KYLE SPRADLEY

WELCOME

Two decades after moving to Laramie as a University of Wyoming student, I remain in awe of this place. I am so grateful that sharing my favorite corner of Wyoming with the world is now my job, a true "pinch-me" moment! It has been an incredible opportunity and one made easier by the fact that Laramie sells itself. As Wyoming's one and only university town, Laramie holds an unexpected spirit found nowhere else; offering up a blend of grit, youthful energy, and genuine hometown pride.

Inside this guide, you'll discover what makes the Laramie area a must-visit destination: wide-open outdoor spaces that rekindle the soul, vibrant shops and restaurants with a Western flair, and a creative community that knows how to celebrate in every season. From powder-filled ski weekends in Centennial to summer concerts in historic Downtown Laramie, you are always part of our family here in Wyoming's hometown.

Welcome to "Laradise," home of the Cowboys.

LARAMIE DELIVERS HIGH-ENERGY OUTDOOR ADVENTURES

BY TARYN SHORR-MCKEE

Perched at 7,220 feet and positioned between the Laramie and Snowy Ranges, Laramie is a city that thrives on high-altitude adventure. Here, chasing adrenaline isn't just an occasional pursuit—it's deeply woven into the city's identity. Whether it's carving turns on fresh powder, powering up rugged trails in an ATV, or clinging to granite by your fingertips (literally!) in a world-class climbing area, Laramie offers endless ways to get your heart racing.

ADVENTURE AWAITS

Scan here for all recreation options.

BRIAN HARRINGTON - BHP IMAGING

Snowy Range Ski Area

FROM WINTER SPORTS THAT STRETCH WELL INTO SPRING, TO SUMMER TRAILS THAT WIND THROUGH WILDFLOWER-BLANKETED ALPINE MEADOWS, LARAMIE'S VARIETY OF OUTDOOR RECREATION IS STAGGERING.

And the best part? You don't have to venture far from the city—mere minutes from downtown, you'll find yourself immersed in truly wild terrain that feels worlds away. Here are some of the best ways to get outside in "Laradise."

SKIING

FROM GROOMERS TO BACKCOUNTRY

Winter in Laramie belongs to the powder-hounds. Just 30 miles west of town, above the hamlet of Centennial, Snowy Range Ski Area provides an ultra laid-back, affordable alternative to the mega resorts farther south and west. Families love it for its approachable vibe, while more seasoned skiers appreciate being able to hone their skills on 27 runs with a notable lack of crowds. Lift lines are short (and often nonexistent), the views stretch across the beautiful Medicine Bow National Forest, and the atmosphere is refreshingly unpretentious.

For those who prefer gliding across snow rather than down it, cross-country options abound in the region. The Summit Loop Trail, about 15 minutes from Laramie accessed via the Tie City Trailhead, offers a climb to reach the top that's rewarded with spectacular views and a well-deserved downhill descent. Local tip: go clockwise to get the biggest elevation gain out of the way at the beginning. Approximately 40 minutes southwest, the Chimney Park Trails provide 15 miles of groomed routes where the only sounds are your skis cutting across snow and moose grunting. Right off the Snowy Range Scenic Byway, the steeper backcountry Barber Lake Trail is ready for Nordic skiing.

BRIAN HARRINGTON - BHP IMAGING

Riders weave through alpine forests, along snowy ridges, and find themselves in wide-open meadows that feel tailor-made for throttle therapy.

Medicine Bow National Forest

SNOWMOBILING

HIGH-OCTANE IN THE HIGH COUNTRY

If you consider speed and adrenaline synonymous, you'll quickly fall in love with Albany County's snowmobile terrain. The Green Rock trailhead west of Centennial serves as the gateway to more than 200 miles of groomed trails criss-crossing the Medicine Bow National Forest. Riders weave through alpine forests, along snowy ridges, and find themselves in wide-open meadows that feel tailor-made for throttle therapy.

Beginners will find plenty of groomed terrain variety, whether they borrow a machine or rent from a local outfitter. And for expert riders, one challenge stands above the rest: the infamous Widowmaker. This steep ascent is (almost) as intimidating as it sounds and has earned legendary status among snowmobilers. Conquering it is a badge of honor, but even watching others attempt it gets your pulse racing.

Regardless of which trails you tackle, it's crucial to understand the wild, sometimes unforgiving terrain. Stop into Elway Powersports or Frontier Cycles to get intel on current trail conditions, or consider going out with 3C Guiding.

ATVS

ROARING THROUGH THE FOREST

When the snow melts, the same alpine trails that serve snowmobilers transform into playgrounds for ATVs. The Medicine Bow National Forest spans hundreds of thousands of acres, laced with trails catering to every type of rider. Some follow old logging roads that climb gradually through pines to fire lookouts, while others twist and turn across rocky ridges.

