WELCOME TOSONOMA VALLEY!

We're glad you're here

FROM THE VINEYARDS ON THE HILLS, to the charming small towns to the stunning vistas from the mountains, Sonoma Valley will win you over. Just 45 miles north of San Francisco, Sonoma is the ideal escape for travelers looking to slow down and enjoy the best of California's food and wine scene.

Locally-owned and award-winning wineries, restaurants, and boutiques are found throughout the Valley, while Sonoma's history is intertwined with the birth of modern California. The roads that lead you through the regions that comprise Sonoma Valley – the Carneros, the City of Sonoma, The Springs, Glen Ellen and Kenwood – each reveal a unique story.

A picturesque eight-acre plaza anchors the town of Sonoma, shaded by a canopy of mature trees and lined with historic adobe structures, including the last California Mission. Sonoma is also home to two of California's oldest and most distinguished wineries.

Beyond the valley's 100 wineries, there are outdoor activities aplenty, art galleries, museums, festivals and events almost every week.

Enjoy your stay in Sonoma Valley! We look forward to welcoming you back again soon.

Cheers!

WHERE IS SONOMA VALLEY?

It can be a bit confusing to find "Sonoma Valley" — not that the picturesque valley tucked between two mountain ranges about 45 miles north of San Francisco is hiding from the world. The roughly 17-mile long valley is next to Napa Valley, and is one of the main attractions in Sonoma County.

But defining the where is a lot easier than nailing down the what.

Is it the birthplace of modern California and the cradle of "wine country" cuisine? Or is it a place for urban chic, starry-eyed bohemians, and farmers with mud falling off their flatbed trucks?

It's all of those — and more.

Sonoma Valley is taking selfies in the giant sunset-orange Adirondack chair at Cornerstone Sonoma and next to the statue of Gen. Mariano Vallejo sitting on a park bench in Sonoma Plaza.

Sonoma Valley is marveling at the 2,000-year-old, 14-foot-wide Grandmother Tree in Jack London State Historic Park. It's a three-block-long Fourth of July parade that lasts two hours, and a serene walk through neat rows of grapevines that seem to curl over the hills and into the sky.

Here's a quick overview of Sonoma Valley's many parts, from south to north, to help you get started discovering the crescent shaped area known as "the Valley of the Moon."

CARNEROS Feel the cool breezes from San Pablo Bay as you gaze out over the gently rolling hills and the flat plain that form the southern end of Sonoma Valley. Life slows down in these wide-open spaces, and there's plenty of time to explore, to taste fine wine and gourmet olive oils, and to stroll through vineyards, boutique shops, and designer gardens. Wineries here specialize in cool-weather varietals like Pinot Noir and Chardonnay as well as sparkling wines.

SONOMA Sharing a name with the neighboring Valley and the entire county, the town of Sonoma is a charming wine-country community known for its eight-acre Plaza.

Relax at a table under a shady tree with a picnic, take a leisurely stroll along the charming streets, discovering boutiques, restaurants, and wine tasting rooms. You'll find old adobe buildings and other historic sites almost everywhere you turn, and don't forget to spend a moment in the quiet serenity of the last Spanish/Mexican mission built in California.

THE SPRINGS You can't miss the brightly colored building façades — including a giant, multi-colored metal chicken outside a local grocery store — and the cool, Mission-style lines of the Fairmont Sonoma Mission Inn, a historic luxury resort. Both are highlights of this dynamic area, consisting of four adjacent communities and nicknamed for its underground hot springs. Variety and diversity are the watchwords here, with family-owned eateries and businesses, boutique shops, and wine-country fab thrift shops.

GLEN ELLEN "Quaint" will undoubtedly come to mind as you explore this wine country village, with its western chic vibe. Dine on delicious farm-to-table cuisine and taste wines crafted from grapes grown in the surrounding vineyards. Hike scenic trails and discover the life and times of famed author Jack London in the state park bearing his name, and then wander through acres of beautiful Asian plants at Sonoma Botanical Garden east of town.

KENWOOD Bite into a just-picked strawberry at the strawberry patch, and smile at the incredible collection of colorful metal critters outside the feed store. Tucked into northern Sonoma Valley's vineyards, rolling hills, and wide meadows, this tightknit community offers a variety of delightful experiences, from wine tasting to hiking and camping at the nearby state park, or relaxing in Mediterranean-style luxury at Kenwood Inn & Spa.

FURTHER AFIELD Heading northwest, Sonoma Valley ends with a rise in the land that marks the boundary with the Santa Rosa plain and the watershed that feeds not into the San Pablo Bay but rather into the Russian River and Pacific Ocean. The communities of Santa Rosa, Windsor and Healdsburg are to the north, while Petaluma lies to the southwest and the beaches of Bodega Bay are to the west. All these areas of Sonoma County provide more adventures when you have finished exploring Sonoma Valley.

A SONOMA VALLEY WINE PRIMER

While there are so many reasons to enjoy Sonoma Valley, wine is without a doubt the top attraction. And for good reason: the wineries in Sonoma Valley are some of the most prestigious in North America, and the quality of the local food scene makes the wines shine. Known as "The Valley of the Moon," Sonoma Valley is rich in natural splendor, creating an incredible setting for grape growing. The valley's winemaking legacy also makes it a must-see destination for history buffs, who will relish the region's pioneering past as the birthplace of the California wine industry. Here's a quick introduction to Sonoma Valley wine to get you acquainted before your visit to the next winery.

OUR TERROIR Nestled between Sonoma Mountain to the west and the Mayacamas Mountains to the east, the valley forms an open-ended tunnel, drawing in the cool breezes from San Pablo Bay and the Petaluma Gap. These beneficial breezes create balance in the wines by cooling the vines from the sun, allowing the grapes to preserve their natural acidity and freshness. For cool-climate grapes like Chardonnay, Pinot Noir, Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot, preserving that freshness is key. Even the dozens of other grapes that thrive here, including warm-climate varietals like Zinfandel and Syrah, also benefit from the restraint of the cool air to create elegant wines capable of aging.

The valley is composed of fifteen distinct soil types divided among five different American Viticultural Areas, or AVAs: Sonoma Valley AVA, Los Carneros AVA, Sonoma Mountain AVA, Bennett Valley AVA and Moon Mountain AVA. These sub-regions of the valley are defined by their soil types, geological boundaries, and often microclimates-all of which influence the character of a wine. That is why a Chardonnay from the low-lying Los Carneros AVA will taste very different than one from the mountainous Bennett Valley AVA. Sonoma Valley may only be 17 miles long, but its varied terroirs lend incredible diversity to the wines.

