RAD CANYON BMX EVENTS KEEP PARK GROUNDS CREW BUSY

Another winter season of BMX racing got underway in November and will continue through February. These events continue to draw an increasing number of spectators and competitors. Setting the race course is challenging for the grounds crews. On Thursdays before the races, all of the rails are removed from the arena and the dirt is scooped into one big pile in the center of the arena. This takes the Equestrian Park Staff about nine hours to complete, using a grader and front loaders. Early Friday morning, the BMX crew then comes in to build the actual racecourse; this takes roughly 12 hours. Races begin Friday night and go through Sunday afternoon. The Park crew then comes in to level all the dirt and prepare the arena for equestrian events. On Monday morning, the rails are re-installed and the arena is ready to go!

Operations Update

Arena Footing Project

Ground crews completed the footing upgrade in Arena 5 and the Rodeo Arena. This project incorporated a special sand mixture into the dirt to improve footing, primarily for barrel racing practice and events. Without sound footing, horses are more prone to injury.

Crows Nests Improvements

Both the crows nests above the racetrack were renovated during fourth quarter. Many clients had requested improvements to these facilities as they were sorely in need of a fresh coat of paint and new flooring.

Salt Lake County Fair

Planning continues for the 80th Anniversary of the Fair which will be held next summer.

2015 Wraps Up with Employee Training Sessions and Recognition Luncheon

On December 14th, Supervisors, Managers and Directors attended a half-day K'nekt leadership training session. Katie Wells from the SMG corporate office conducted the training that included lectures, videos and team break-out sessions. In between the two courses, a lunch was served and HR gave an update on open enrollment and other benefit-related issues.

On the 15th, there were three, one-hour presentations by organizations whose work is relevant to our work in public facility management. The first presentation was given by Tracy Ita and Sgt. Tony Russell of the Salt Lake Police Department on active shooter scenarios. They gave a mixed media presentation on the history of mass shootings and cited specific examples from the Salt Lake City area. They stressed the importance of always being aware of one's surroundings and to follow the police department's advice: If you see something, say something!

The next speaker was Rebecca Sanchez, Director of the Salt Lake County Mayor's Office of Diversity Affairs. Her presentation gave us all tips on how to be more sensitive to people who are not like us, including understanding gender, race, age and socio-economic differences. The presentation incorporated role-playing using some of the employees in a scenario of interacting with a person with disabilities.

The final presenter was Eric Bonin, the Salt Lake Program Manager for Splore, a national program which offers a variety of indoor and outdoor sporting activities for people with disabilities. He offered a mixed media presentation illustrating the fact that just because someone is disabled doesn't make them unable to enjoy many activities, including rock climbing, river rafting and skiing.

The presentations were then followed by the Employee Recognition Luncheon, catered by Utah Food Services. General Manager Dan Hayes gave a recap of the year's activity at all three SMG facilities and talked briefly about the coming year. Employees who have been with the company for three, five, ten and above years received Years of Service certificates. Employees of the Year were also named from each facility and they received a special certificate and cash award. (See below.) All of this was interspersed with performances by some of the talented people who work at our facilities. Leona Schultz from the Business Center and Bryant Larsen, Salt Palace Office Administrator both sang. Engineer Josh Densley performed a two-part magic show/stand-up comedy routine. Special guests included Erin Litvack and Holly Yocom from the Salt Lake County Community Services Department.