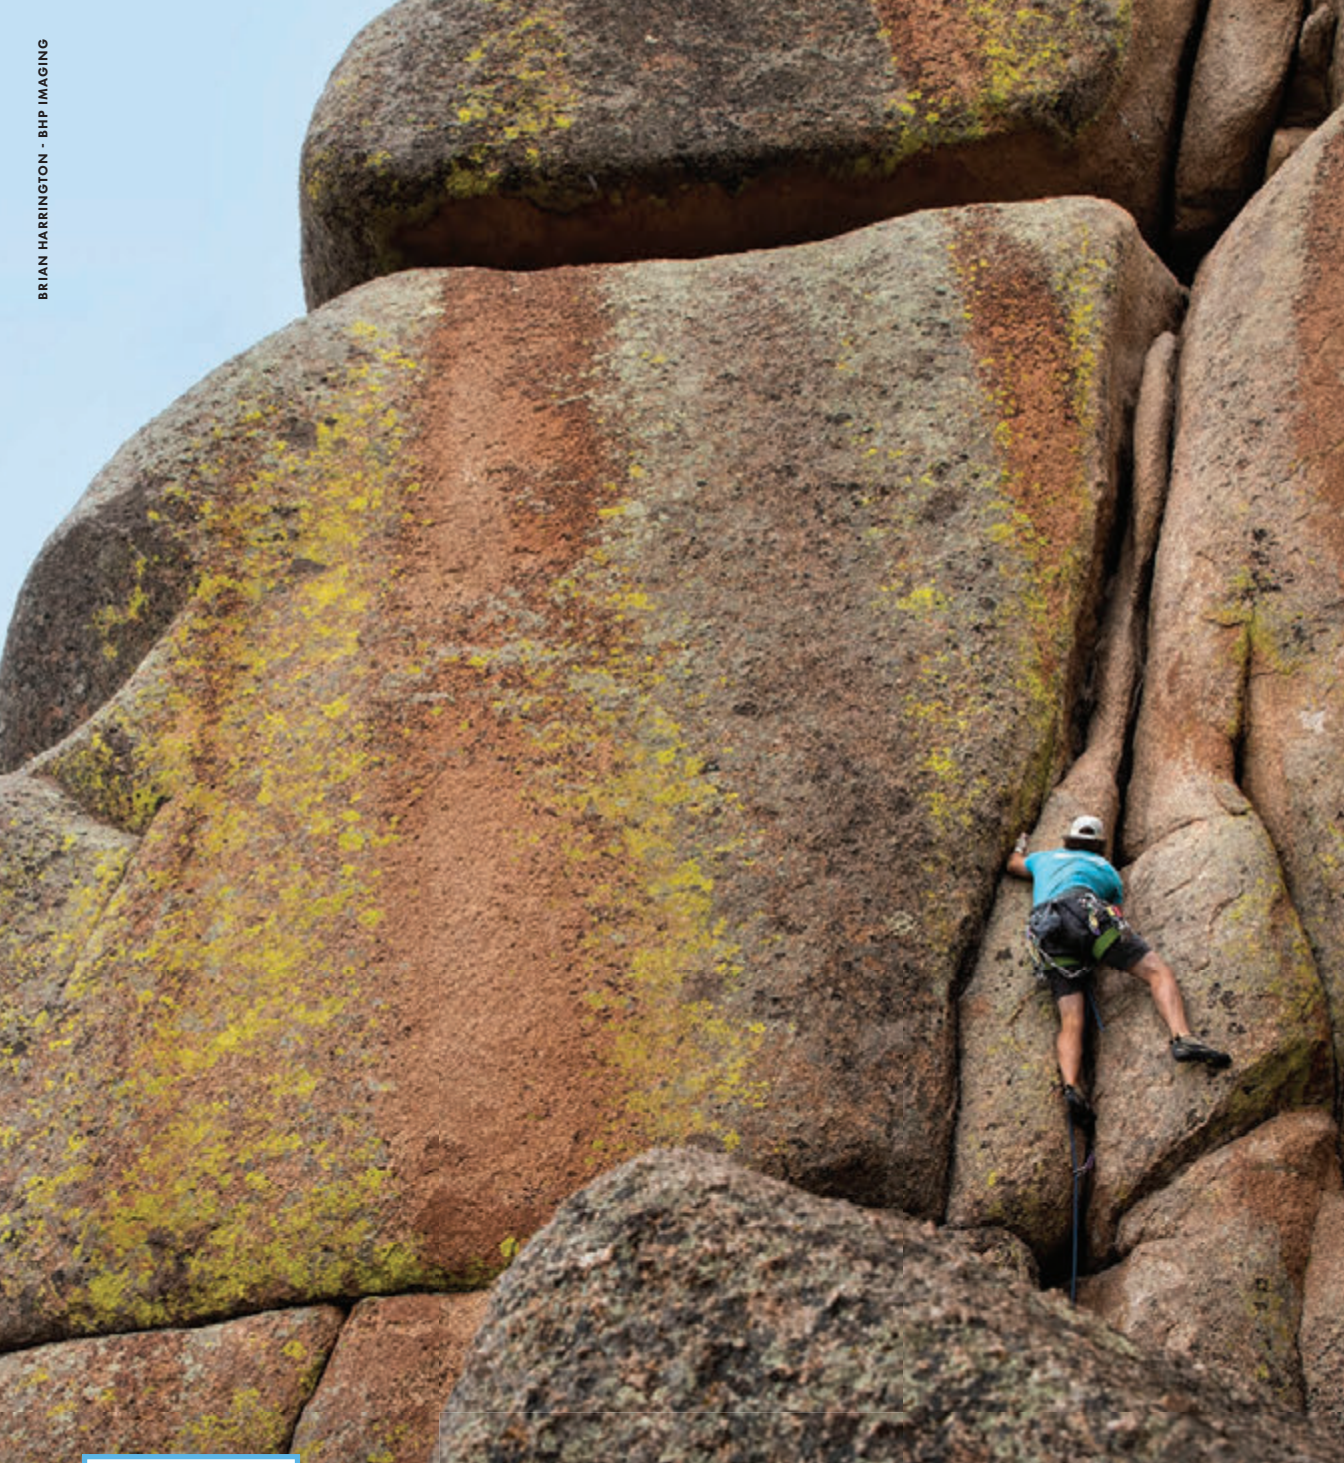

Because of the sheer size of the forest, it's easy to design your own adventure—an hour-long loop near a campground or a full-day exploring multiple trail systems. 3C Guiding offers ATV rentals, complete with all necessary gear and maps, while Elway Powersports and Frontier Cycles sell and service ATVs and more.

CLIMBING

GRANITE GIANTS OF VEDAUWOO

Of all the adrenaline-fueled activities around Laramie, rock climbing may be the most iconic. The Vedauwoo Recreation Area has long been a major international climbing destination, renowned for its distinctive slab and "wide crack" formations. Climbers of all abilities and from all corners of the globe come here, beginners learning to place their first cams alongside experts tackling off-width routes that test the limits of technique and physical strength.

Vedauwoo's accessibility is a tremendous part of its appeal—not many places can claim world-class climbing just a short drive from downtown. The 700-some routes vary from bouldering problems and single-pitch climbs to epic multi-pitch adventures that top out with panoramic views of the surrounding plains. Even non-climbers can't help but be awed by the sculpted formations, which seem to rise out of the prairie like fortresses built by giants.

