Event featured Ocean City-inspired games, activities and food for local families to enjoy, and Ocean City Mayor Rick Meehan was on hand to officially kick off the fun

BORING, Md. (April 6, 2019) – Today, Ocean City, Maryland – the vacation destination where the fun never ends – took over the Boring Community Center, located in the Baltimore County town of Boring, Md., for a free beach-themed family event to celebrate spring and the upcoming summer season. More than 300 people were in attendance to take part in the fun at the event, named “BORING gets FUN.”

Ocean City Mayor Rick Meehan was in attendance to officially kick off the fun at the event, which was held in partnership with the Upperco Volunteer Fire Company. BORING gets FUN featured giveaways, raffles and plenty of Ocean City-inspired games and activities for families to enjoy: skeeball, mini golf, arcade favorites, face painting, balloon animals, fire engine rides, a photo booth and more. Boardwalk-inspired fare like fries, snow cones and funnel cakes were available for purchase, with proceeds benefiting the Upperco Volunteer Fire Company. “We wanted to plan something special to celebrate the start of spring and summer being just around the corner, and we thought what better way to do so than to bring the energy from Ocean City – where the fun never ends – to the town of Boring,” said Mayor Meehan. “While we couldn’t bring the beach itself with us, we hope everyone who attended today’s event enjoyed the piece of Ocean City that we brought to Boring. I’d also like to thank the Upperco Volunteer Fire Company for their incredible partnership with us on this event. It was a great day of music, games and food, and we hope to see the everyone at the beach this summer for more!”
