TAKE THE LEGENDS OF LARAMIE TOUR

JACQUES LA RAMÉE - 1815

Seventy-five years before Wyoming was admitted into the union, French-Canadian fur trader and mountain man Jacques La Ramée trekked the great High Plains. He returned in 1820 for a season of trapping along what is now the Laramie River and was never seen or heard from again. The details of his disappearance are still a mystery, but the town of Laramie, two rivers, a fort, a county, and a mountain peak bear his name today.

FORT SANDERS - 1866

A frontier military post built on July 19, 1866, Fort Sanders was originally named Fort John Buford. It was later renamed in honor of Civil War General William P. Sanders. Constructed mostly of wood, most of the fort deteriorated over time. Some of the original guardhouse stones are all that exist today. Erected to protect the Overland Trail travelers and workers constructing the Union Pacific Railway from hostile Indian attacks, the remnants of the old fort can still be seen three miles south of Laramie on Hwy. 287.

WYOMING TERRITORIAL PRISON - 1872

Housing more than 1,000 outlaws including the notorious Butch Cassidy, the Wyoming Territorial Prison is one of Wyoming's oldest stone buildings. Built in 1872, the site served as a federal and state prison until 1903 when a new penitentiary was completed in Rawlins about 100 miles west of Laramie. The University of Wyoming was given the prison grounds to be repurposed into an experiment station for the College of Agriculture. In 1991, the historic site was opened to the public, and today Wyoming State Parks manages the property as one of Albany County's iconic historic museums.

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD - 1868

Union Pacific railroad track construction crews connected Laramie to the East Coast on May 4, 1868. Passengers began arriving the same day and a regular train schedule was established less than a week later. The railroad brought in civilization, inspiring residents and newcomers to build a town out of the hell-on-wheels-style tent city. Laramie was Union Pacific's western hub, but the company moved on when the first transcontinental railroad neared completion. Visitors can tour Depot Park to get up close and personal with the area's ironclad history.

BILL NYE AND BOOMERANG - 1881

Bill Nye, more formally known as Edgar Wilson Nye, was the founder and editor of the Laramie Boomerang. He named the paper for his mule because of what he described as the "eccentricity of his orbit." As Nye's son Frank said, something about the word "boomerang" piqued Nye's imagination. "His mule, his mine, his newspaper, his (first) book (Bill Nye and Boomerang), all bore the trademark."

Westerns & Hollywood Magic

Native Americans, fur trappers, frontier forts, the Union Pacific Railroad, and famous outlaws are just some aspects of Laramie's rich western heritage — a heritage Hollywood was keen to build upon. Western movies and TV shows peaked in the 1950s and 1960s. From TV shows such as "Lawman" (1958-62) starring John Russell, "Laramie" (1959-63) starring John Smith and Robert Fuller to films like "The Man from Laramie" (1955) starring James Stewart, "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" (1969) starring Paul Newman and Robert Redford, Albany County has fascinated writers and directors alike. But America's infatuation with Wyoming's wide-open spaces and roughneck culture didn't disappear after westerns fell from the limelight. "Hell on Wheels" (2011) starring Anson Mount focused heavily on the area and dedicated an entire episode to Laramie. While Laramie secured several A-list titles, the area was used in a slew of "B" movies as well. With a western on every major network and hundreds of popular western books, Laramie's abundant history has inspired storytellers for more than a century.

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

When exploring the mountains and wilderness areas, it's imperative to have a plan before you go in case a trailhead is full or a fire ban is in place. Check visitlaramie.org to stay updated and educated on the areas you are planning to visit.

TRAIL ETIQUETTE

If you're new to trails and the outdoors, it's important to know the rules and how to share them with others. Downhill users yield to uphill users, always. On multi-use trails, all users yield to equestrians and bicyclists yield to hikers.

PRACTICE LEAVE NO TRACE

Keep Wyoming's beautiful places beautiful. In order for others to enjoy the same stunning rivers, forests, and mountains, please leave the area better than you found it. Pack out what you packed in.

RESPECT THE LOCAL COMMUNITIES

Albany County is excited to welcome you with its western hospitality, and folks ask that while you are visiting the Laramie area, you treat it as you would ask others to treat the community where you live.

WATCH FOR WILDLIFE

Southeastern Wyoming provides incredible wildlife viewing opportunities in every direction, from moose, elk, bears, and wolverines to songbirds, wild horses, and more. Many who visit Wyoming are new to seeing wildlife, and it can be exciting when you see your first bear or moose. They share their outdoor spaces with tourists, and it's important to know how to view them safely while respecting their space so that they stay wild and free. Remember to:

- Keep a Safe Distance
- Never Feed Wildlife
- Be 'Bear Aware'
- Don't Bother Baby Animals, Mama is Nearby
- Avoid the Selfie

An Epic Summer Weekend Roadtrip

Medicine Bow Peak Trail
Snowy Range Mountains

REQUEST THE SNOWY RANGE
SCENIC BYWAY BROCHURE

Story by Dani and Brian Harrington

The Snowy Range Mountains, located 35 miles west of Laramie, offer a wide range of alpine recreation experiences. How should you explore this beautiful mountain range? The options are plentiful, though they are of course impacted by the time of year. The following is an itinerary my husband and I drew up for a summer weekend (Friday – Sunday) in the locally-named and loved “Snowies.”

