WELCOME TO SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, WHERE WEARING A TIE ISN'T JUST FROWNED UPON. IT'S ACTUALLY BANNED.

Declaring that ties are “detrimental to the welfare of the island,” the City Council officially decreed in 1997 that they be “banished from our land and waters forever.” Anyone caught sporting the offending neckwear risks having it snipped off – and being fined the amount of one tie.

This is all in good fun, of course – the “no tie” ordinance has yet to be enforced – but it’s in keeping with the island’s laid-back, informal atmosphere. In a place where relaxation is encouraged, and flip-flops and shorts are considered formal wear, there’s simply no need for buttoned-up business attire.

So skip the tie – and the socks while you’re at it – and embrace the casual local lifestyle. After all, who needs reminding of the daily grind when you’re on island time?
