

The Boston Globe

10 Halloween activities you can still do safely around Boston

From drive-ins to scavenger hunts and costumed bowling, October 2020 still offers opportunities to celebrate fall's spooky traditions

By Grace Griffin Globe Correspondent, Updated October 16, 2020, 4:18 p.m.

Visitors to the drive-through Jack-o-Lantern Spectacular at Roger Williams Park Zoo in Providence can see 5,000 intricately designed pumpkins. BARRY Halloween will undeniably look a little different this year, with limits on in-person gatherings and new trick-or-treating recommendations (including bans on door-to-door trick-or-treating in some towns), to name a few alterations. However, that doesn't mean the fun of the holiday has to completely disappear. Across the state, organizations are gearing up to host in-person and virtual events to deliver the spooks, scares, and thrills you're used to in October.

On display now through Nov. 1, Roger Williams Park Zoo presents a drive-through Jack-o-Lantern Spectacular. For $50 per car, visitors can observe roughly 5,000 intricately carved pumpkins per night, featuring spooky scenes, sports legends, and famed celebrities. The trail opens at 6:30 p.m. each night and each tour lasts about 30 minutes. Roger Williams Park Zoo, 1000 Elmwood Ave., Providence. rupzoo.org