THE LOCAL PALATE
FOOD CULTURE OF THE SOUTHERN UNITED STATES

HARVEST ISSUE
Rappahannock: FALL FOR OYSTERS
TAILS OF Oxford
COOKING WITH Cider

Kentucky Sorghum Raleigh's New Grocer Texas Wine Richmond Dishes It

OCTOBER 2013
THELOCALPALATE.COM

DISPLAY UNTIL OCTOBER 30
$4.95
You’re Inn: The Research Triangle

BY HAYLEY PHILLIPS

Surprising options abound, from an elegant oasis on the outskirts of Raleigh to a cozy inn nestled amid the campus of a famed Carolina college...

THE UMSTEAD is polished. Service proves seamless from the moment you walk in and are swiftly unburdened of your luggage. Falling somewhere between the architecture of Frank Lloyd Wright, Japanese Zen gardens, and Art Deco in its influences, the Umstead is a building of clean geometrical lines, wood, glass, and stone, surrounded by carefully tended landscapes. But the most distinct impression The Umstead makes is that of a retreat. Somehow, just off the highway in the midst of the hustle of the Research Triangle, you’ve stumbled onto the shores of a lakeside oasis.

Whether I’m answering e-mails in the handsome downstairs lobby, walking the trail along the lake, or meditating in the eucalyptus steam room, the ambience is notably without any lingering air of pretense or new-age aura. Like the multiroom spa, the hotel rooms are spacious, with walk-in closets, his-and-hers sinks, and Italian linens. Large prints on the walls depict serene nature scenes, but step out on your private balcony and you’ll find yourself face-to-face with the real thing.

The beauty of The Umstead is simply this: that with refreshing straightforwardness and consistency, everything is in its right place. This practice extends to the food at Herons, where Chef Steven Greene balances the ceremony and art of dining with elevated culinary offerings. Caramelized pears with cream, crisp caramelized pears, caramelized pears, and caramelized pears come shortly after a taste of rooibos tea. Dinner is served in the kaiseki style: duck comes with bamboo rice, turnips, kumquats, fennel, and honey magnolia liqueur, while a perfectly seared scallop is presented over crushed tapioca. Lastly, pastry chef Evan Sheridan wows with rock-mineral-looking chocolates in flavors like “Toddy” and “Forest.” The flavors are just as—if not more—moving than the views.