

GLOBAL TRAVELER

Still longing to travel? Now luxury hotels will come to you

Luxury hotels help guests who are stuck at home

PUBLISHED TUE, APR 7 2020-11:52 PM EDT | UPDATED 2 HOURS AGO

Ramsey Qubein, contributor

SHARE

You used to have to be a paying guest to get the five-star hotel experience.

That rule — at least for the moment — has changed.

With millions of travelers confined to their homes due to the coronavirus pandemic, luxury hotels are reaching beyond their property walls to entertain from afar. If guests can't come to them, the hotels will have to go to the travelers instead.

Those with young kids can watch how the pastry chef at The Langham Chicago makes Lucky Charms cereal bars. You can also learn how to shuck an oyster or prepare an Easter ham from the chefs at Rhode Island's Ocean House as part of the hotel's new "how-to" video series.