

Guam's 66th LIBERATION DAY

2010 EDITION

WE ARE GUAM....HONORING OUR HEROES

The First American Flag on Guam

Just 8 minutes after U.S. Marines and Army assault troops landed on Guam, two U.S. officers plant the American flag, using a boat hook as a mast. July 20, 1944.

Sixty-six years ago, US forces recaptured the island of Guam from Japanese occupiers during World War II. Many soldiers bravely risked their lives in the mission and equally, many civilians – Chamorros – were tortured and killed trying to protect American soldiers who were sought by Imperial Japanese Forces.

July 21, 1944, known as Liberation Day, was a milestone in our island's history and today, we honor those who suffered and died, and the soldiers and civilians who participated in our island's liberation from Japanese occupation.

Biba Guam!
Happy Liberation Day!

A MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNOR & LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR OF GUAMAN

Håfa adai! As we celebrate the 66th anniversary of Guahan's liberation, we are reminded that history has shaped our destiny and helped determined who we have become as a people.

The theme of this year's Liberation Day festivities, "We are Guahan...Honoring Our Heroes," sums up the essence of what we are commemorating. We are grateful to the many heroes who fought and sacrificed for the freedom of our people during World War II and especially on July 21, 1945. We are thankful that those desolate times are over and hope that they are never repeated, so our children, grandchildren, and all those who come after us will never endure the hardships like the ones suffered by our people during those bleak years.

As our island once more faces dramatic changes through the military buildup, we pay tribute to the positive impact U.S. military forces have had on our island in the past. We will continue to ask God for his continued blessing and guidance as we prepare for the next chapter in our island's history.

On behalf of the people of Guahan, Happy Liberation Day!

Hafa Adai,

As we commemorate the 66th Anniversary of our island's liberation, we remember the brave service members of the 3rd Marine Division, the 1st Marine Provisional Brigade, the 77th Army Infantry Division and the United States Navy. On July 21, 1944, these brave men landed on the beaches of Asan and Agat to begin the fight to liberate Guam from foreign occupation. We keep in mind the hardships of our island's people, who endured nearly 32 months of horrific subjugation by occupying enemy forces. The lives lost and sacrifices made by Chamorro men and women, U.S. Marines, Army Soldiers and Navy Sailors to restore the freedom and liberties we enjoy today will always be cherished and will never be forgotten.

This year's theme, We Are Guam: "Honoring our Heroes," is fitting as we observe 66 years of liberty and honor the bravery and sacrifices of our manamko' and the Marines, Soldiers and Sailors of the United States Armed Forces. I join the people of Guam in celebrating our commitment for continued peace, our dedication to liberty and our desire for harmony among all people and nations. God Bless Guam, and God Bless the United States of America.

Sincerely,

Madeleine F. Bordallo

President, Mayors' Council of Guam

Hafa Adai. As we celebrate Guam's 66th Liberation, we remember the hardship that our parents and grandparents endured during World War II. The many stories told by survivors at the various memorials shares details of the true suffering that our Chamorro people endured. Despite the suffering, pain and sacrifices that our Man Amko's experienced. Their faith in God made them stronger as one family and one community.

Today, "We are Guam...Honoring Our Heroes". Our heroes of yesterday, our Man Amko's, have taught us how to survive despite the many challenges that we face in today's world. Our heroes of today are the men and women of our Armed Forces that continue to fight in the many wars throughout the world for our Freedom. And our heroes of tomorrow, our medical professionals, our educators, our coaches and our friends, that continue to teach us through communication, how to interact and relate with one another.

Despite our cultural diversities throughout our island community, we continue to look to God for his many blessing on our island. The strength in our islands people is an example of how we all unite as one family, no matter what our ethnic background or religious beliefs may be.

Congratulations to 2010 Liberation Queen Tarra Van Meter and her Royal Court. Your hard work and dedication to our island will be remembered and appreciated by our people. Continue to serve our island communities in your capacity as Queen and Princesses. Share the hospitality of our island with everyone that you encounter.

Thank you to the Mayors and Vice Mayors of Guam who continue to work hard for the communities that you serve. Your hard work and dedication is a great example of your commitment to the residents of your villages. Your dedication to the 2010 Liberation festivities is just one example of how you all make things happen for the people of Guam. Congratulations for a JOB WELL DONE!

Biba Liberation! Biba Guam! Honoring Our Heroes!

A Message from the Navy

Dedication. Commitment. Courage. Resilience. These are a few of the words that come to mind when I think of what it took for service members and the Chamorro people alike to survive such a tumultuous period in our history – World War II.

Sixty-six years ago, the people of Guam and our heroes in uniform united and fought with courage to free an island devastated by war. It is through their acts of bravery and patriotism that we are able to unite again today to celebrate the anniversary of the liberation of Guam.

World War II is an era of the island's and the nation's history that will be remembered with solemnity and awe. Thousands of military personnel died in the fight against enemies who threatened the lives and the freedom of the people of this island and the United States.