OUR WINEMAKING HISTORY

Sonoma Valley is steeped in history and legend. The Franciscan missionaries were the first to plant grapes here in 1823, although ranching was the primary cash crop. According to historian Lynn Downey, the missionaries would entice indigenous people to the mission with music and food and baptize them. Once baptized, they were considered bound to the mission and weren't allowed to leave. A recent discovery by local historian Peter Meyerhof suggests that the mission gave one native man, called "Viviano," a land grant in 1832. Viviano is thought to be the first independent winegrower in Sonoma. Secularization of the missions in 1834 by General Mariano Vallejo eventually reduced the mission to a local parish and freed the native people who were bound to it, and Vallejo began expanding the vineyards.

It wasn't until 1857 that Hungarian Agoston Harazthy, known as "the Count," brought the first vine cuttings from Europe to establish one of the first of California's commercial wineries-Buena Vista, including what is now Bartholomew Estate-but he began planting on the vineyard land first cultivated by Viviano. This suggests that Viviano was likely the "Father of the California Wine Industry" although for many years, the Count was thought to be. You can visit the wineries today and learn about Harazthy's incredible vision for the California wine industry, from his fortune to his folly. During this same era, two German families relocated to the Rhinefarm vineyard in Sonoma to form the famous Gundlach Bundschu, still California's oldest family-owned winery.

The arrival of Italian immigrants to the valley in the late 19th century brought the arrival of Italian grape varietals. In 1904, Samuele Sebastiani started his eponymous winery, having made his fortune mining the nearby hills to pave San Francisco's streets. Celebrated author Jack London even tried his hand at winemaking around this time, and visitors can still explore his estate and wander his vineyards in Glen Ellen, now called Jack London State Historic Park.

By 1920, Prohibition slowed down most wine production, but some winemakers survived until Prohibition was repealed in 1933 by selling their wine as sacramental wine for the Catholic mass. Some even utilized warning labels on bricks of dehydrated grapes as a ruse for giving home winemakers instructions on how to make wine. Despite the passing of the 21st Amendment, the industry took a hit for decades. But Sonoma Valley winemaking pioneers have a long history of defying the odds.

By the early 70s, Sonoma Valley's wine industry reemerged with new gusto with the arrival on the scene of St. Francis Winery, Landmark Vineyards, Chateau St. Jean, Kenwood Vineyards and Kunde Family Estate, all making high-quality wines.

By the 80s, Benziger Family Winery and the former Ravenswood Winery added their names to the lineup, with Benziger launching as one of California's first biodynamic wineries and Ravenswood's founder, Joel Peterson, making Zinfandel a household name. Today, Joel's son, Morgan Twain-Peterson of Bedrock Wine Company makes wine from old vine Zinfandel vineyards he's painstakingly revitalized.

While Sonoma Valley is still a Zinfandel hotspot, the 2000s have ushered in varietals like Syrah, Grenache and Sauvignon Blanc all well suited to our Mediterranean climate, fog and cool breezes. While single-varietal wines are easier to typecast, red and white blends are also extremely popular, whether they are classic Meritage- or Rhone-style blends, or proprietary/field blends that defy common flavor profiling.

SONOMA VALLEY'S TOP GRAPE VARIETALS As a wine

region created by immigrants and pioneers, Sonoma Valley is planted to a mix of many different grapes, from the more classic varietals to more esoteric grapes planted by winemakers looking to experiment. Below are the seven most common grape varietals planted in Sonoma Valley. Try them in single-varietal bottlings or mixed with other grapes in tantalizing blends.

CHARDONNAY: 26% of total production. This popular white grape may have gotten its noble start in the French region of Burgundy, but it has found a happy home here in California, particularly in Sonoma Valley. From crisp and mineral-driven to rich and buttery, there's a style for everyone to enjoy. Taste for notes of apples and pears of all kinds.

PINOT NOIR: 10% of total production. Popularized by the hit film, Sideways, this red Burgundian beauty has also found paradise in Sonoma Valley. Its thin skin makes it a fragile grape to grow, but incoming sea breezes lend a lovely salinity to the finished wines, tempering their sun-kissed cherry and berry character with elegant minerals and acidity.

CABERNET SAUVIGNON: 7% of total production. Hailing from France's Bordeaux region, this varietal is often found in the mountain vineyards above the valley. With deep, dark berry flavors, dusty notes of minerals and terroir and often penetrating tannins from oak aging, Cabernet Sauvignon can often age well.

MERLOT: 6% of total production. This classic red varietal, also from Bordeaux, oozes notes of blackberries, currants and sometimes bell pepper. Bottled alone, it can be smooth and easy on the palate. Blended alongside other Bordeaux varietals like Cabernet Sauvignon or Cabernet Franc, it becomes a compelling blending grape.

SYRAH: 5% of total production. After the Pinot Noir craze hit Sonoma Valley in the early 2000s, Syrah began gaining ground in total production. Popularized by France's Rhone Valley, Syrah has found a happy balance in Sonoma Valley, benefitting from our Mediterranean climate. Notes of violets, leather and red berries make this a great wine for barbecue. Also try it in blends with Grenache, its natural blending partner.

SAUVIGNON BLANC: 2% of total production. From crisp and grassy to round and fruity, Sauvignon Blanc is the perfect blank canvas for its terroir. Try this light white grape alone as an easy-to-drink aperitif to get the tastebuds going before dinner or as a picnic wine alongside our local cheeses and salads.

ZINFANDEL: 2% of total production. When introduced to Sonoma Valley in the 19th century by Italian immigrants, Zinfandel was originally known as Primitivo, a grape thought to be Italian but now known to have originated in Croatia. Joel Peterson of Ravenswood Winery was the first to make red Zinfandel a household name, and his son Morgan Twain-Peterson celebrates old vineyard plantings under the Bedrock Wine Co. label. Spicy, fruity and deep, this red grape is divine alongside hearty dishes, standing up equally well in blends and single-varietal wines alike.

HOW TO TASTE BECOME A WINE EXPERT IN SONOMA VALLEY

Learning how to taste wines will increase your appreciation for the deep care given by the winemakers.

