasures. Designated as a National Recreation extensive Ridgeline Park system. Just minutes from downtown,

- Yield to pedestrians on mountain biking/pedestrian trails
- Manage speed based on sight lines and trail conditions

Spencer Butte 50 and 100 years from today, to be inspired by looking over a city built out to

Later, in 1950, W.R. "Tex" Matsler, Parks and Recreation department director, first proposed a vision of a larger Ridgeline Park system, which took root when major new parks were purchased between 1970 and 1995. Over the years, Eugene residents have supported bond and new parks. The Ridgeline Park system has now grown to 2,300 acres with the help of the community, generous donations, and multiple and levy measures to support trails, habitat

- Warn before passing or rounding blind curves

Protecting the Ridgeline's Natural Resources

Our Ridgeline parks and their natural resources benefit us all in important ways, from keeping our water and air clean and cool, to reducing flood and wildfire risk, to providing a beautiful backdrop to our city. The trail system takes visitors through parkland with wonderful examples of Oregon's native habitats. Douglas-fir forests and mixed stands of bigleaf maple offer lush, cool experiences year-round. The Ridgeline Park system also features oak woodlands, oak savannas, upland prairies and rocky balds, which are regionally very rare and have been identified as critical habitats for conservation. More than 200 wildlife species rely on these habitats. The City of Eugene and its Rivers to Ridges partners are taking important steps to restore these rare habitats in the Ridgeline Park system and neighboring lands.

Be Aware of Local Hazards

Poison Oak

Leaves of three, let it be! Poison oak is very common in the Ridgeline. It can be found year-round as individual stems, a shrub, or even a vine climbing up tree trunks. Wash yourself, your pets and your clothes thoroughly if you touch any part of the plant. The best way to avoid poison oak is to stay on the trail.

Northern Pacific Rattlesnakes

Occasionally seen during the warmer months near the rocky summit of Spencer Butte, the presence of rattlesnakes is a good indicator of he health of this ecosystem. They make every effort to hide or retreat during human encounters. However, if you see a snake, back away slowly and pass with plenty of space between you and the snake. Do not harm or kill these animals—this area is their home.

Cougars and Bears

The vast majority of hikers never see a cougar or bear. However, if you do encounter one, make yourself appear as large as possible, and speak loudly and firmly or shout. If you have children with you, pick them up off the ground, without crouching down or leaning over. Never turn your back or run from a cougar or bear—back away slowly and deliberately, always retaining your aggressive pose and continuing to speak loudly

Strenuous/0.8 miles 🕅 Pipe Dream *Coming in late spring 2022* The "Tie Trail" connects hikers from the mid-Moderate (Blue)/0.6 miles 🧖

Trail Descriptions

Difficulty rating/distance

(Closed to pedestrian and uphill traffic)

The first official mountain bike trail in the Ridgeline Park System was built and will be maintained in collaboration with the Eugene

Mountain Bike Stewards. This narrow single track trail winds its way from the Ridgeline like most trails in the Ridgeline, this trail is surfaced with native soil to provide an ideal biking experience. This trail earns its rating on the lower half with some steep sections and a series of tight turns. There is no mandatory and an optional table top at the end.

Moderate/1.3 miles 🐧 🦠 namesake, wild Oregon iris.

Moderate/1.8 miles ↑ gently rolling grade.

Moderate/2.0 miles <sup>⅓</sup> tributaries of Amazon Creek.

Wild Iris Ridge

air on this trail but there are a couple of rollers

Eugene's newest section of the Ridgeline Trail system provides the opportunity to enjoy rare upland prairie and oak habitat, with views of

Spencer Butte and the West Eugene Wetlands

Create additional hiking loops and further explore this 250-acre section of the Ridgeline

Park system on connected gravel maintenance roads. Visit in early spring to enjoy this area's Blanton Ridge to 52nd & Willamette

This trail offers a secluded walk through a mixed forest of towering Douglas-fir and looks out to the north across the city.

52nd & Willamette to Fox Hollow

This is the longest single segment in the Ridgeline Trail system. Springtime visitors delight in abundant fawn lilies, flowering trail also crosses several small, spring-fed hounds-tongue and a chorus of songbirds. The bigleaf maple. A high point near Solar Heights

Beautiful with winter snow and soothingly cool in the summer heat, the trail follows a Trail down to the end of Center Way. Undle of the Willamette to Fox Hollow segment to the Spencer Butte Main Trail, which leads to the summit. Hikers walk through some of the oldest Douglas-fir forest in the city's natural areas before joining the Main Trail at an opening in the forest canopy, where spring prairie wildflowers bloom and butterflies are

Tie Trail to Spencer Butte Main Trail

Spencer Butte Summit - Main Trail Strenuous/1.1 miles 🕅

encountered during the summer.

This is by far the most popular route to the summit of Eugene's iconic landmark. Gradually climbing to the top, highlights include an artful dry-stone masonry causeway, mature Douglas-fir forest and wildflower meadows. As hikers climb above the tree line, the approach to the summit includes a new series of stone stairways that provide panoramic views.

Spencer Butte Summit – West Trail Very Strenuous/0.6 miles 1

Perhaps the most challenging hike on the Ridgeline Trail, this less-traveled route begins with rock-lined paths. As you ascend, you'll come to an area of exposed bedrock that may require scrambling and can be slippery in wet weather. When you begin the steep scramble just below the summit, watch for tree tags which mark the official trail. Please stay on the trail to protect the unique wildflowers in this area.