The battle to liberate Guam was one of the fiercest of World War II. It involved approximately 55,000 members of the U.S. Armed Forces who either stormed the shores of Guam or stood guard against the enemy's reinforcements arriving by sea and air. After the surrender of Japanese forces, there were more than 7,000 American casualties reported.

On this Liberation Day, Joint Region Marianas is honored to join the people of Guam in remembering these brave service members and the sacrifices they made so that we can live a life of freedom.

They are not the only souls honored on this occasion. Thousands of Chamorro people suffered or died during the occupation – from the first of the bombs that fell in 1941 until American forces proved victorious in 1944. While the battle for Guam's liberation had begun, thousands of men, women and children continued their valiant fight to stay alive. Thinking back to the conditions in which they struggled, one can only wonder how they managed to survive. And yet, they did. We honor them and the heritage they left behind.

Today, as we face a new enemy, we remember those who came before us. We will continue in that great tradition of staying dedicated to our values, having the courage to stand up for our freedom and our nation, and staying committed to our fight – all the while staying true to who we are as a people.

Biba Guam, Biba Liberation. May God continue to bless the island of Guam and our great nation.

Rear Adm. Paul J. Bushong
Commander, Joint Region Marianas

This celebration of our island's 66th Liberation Day commemorates our island and our nation's freedom.

Today is a day to honor and remember our fallen heroes, both military and civilian who fought to liberate our island – the only U.S. soil to be occupied during World War II.

It is also a day to remember and honor today's heroes – the brave 36 sons and daughter of Micronesia who made the ultimate sacrifice and gave their lives in the continuing fight to protect our island and our nation's freedom.

We, the soldiers, airmen and families of the Guam National Guard join our island in honoring our island heroes past and present. We salute you.

Hafa Adai to the People of Guam,

On this day, we take the opportunity to remember one of the greatest days in the history of this island—Liberation Day. On 21 July 1944, Forces of the United States and the people of Guam partnered together to overthrow an imperialistic government that took away our most prized possession—our freedom. Today we remember and honor the sacrifices of those who overcame so that we might enjoy the blessings of liberty. For those who paid the ultimate price, we are eternally grateful. We will also use this day, this great day of Liberation to reaffirm collectively our responsibilities to work together to maintain our freedoms and ensure security throughout the Pacific Region, as we have now for more than 60 years.

Today we also remember the crew of RAIDR 21, who bravely flew from Andersen almost daily to show the potential adversaries of the United States that we are always prepared to stand up to those who would threaten our way of life and our freedoms. They died doing what they loved, touching the sky aboard an aircraft that embodies everything we are here to celebrate; a link to the past, a vision for the future, and a willingness to risk everything so that our loved ones may live in peace. We will continue to honor them as we have these past two years, by flying missions, by steeling our resolve, and by keeping their memories alive each time we take to the air.

As the new 36th Wing Commander, I am both honored and humbled to serve Andersen and the Island of Guam. The Wing has accomplished much since that fateful day in 1944 when, with the help of citizens who believed in freedom, the U.S. took back this island. Since that time, we've built trust, cooperation, and faith in each other. To the people of Guam, thank you for that trust. I hold it sacred and give you, in return, my gratitude for the faith you place in me and in the United States. We will continue to work together to protect this historic piece of ground that is unique in all of America.

Executive Director, Mayors' Council of Guam

Buenas yan Hafa Adai! As the 2010 Liberation Festivities Overall Chairman, I take this opportunity to thank and recognize the many hardworking Mayors and Vice Mayors of our island, the numerous numbers of volunteers, the generous business contributors and sponsors, and the determined vendors who supported our festivities. It is through your hardwork, your dedication and perseverance, and your contributions that we have been able to put together the 66th Liberation Day Festivities.

The Mayors' Council of Guam, through the leadership of Mayor Melissa B. Savares dedicate this Liberation Day to all of you. We reflect back 66 years ago, when Guam's skies were dark, the landscape was flattened, the sounds of hurt and pain loud and constant. Sixty-six years ago, the Chamorros faced humiliation, enslavement, hunger, torture, and death. Today, we stand and reflect in awe, that despite all that the Chamorro people went through in war, no one and nothing could wipe out the Chamorro spirit. The Chamorro spirit to live, the Chamorro spirit to rebuild, the Chamorro spirit to forgive is why we are here today. Today we live, we rebuild, we forgive, and still no one and nothing will wipe out the Chamorro spirit. We as a people are here forever!

It has been my honor to have worked with so many fine men and women to make this Liberation Day a day of humble celebration and a day of honoring our heroes. Everyone who endured, persevered, suffered, and died for the causes of our Liberation 66 years ago is our hero. Today, we remember but most importantly, we shall never forget. Wherever you may be, or whoever you are...God bless You! Si Yu'os Ma'ase!

Jesus Quichocho Uncangco

Veteran – Guam Combat Patrol

Born January 12, 1928 and a native of Guam, Mr. Jesus Uncangco is currently the last known survivor of the Guam Combat Patrol.