LOOK: Take a good look at the glass of wine. Tilt the glass and note the color of the wine against a white background. What color is it? Look for more than red, pink or white. Is the wine watery or dark, translucent or opaque, dull or brilliant, cloudy or clear?

SMELL: Swirl your glass for 10 seconds and then take a quick whiff to gain a first impression. Then bring the glass back up to your nose and inhale. What do you smell? Oak, berry, flowers, vanilla, citrus?

TASTE: Start with a small sip and roll it around your mouth and across your tongue. Ideally alcohol content, tannin levels, acidity and residual sugar will be well-balanced and meld together. What initial impression does the wine make on your palate? Soft or firm, light or heavy, crisp or creamy, sweet or dry? Next, what is the wine's actual taste on the palate? Do you note fruit, perhaps some spice, or maybe oak, cedar, or earthiness? Finally, how does the wine finish? Can you taste the remnant of the wine on the back of your mouth and throat? What was your last flavor impression – fruit, butter, oak? Remember, everyone's palate is different.

BENZIGER Family Winery

Founded in 1980, Benziger Family Winery has become one of the most iconic estates in Sonoma Valley. Tucked in the foothills of Sonoma Mountain, Benziger's vibrant rolling vineyards, subterranean cellar carved out of the local bedrock, and their love of education make this a fun and accessible visit for wine-lovers of all kinds. As one of the earliest adopters of sustainable, organic, and biodynamic farming, the winery has cultivated pristine vineyards with an impeccable attention to detail—it's one of the valley's most picturesque wineries. Although they have several tastings to choose from, don't miss their famous tram tours, which take you into the vineyards to learn about biodynamic farming. You'll taste along the way with plenty of time for photo opportunities, and then end at the tasting room with their award-winning wines. It's the ultimate winery experience that's always fresh and inspiring. Great for families, groups, and corporate events.

SANGIACOMO WINES

The Sangiacomo family has farmed in Sonoma since 1927. Long heralded as premier wine grape growers that once sold exclusively to other winemakers, the family now is proud to also bottle their own wines, made from certified sustainable grapes. The Sangiacomo's inspiration is born from honoring their Italian heritage and harnessing the Sonoma terroir to produce wines of complexity and freshness. With three generations of wisdom to share, every visit to Sangiacomo Wines is an educational experience, taking you beyond the character of chardonnay, pinot noir, and cabernet sauvignon and deep into the story of the land. Located just two miles south of the Sonoma Plaza, the "Home Ranch" is an ideal tasting locale! Whether you taste during the day or for their seasonal sunset tasting experience, you can't go wrong: both offerings showcase their delicious wines against a backdrop of Carneros' rolling hills in their most glorious light.

UNDERSTANDING THE GROWING SEASON

In Sonoma Valley we take winegrowing seriously. In wine country, "wine growers" are the skilled farmers who grow the grapes for the wine, an esteemed profession because true wine lovers know that the quality of the product in the bottle starts with the work of the hands in the field. While grapevines are prolific and widely planted around the world, cultivating them successfully from the beginning of the growing season until harvest requires enormous attention to detail. From the choice of grape clone to deciding which inputs to use when cultivating the soil, every detail governs the quality of the final product.

The taste of a wine depends on the "terroir" (pronounced like "terr-wahr") of the vines. Terroir is the combined effect of sun exposure in the vineyards, climate, grape varietal type, soil type, and human influence. When you taste a wine made of grapes from just one specific vineyard, as opposed to a blend of several different vineyards, you are tasting the terroir of a given plot of land. Generally speaking, the more distinctive an area designated on the label, the higher the quality (and usually the price) of the finished wine.

As you're driving through the valley, you'll notice terroir in action as you see the differences among vines throughout the growing season. Is bud break the same on the valley floor as it is high up in the steep mountains? Are some grapes ripening before others? Are the leaves changing colors in different patterns? Understanding what's happening at the vineyards can make a trip to wine country a true learning experience, putting you front and center with the grapes and this year's vintage.

JANUARY & FEBRUARY

The vines lie dormant during this time. Having shed their leaves after the harvest, the dormancy process allows vines to regenerate after an active growing season. Beneath the surface, the roots continue to penetrate deeply into the soil searching for minerals to feed them as well as water from the winter rains—some roots will grow as deep as thirty feet down! Above the surface, vineyard workers trim all the excess canes (vine stems) from the vine, leaving the trunk and a select number of canes. Be on the lookout for vineyard workers burning the trimmings in large burn piles reminiscent of a campfire. Many winegrowers save the ashes to use as a natural fertilizer and the wood chips to help preserve the bacterial cultures of the vineyard. Those who practice organic or biodynamic growing practices may even mix the ashes with other inputs like medicinal herbs and minerals to create powerful natural infusions and teas that stimulate plant growth.

You'll also start seeing flowers growing between vineyard rows—particularly bright yellow mustard—which are planted intentionally as cover crop. In addition, you're likely to see chamomile, calendula, sweet peas and wild radish, among others—each with its own medicinal value for the vine. Each winegrower uses cover crops for different reasons. Some plant it to nourish the vines during dormancy, and others use it on hilly vineyards to stave off soil erosion. Cover crops cultivate biodiversity in the vineyards, attracting just the right insects and animals to help keep the vines in balance. Cover crops are generally only present in the vineyards during the winter, when they aren't apt to compete with the vines for water. They are as beneficial as they are beautiful.

MARCH & APRIL The early spring is known as budbreak, when the vineyards pop with bright green buds growing from the spurs of a vine cane. It's an exciting time for growers as it marks the official beginning of the growing season. Despite the hopeful buzz and predictions around the upcoming vintage, this is when the vines are at their most vulnerable. Spring frosts can drastically reduce a crop once budbreak hits. staying close to vineyards, you may hear a faint buzzing like a faraway airplane in the middle of the night. Those are the large wind machines that blow in the vineyards when temperatures drop to stave off frost and bud damage. Growers use this time to begin the work of de-budding, a process which helps to limit the yields, concentrate growth, and create more flavorful grapes intentionally and carefully.

This is also the last you'll see of the cover crops. Growers are working the soils with tractors and plows to turn over the cover crop to nourish the soil, tilling it under with other fertilizing inputs like manures, natural teas and minerals to foster healthy vine growth and microbiotic life in the soil.

