Hurricane Michael: Visit Panama City Beach Quotes

'It looks like a bomb went off': Tropical Storm Michael menaces Southeast; 7 dead

Panama City and Panama City Beach are heavily dependent on tourism. About 17 million visitors annually sun themselves on the 27 miles of soft sand beaches. Officials are optimistic they can be up and running again soon.

The beaches at least were largely unaffected by the storm, which hit the east side of Panama City hardest. Panama City Beach, a separate town, is west of there.

Panama City Beach is particularly popular with residents of Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Texas, Florida, Missouri and Illinois because it's a relatively easy drive for most Southerners and has the closest beaches to the Midwest. The city had a record-breaking tourism year. Visits were up 10.2 percent before the storm hit.

Officials promised they'll be back open for business as fast as possible, so tourists can enjoy Thanksgiving's "Beach Home for the Holidays" and a 10,000-beachball drop for New Year's Eve.

"Panama City Beach is so resilient, and the whole community will be working together to get things back up and running," said Jayna Leach, a spokeswoman for Visit Panama City Beach. "With all of us working together, we'll be back up and running and be back to the world-class destination that we always have been."

Hurricane Michael Pummels the Florida Panhandle

In Panama City Beach, a popular tourist destination with beachfront hotels and condo owners, tourist-development tax collections hit records nearly every month this year, said Dan Rowe, chief executive of Visit Panama City Beach, which promotes the area.

"We have been whacked a few different times," he said, citing Hurricane Ivan in 2004 and Hurricane Opal in 1995. "Each time, we recovered quickly and stronger than ever."

TALLAHASSEE, Fla — Hurricane Michael roared ashore Wednesday as one of the most powerful storms ever to hit the U.S., toppling houses, trees and power lines in its path through the Florida Panhandle.

The Category 4 storm, packing maximum sustained winds of 115 miles an hour, made landfall near Mexico Beach, Fla., in a region pummeled with tourist beaches and fishing villages. After rapidly intensifying over the Gulf of Mexico, Michael ranked as the strongest storm to hit the Panhandle since at least 1851, when record-keeping began, according to the National Hurricane Center.
Post-Hurricane Narrative
Consistent messaging across the board
TALKING POINTS

- Hurricane Michael's path in Northwest Florida impacted Bay County, but missed Panama City Beach for the most part. Panama City Beach including the beach, attractions and accommodations were relatively unscathed.

- 90% of Panama City Beach’s accommodations inventory, as well as restaurants and attractions are back online already.

- There is a special resolve in Panama City and Mexico Beach, many of us live here or have friends and were impacted directly.

- Currently, displaced residents and cleanup support teams across the country are staying in Panama City Beach.

- Tourism is the lifeblood of Bay County and Panama City Beach will be welcoming guests to visit, beginning Thanksgiving, which kicks off the Beach Home for the Holidays program. This year, it will take on a special significance supporting the local Bay County community.

- Panama City Beach has established an online resource for voluntourism opportunities, and we are grateful for the outpouring of support.

- The New Year’s Beach Ball Drop will be a celebration like no other this year and we will welcome our winter residents after the holiday season.

- Spring events including UNwineD will be back in 2019 stronger than ever.

- We appreciate your patience, support and look forward to welcoming everyone back to Panama City Beach.
Press Releases

- Beach Home for the Holidays: Thanksgiving weekend, Panama City Beach will recognize the entire Bay County community, first-responders and crews working to restore normalcy in impacted areas.

- Panama City Beach New Year's Eve Beach Ball Drop: The 11th annual holiday tradition will bring with it special significance, ringing in 2019.