During the invasion of Guam, Mr. Uncangco's family resided in the Tai area of Chalan Pago, where he endured the sufferings of forced labor as did most of the young men during the Japanese occupation of Guam. After the Liberation of Guam on July 21, 1944, when the island was officially declared "secured" by American forces, some of the Chamorros who accompanied the Marines and Army patrols to assist in this mop effort were eventually integrated into what we know in our history as the Guam Combat Patrol.

The Guam Combat Patrol was formed to scout out the hundreds of Japanese who had taken to Guam's jungles. They moved on foot, combed the areas, and questioned islanders in their efforts to track, capture and destroy Japanese holdouts, locations and hideouts. The Patrol's mission was considered one of the most dangerous military combat duties in Guam after the invasion.

The Guam Combat Patrol was led by Police Staff Sergeant Juan U. Aguon, who was also a close friend of Mr. Uncangco and the one who eventually recruited Mr. Uncangco into the Guam Combat Patrol. In order for Mr. Uncangco to be a member of the Guam Combat Patrol, he admits that he initially lied about his age, actually joining the patrol as a sixteen year old recruit. He was officially discharged from the Guam Combat Patrol when it was disbanded in November, 1948.

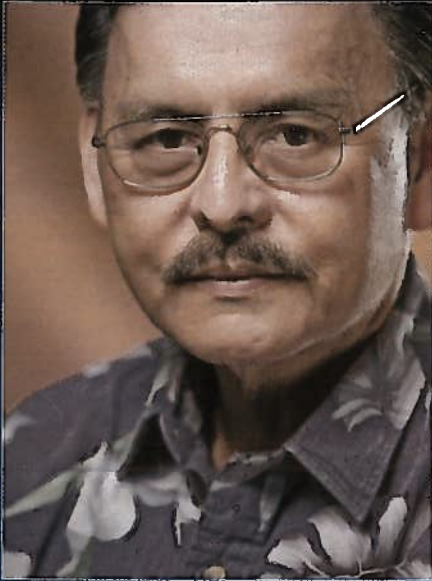

Following his discharge in 1948 from the Guam Combat Patrol and during the restructuring of our local government in the 1950s, Mr. Uncangco joined Guam's Department of Public Safety as a law enforcement officer and eventually was reassigned as a fire fighter, who subsequently retired from the Government of Guam as a Battalion Fire Chief in May, 1979. Having served our community for more than twenty (29) years as a fire fighter, he then entered the private sector working for the Guam Oil Refining Company, the Hilton Hotel, and eventually with the Bank of Guam as a Security Officer and retiring as the Head of Bank of Guam's Security in December, 1995.

Following his retirement from the Bank of Guam, Mr. Uncangco decided to settle down with his wife Matilde Flores Uncangco, whom he married on January 10, 1948, to enjoy their grandchildren and great grandchildren. They are the proud parents of seven (7) children, two (2) of whom passed away well before their time.

Hafa Adai! On July 21, 1944, our island was liberated from the rule of an enemy force that enslaved, beat, humiliated, tortured, and killed many of our people in the thirty-two months they occupied Guam. When the bombings and gunfire subsided, our people emerged from their encampments and hiding places and began working together to rebuild their homes and their lives.

As old villages were being reconstructed and new ones were being created, our communities relied on a distinguished group of individuals...the Commissioners...to help in settling disputes, coordinating infrastructure placement and construction, and representing the best interest of the people who live in those villages.

Known today as Mayors and Vice-Mayors, the Commissioners were instrumental in helping the people in their villages get back on their feet after the war. While families struggled to build or rebuild their homes, the Commissioners helped muster assistance, equipment, and supplies for the construction efforts. What was rarely told was that in order to meet the needs of their villagers, many of the Commissioners put off attending to their personal concerns until others were taken care of first.

During the war, the Commissioners played a vital role in keeping the spirit of our people alive, even at the expense of their own.

In the Guam War Claims Review Commission hearings held in December 2003, Tan Josefina T. Mantanona told of an incident involving her father who was appointed Commissioner of one of the island's villages during the war. Tan Josefina testified that sometime between 1942 and 1943 an individual escaped from the prison in Agana and while enroute to Yona, had apparently cut the telephone lines between the two villages. Japanese soldiers confronted her father and told him that if no one admits to cutting the lines, all the men and their sons in his village will be killed. In an unselfish act to save the fathers and sons of his village, Tan Josefina's father took his own life to spare the others.

So as we celebrate the 66th anniversary of Guam's liberation, let us remember the struggles and sacrifices that our people endured during and immediately after World War II. And in doing so, let us also remember those leaders, like Tan Josefina Mantanona's father, who gave of their lives so that others may live.

God Bless Our People, Our Island!

WE ARE GUAHAN...HONORING OUR HEROES

HAPPY LIBERATION DAY, GUAM!

Honoring our Heroes

Sixty-six years ago this July 21, the armed forces of the United States began the liberation of Guam.

On this anniversary of our island's most historic event,
we salute our heroes:
those who fought,
those who survived,
those who endured, and those who gave the ultimate sacrifice.

All deserve to be called 'HERO!'

Together We Can!