Fox Hollow to Dillard

Easy/distances vary by route 🥻 🧆 (Biking permitted on part of this segment)

This gentle loop trail connects to both the Dillard East and Dillard West trailheads. The pedestrian-only section of the trail follows the ridgeline at an easy, level grade. Crossing through the Amazon Headwaters basin, pedestrians can make a loop by returning on the shared-use path. The shared-use path has a gentle grade, making it a good beginning route for mountain bikers. The Dillard Connector Trail, added in 2014, connects with the Dillard East Trailhead at Mt. Baldy.

Martin Street to Fox Hollow Strenuous/1.1 miles 🐧 🧆

This shared-use trail steadily climbs through the forested headwaters of Amazon Creek, where you are surrounded by bigleaf maple Douglas-fir and Pacific yew. The trail offers the experience of Amazon Creek in its natural setting, before it becomes channelized through town. Near the Martin Street trailhead, a spur trail provides an alternate route following the power line corridor to connect with the Rexius Running Trail.

Dillard East to Spring Boulevard

Moderate to Strenuous/1.0 mile オ 🌣 Second only to Spencer Butte in elevation within the Ridgeline, Mt. Baldy offers lovely views north to Eugene and south to Camas Swale. The pedestrian trail climbs quickly to the summit, while the shared-use trail meanders through an upland prairie before entering the forest and descending down a steep and sinuous path to Spring Boulevard.

Ribbon Trail

Moderate/0.75 miles ★

Completed in 2009, the Ribbon Trail connects Hendricks Park to the Ridgeline Trail system. The trail climbs from this popular park, featuring a world-renowned rhododendron garden, up to 30th Avenue. Winter hikes offer views of Moon Mountain and the Laurel Hill Valley.

Hendricks Park Trails Moderate/3.0 miles total ↑

(Biking permitted on Old Road Trail)

Discover 12 pedestrian trails, totaling three miles, in the forested natural area of Hendricks Park. From the trailhead kiosk near the intersection of Fairmount Boulevard and Floral Hill Drive, follow trails south and west to explore the park's wild side and to connect with the Ribbon Trail and adjacent neighborhoods.

Spencer Butte Challenge Course

Located just off the Spencer Butte trailhead, the course features high and low elements, ropes, ladders, and forms built among the trees. The course provides unique team building in a safe, facilitated environment for groups of all ages and abilities. Reservations are required. For more information or to schedule an event, contact the Eugene Recreation Outdoor Adventure program at 541-682-6324.

Park Rules

Park users must:

- Keep dogs on leash and under control at all times
- Remove pet waste

Prohibited activities include:

- Smoking of any kind
- · Possession or drinking of any alcoholic
- Possession of glass containers
- Hunting, discharging of firearms or use of fireworks
  - Camping
- Operation of unauthorized vehicles
- Littering or dumping

Park users are responsible for following all park rules, including those not listed here. A complete copy of Eugene Parks and Open Space rules is available at 1820 Roosevelt Blvd. or eugene-or.gov/parks.

Parks are closed from 11 p.m. to 6 a.m.

New Ridgeline Parks and Amenities

The City of Eugene, guided by the community-endorsed Ridgeline Area Open Space Vision and Action Plan, continues to acquire natural areas that provide key connections between the Ridgeline Parks system and thousands of acres of regional parks and open space land between Fern Ridge Reservoir to the west and Mount Pisgah to the east. The goal of providing uninterrupted trails and habitat across the Ridgeline Park system and beyond also supports and refines the larger vision of the Rivers to Ridges Partnership, made up of 19 federal, state and local governments and non-governmental agencies committed to protecting and enhancing the region's land and water resources, connecting people with nature, and providing opportunities for learning and service.

Some sites shown on this map have few to no formal trails or supporting infrastructure. Visit these areas at your own risk—they typically lack perimeter fencing, developed trails, wayfinding signs or designated parking. If visiting these sites, please respect park rules, neighbors, private property and regulatory signage. For public safety reasons and to avoid being towed, do not block maintenance gates, or park on road shoulders or in other undesignated areas.

Black Oak Basin

In 2020, the City of Eugene added 128 acres to the Ridgeline Park System. The new park, Black Oak Basin (BOB), was purchased with a grant from the Willamette Wildlife Mitigation Program, landowner donation, and City acquisition funds. This parcel creates a connected landscape of about 300 acres with Bloomberg, Coryell Ridge and Moon Mountain. The grant was awarded because of BOB's habitat value, connectivity, ability to support priority plants and animals, and opportunity to provide sustainable public access. In the coming years, Parks and Open Space will be removing invasive species and hazardous fuel loads (overgrown vegetation) and enhancing public access. Please respect neighbors and boundary markers at this and all sites.

Murray Hill, Bloomberg, Coryell Ridge, Moon Mountain Parks, Black Oak Basin and Suzanne Arlie

These Ridgeline sites do not yet have safe and adequate parking to support public access, but are stepping stones toward completion of the Rivers to Ridges vision.

Special thanks to all of the volunteers who help care for and maintain the Ridgeline Trail system. Learn how you can get involved at eugene-or.gov/parkvolunteer

Parks & Open Space

1820 Roosevelt Blvd., Eugene, OR 97402 541-682-4800

eugene-or.gov/parks