Vedauwoo Recreation Area

BIKING

TWO WHEELS, ENDLESS TERRAIN

With its one-two punch of wide-open roads and rugged mountain trails, Laramie is a dream for cyclists. In town, broad streets and bike-friendly routes make it easy to pedal from a downtown coffee shop to the University of Wyoming campus or along the scenic Laramie River Greenbelt. Visitors without their own bicycles can rent gear at Fast Haus Ski & Bike, a go-to local outfitter for visiting and local adventurers alike.

Mountain bikers, meanwhile, have an abundance of singletrack to explore. The Schoolyard, part of the Pilot Hill Recreation Area trail system right in town, adjoins to national forest trail systems to the east. Connector trails meet with the Tie City system and Happy Jack Recreation Areas, dishing out moderate climbs along with sweeping views. The connected systems offer up more than 100 miles of riding to meet the needs of all riders from beginners to advanced, with flows and descents as exhilarating as they are demanding.

Medicine Bow Peak

HIKING

STEP BY STEP INTO THE WILDERNESS

On foot, you have the opportunity to explore the subtler, slower-paced side of Laramie's landscapes. Vedauwoo Recreation Area, famous for its towering granite formations, offers several easy walking paths that meander through the rocks, as well as prime moose and beaver habitat. The loop around Turtle Rock is the must-see trail of the system, winding its 3 miles around a turtle's "shell" popular with crack climbers. Beaver ponds dot the landscape, with aspen groves that delight in autumn. For views of the hoodoos above it all, Headquarters Trail offers a high-elevation summit trek, just 15 miles east of Laramie.

If you're after alpine views, many trail systems in the Snowy Range skirt through mountain meadows and the 100 natural lakes of the area. To push yourself to the limit, summiting Medicine Bow Peak is the pinnacle of adventure, pun intended. At 12,018 feet, it's the highest point in southern Wyoming. The trail demands stamina and sure footing, but the payoff—panoramic views of the Snowies and shimmering glacial lakes below—is unforgettable.

FUEL YOUR NEXT ADVENTURE IN LARAMIE

After a day filled with pursuing adrenaline, Laramie itself offers plenty of ways to relax and recharge. Grab a hearty meal or frosty beverage at one of the many downtown restaurants or bars, stroll through historic neighborhoods, or simply enjoy the college town vibe that makes this city so uniquely appealing. And with the mountains just beyond city limits, tomorrow's adventure is always close at hand. From skiing to snowmobiling, hiking to climbing, outdoor passion meets high-elevation exhilaration in Laramie. Whether you're seeking a low-key family-friendly outing or chasing your new personal best, the possibilities here are as vast as the Wyoming sky.

GET THE SCOOP ON LOCALS' FAVORITE DINING & SHOPPING HOT SPOTS

With its small-town vibe, a downtown that's easily walkable, and streets that are oozing with history, not to mention a prime plains location between two mountain ranges, Laramie has a little extra something for everyone. It's a city that embodies the West's pioneering spirit, is brimming with university culture, and draws recreational enthusiasts and food lovers alike. But to really experience its many great offerings, you have to know where to go.

READY TO LIVE LIKE A LARAMIE LOCAL? DON'T MISS THESE SPOTS TO EAT, DRINK, AND SHOP.

DINING LARAMIE STYLE

Laramie's wide selection of eateries range from a vegetarian landmark to a Japanese restaurant where ramen noodles and poke bowls draw families, university students, and everyone in between. Here's a curated selection of dining places, most of which are locally owned, that embrace the city's authentic charm.

Downtown's Born in a Barn dishes out juicy burgers, double-fried wings, and mouthwatering apps like "barnchos," house-made chips topped with queso, shredded BBQ pork, jalapeños, red onion, bacon, cheddar cheese, and spicy BBQ sauce in a casual, pub-style setting. For vegan and vegetarian comfort food that carnivores will love, too, swing by the city's long-running eatery, Sweet Melissa. Its neighboring Front Street Tavern complements dishes like pesto ravioli and cauliflower chickpea chicken masala with craft cocktails, wines, and regional brews.

Even the bread is made in-house at the 2nd Street Deli, where "from scratch" foods range from apple bacon cheddar melts to tofu banh mis. This spot is a lunchtime favorite, also serving up warming soups and salads so large, they come in a punch bowl. If it's pizza you're after, Alibi Wood Fire Pizzaria & Bakery offers a variety of options, each made with caputo flour, San Marzano tomatoes, fresh mozzarella, and toppings like pulled pork, caramelized onions, and artichoke spread. Craft cocktails and draft brews are also par for the course.

Enjoy artisanal cheese and wine pairings at Chalk 'n Cheese, where fromages range from Holland's double cream gouda to Colorado's "First Snow," a marbled, rind-ripened goat cheese. Or shop for specialty items like sea salt caramels and olive oil. Located across the street from the University of Wyoming College of Health Sciences, Turtle Rock Coffee & Cafe is a community gathering space serving up coffee drinks like lattes, chais, and matchas, plus fresh-baked scones, pastries, and plenty of breakfast and lunch options.

Dine on plates of poutine, stuffed calzones, and signature burgers ground daily at The Crowbar & Grill, a laid-back neighborhood gathering place where eats and libations go hand-in-hand. Easily recognizable by its pink exterior, the retro-style J's Prairie Rose Cafe has garnered a loyal following with its breakfast burritos and homemade green chili, as well as lunch entreés ranging from chicken fried steak to strip loin.

For something a little different, Bejo Dua Sushi & Ramen showcases an extensive menu of Asian-inspired fare, including yellowtail rolls, stir-fried noodles, and poke bowls, as well as a selection of beer and sake. Or savor authentic (and well-spiced) Indian and Nepalese dishes like saag paneer and butter chicken at Buffalo Indian, known for its open kitchen and comfy booths.

Swing by the family-friendly Library Sports Grille & Brewery to nosh on pub foods like tacos, fried mac 'n' cheese bites, and fish and chips, and enjoy a selection of unfiltered, house-brewed beers, from chocolatey porters to malty pale ales. In nearby Centennial, The Old Corral Hotel & Steakhouse has been known for its great steaks since the 1940s and features classic ribeye, prime rib, fish, and burger choices all dished up with rustic charm.

