

Travelbinger
travel smart. travel well.

These 7 New Luxury Hotels Opening Soon Have Insane Rates – Take A Look

You might want to check into new luxury hotels opening soon... the rates are insane, and it's safer.

By Jimmy Im - October 7, 2020

0

While the coronavirus continues through fall, many people are trying to look at positive outcomes in travel — and there are many starting to unfold. We predicted your hotel stays would be much safer, service will be better and that rates would significantly drop. Now, you should think about checking into new luxury hotels opening soon, not only because intro rates will be incredibly affordable, you can likely count on increased safety too.

If you plan on traveling safely, always check updated state regulations during Covid-19, and be smart about your hotel stays. Chances of a cleaner and safer environment will be higher at new luxury hotels.

For one, they don't want to ruin their reputation right away with complaints of lack of social distancing or unhygienic quarters, so they'll exceed expectations here. Two, there's less safety concern with a newer property since nobody has really checked in yet. You could likely be the first guest.

7. The Beatrice, Providence, Rhode Island

Opening Date: November 2020

The Beatrice

The historic Exchange Building in the Westminister neighborhood of Providence, RI, has been transformed into The Beatrice, an elegant 47-room luxury boutique hotel opening in November 2020.

Named after the developer's mother, The Beatrice tells a story that drives the design aesthetic, the guest amenities and services. Hotel interiors feature modern design details to contrast with the 19th century bones of the building. There will also be a sleek, exclusive rooftop bar and restaurant offering an intimate gathering place for business or social gatherings.

The property will open their reservation system closer to its opening date.