Sugarloaf Mountain
& Lewis Lake
Medicine Bow Natl. Forest

OVERNIGHT AT SUGARLOAF CAMPGROUND

To get a jump start on our weekend in the Snowies, we packed everything on Thursday night so that by the time Friday arrived, we were ready to roll out of town immediately after work. A stop at the Laramie Farmers Market, held Fridays from July to September, was a no-brainer for us.

EVENING TROUT FISHING AT LEWIS AND LIBBY LAKES

After arriving at Sugarloaf, we set up the tent, assembled our fly rods, and eagerly set off to Lewis and Libby Lakes, conveniently located just a short walk from our site. As the sun set above Medicine Bow Peak, we fished for cutthroat and brook trout, reflecting on the busy week, and felt gratitude for the place we live.

HIKE MEDICINE BOW PEAK

On Saturday we woke with a purpose: to climb the highest point in southern Wyoming, otherwise known as Medicine Bow Peak. The peak looms just above 12,000 feet and gifts those who reach its top with stunning, unobstructed views of the entire range and surrounding valleys.

RENT UTVS FROM ALBANY LODGE

We packed up camp and headed down the mountain to the small town of Albany, home to Albany Lodge. To get there, pass through Centennial and turn south onto Highway 11. Albany Lodge is tucked into a canyon at the base of the Snowy Range and rents UTVs, kayaks, and snowmobiles, and also offers guided tours of the area. You can rent UTVs (also known as side-by-sides) by half or full days. We opted for a half-day, and from our UTVs, we saw parts of the Snowy Range that we have never seen before, faster than we had ever seen before.

Roadside Curiosities

Traveling across Wyoming on I-80 you will find some unique roadside curiosities and attractions. Make sure you stop to explore these gems of Wyoming history.

Ames
Monument
I-80 Exit 329

AMES MONUMENT

On Interstate 80 at Vedauwoo (Exit 329), turn south and take a short drive to the Ames Monument. An unusual 60-foot pyramid-shaped monument, this haunting limestone mass stands alone on the prairie and towers over the remains of the one-time railroad ghost town of Sherman. This monument was built in 1881 to honor the Ames brothers, Oliver and Oakes, who were influential leaders in the construction of the transcontinental railroad.

Tree in the Rock
I-80 MM 333

TREE IN THE ROCK

On Interstate 80 near MM 333, this small tree has fascinated travelers since the first train rolled past on the Union Pacific Railroad. It is said that the builders of the original railroad diverted the tracks slightly to pass by the tree as they laid rails across the Sherman Mountains in 1867-69. The train used to stop here while the locomotive firemen "gave the tree a drink" from their water buckets.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN MEMORIAL MONUMENT

The imposing Abraham Lincoln Memorial Monument (exit 323) was sculpted by University of Wyoming art professor Robert Russin in 1959 to commemorate the highest point on the Lincoln Highway. Also look for the Henry Joy monument surrounded by a fence with four Lincoln Highway concrete markers. There are interesting displays inside the building and great views outside.

Hiking, Biking, & Climbing

Bike or hike the easy 3.2-mile loop that circles Turtle Rock in the Medicine Bow National Forest. From the gravel parking strip just above the main trailhead area, walk downhill to the paved area at the base of the weathered formation. Head northwest on the easy trail as it winds beneath aspen and squeezes between Turtle Rock's boulder-strewn base and a marshy wetland to the south. This first section of trail affords close-up views of the piled, cracked rock and climbers making their way up the face, before gaining some distance from the formation as it turns east. Scattered fir and pine trees line the trail as it rolls over several small hills past the rock's sloped backside.

MEDICINE BOW PEAK

Topping out at 12,014 feet, Medicine Bow Peak is the highest point in southern Wyoming. The most common hiking route starts from Lewis Lake, with a steep trek up 1,200 feet in elevation over only 1.6 miles to the boulder-strewn summit. This climb offers world-class views of the Laramie Plains and the glacial lakes below. Before heading out on a hike, be sure to read up on how to handle altitude. Check visitlaramie.org.

VEDAUWOO

Vedauwoo is considered a rock climbing mecca. Here you will find some of the best climbing in the state, ranging from 5.0 to 5.14 difficulty with many places to practice crack climbing. Rock climbing at Vedauwoo can take on many forms: climbing, belaying, or repelling. Vedauwoo is derived from the Arapaho word "bito'o'wu" meaning "earth-born." The characteristic Sherman Granite hoodoos and outcrops of this region are over 1.4 billion years old, some of the oldest rock in Wyoming. The fabulous formations are due to an uplift of the Laramie Mountains that began about 70 million years ago, along with the erosion of younger layers of rock and sediment, which continues to this day.