SHOPPING LARAMIE STYLE

Whether it's a cowboy hat or a kayak you're after, you're sure to find what you're looking for among Laramie's plethora of locally owned shops.

Big Hollow Food Co-Op is a small, community-owned grocery store specializing in healthy items that promote a sustainable community. Shop for organic produce, locally raised meat, allergy-friendly products and honey, milk, and eggs from nearby producers. Pick up American straw hats, Hondo boots, Wrangler jeans, and totes at Martindale's Western Store, Laramie's only locally owned Western shop. For quality and affordable Wyoming fan apparel, including UW Cowgirls volleyball tees and Lake Hattie Fattie caps, mosey on into The Knothole.

The Bent & Rusty

Range Leather Co.

The Knothole

Poppy's

Range Leather Co.

When it comes to the great outdoors, Laramie's Basecamp features gear and clothing for everything from trail running and hiking to mountaineering, skiing, and snowboarding. The shop is run by a staff of outdoor experts and technicians. Purchase high-quality secondhand goods at NU2U and NU2U Sports consignment shops. While the former focuses on clothes ranging from formal attire to Western wear, the latter stocks mountain bikes, kayaks, and anything related to outdoor recreation.

The Bent & Rusty is chock-full of unique finds, including antique wares, vintage taxidermy, repurposed home furnishings, and custom wood signs. As one of the largest craftspersons' cooperatives in the country, this space houses more than 30 crafters, artisans, and makers all under one roof. A full-service flower shop and women's boutique (think Wyoming state necklaces and hydrangea memo notepads), Poppy's offers floral arrangements for every occasion.

Procure Pinebeach-printed tees and Milwaukee Wyoming hoodies at Pinebeach Supply Co., or hats, earrings, wallets, and totes at Range Leather Co. Each leather good is handcrafted right on-site at Range's Laramie workshop, using the highest grade Horween full grain leather as well as age-old crafting techniques.

Looking for the perfect read? Peruse titles ranging from new local interest to used fiction at Second Story Bookstore. Check out Night Heron Books & Coffeehouse, known for its expansive selection of used titles. This two-story shop also serves up coffee, paninis, and all-day breakfast burritos.

DIVE INTO THE WATER ALL AROUND LARAMIE

BY KATIE JACKSON

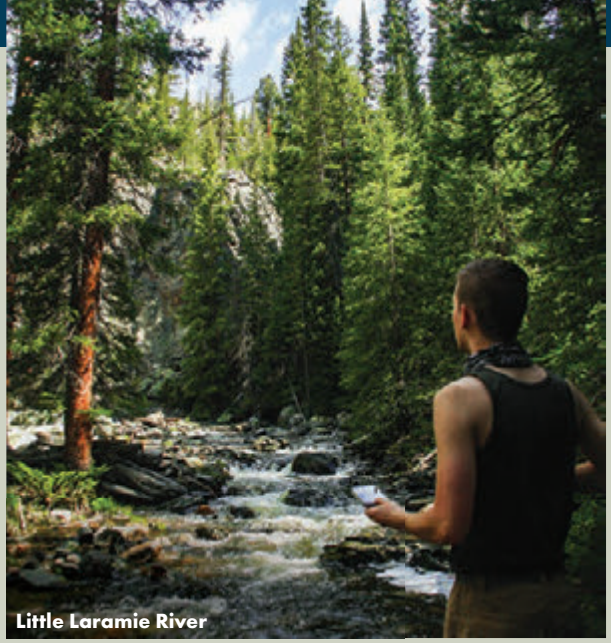

RECREATE RESPONSIBLY

Pledge to follow the Cowboy Code of the West and recreate responsibly—scan here.

Snowy Range Scenic Byway

If nature is healing, then water is medicine. Did you know you can reap even more benefits from being outside if it involves a water-based activity? Scientific studies show that H2O not only hydrates, it also contributes to overall wellness. Perhaps that's why Laramie residents are so happy. Here in "Laradise" there's no shortage of places to recreate on, or even in, water.

Little Laramie River

PADDLING AROUND

Kayakers can't go wrong at Mirror Lake, where they can watch their wake create ripples in the surrounding mountains or at least the reflections of them on the glassy water. Lake Marie, another glacial-fed lake that's popular with paddlers and is named after the first woman elected to the Wyoming Legislature, is less than a mile away. You can also easily portage between Lewis Lake and Libby Lake. They enjoy the scenic Snowy Range backdrop, too.

FISHING FUN

Anglers flock to this section of Southeastern Wyoming to cast their lines in miles of Laramie River tributaries and more than 100 lakes dotting everywhere from the plains to the peaks. For trophy-sized trout weighing upwards of 15 pounds, head to Lake Hattie, the largest of the five Laramie Plains Lakes. These productive lakes attract fly fishermen and boaters alike. And if you're bold enough to brave the cold and fish in February, set your shelter up and drill a hole in the ice on Twin Buttes Lake. Backcountry fishing abounds near Laramie, too. The Snowy Range Mountains, just 45 miles west of downtown, are riddled with subalpine lakes. Most boast such healthy populations of salmonids that they don't need to be restocked.

Three fishable forks converge to become the Little Laramie River, meeting up with the Big Laramie River in town.

GET OUT ON THE LAKE

Laramie also embraces boaters with motors. Spanning 500 acres, nearby Rob Roy Reservoir is ideal for mountain views and kokanee salmon fishing. The campground next to the boat ramp has 65 sites and offers plenty of easy access to the shoreline. If you plan on swimming, it's best to invest in a wetsuit. For world-class windsurfing, kite surfing, and even wingfoiling, Lake Hattie is where it's at. What this 1,200-acre lake lacks in trees, it more than makes up for with wind to propel your adventures.

TAKE A DIP

If you visit Laramie in between Memorial Day and mid-November, take a day trip over the Snowy Range Scenic Byway—a destination in itself—to take a dip in the hot springs in Saratoga. Native American tribes called Saratoga, just 80 miles west of Laramie, the "place of magic waters," and even refused to battle on the sacred ground. For a rustic vibe, explore Saratoga's beloved Hobo Hot Springs, free and open to the public 24/7. It's conveniently located on the banks of the North Platte River, so after soaking in the aptly named Lobster Pot, consider a cold plunge.