MAY TO AUGUST This is when the growing season reaches its full potential. Through May and June, the shoots are developing and beginning to flower. Fruit set soon follows into July, and by August, the grapes ripen and develop their color. During this time, vineyard workers prune and trellis the vines to create an optimal growth experience for the vines. Depending on the conditions in the vineyard, some will trellis the leaves high and/or wide to shield the grapes from too much sun, while others work to clear the clusters of too many leaves to facilitate more air flow to encourage more sun exposure and ripeness. Certain winegrowers may choose to cut clusters off the vine while the grapes are still young and green, a practice called "green harvest." This also helps to limit yields and concentrate the flavors in existing clusters.

During this time, winegrowers are on alert for vine disease like shatter and chlorosis. among others. Shatter is reflection of poor fruit set and offers grape clusters with berries of different sizes and colors-known as "hens and chicks"-although some growers choose grape varietals that naturally produce more shatter to help the finished wines retain the perfect balance of sugar and acidity. You'll see chlorosis in action when you see leaves speckled in yellow, reflecting poor soil nutrients and poor photosynthesis. The greatest menace to any vineyard is phylloxera, a disease brought on by louses eating the vines. Winegrowers use rose bushes to detect it above the soil, which you'll see planted at the end of vineyard rows-both pretty and practical!

You may also notice bluebird boxes, bat boxes, and owl boxes, poised strategically throughout the vineyards. By encouraging these beneficial creatures, winegrowers are able to cultivate biodiversity in the vineyards while also providing natural barriers against detrimental insects and pests.

SEPTEMBER & OCTOBER

Harvest in Sonoma Valley occurs between the end of August through early October. Each grape varietal and vineyard ripens on its own timing and in conjunction with summer temperatures. The winegrower's job is to constantly monitor sugar levels and determine the optimal time for harvest. Once a harvest date is set, teams of harvesters work strategically and quickly, vineyard row-by-vineyard row, to harvest the grapes. Most wineries choose to harvest by hand, but some harvest with the help of a tractor. Vineyard workers typically harvest in the middle of the night or early morning, when cooler temperatures help preserve the natural acidity of the grapes-the ultimate sign of freshness in a wine. Harvesting is physical, hard work. Since timing is of the essence, the work is typically nonstop until the entirety of the vineyard holdings has been harvested and is off to the winery for the crush.

After the harvest, the cycle of the growing season comes abruptly to an end, marking the transfer of the process from vineyard to wine cellar. Winemakers take over the process from here, leaving the vineyard team to rest and tie up loose ends after an intense season.

NOVEMBER & DECEMBER

If you have the opportunity to come to Wine Country in November and December, you'll see the leaves change their color and finally drop to the ground. While California doesn't have the same fall colors seen in other parts of the country, the fields of grapevines do show a brilliant quilt of reds and yellows against the golden hills and green-leafed oak trees. With warm days and cool nights, this is one of the best times to visit wine country. While the vines enter their dormant phase of rest, the winter rains soon usher in green grasses and cover crops, and the season begins once again.

WINE TASTING

WITH OVER 13,000 ACRES OF VINEYARDS AND 80 TASTING ROOMS, Sonoma Valley offers fantastic wine tasting options to explore. Specializing in wines like Pinot Noir, Chardonnay, Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, Sauvignon Blanc and Zinfandel, there is sure to be a taste that works for you. When you're planning your visit, it's always a good idea to not only understand a little bit about Sonoma Valley wines but also how to get the most out of your time here—and that starts with some tasting etiquette. Here are some tips for your next tasting experience in Sonoma Valley:

TIP #1: GIVE YOURSELF THE GIFT OF A DESIGNATED DRIVER

Driving under the influence is a bad idea no matter where you are. So do yourself a favor, and take advantage of all of the transportation options in Sonoma Valley! It's a sure way to get where you want to go without any worries. Whether you ride the Sonoma Valley Wine Trolley, book a limousine or town car, or hire a designated driver to drive your own car, you won't miss a beat. Also, if you want to up the ante on your fun factor, consider some less traditional modes of transportation like a motorcycle sidecar!

TIP #2: MAKE AN APPOINTMENT While there are quite a few wineries that accept walk-ins, making an appointment ahead of time is a great way to ensure that you'll get the time and attention you deserve. Feel free to consult the Sonoma Valley Visitors Bureau website to take a peek at your options ahead of time, then look at the individual winery websites to get a feel for the experience. Also, be sure to consult the FAQs on our website to determine the best winery or tasting room for the experience you want to have, whether you want to find a kid-friendly winery or enjoy a picnic while you're there.

TIP #3: DON'T DRINK ON AN EMPTY STOMACH It's always smart to make sure you've had a good meal to start the day. Tasting on an empty tummy is the fastest way to over-imbibe and believe the pros: there's nothing worse than a wine hangover! When you drink responsibly, with food in your stomach, you can manage to taste more with less fear of indulging too much. Wineries that serve food offer anything from wood-fired pizzas to gourmet sit-down tasting menus. Some wineries sell snacks and picnic lunches. And some wineries have picnic areas where you can bring in your own food while enjoying a bottle of wine. (But please only drink wine from the winery while you are there!)

TIP #4: LEAVE THE STRONG SCENTS AT

HOME This probably sounds unnecessarily strict, but any wine professional will tell you that scented body products, from perfumes to aftershave, leave a cloud of scent around you that interferes with the tasting process not only for you, but for everyone around you. If you want to keep your tastebuds bright, also be careful to not brush your teeth too close to your tasting appointment. In that same vein, eating mints or chewing gum before your tasting can also be a detriment to your experience, as the strength of the oils used in those products cling to the palate and eclipse the taste of the wines. There's nothing worse than an elegant Chardonnay that reeks of musky aftershave or Arctic mint toothpaste!

TIP #5: TASTING ROOMS

AREN'T BARS When you show up to a tasting room, the tasting room staff will present you with a menu of options to choose from. Larger wineries tend to offer different tasting packages at different price tiers, while smaller wineries offer you a selection of anywhere from three to six wines to choose from. It's common for most wineries to pour two ounces in your glassthat's about a third of a normal glass of wine. So when you have three pours, that's the equivalent of an entire glass. Because wine tasting is also meant to be an educational experience, it means that it's polite to keep your voice low so that others can enjoy their experience, as well. Loud bar voices are off-putting in this setting.

