

Madingley Hall

Madingley Hall

Set in magnificent gardens just four miles from the centre of Cambridge, and a mere 60 minutes from London, the Madingley Hall conference centre provides a memorable setting for your company conference, event, afternoon tea or special wedding day.

Built in the 16th century, this elegant country house has 14 well-equipped meeting rooms capable of accommodating up to 100 delegates, and tasteful en-suite accommodation, all within seven acres of spectacular gardens and grounds, designed in the 18th century by 'Capability' Brown.

The Hall is one of the few University venues to offer all year-round availability for residential and non-residential events, offering superb catering using locally-sourced, seasonal ingredients, a bar for that post-meeting wind-down, ample car parking and even croquet lawns in season.

Since 1948 Madingley Hall has been owned by the University of Cambridge, and houses the Institute of Continuing Education.

Did You Know?

- Madingley Hall was once home to Edward VII when he was a student at the University!
- The gardens are designed by famous landscaper Lancelot 'Capability' Brown
- There is a staircase near the Kings room that goes nowhere!
- The sheep that are occasionally in the meadow are a natural weedkiller! Eating what the gardeners don't want growing there.