PROTECTING PARADISE

MASON BARKER FROM TWO DOGS GUIDE SERVICE, WHICH OFFERS GUIDED TRIPS TO THE WYOMING OUTDOORS.

Q: What sustainable fishing practices does Two Dogs promote?
A: A lot of the areas that we fish are all natural. They haven't been stocked in over 50 years. So keeping that wild ecosystem the way it is is really important.

Q: Why should people care about sustainable practices during their fishing trips?
A: If we don't practice sustainability, we won't have it in 10 years. As we see more people enjoying the outdoors, [some] do not practice sustainability. And this leads to areas closing. So practicing sustainability will ensure that we can have all of these opportunities and privileges for years to come.

Q: What advice would you give visitors who are looking to recreate responsibly on the rivers?
A: One of the biggest things is [to] clean up after yourself, [and] treating the roads properly. Another big part of conservation is treating all of our wildlife with respect. If we start destroying their habitat, we start losing those resources. And it takes 10, 15, 20 years to reestablish those populations. So keeping those ecosystems healthy is incredibly important.

HONORING NATURE

LINDSAY OLSON FROM ATMOSPHERE MOUNTAINWORKS, WHICH LOCALLY CREATES OUTDOOR GEAR THAT'S PERSONAL, SUSTAINABLE, AND BUILT TO LAST.

Q: How would you advise somebody on recreating responsibly?

A: We have the prairie and our forests are not lush. So I think recreating responsibly is staying on the trail as much as possible. It prevents erosion and extra trails. And that's just a small way that you can recreate responsibly.

Q: What is your favorite principle of the Cowboy Character initiative?

A: My favorite principle of the Cowboy Character initiative is leaving a trail or a recreation site better than you found it, or as good as you can. We have some sites that are pretty well-trafficked, so if you just keep that principle in mind, then you know that you're not doing damage. And it's really important that they're cared for and that people can keep using them.

SUSTAINING HERITAGE

JOSHUA ST JEOR FROM REBEL RANCH, WHICH BORDERS THE MEDICINE BOW NATIONAL FOREST AND OFFERS AGRITOURISM EXPERIENCES.

Q: What can visitors expect to do here?
A: The activities and agritourism that we're focusing on is that experience of taking care of an animal and what goes into it every day. People will get to help us move the bison, give them treats, and see them move to fresh grass every day. And then taking care of chickens, maybe raking out a chicken coop or collecting your own eggs. That's something especially for the kids, to be able to collect eggs and go home with a half-dozen eggs that they collected fresh that day.

Q: Why should folks who visit care about sustainability or why their food is coming from one source?
A: I think people should care where their food's coming from for a couple different reasons. One is health, to be able to get different nutrient densities. [And] people want to experience places like this, [which is] another reason to care where the food is coming from. By supporting the business[es] and buying products from them, that business can continue to purchase animals and take care of the land. If big ranches can't sustain, you lose the wildness of that area.

SUPPORTING LOCALS

BJ EDWARDS FROM TASTE OF THE WIND, A SMALL-SCALE, LOCAL FARM BUSINESS THAT PRODUCES ETHICAL, SUSTAINABLE, CLEAN, AND LOCAL FOOD.

Q: How can folks who visit Laramie and surrounding areas make sure they're doing so responsibly?

A: This part of Wyoming has a lot to offer, and what you eat matters so much. Whenever you make a food purchase, you're supporting either large corporations or you can support smaller family operations. Laramie has Big Hollow Co-op, [so] you could grab some charcuterie stuff and have a picnic. You're not producing a bunch of plastic waste and you're supporting more local producers and a local business.

Q: What are some of your favorite ways to enjoy the great outdoors in your spare time?

A: Laramie has awesome mountain biking, great freshwater fishing, and there's snow all year round. We want to preserve our natural resources because what would we be without the earth that we are on? Laramie is a unique ecosystem. It can be fragile in some ways. So we try to recreate responsibly and preserve what's out there. I'm just so grateful that we get to do that because it's a beautiful place. The Centennial Valley...it'll always feel like home.

HISTORIC DOWNTOWN LARAMIE

The city of Laramie was founded in 1868 as a major stop on the Union Pacific Railroad (U.P.)—a place where steam engines were fueled, repaired, and made ready to haul passengers and freight. Early arrivals on the first trains included a volatile mixture of respectable, hard-working citizens from the East and a mixed bag of bandits who rode the rails while trying to stay one step ahead of the law. Within months, some of the West's most notorious criminals posed a threat to the town's existence, as their disruptive and frequently violent behavior drove away law-abiding individuals. Out of desperation, a citizens' vigilante committee was formed to take control, capturing and hanging some of the worst offenders and causing others to flee to the next end-of-the-tracks town. With law and order established, good people such as businessman and philanthropist Edward Ivinson and trailblazing Louisa Swain—the first woman in history to cast a vote in a general election—began to build a prosperous community destined to grow into a progressive university town with a stable economic base.

University of Wyoming Engineering Building

HISTORIC UNIVERSITY OF WYOMING CAMPUS

LANDMARKS THAT SHAPE THE UW LEGACY

Parking can be found on the streets surrounding campus. This walking tour is about one mile long.

1. Prexy's Pasture

This name refers to the large grassy area located within a ring of classroom and administrative buildings and serves as the center mall of campus. Legend says it was a perk for the university president, or "prexy," to have exclusive use for his horses. During the administration of Arthur G. Crane, the name, "Prexy's Pasture", was formally declared.

2. Ross Hall

Constructed in 1959, the building is named for the nation's first woman governor, Nellie Tayloe Ross, who was elected in Wyoming in 1924.

3. Knight Hall

Officially named for Emma Howell Knight, who served as Dean of Women from 1911–1921. KUWR, Wyoming Public Radio, occupies the basement of Knight Hall's west end. The current station dates from 1966 when its first location was the top floor of the "tower" of the Student Union Building.