DEERWOOD RANCH WILD HORSE ECOSANCTUARY

The Deerwood Ranch is approximately 4,700 acres of Wyoming beauty. Three hundred fifty wild Wyoming mustangs call Deerwood home, not to mention the native deer, elk, coyote, and all manner of wildlife. With the Middle Fork of the Little Laramie River running through the property, there is year-round access to open running water. Abundant trees and willows provide refuge and great protection from the realities of Wyoming weather. The ranch is conveniently located approximately 35 miles west of Laramie and south of Centennial.

CENTENNIAL, WYOMING

Located on the eastern gateway of the Snowy Range Scenic Byway (Hwy. 130), Centennial was first settled by gold miners seeking their fortune. Historic mines still dot the Snowy Range, though gold never panned out. Butted up to the Medicine Bow National Forest, the area provided wood for the railroad ties connecting the Union Pacific and Central Pacific lines. Later, the discovery of gold lured miners, prospectors, and merchants to the area. Centennial is now a year-round destination, rustic yet comfortable, that serves as the Gateway to the Snowy Range.

ROCK RIVER, WYOMING

Another town born from the ashes of “Hell on Wheels”, Rock River was founded after the Union Pacific Railroad moved the railroad line west of the Rock Creek Station in 1898. Located 40 miles northwest of Laramie, about 250 people call the agricultural hamlet home. Explore late 19th and early 20th century architecture in a friendly small-town atmosphere hard to come by in today’s fast-paced world.

Flora & Fauna

Southeastern Wyoming provides fantastic nature viewing opportunities in every direction. The diverse terrain harbors moose, elk, whitetail deer, bears, beavers, and wolverines, while the sky is filled with the trilling melodies of songbirds and raucous cries of geese. The Deerwood Wild Horse EcoSanctuary to the west offers viewing opportunities for wild horses, and the Hutton Lake National Wildlife Refuge to the southwest offers more opportunities to view rare migrating birds. And while the opportunities for viewing may be plentiful, please be respectful and follow the area's recreate responsibly rules (pg. 5) to keep wildlife wild and allow others to enjoy the natural scenery.

VIEWING OPPORTUNITIES

Spring and early summer months are ideal for catching the wild flowers in bloom and watching the wildlife awaken from the long winter. If you plan to visit later in the year, animals can be spotted most often at dawn or dusk. For more on animal and plant life, visit visitlaramie.org.

Wyoming's State Flower

From large to small, you won't have any trouble spotting the Laramie area's native wildlife. Marmots, large alpine rodents, can be seen amongst the boulder fields along the Snowy Range Scenic Byway. These critters can live up to 15 years in the wild and are herbivores and hibernators. Please avoid feeding them as they need to naturally scavenge for food.

This adorable creature is known as a pine marten. The species varies in color, but can typically be identified by their light-colored bib, round ears, and bushy tails. Martens can be seen throughout the seasons, but are more commonly spotted during the warmer months in the national forest.

Bald eagles and hawks are popular residents of Wyoming and are often sighted in the Laramie area. Their natural habitat is typically near large bodies of water — head out near the Laramie Plains Lakes and you are sure to spot one or two. Juvenile eagles are often confused with adults because they have yet to grow the white feathers on their heads and tails.

MURAL TOUR

The Laramie Mural Project

The Laramie Mural Project utilizes local artists to create one-of-a-kind large-scale murals in the heart of downtown that reflect Laramie's culture. Founded in 2011, the project was a collaboration between the University of Wyoming Art Museum, local Laramie artists, and the Laramie Main Street Alliance. Most of the murals are located along main streets, but some reside behind the shops and restaurants in the alleys of downtown.

Trails, Rails, & Ales

When it comes to small, local breweries housing some of the finest ales in the Mountain West, look no further than Laramie. The historic downtown is full of delicious craft beer and scores points for fewer crowds and walkable convenience, boasting a surprising five local breweries located within just a few blocks of one another. Proximity and quality have made Laramie a real beacon for the craft beer enthusiast and the craft beer curious alike.

This is How We Brew It

Foodie Tour

If you're expecting country music and cowboy boots, that's what you'll get in Laramie, Wyoming, but you'll also get a beloved vegetarian cafe, more eclectic bistros than you have ever imagined, craft beer, craft cheese, craft ice cream, and craft chocolate. Unexpected? That's Laramie, Wyoming. The Downtown district is located next to an active railyard and periodically Laramie's old buildings rumble as a train goes by, which happens fairly frequently. A large foot and bicycle bridge join the east and west sections of the town.

If you are looking for hearty American dishes characteristic of a quiet western town, you will find those here, too. But also be sure to check out dozens of diverse restaurant offerings, including Thai, Japanese, Mexican, Italian, and more. After your meal, enjoy a pint of frothy locally-brewed beer downtown or answer your morning cravings at a local coffee shop bakery or quaint hometown diner.
