Stevie Cox
Stevie Cox
City of Trinity Manager

"On behalf of the City of Trinity in the northwestern corner of Randolph County, welcome to the Heart of North Carolina. Our community stands on the brink of significant economic expansion, heralding a transformative wave that will enrich the lives of our residents and elevate the visitor experience. With a vibrant mix of attractions and the allure of metropolitan life close by, Trinity has emerged as a highly sought-after destination, attracting both residents and visitors. Key landmarks, such as the Trinity Museum/Winslow House, remind us of our rich heritage as one of the last historical houses linked to Old Trinity College, now known as Duke University in Durham. Linbrook Heritage Estate offers a window into our agricultural past, while the renowned Zimmerman Vineyards invites you to savor not only exquisite wines but also events that celebrate local artisans and culinary delights. Each site weaves together a diverse tapestry of experiences, enriching life in Trinity. Innovative initiatives focused on sustainable development, education, and job creation will fuel our city's growth. Together, we aspire to transform Trinity into a beacon of opportunity, enhancing the quality of life for all and fostering a profound sense of pride and belonging within our community. I personally invite you to explore our vibrant community and embrace the evolution of history to the present in every step. See you soon!"

Christoph Johnson
Artist of the Grain Bin Murals at Linbrook Heritage Estate

"The grain bin murals in Trinity, NC were commissioned by Linbrook Heritage Estate in late 2017. The Estate found my contact info via an article about my silo art in Progressive Farmer Magazine. The two grain bins are functional for the Linbrook Farm and serve to advertise the beautiful Linbrook Heritage Estate, John Deere® tractor museum, and highlight family history. The figure depicted within the oval frame is Edd Walker Hoover who originally purchased the land in Randolph County in 1905. In addition to being a relative of President Herbert Hoover, Edd was also the great grandfather of Jerry Neal, the founder of Linbrook Heritage Estate. The painting of the grain bins was such an amazing project because of the artistic impact it made on the beautiful pastoral landscape. The Hoover history, tractor museum, and the beautiful estate were cool too. It was challenging painting on the corrugated metal texture, but it was worth it for the result."