Sometimes at the end of a tasting, the staff might ask you if you'd like to retry any of the wines you've tasted. This offer is at their discretion, and it is by no means mandatory. If you want to drink more of a particular wine after your tasting is complete, you may purchase a bottle. Best of all, when you make a purchase of two or more bottles, you'll oftentimes be discounted on your tasting fee.

TIP #6: GET

CURIOUS Tasting room hosts love it when you're interested in their wines. Before they pour your selection, they'll likely tell you a story about the wine first. They have a strong education in the wines they represent, plus they have great knowledge of other wineries in Sonoma Valley. Use them as a resource for all your juicy questions! Whatever they cannot answer, they will ask someone who can. Part of the winery touring experience means learning about what happens in the vineyards and how grapes grow. It means learning about what happens in the winery and the amazing process of turning grape juice into wine. And it means learning about what's happening to your tastebuds while you're tasting. Use all of your senses, let yourself wonder, and see where your curiosity takes you—you're in the heart of Wine Country!

TIP #7: PLEASE BE

PATIENT The beauty of Sonoma Valley is that we enjoy a quieter and slower pace of lifethat's what locals love about living here, and that's the pace most visitors love to embrace on their vacations here. But in the summer months, when the tasting rooms are busier, it's possible that you may feel a little impatient. Our hospitality teams work hard to ensure you have an authentic experience. Please be patient, refrain from unnecessary urgency, and be sure that we're doing everything we can to make sure you're comfortable and happy. Once you embrace the pace of life here, you may never want to leave!

TIP #8: PACE YOURSELF AND DRINK LOTS OF

WATER Depending on your personal tolerance for alcohol, it's normal to feel the effects after your tasting experience. Couple that with another tasting or two throughout the day at different wineries, and you may be past your limit. Water should be available to you throughout your tasting, so be sure to ask for some when you feel you're feeling woozy. More importantly, know that you don't have to drink all the wine that is poured for you – it's ok to dump the wine you don't finish or which you don't like. Pro tip: If you want to go the distance, taste the wine, swirl it in your mouth, and then spit it in a designated dump bucket or spittoon. You'll still be able to taste the wine but without the excess alcohol.

As mentioned above, wineries and tasting rooms are places for great fun and enjoyment, but also for education and art appreciation. Please be on your best behavior so you can continue to enjoy all the fruits of Sonoma Valley without the literal— or proverbial— headache.

TIP #9: ASK BEFORE STROLLING THE GROUNDS When on a beautiful swath of land surrounded by stunning vineyards, it's totally normal to want to stroll the grounds and have a look around. But remember that vinevard and wineries are farms filled with equipment at every turn. Tractors, fermentation tanks, forklifts and the like are all accorded a healthy respect by winemaking professionals aware of their dangers. So, please ask before strolling the grounds, and don't let kids or dogs roam freely. Some wineries offer larger tours of the vineyards or cellars, which can make for an outstanding educational experience. Look on the winery's website or call them directly to find out what is available if that kind of tour is appealing to you. Bonus tip: some wineries like St. Francis Winery have self-guided tours of their vineyards along a marked route, while Loxton Winery in Glen Ellen will show off their crush pad during harvest. Check their websites for more details.

TIP #10: THANKS FOR

THE TIP! Tasting room staff work hard to ensure you have the best experience possible. If a tasting room host has been especially educational or helpful, please consider leaving them a tip. If you've had a great time, it's customary to leave $5 per person. If you don't purchase anything or if you've received a coupon or discount for the tasting, then it's polite to leave $10 per person. Tips for larger groups over eight people are highly recommended.

Cheers.

CANNABIS 101: A VISITOR'S GUIDE

Cannabis is joining the ranks of culinary and wine tourism in California. With lots of ways to enjoy it and with countless varieties to explore, consumers will find as much diversity in the possibilities as they would in the wine, beer and spirits worlds.

There are many ways to experience cannabis in Sonoma Valley. Some hotels offer cannabis dinners while spas, massage therapists, and wellness providers offer topical CBD treatments, taking relaxation and healing to the next level. Touring companies like Happy Travelers Tours will take you out to explore and educate, offering wine and cannabis tasting experiences along the way. Our local dispensary, SPARC, is a popular stop for visitors to Sonoma Valley.

As the first state in the United States to legalize medical marijuana, and as one of the early states to legalize it, California is undeniably a cannabis pioneer. This said, there are still discrepancies between California state legislation and federal law, which has not legalized cannabis across the country. Here are some quick tips about cannabis in Sonoma Valley.

BE A RESPONSIBLE USER Cannabis is an intoxicant. It alters your mindset, behaviors, and your body chemistry. Know your limits and respect the law. This includes getting a designated driver before getting behind the wheel of a car, understanding your impact on others while under the influence, and keeping cannabis away from children.

ASK LOTS OF QUESTIONS When

you go to a dispensary, tell the salesperson what kind of experience you want to have, and ask them about dosages. In fact, ask lots of questions! If you're new to cannabis use, opt for the lowest possible dose. In addition, ask about individual strains, typically categorized as sativa, hybrid or indica. Sativa strains may make you chattier or more mentally stimulated. Indica strains are ideal for sleep or rest, as they tend to create more of a body high. Hybrids live somewhere on the continuum in between. Just because dispensaries sell cannabis cookies or cannabis sodas doesn't mean you are supposed to consume the whole thing. When in doubt, ask!

SMOKING IS FROWNED UPON

Whether you smoke or vape tobacco or cannabis, know that the prevailing winds in California do not favor smoking of any kind. As an early pioneer of health and tobacco-use prevention, the state of California has long prohibited smoking in public spaces. Smoking cannabis is only permitted on private property and never within 1,000 feet of a school, day care center or youth center while children are present.

ASK YOUR HOST IF IT'S OK TO

SMOKE OR VAPE No matter where you are staying, make sure to ask your host about cannabis use. While smoking and vaping is permitted on private property, it is entirely at your host's discretion whether or not they will tolerate it on premise.

KEEP CANNABIS IN CALIFORNIA

If you come from a state where cannabis isn't legal, it may be tempting to bring some home with you. Whatever you do, resist the urge! Traveling with cannabis, whether you're crossing state lines in a car, a train or a plane, is illegal...even if you're going to another state where it is legal. So please keep your cannabis in California, and feel free to come back any time to enjoy it again!