4. Hoyt Hall

Hoyt Hall was named for the university's first president, John Hoyt, who also served as a Wyoming territorial governor. The structure now houses academic offices.

SCAN HERE TO LEARN MORE ABOUT THE CAMPUS.

5. Cheney International Center & Student Health

This building housed the School of Nursing until 2005 when that program moved to the Health Sciences Building. Previously, the location had frequently been used for military drills.

6. Merica Hall

The first dormitory building for women constructed on campus, Merica Hall was completed in 1908. It is named after Charles Merica, UW president from 1908-1912. Originally, this building was built of red brick, but it "stuck out like a sore thumb" amid all the other sandstone buildings. Someone decided to paint the brick pink to blend in and it has remained that way ever since.

7. State Park

When campus officials considered building the future Ross Hall, nearby residents were concerned that the area represented one of the last open spaces on campus. Consequently, the Wyoming Legislature passed a bill that set the land aside permanently as a Wyoming state park. (Prexy's Pasture was also set aside in the 1960s.)

8. Old Main

This building comprised the University of Wyoming when it opened in 1887—even before its construction was completed. As early as 1881, Gov. John Hoyt had requested that the state legislature accept 65 sections of federal lands to establish a university. Action was not taken until 1885, however.

9. Aven Nelson Building

Built in 1924 to house the university library, the building is named for one of the original five faculty at UW, a man who became nationally renowned in his field of botany and spent several years as university president before stepping aside just as this building was completed.

10. Arts & Sciences Building

Originally known as the Liberal Arts Building, the contract for its construction was let in January-February 1935. At the time, about 28 percent of the stone for the structure already had been quarried.

11. Geology Building

The original part was built in 1902 as Science Hall. The rest was added in 1954 when the cornerstone was laid, including the distinctive Geological Museum, free and open to the public, containing Wyoming geological exhibits.

12. Engineering Building

The original portion of the building was constructed in 1927. In the early years of UW, engineering and agriculture were combined in one college. The Petroleum Aeronautics wing was added to the west in 1959. An even larger addition to the east and north was built in 1983.

13. Agriculture Building

Completed in 1949, the structure received a huge addition to the rear in 1981. Immediately behind the new addition was the annex housing the sales room for the College of Agriculture where one could purchase cheese, ice cream, and other products produced by the UW dairy farm. The sales room closed in the 1970s and was demolished in 2013.

14. Education Building & McWhinnie Hall

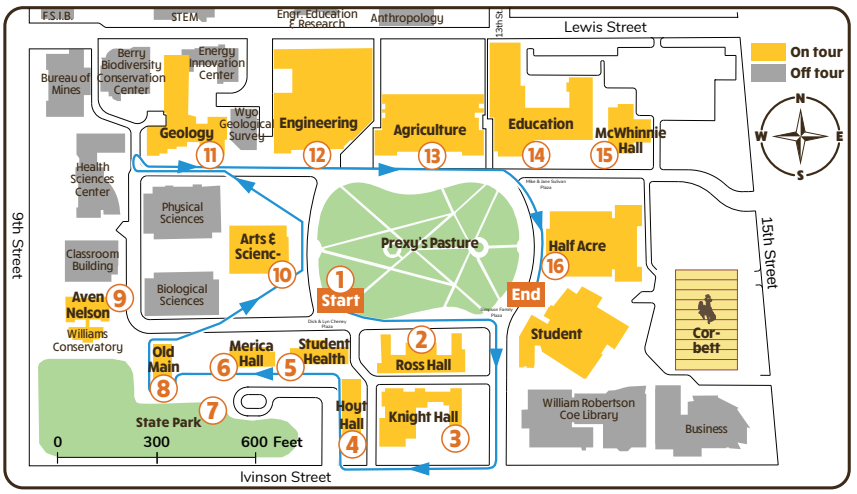

Constructed in 1950, the Education Building contains murals by well-known muralist Edward Grigware. At one time, it was possible for a student to start out in preschool, go through high school, and then graduate with a bachelor's degree in education all in this building. To the east of the Education Building is McWhinnie Hall, built in 1928. Campus planners joke that the architect, W.A. Hitchcock, must have been paid by the number of steps he put into the building.

15. Half Acre Gym

Built in 1925 with funds from oil royalties earned on university-owned land, the gym replaced the Little Gym that was located behind Old Main.

