The phrase “Black Friday” summons visions of doorbuster deals, of electronics on offer for half-price, of camping out in the Walmart parking lot in anticipation of the myriad discounts that await. But tangible products are just one piece of the Black Friday puzzle. If you’re not one for material things (or if you just finished Kondo-ing your house), don’t worry—there are tons of equally enticing mark-downs available on stuff that isn’t actual, physical stuff. In fact, fans of the intangible will surely be delighted to learn that 2019’s Black Friday travel deals are some of the most exciting around.

But what is a Black Friday travel deal, exactly? Are companies discounting that vacation you've always dreamt of taking? Sort of. It's customary for hotels and cruise lines to offer mark-downs on certain kinds of stays. Airlines tend to discount flights to certain destinations and during certain times of year. And travel agencies often offer deals on specific excursions and experiences. So while you might not be able to score your entire dream vacation on sale, odds are, you can snag part of it at a discount. And if you have no idea where you'd like to travel to next, you can simply use Black Friday 2019's travel deals as inspiration—a jumping-off point.

While many of 2019's finest Black Friday travel deals will kick in on Black Friday, some won't launch until Cyber Monday (the Monday after Black Friday). And others will keep you waiting until Travel Tuesday (the Tuesday after Black Friday). Be sure to set reminders for the deals you don't want to miss—and when in doubt, check the guide we've carefully compiled below.