TRAVELING LIGHT: SUSTAINABILITY TIPS FOR SONOMA VISITORS

Care for the land is engrained in the local culture for Sonoma Valley residents, as to be expected for an area that relies on the cycles of nature for the bounty of agriculture. While Sonoma's commitment to the environment is evident in things like urban growth boundaries, pledging to farm grapes sustainably and dedication to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, there is still room for improvement and ways that visitors can contribute. Here are some practical ways to embrace sustainable travel practices while in Sonoma Valley.

Once you've arrived, park the car for short trips and walk, bike or roll to your destination. There are bike lanes and marked bicycle streets around Sonoma, including dedicated pathways. A lot of the attractions like tasting rooms and wineries are clustered together and easy to walk to in Sonoma, and even in the more rural areas of Glen Ellen and The Springs getting around by foot is often quicker than driving. If where you are staying doesn't have bicycles available there are bike-rental shops in Sonoma, as well as companies that rent out electric scooters, or which offer tours on buses, motorcycles and trolleys. You don't need to drive all the time to enjoy Sonoma Valley!

Water is a precious resource in the American West, and even in the verdant boundaries of Sonoma Valley, conservation should be paramount. The Sonoma Creek watershed which runs from Sonoma Mountain to the tidal shores that feed into the San Francisco Bay - is seasonal and arid. For a visitor, please take short showers, turn off the water when brushing your teeth and don't ask to change your towels and sheets unless needed. In Sonoma Valley, every drop counts! Stop by the Sonoma Garden Park (19996 7th St E, Sonoma) run by the Sonoma Ecology Center to see how to plant a garden that uses permaculture techniques that save water and provide food and beauty. The fig tree forest is a good place to enjoy a picnic lunch!

The local power utility, Sonoma Clean Power gets electricity from the largest geothermal power field in the world, the Geysers, located 35 miles northwest of Sonoma Valley. Travelers can save power by turning off lights when not in use, taking advantage of the cool nights and mornings by opening windows to let nature's air conditioning cool off the room, and making sure not to leave doors and windows open during the heat of mid-day. If visiting for an extended stay use major appliances in the evening or early morning before things get too warm. Sonoma Clean Power runs the Advanced Energy Center, a great information showroom in nearby Santa Rosa, with details on how to save energy at home.

Support your local farmer by eating seasonal food from Northern California. Look for items on menus from local farmers and stop by the farmers markets and chat with the farmers themselves to find out what's in season. Locally grown food, eaten in season, has a smaller carbon footprint and tastes amazing. Oak Hill Farm in Sonoma has tours the first Saturday of the month, and they sell their fresh veggies and fruits at the Friday farmers market.

THE EPICUREAN

CONNECTION Award-winning Sonoma Chef Sheana Davis has been an ardent advocate of the local cheese industry in Sonoma for over two decades. As talented a cheesemaker as she is a teacher, Sheana instructs her students at The Epicurean Connection with contagious enthusiasm. Sign up for dynamic, hands-on cheese classes or private ones, grab a group of your besties or make it a fun day of team building with your colleagues. After making your own homemade ricotta, you may even get a chance to sample Sheana's own cheese, Délice de la Vallée, a triple-cream blend of cow and goat milk. Mmm!

WALK (AND TASTE)

SONOMA Take your tastebuds for an unforgettable walk around the Sonoma Plaza on one of the two walking food tours in the city of Sonoma. With Gourmet Food & Wine Tours visit three highly acclaimed farm-to-table restaurants and eat fabulous dishes made entirely from local produce. Your tour guides will teach you the who's who of the local chef scene, the food history of Sonoma, and the ins and outs of biodynamic farming and why it's so special. Meanwhile Sonoma Food Tours offers specially selected "off-the-beaten-path" food locations within the quaint historic downtown square of Sonoma. The food and wine and cocktail samplings stimulate your senses and whet your appetite for more.

FIGONE'S OF CALIFORNIA OLIVE OIL COMPANY Sonoma's

Italian heritage has made the valley a hotbed for artisan olive oil production, paving the way for the Figone family, who has been crafting specialty extra virgin olive oils and balsamic vinegars in Sonoma Valley since 1989. Stop by their Tuscan-inspired tasting room on the Sonoma Plaza, and let the friendly staff guide your through their delicious and diverse oils and vinegars. Or get geeky with a private "Tuscan Tour" of their olive mill, where you'll learn about production, taste through their oils, enjoy charcuterie and hors d'oeuvres, and go home with a bottle of your own oil. With quality standards like these, you'll never look at olive oil the same way again.

OAK HILL FARM For more than fifty years, this family run farm has grown flowers and produce using sustainable agricultural practices and harvested over two hundred varieties of vegetables, fruit, flowers, perennial greenery, and herbs as they naturally come into season. A farmers market favorite, the family also provides visitors a glimpse behind the scenes once a month when they open the Red Barn Store on the property for tours and shopping. Once a small farm stand, now a local landmark, the Red Barn Store has both supported and nourished the Sonoma community for over 30 years.

MORE CHEESE, PLEASE The story of Vella Cheese is the history of Sonoma cheese making. Housed in a brick building that was a former brewery, Vella Cheese has been making world-class jack, cheddar, and Italian style cheeses by hand since the 1930s. Still family run and still offering samples of the wonderful offerings, Vella Cheese is a must-stop for foodies in the know.

WHAT'S IN SEASON - WHEN

A QUICK GUIDE TO WHAT'S FEATURED AT LOCAL MARKETS AND WHEN

SONOMA VALLEY IS RICH IN AGRICULTURAL HISTORY.

In the two centuries of settlement by Europeans, Mexicans and Americans, wheat, barley and corn, onions, cabbage, peppers, squash, melons, flax, apples, grapes, strawberries, cheese, olives, cattle, sheep, lavender, and cotton have all been grown here. Vineyards and wine grapes have become by far the top driver of the regional economy. Also, locally and regionally produced fancy organic cheese, olive oil and produce have become wine-associated agricultural products. And with the bounty of the Pacific Ocean nearby, the area is spoiled for choice when it comes to seafood.

THE SECRETS OF THE SONOMA MARKET

Sonoma Valley has great farmers markets, including the year-round Sonoma Valley Certified Farmers Market on Fridays in the Arnold Field parking lot to Sonoma's Tuesday Night Market on the Plaza (May-September). Here are some ways to enjoy Sonoma farmers markets and make the most of your time there.