16. Student Union Building

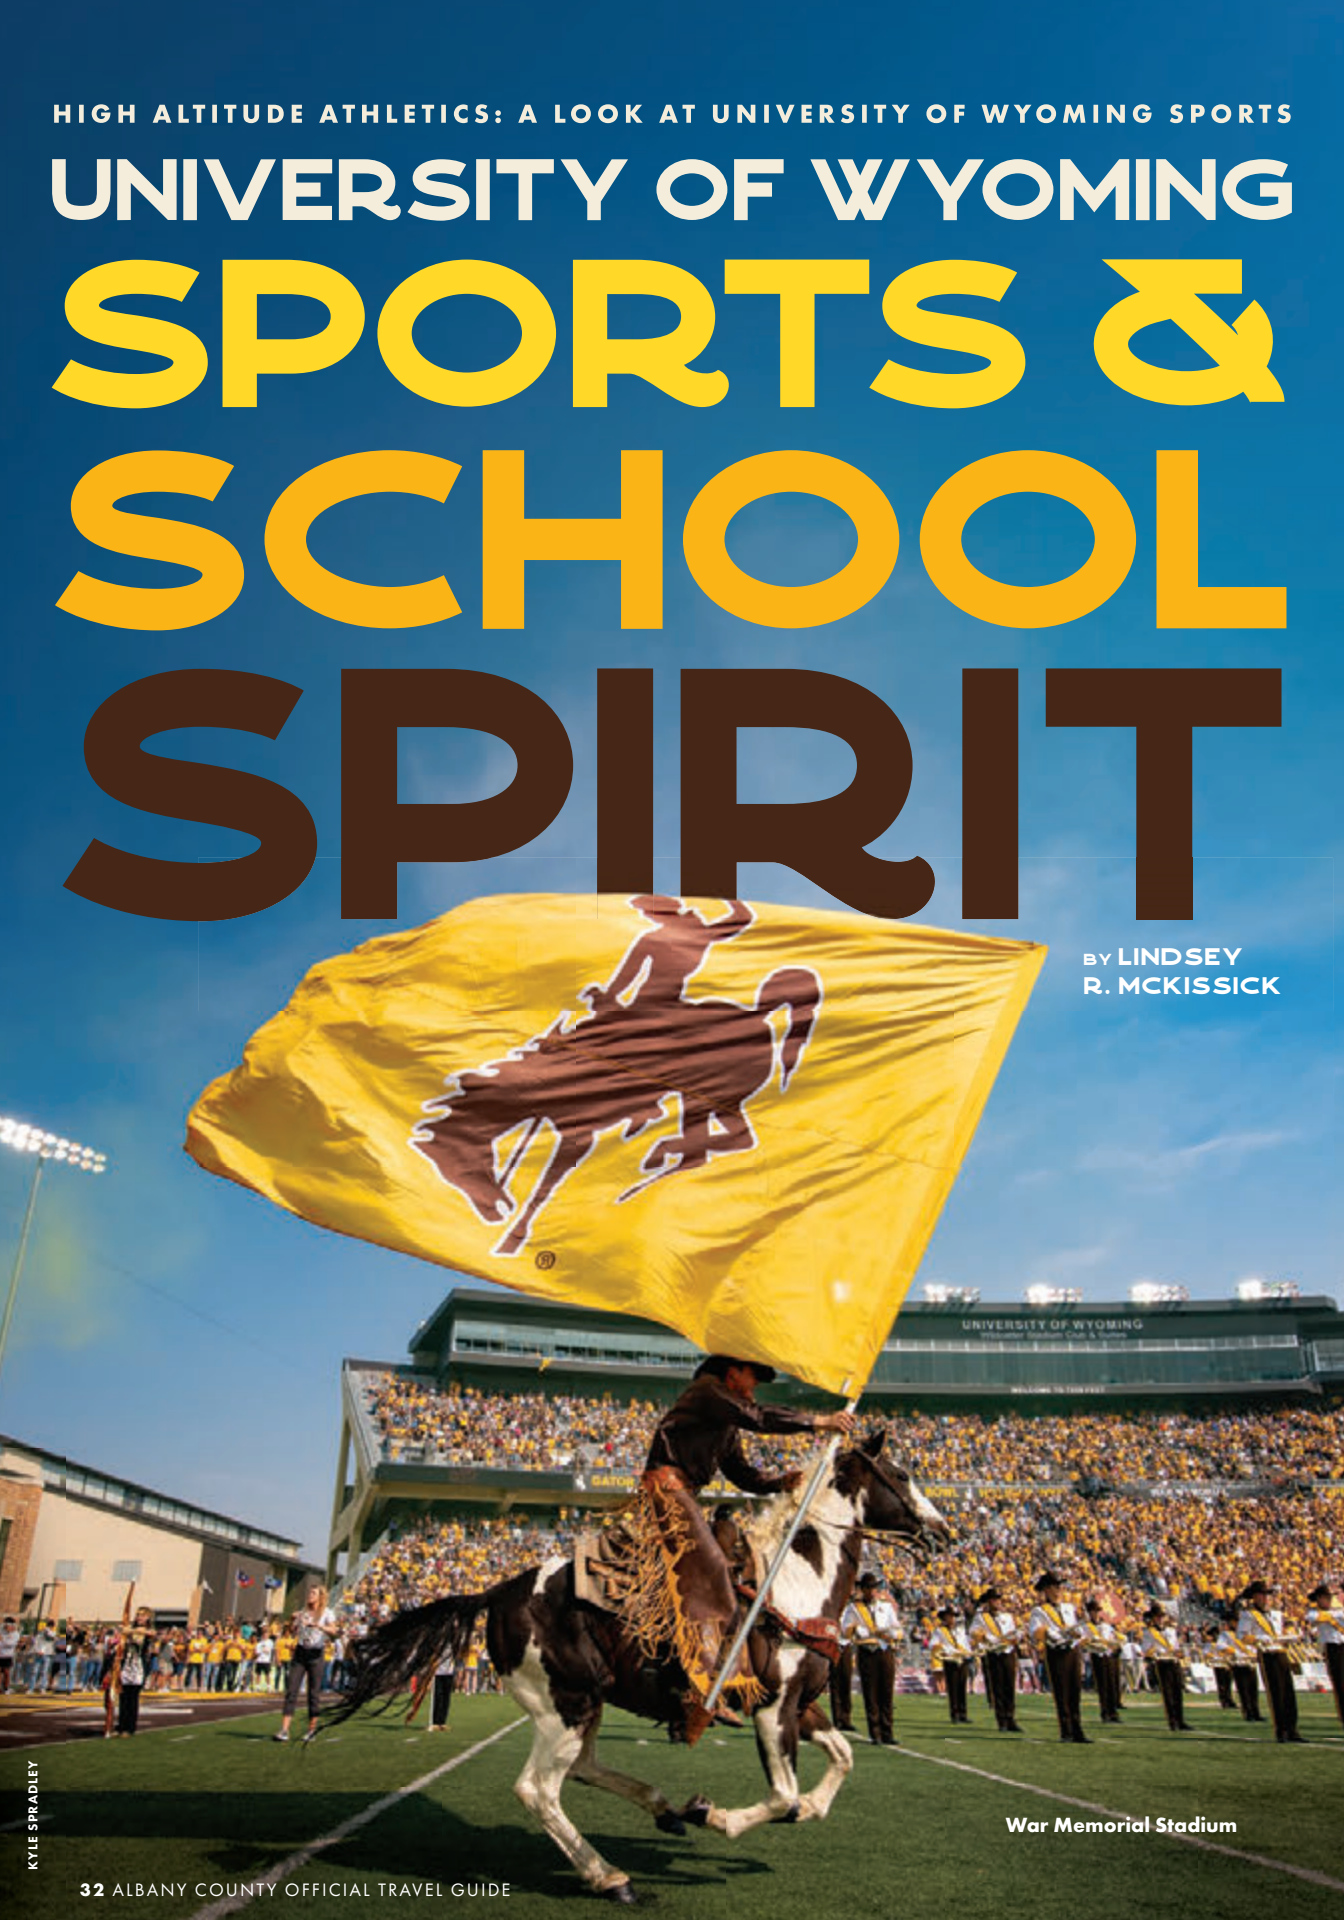

The structure was authorized by the legislature in 1937 and built in 1939. Additions in 1979 and 2002 completely changed the internal layout of the building.

