FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

South Padre Island to Host 2025 National Tropical Weather Conference

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas, March 26, 2025 – South Padre Island is proud to announce that it will host the 2025 National Tropical Weather Conference (NTWC) from April 2 to April 4 at the Courtyard by Marriott. This premier event brings together leading experts in tropical meteorology, emergency management, and media to discuss advancements in hurricane forecasting, preparedness, and response.

"We are honored to welcome back the National Tropical Weather Conference to South Padre Island," said Blake Henry, Executive Director of Visit South Padre Island. "Hosting this conference underscores our commitment to promoting awareness and preparedness for tropical weather events, which is vital for our coastal community and beyond."

The NTWC serves as a platform for broadcast meteorologists, digital media professionals, emergency managers, and corporate representatives to engage in comprehensive discussions and training sessions. Attendees will have the opportunity to participate in workshops, hear from distinguished speakers, and collaborate on strategies to enhance public safety during tropical weather events. In addition to the conference sessions, participants can enjoy the island's beautiful beaches, local cuisine, and vibrant culture, making it an ideal setting for both professional development and relaxation.