BE AN EARLY BIRD, BUT NOT TOO EARLY Early in the morning, farmers are busy setting up their tables and displaying their goods before the market's start, but if you arrive on the earlier side of the official market hours, you're guaranteed to get the first pick of all the beautiful produce.

COME PREPARED For easy and speedy transactions, come prepared with cash (small denominations, please!) and reusable shopping bags or baskets farmers always bring the freshest, seasonal California-grown produce to the market, so when you ask for acorn squash in May or tomatoes in December, just be warned: you may get a few strange looks. Check out our guide of what's in season when to find the freshest options.

IT'S A SAMPLE, NOT A

BUFFET We all know the people who confuse food samples with lunch. The farmers do, too—too many, in fact. Farmers love to give you a little taste of their wares, and this can be a great way to find new tastes. But treat the taste as just that.

ASK GOOD QUESTIONS

Curious about one of those interesting Buddha's Hand citrons? Never tried cranberry beans before? Don't know the difference between sustainable and organic farming? Just ask!

YOU DON'T NEED TO

HAGGLE Farmers work hard to set fair pricing. If you wouldn't haggle in a supermarket, you shouldn't haggle at a farmers market. However, if you show up in the last few minutes of the market, some farmers may be willing to give you a discount—always at their discretion, of course.

KEEP THE DOGS AT HOME

Have a puppy who wants to come along for the adventure? Unless they are a leashed and certified service dog, the health laws state they aren't allowed on market grounds.

The one final suggestion of a farmers market? Have fun and bring your friends, or look to make new ones. A good outdoor market is more than just a place to get food. It's also how we build community.

SHOPPING

THE PERFECT GIFT AWAITS. For a truly authentic local experience, all you have to do is go shopping. It's a tough gig, but somebody's got to do it. Throughout the valley and around the plaza, you'll find chic boutiques offering clothing, luxury goods, home furnishings, jewelry, and local goods like olive oils, artisan cheeses and hand-milled soaps. If you're in search of the perfect gift – for a loved one, or just for yourself – you'll find it in Sonoma Valley.

More than likely, you'll be rubbing elbows with locals while you shop. Why? Well, truth be told, this is far from your normal visitors' shopping destination. Shopping in Sonoma Valley truly feels like a "locals only" experience. And while each shop is unique in what they offer, one thing remains constant: Wherever you go, you'll be greeted warmly by the shop owner, and sometimes even by the artisans themselves.

Trashion Fashion

SONOMA ARTS

FOR SUCH A SMALL AREA, Sonoma Valley packs a lot of arts in a tiny package. Consider that the Valley of the Moon (also the name of a book penned by local author Jack London) is only about 17 miles long and contains a Broadway music group, a classical music festival, an author's festival, an international film festival, multiple large public sculptures displays, an awardwinning folklórico dance troupe, a hula group, a plein-air painting week, a beautiful theater on the main town square and an entire former elementary school that's been renovated into a world-class community arts center complete with another theater, a ceramics studio and a fashion show dedicated to showing the creative reuse of refuse. Trashion Fashion, and it's great fun.

And this doesn't count the art galleries, and the photo studios, nor the wineries and tasting rooms that host artists and their works, nor the live music that seems to spill out from every bar, side alley and city event like the famous Tuesday night market. And there is a guy named CW who plays banjo in the amphitheater on the regular just because. Talk to him. He might have a kazoo you can use. It makes sense when one thinks about it. Sonoma Valley is where the artists of the fields – the farmers who grow the grapes and the vintners who make the wine – show off their skills just as the chefs in the kitchens show off their culinary arts. And in the art galleries and studios and theaters, the other artists of Sonoma Valley showcase what life means to them, in this small valley, in Northern California, where the light shines just so and the air feels just right and you want to take a moment and capture it all in the way you feel expresses it best.

Mosays grocery shopping has to be a chore? At Sonoma Market, we make the to-do list a get-to-do list. Whether you're looking for a quick picnic fix, stocking up on everything you need for a wine country getaway or simply getting help out to your car, our talented team is here to make every visit extraordinary.

AT YOUR SERVICE!

In town for an event? We also offer a variety of Gourmet to Go catering options like chef-prepared party platters, picnic boxes, specialty cheese boards and desserts that you can order online ahead of time.

Hungry yet? Drop by, say hi and make your stay in Sonoma extraordinary. We'll see you soon!

RELAX, YOU'RE IN SONOMA...

Sonoma Valley has a well-deserved reputation as a hotspot for wellness, from spas and hot springs to yoga studios and fitness clubs. Back in the 19th century, Sonoma attracted visitors from around the country for its natural hot springs, a history immortalized in the name of local communities like Boyes Hot Springs, Fetters Hot Springs and Agua Caliente.

Today's visitors can still find revitalization at the spas, retreats and open spaces in Sonoma Valley.

FITNESS & YOGA

Yoga at a winery? Find monthly yoga classes at Viansa Sonoma Winery & Marketplace, as well as other wineries. Or head to animal sanctuary Charlie's Acres – a farm animal sanctuary - and do yoga with some friendly goats while also enjoying the farm. Meanwhile, the mountains that define the valley are the perfect place for "Yoga Hikes" from the Sonoma Ecology Center. The walks combine a moderate hike with stops for yoga among the oaks and grassy meadows at Sugarloaf State Park in Kenwood.

NATURE EXPERIENCES

Sonoma Adventures Bikes Tours and Wine Country Cyclery both offer bicycle rentals. Ask for suggestions, and they'll tell you how to match your skills to the best routes possible. Riding through wine country is as mentally therapeutic as it is physically invigorating.

Sonoma Valley's extensive state and regional parks offer the ideal playground for quiet forest bathing, vigorous hikes, and outstanding views of nature. With over 13,000 acres to explore, there's no question that wellness will find you! Check out Jack London State Historic Park to walk beneath the redwoods, or summit Sugarloaf State Park for incredible views of Sonoma County. There are many guided hikes through open spaces and vineyards – some start right in the City of Sonoma while others offer a wilderness experience high above the valley.

SPAS & MASSAGES

The Spa at MacArthur Place Hotel: Set in the center of MacArthur Place Hotel's spectacular gardens, The Garden Spa offers more than 30 types of massage, facials and body treatments. You can also take advantage of their recently upgraded fitness center, swim in their pool, or drop in for one of their weekly yoga classes.