War Memorial Stadium

The natural cadence of Laramie revolves around which stadium ticket turnstile is open for the season. The University of Wyoming is more than just the state's flagship university—it's the heartbeat of the community, and no matter the time of year, there's always a team to cheer for in the Gem City.

Cowboy Joe

Cowboy Joe is a pony who trots around the stadium each time the Cowboys score. The tradition started in 1950!

FOOTBALL AT WAR MEMORIAL STADIUM

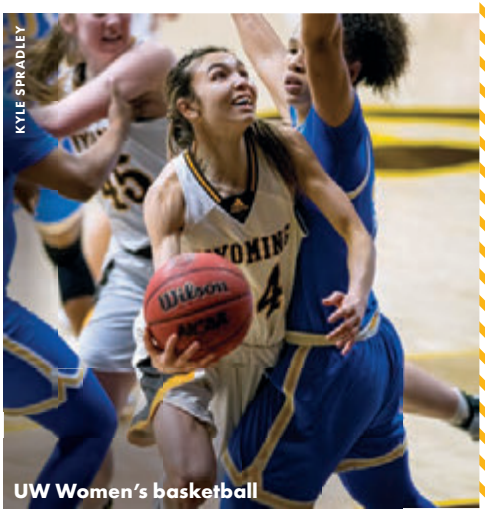

If you're wondering where Wyomingites are on a fall Saturday, you better start your search at War Memorial Stadium. At an elevation of 7,220 feet, it's the highest stadium in NCAA college football, giving the Cowboys a true home-field altitude advantage. Recent renovations—including upgraded video boards, premium seating, and improved training facilities—have kept the 29,181-seat venue one of the best in the Mountain West. From the moment the Cowboys sprint from the north end zone onto Jonah Field to the sounds of the Western Thunder Marching Band, there's no quit in this squad. The team is always on the hunt for a conference title and, of course, gridiron domination over the CSU Rams for the Bronze Boot, representing one of the fiercest rivalries in college sports.

MEN'S & WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Once the leaves fall and the prairie turns white, fans trade their seats at War Memorial for spots inside the Arena-Auditorium, lovingly nicknamed the "Dome of Doom." With seating for more than 11,000 fans, the Dome is known for its raucous atmosphere, where cowboy hats dot the crowd and the sound of boots on concrete fills the concourse. Throughout the winter months in Laramie, the Cowboys and Cowgirls bring the heat to the Mountain West.

RODEO

When your university's logo is literally a cowboy riding a bucking horse, you know rodeo runs deep. The Wyoming rodeo team competes in the Central Rocky Mountain Region, consistently producing national champions. For many athletes, the arena feels as iconic as the classroom, tying together heritage and competition in a uniquely Wyoming way.

WRESTLING

The Pokes dominate the mat in intense duals and tournaments throughout the season, including exciting home matchups and marquee opponents. Fans and visitors are invited to soak up high-energy action and Cowboy spirit on the mat, from whistle to final pin.

UW NEVER STOPS FEELING LIKE HOME

Each October, the roads into Laramie fill with people who each had a life chapter marked by time crisscrossing Prexy's Pasture. Homecoming transforms campus into a sea of brown and gold for a celebration of community, history, and Cowboy spirit. The weekend kicks off with the clip-clop of horses down Grand Avenue for the annual parade complete with floats, alumni reunions, and cowboy-themed fun. For alumni, a return to the Gem City is a flashback to Saturday tailgates before an afternoon at the War—a week to embrace Laradise and be a Poke again on the wild, western plains.

LOCALS' CAN'T-MISS EVENTS

LOCALS HAVE A KNACK FOR CELEBRATING LIFE ALL YEAR ROUND

BY LINDSEY R. MCKISSICK

What makes up Laradise? From small-town traditions to big-time rivalries, this western mountain town knows how to celebrate. Whether you're here in the height of summer or catching the roar of a fall football crowd, these events bring together locals and visitors alike for unforgettable experiences.

FARMERS MARKET

Every Friday from late June through September, 1st Street fills with the colors, smells, and sounds of the Downtown Laramie Farmers Market. Roasting chiles, fresh produce, local artisans, and live music create the perfect weekend kickoff. Local tip: Ride your bike into town and grab an iced drink from Range Coffee Roasters on 2nd Street before wandering the market.

INTERNATIONAL FLAVOR FESTIVAL

Through collaborations, international flavors, and meaningful conversations, the Laramie International Flavor Festival celebrates the city's diverse international residents and numerous global influences. More than 20 downtown restaurants and businesses offer specials, tastings, and events inspired by 60+ international students and community members representing over 40 nations from around the world.

LARAMIE JUBILEE DAYS

Since 1940, this midsummer celebration of Western heritage and Wyoming statehood has brought together carnival rides, Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association events, parades, and street dances smoother than a cowboy's two-step. If the dancing leaves you worn out come morning, track down a legendary burrito at J's Prairie Rose—widely known as a local cure-all.

BREWFEST

Welcome to downtown Laramie, where four top-notch brewhouses sit within easy walking distance of one another. Add in guest taps from Wyoming and northern Colorado, 2,000+ of your beer-drinking buddies, and you've got Brewfest—the region's summer hot spot. Kick things off with Bond's Brewing Company's award-winning Sweet Squeeze and enjoy live music as you sip your way through this beer-lover's paradise.

WINTER LIGHTS FESTIVAL

Celebrate the festive season strolling through a dazzling walking path of brilliant lights. Held in Washington Park, displays are sponsored by local businesses and raise money for local charities while spreading holiday cheer.