The Spa at The Lodge at Sonoma Resort: The Lodge's fitness room and daily yoga would be enough to tempt anyone to go to this beautiful resort, but its host of spa treatments will definitely entice you to come back for more. From CBD and chakra-balancing massages to a lime and ginger foot scrub, the Spa at The Lodge goes beyond your average spa menu.

The Fairmont Spa: A peek at Sonoma Valley's first historic spa makes the Fairmont Spa already worth a visit. Add on their gorgeous pools and hot springs, access to a host of fitness classes and sessions with a personal trainer, and dozens of treatments from Cabernet body scrubs to a premier cru anti-aging facial, and you've found the gold standard in wine country wellness.

Sonoma Therapeutic Massage: Located a few blocks away from the historic Sonoma Plaza, Sonoma Therapeutic Massage offers high-quality, healing bodywork, customized on specific needs. Best of all, services at hotels, B&Bs and vacation rentals can be accommodated upon request and availability.

FAIRMONT MISSION INN & SPA

The Fairmont Spa is, without a doubt, one of Sonoma Valley's crown jewels. Its enviable location atop an ancient thermal mineral spring spectacular creates а unique wellness and experience, highlighted by three outdoor thermal mineral pools ranging from 92 to 102 degrees.

Historically revered by Native Americans for its healing power, the subterranean spring contains 27 different minerals and arrives at the surface at 130 degrees. The Romanstyle bathhouse is home to the famed Bathing Ritual where guests are encouraged to "take the waters" for health and vigor. This includes two further soaking pools as well as a Halotherapy Sauna and an Aromatherapy Steam Room. But if that's not enough, the property also boasts two luxury, poolside cabanas, which can be reserved for an elevated experience. While you're there, take advantage of their fitness center and movement studios which are open to spa and hotel guests.

MEET IN SONOMA

It's not always wine and cheese in Sonoma Valley. We know how to get down to business as well, which is why the town of Sonoma and surrounding areas are perfect for your business meeting, retreat or offsite. And since San Francisco, Oakland and Sacramento are all within a 90-minute drive, Sonoma Valley is also a great spot for pre- and post-convention meetups away from the large exhibition halls. Here are some quick ideas on how to make the most of your Sonoma Valley meeting.

CHOOSE THE RIGHT HOST

HOTEL Sonoma Valley's lodging options for meetings include luxury resorts like the Lodge at Sonoma and Fairmont Sonoma Mission Inn & Spa, intimate high-end hotels like MacArthur Place and Kenwood Inn & Spa, as well as unique spots like The Olea Hotel or Gaige House, both in Glen Ellen. For budget-conscious meetings, The Best Western Sonoma Valley Inn has meeting space plus an enviable location just steps from the historic Sonoma Plaza.

GET BEYOND THE BOARDROOM

We get it: Table. Chair. Some coffee. But having a meeting in Sonoma Valley means you get to go beyond just the meeting room and take your group out for an amazing experience. Dinner in a wine cave? Cooking classes? A bike tour? Sonoma Valley is a world-class food and wine destination. Take advantage of the amenities for a great meeting.

INVITE SIGNIFICANT OTHERS

Our quaint, walkable towns and diverse landscape equates to things to do for any "plusones" that come along for the meeting. The Sonoma Valley Museum of Art, the historic Sonoma mission and barracks and the shops and cafes that ring the Sonoma Plaza make for great diversions while the meeting is in session. At night, the wine country dining scene beckons for networking and socializing.

BEST RATES COME WITH THE

BEST DATES Northern California's wine country has a Mediterranean climate, which means that when it's snowy in Chicago or rainy in Seattle, it's usually sunny and pleasant in Sonoma. The best values for meetings and groups are November through April, and Sundays through Thursdays. Being flexible with when you come for your meeting can mean finding the best rates and experiences for your group.

Need help planning your next meeting in Sonoma Valley? We can provide venue ideas, introductions to lodging partners and help you craft the perfect experience. See more details at SonomaValley.com.

SAY "I DO" TO Sonoma valley

A Wine Country wedding has all the elements for a romantic celebration: the picture-perfect backdrop of vineyards, great food, and iconic wine. If you want to your special day to be something you'll remember fondly, here are some ways to plan the perfect day.

CONFIRM VENUE AND DATES

EARLY Most weddings book a year in advance. Make sure to be clear on your dates, your timing, and your venue of choice. Signing a contract is a big financial responsibility, and you are responsible for all costs. Get informed about taxes and service surcharges, and ask for an all-inclusive rate so that you know the occupancy and tourism taxes will be included in the final balance of the bill.

FLEXIBLE DATES CORRE-SPOND WITH BEST BUDGET

Know from the get-go that Saturdays are always the most expensive day of the week to plan a wedding, and especially between the high season of May through October. While Saturdays may be the most common day of the week to plan a wedding and are often convenient for many out-of-town guests, they also come at a more premium price. As one insider notes, "Don't rule out Fridays and Sundays and the winter months —these are the best times to get the best pricing."

LOOK FOR PLACES TO ENJOY

NATURE Consider picking a venue that offers a connection to the outdoors. Whether it's an outdoor patio for the reception, a garden for taking pictures, or a vineyard for the cocktail hour, weave the beauty of Sonoma into your special day.

DO YOUR DUE DILIGENCE Before calling up to inquire about availability and pricing, take the tip from the pros and do a little research on your own. The Sonoma Valley Visitors Bureau website is a treasure trove of events, venue information, and fun things to do.

RESERVE THE RIGHT NUMBER

OF ROOMS The temptation of any bride or groom is to book a room block with as many rooms as possible. While a nice service to your guests, not everyone will want the same experience for their stay, and the cost of the room may not fit into their budget. When you block a set of rooms, you may become financially liable for those rooms, even if they don't sell.

GATHER YOUR THOUGHTS TO COMMUNICATE CLEARLY When

planning a wedding, it's common to want to reach for the phone, make a quick call, and ask all the questions you have as they come up. But do yourself a favor, and organize your thoughts first. When you streamline communication through email, you create a paper trail for you and the hospitality team at your choice of venue. This helps avoid miscommunication, ensures you get your response in a more efficient window of time, and signals to the venue that you are professional about this important business transaction.

Ready for your happily ever afters? We'll see you in Sonoma Valley for your big day!
